1. KENNY PICKETT | Pittsburgh 6032 | 217 lbs. | rSR. Oakhurst, N.J. (Ocean Township) 6/6/1998 (age 23.89) #8

BACKGROUND: Kenneth “Kenny” Pickett grew up near the New Jersey shore and started playing Pop Warner at the age of 6, along with other sports like baseball and basketball. He gravitated toward football as his main focus at Ocean Township High School, where he saw varsity reps at quarterback as a sophomore. Pickett earned all-conference honors as a junior with 1,796 passing yards, 336 rushing yards and 24 total touchdowns, leading Ocean Township to a 9-2 record and the 2015 playoffs. As a senior, he threw for 1,395 yards, rushed for 472 yards and scored 20 total touchdowns. Pickett finished his prep career with 4,670 passing yards, 873 rushing yards and 60 total touchdowns (43 passing, 17 rushing).

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Pickett was the No. 33 pro-style quarterback and the No. 21 recruit from New Jersey in the 2017 class. He initially committed to Temple after his junior season but reopened his recruitment once other programs showed interest. Pickett received 11 offers, including Iowa and North Carolina, and he narrowed down his final list to Boston College and Pitt, choosing the Panthers and enrolling early. His father (Ken) was an All-American linebacker at Shippensburg University (1989-91) and was inducted into the school’s Hall of Fame as the career record-holder in tackles (455). His mother (Kasey) played soccer at Kutztown University before a knee injury ended her career. His older sister (Alex) was an all-conference soccer player at East Stroudsburg University (2015-18). He became engaged to Amy Paternoster (January 2022). Pickett graduated with his degree in marketing and is working toward his MBA. He participated in “Senior Day” in 2020 and received an invitation to the 2021 Senior Bowl, but took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season in 2021. Pickett accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl and elected to skip his team’s bowl game.

STRENGTHS: High-level awareness in almost every facet of playing the position ... balanced, efficient throwing mechanics ... naturally accurate regardless of his base and throws a catchable ball ... composed and timely when working through his reads (he understands the situation and defense) ... trusts his targets to be in the correct spot and confidently delivers before his receiver is looking ... doesn’t have an elite arm, but can drive the football from the opposite hash ... shows the functional mobility to escape the rush and throw accurately from different platforms (more comfortable throwing when scrambling to his right) ... senses where the heat is coming from and maneuvers without dropping his eyes ... identifies pressures pre-snap and alters the protection ... routinely reminds us of his toughness both in the pocket and as a scrambler (played through a surgically repaired ankle during the 2020 season) ... egoless competitor who has seen the fruits of his labor ... three-time team captain (Pitt offensive coordinator Mark Whipple: “He has great leadership, and he’s thought of at a high level by his teammates and coaches.”) ... set single-season passing records at Pitt with his 2021 campaign, including 42 passing touchdowns, which broke Deshaun Watson’s ACC record of 41 ... set the Pitt career records for passing yards (12,303), completions (1,045), total offense (13,112) and total touchdowns (102).

WEAKNESSES: Smaller hands (8 1/2 inches) and wore gloves on both hands in college ... has a history of ball security issues with 38 career fumbles at Pitt (six fumbles in 2021) ... his pocket presence remains a work-in-progress ... doesn't always trust the protection, which is a result of him getting beat up on the 2020 tape ... benefited from above average offensive line play in 2021 (averaged 3.2 seconds per dropback, second-highest in the FBS) ... the ball doesn't explode off his hand ... average deep-ball accuracy, and some of his downfield passes don't have enough juice ... guilty of forcing throws across his body and into tight windows ... trusts his eyes and his receivers more than he should ... had surgery on his left ankle (October 2020) and missed two games as a junior.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Pittsburgh, Pickett played in offensive coordinator Mark Whipple's shotgun, pro-style scheme and took a substantial jump in performance between his junior and senior seasons (Whipple: "Experience doesn't happen overnight."). Pitt's all-time leading passer, he passed Hall of Famer Dan Marino in all of the school's major statistical passing categories and led the program to its first ACC Championship in 2021, finishing top-five in the country in almost every passing category. Pickett shows outstanding instincts as a passer with his ability to throw receivers open and make quick-reaction decisions. While his confidence is more of a strength than a weakness, he will get greedy at times forcing throws into tight coverage and writing checks his arm can't cash. Overall, Pickett has some skittish tendencies, and the hand size (throws with a glove) will be a factor for some teams, but his football IQ, functional mobility and accuracy from various platforms are an impressive package. He projects as an immediate starter who can be an upgrade for several NFL teams.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 30 overall)

MALIK WILLIS | Liberty

Atlanta, Ga. (Roswell)

5/25/1999 (age 22.93)

BACKGROUND: Malik (muh-LEAK) Willis was born and raised in the Atlanta area and originally attended Westlake High (alma mater of Cam Newton), where he lettered in baseball and football. He was a part-time player as a sophomore and became the starter midway through his junior year, leading the team to seven straight wins. With the hopes of elevating his recruitment status, Willis transferred to Roswell High for his senior season. He led the program to a 14-1 record, with the only loss coming in overtime of the 2016 Class 7A state championship game. Willis earned Class 7A Player of the Year honors in his region with 60.5 percent completions (184-for-304) for 2,562 yards and 27 touchdowns, adding 1,033 rushing yards and 10 rushing touchdowns.

A three-star athlete recruit out of high school, Willis was the No. 21 athlete in the 2017 class and the No. 35 recruit in Georgia. His first offer was from FCS-level Jackson State followed by Virginia Tech, which is where he originally committed as an "athlete" the summer before his senior year. After his standout senior season, Auburn made a hard push (then offensive coordinator Rhett Lashlee was his main recruiter), and Willis flipped to the Tigers. After two seasons backing up Jarrett Stidham (attempting only 14 passes), he entered spring practices in 2019 with his eyes on the starting job, but Gus Malzahn narrowed the starting competition to Bo Nix and Joey Gatewood, prompting Willis to enter the transfer portal. In July 2019, he committed to Liberty (head coach Hugh Freeze and Malzahn are close friends) and enrolled in classes but sat out the 2019 season as a transfer. Willis graduated with his degree in interdisciplinary studies (May 2021) and is working toward his MBA. His uncle (James Anderson) was a third-round defensive end (No. 88 overall) in the 2006 NFL Draft by the Carolina Panthers and played 10 seasons in the NFL. Willis accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	223	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills and weight only – choice)

STRENGTHS: Loose athlete and moves with bounce in his steps ... natural play-extender because of his dynamic speed and movement skills ... despite slight load-up action, the football explodes off his hand ... generates outstanding zip on throws to the far hash or sideline ... his best throws on tape were vertical touch passes down the seam or sideline ... throws a confident ball and not afraid to deliver before receivers come out of their break ... average height, but compactly built and runs through arm tackles without getting knocked off his path ... impressive body strength in the pocket ... elusive athleticism to make defenders miss on designed runs and when pressured ... lowered his fumbles from 17 as a junior to only three as a senior ... routinely played through injuries and developed his pain tolerance ... coaches describe him as "coachable" and "observant" and the type of competitor willing to do whatever is asked of him to get better ... posted a 17-6 record (2-3 record vs. Power 5 opponents) in his 23 career starts ... set several passing and rushing records at Liberty, including the single-season record for total touchdowns (40) and single-game record for total touchdowns (seven).

WEAKNESSES: Field vision and decision-making are still in the development phase ... becomes gun-shy as a passer at times and will miss opportunities when he second-guesses what he sees ... ball placement needs to improve to make things easier on his receivers and help create YAC opportunities ... stares down targets and played in an offense that relied on pre-snap decisions ... footwork is raw and leads to him throwing from an unbalanced base ... spotty pocket presence and tends to drift into pressure ... late to locate where the heat is coming from ... ability to create can be a double-edged sword, and he must learn when to cut his losses to avoid the negative plays ... will take unnecessary hits, and long-term durability could become a concern ... missed one game and wore a protective brace the rest of the season after dislocating his left elbow (September 2020).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Liberty, Willis was the ignition switch in head coach Hugh Freeze's defined passing game and zone-read scheme. Despite a mediocre supporting cast, the Auburn transfer set several school records at Liberty and led the program to numerous firsts, including the first Top 25 ranking and win over an ACC opponent. (He is also attempting to be the first Liberty first-round pick since 1990.) Although his timing and accuracy go through lulls, Willis has a fluid release, outstanding velocity and a great feel for touch and placement on vertical-based patterns. With his escapability and body strength, the backfield was his playground, but he struggles to recognize pressures and takes too many sacks (he was equally responsible for finishing No. 1 in the FBS with 51 sacks in 2021). Overall, Willis needs time to mature his anticipation, vision and placement, but he has the potential to be a dynamic NFL playmaker because of his natural athleticism, arm talent and intangibles. He will likely need a redshirt year before seriously competing for an NFL starting role.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 32 overall)

3. DESMOND RIDDER | Cincinnati 6033 | 211 lbs. | rSR. Louisville, Ky. (St. Xavier) 8/31/1999 (age 22.66) #9

BACKGROUND: Desmond Ridder was born in Louisville and grew up in the Highlands neighborhood with his grandmother (Jan). His mother (Sarah) was 15 years old when he was born, and his biological father wasn't in the picture (his stepfather, Aaron Ice, helped raise him). Ridder grew up playing baseball, basketball and football, starting at quarterback at the youth level in the Hikes Point Optimist League. He attended St. Xavier High, where he began as a backup quarterback and developed his body, including a six-inch growth spurt. Ridder became a starter as a junior and completed 55.3 percent of his passes for 1,319 yards and nine touchdowns, adding a team-best 668 rushing yards and 12 touchdowns. As a senior, he earned honorable mention All-State honors with 56.9 percent completions, 951 passing yards, 915 rushing yards and 28 total touchdowns.

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Ridder was the No. 116 athlete in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 10 recruit in Kentucky. At only 170 pounds, he struggled to garner much attention as a recruit until he had a workout with Cincinnati toward the end of his junior year. He was recruited by Zac Taylor (then the Bearcats' offensive coordinator and now the Cincinnati Bengals' head coach), who gave Ridder his first FBS-level scholarship. He committed and shut down his recruitment (FCS-level Eastern Kentucky was his only other offer). He is engaged to his high school sweetheart (Claire Cornett) and they have a daughter (Leighton), who was born in April 2021. Ridder graduated with his degree in sports administration (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6033	213	32 7/8	10	79 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only)

STRENGTHS: Loose, light-footed athlete who calmly maneuvers around the pocket ... long strides eat up grass quickly to pace pursuit ... displays a strong arm with terrific RPMs on his strikes ... at his most comfortable throwing on the move ... instinctively changes his arm angles based on the passing windows without sacrificing velocity ... asked to work through progressions and use the whole field ... improved eye use as a senior to hold defenders and create passing lanes ... competes with supreme confidence to attack tight windows, showing trust in his receivers to make plays ... able to drive throws while still making his balls catchable ... displays poise within the pocket, but also senses when to cut his losses ... shows vision as a scrambler and can make the first man miss with his quickness and run toughness ... named a First Team Academic All-American in 2021 (only the sixth in school history) ... remarkable résumé with a 43-6 record as a starter, never losing a start at home (26-0) ... holds numerous school and conference records, including the Cincinnati record for passing touchdowns (87).

WEAKNESSES: Eyes linger on targets ... holds the ball too long and needs to be more efficient with his mental clock between reads ... will sail throws, and accuracy runs hot and cold over the course of a game ... must be a more precise passer with his placement and make things easier on his receivers (delivering to the correct shoulder, etc.) ... doesn't have ideal balance or timing as a passer, leaving his delivery a little long ... below-average third-down numbers in 2021 (47.1 percent completions, 5.0 yards per attempt, 4-4 touchdown-to-interception ratio) ... ball security looked improved as a senior, but 36 career fumbles is a high number ... lean build and body features and doesn't have the body strength to routinely break tackles in the pocket ... stayed healthy in college, but the lack of body armor could lead to durability concerns.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Cincinnati, Ridder played in offensive coordinator Mike Denbrock's zone-read scheme, setting several AAC records, including total yardage (12,419) and total touchdowns (116). He finished his career with 43 wins as a starter (only Kellen Moore and Colt McCoy have more wins in FBS history) and helped the Bearcats to back-to-back AAC titles and the College Football Playoff in 2021 (first Group of 5 program to make it). A mobile athlete, Ridder moves well in the pocket and possesses the arm and poise to drive the ball to every level of the field. He has experience making whole-field reads and working his progressions, but his ability to quicken his eyes and trigger vs. NFL speed will be the key to whether or not he finds sustained success at the next level. Overall, Ridder needs to become more consistent with his release, timing and accuracy, but his loose athleticism, self-confidence and experience are strong selling points. He has the physical tools and mindset to compete for starting reps early in his NFL career.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 40 overall)

4. MATT CORRAL | Ole Miss 6015 | 212 lbs. | rJR. Ventura, Calif. (Long Beach Poly) 1/31/1999 (age 23.24) #2

BACKGROUND: Matthew "Matt" Corral, who is the youngest of three boys, grew up in Ventura, Calif., and played tight end at the youth level before switching to quarterback. He originally attended Oaks Christian School, a private school in Westlake Village, becoming the first freshman starting quarterback in school history. Corral came off the bench and started the final seven games of his freshman season, producing 21 total touchdowns. As a sophomore, his top two targets were WR Michael Pittman (now with the Indianapolis Colts) and TE Colby Parkinson (now with the Seattle Seahawks) and led Oaks Christian to a league championship, finishing with 3,283 passing yards and a 36-6 touchdown-to-interception ratio. As a junior, Corral threw for 3,188 yards and 25 touchdowns as Oaks Christian won its second-straight Marmonte League Championship. After producing 7,683 passing yards and 91 total touchdowns over three seasons, Corral elected to transfer for his senior season. There were rumors that he was expelled after he got into a pushing confrontation with Wayne Gretzky's son (Tristan) at an Oaks Christian basketball game. However, Corral said he left voluntarily because Oaks Christian was for "rich kids" and tweeted this explanation: "I ran into problems at a school that is biased towards money. So if you have a lot of it, you run the school. No matter what the situation is. No matter what I say, I am wrong." Corral transferred to Long Beach Poly High (about 60 miles south of Oaks Christian) for his senior year, where he played for head coach Antonio Pierce. He finished his final season with 2,495 passing yards and 29 touchdowns as he led Long Beach Poly to a 9-3 record in 2017. Corral was a U.S. Army All-American.

A four-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Corral was the No. 4 pro-style quarterback in the 2018 class and the No. 9 recruit in California (No. 3 quarterback in the state behind JT Daniels and Tanner McKee). He received offers from nearby UCLA and USC after his freshman year and originally committed to the Trojans as a sophomore. However, Corral decommitted from USC in the summer prior to his senior year and flipped to Florida. But after Jim McElwain was fired and Dan Mullen took over, Corral felt like he was on the backburner and quickly lost trust with the new coaching staff. He still considered Florida but felt a connection with Matt Luke and Ole Miss and switched his commitment again, signing with the Rebels. Corral elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Athleticism is an essential part of his game — both as a passer and runner ... throws with twitch and outstanding reaction time ... rapid release and able to manipulate his delivery points ... owns a live arm and is able to drive the football without trouble while also understanding trajectory ... shows the horizontal and vertical vision to quickly scan his options ... puts the ball on the upfield shoulder on slants, and short-to-intermediate placement leads receivers away from defenders ... interceptions dropped from 14 in 2020 to five in 2021, not forcing as many throws ... the son of a marine, proved his toughness on each game tape ... has battled through his share of off-field adversity and is better for it ... acclimated himself well in the SEC (former head coach Matt Luke: “Kids gravitate toward him.”) ... didn’t opt out of the 2021 bowl game because of his competitive temperament and teammates (Corral: “No one really understands how close we really are.”) ... responsible for 75 total touchdowns in 37 games played in the SEC.

WEAKNESSES: Smallish frame with a playing weight in the 205-210 range, leading to durability concerns (especially with his willingness to take on contact) ... thrived on predetermined reads and play-action, and his progression efficiency post-snap is unproven ... decision-making process is quick but frenzied when trying to balance multiple reads ... not a proven anticipatory thrower ... did a better job throwing the ball away in his final season, but needs to be smarter about it (seven intentional grounding penalties in 2021) ... his drop steps and internal clock need continued maturation ... 23 fumbles over his career, including eight in 2021 ... doesn’t have a criminal background and has positive references from former coaches, but past incidents (high school run-ins, scuffle during the 2018 Egg Bowl, etc.) will require teams to do heavy vetting on his emotional maturity ... battled through several ankle issues in his career, including a right ankle injury that knocked him out of his final college game.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ole Miss, Corral played in head coach Lane Kiffin’s RPO-based shotgun spread scheme. Under Kiffin’s tutelage (and play calling) the past two seasons, he thrived as a dual threat and was the only FBS player with at least 3,300 passing yards and 500 rushing yards in 2020 — and then again in 2021. Although undersized, Corral plays with natural twitch to process quickly, move his feet and comfortably throw with zip from different platforms. He doesn’t show enough anticipation as a passer, and his post-snap decision-making from the pocket will need to improve. Overall, Corral is still unproven in several integral aspects of playing the position, but he is an instinctive athlete with the live arm and competitive toughness to create plays. With continued development and less hero-ball, he has a chance to be an eventual playmaker in the right scheme.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 56 overall)

5. SAM HOWELL | North Carolina 6005 | 218 lbs. | JR. Indian Trail, N.C. (Sun Valley) 9/16/2000 (age 21.62) #7

BACKGROUND: Sam Howell, who is the youngest of three children, was born in Waynesville, N.C., and grew up in Union County (about 30 miles southeast of Charlotte). He played multiple sports throughout his childhood and picked up tackle football in the second grade. Howell attended Sun Valley High, where he became a four-year starting quarterback and posted 3,586 passing yards and 42 total touchdowns as a freshman. He led the team to the playoffs as a sophomore and finished the season with 3,217 passing yards, 38 passing touchdowns and 12 rushing touchdowns. As a junior, Howell led Sun Valley to an 11-4 record and another playoff berth, recording 3,372 passing yards, 1,594 rushing yards and 60 total touchdowns (36 passing, 24 rushing). He was named the 2018 North Carolina Gatorade Player of the Year and North Carolina Offensive Player of the Year as a senior. Howell finished his final season with 3,240 passing yards, 1,392 rushing yards and 53 total touchdowns (36 passing, 17 rushing). He concluded his high school career with 13,415 passing yards and 205 total touchdowns, and his 17,036 total yards set a new North Carolina record. He trained with former Duke quarterback Anthony Boone all four years of high school.

A four-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Howell was the No. 3 dual-threat quarterback in the 2019 class and the No. 2 recruit in North Carolina (behind LB Quavaris Crouch). Shortly after his sophomore season, Maryland (and then-offensive coordinator Walt Bell) gave him his first scholarship offer. A few dozen schools soon followed and, as a junior, Howell initially committed to Florida State, which had recently hired Bell. Toward the end of his senior season, a series of events led to Howell flipping to North Carolina, the program that was initially his top choice before the recruiting process. First, Larry Fedora, who was behind several other schools in offering Howell, was fired as Tar Heels head coach, and Mack Brown was hired. Next, Bell left Florida State to take the head-coaching job at Massachusetts. Brown then hired Phil Longo as offensive coordinator at UNC, and a week later, Howell publicly announced his decision to commit to North Carolina. His father (Duke), who was a probation officer, had a series of health issues (pneumonia, triple-bypass surgery), which was also a driving force for Howell to stay closer to home. His parents, who divorced in recent years, met at Appalachian State, where his father wrestled and his mother (Amy) was on the volleyball team. Howell is of Korean descent (his paternal grandmother is from South Korea). Howell, who enrolled early in January 2019, graduated with his degree (December 2021). He elected to skip his senior season and accepted an invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Owns a compact, solidly-built frame ... above average arm strength, regardless of base or body mechanics ... accurately drives the football with a traditional over-the-top delivery ... outstanding deep ball thrower with the touch to lead his targets or throw overtop defenders ... plays with a sense of composure and not easily rattled ... excellent third-down passing production in 2021 (69.9 percent completions, 9.8 yards per attempt, 8-0 touchdown-to-interception ratio) ... athletic, competitive runner both by design and as a scrambler ... able to out-angle pursuit or finish runs with power and fluidity, welcoming contact if it means extra yardage ... coaches go out of their way to praise his character (head coach Mack Brown: "He's the hardest worker on the team — he gets it.") ... 92 career passing touchdowns are the most ever by an ACC player in three or fewer seasons (Deshaun Watson and Trevor Lawrence both had 90) ... finished career ranked top-five in ACC history in several other categories, including passing yards (10,238) and total touchdowns (111).

WEAKNESSES: Shorter than ideal in the pocket ... wasn't asked to consistently read the whole field ... will get hung up on his preferred read, leading defenders to his target ... needs to improve the footwork in his drops and pocket steps, along with a few other fixable issues (patting the baby, hitching his delivery, throwing off his front foot) ... ball placement will suffer when he's forced to speed up his process ... will look to run prematurely and must show more patience/trust in the blocking scheme and routes ... needs to learn how to slide and better protect his body as a runner ... passing touchdowns declined each season from 38 to 30 to 24.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at North Carolina, Howell played in offensive coordinator Phil Longo's RPO-heavy spread scheme focused on variations of slants, screens and comebacks. With his top two running backs (Javonte Williams, Michael Carter) and wide receivers (Dyami Brown, Dazz Newsome) off to the NFL, his 2021 performance didn't live up to expectations, but he was still productive moving the football, ranking top-10 in the FBS in total yards per game (323.7). The Tar Heels' scheme spread out the defense and gave Howell a chance to show off his mobility and toughness, as he accounted for seven 100-yard rushing games (not including lost sack yardage) in 2021. He is more of a see-it thrower and must develop his anticipation and read efficiency, but he is a confident passer with twitch in his delivery and arguably the best deep ball in the draft class. Overall, Howell needs to clean up his footwork and develop as a pocket passer, but he has NFL-quality arm strength, athleticism and work ethic and operates with a slow heartbeat. He projects as a low-end NFL starter, flashing similarities to Baker Mayfield.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 60 overall)

6. CARSON STRONG | Nevada 6033 | 226 lbs. | rJR. Vacaville, Calif. (Wood) 9/14/1999 (age 22.62) #12

BACKGROUND: Carson Strong, who is the youngest of two children, grew up in Vacaville, Calif., (between San Francisco and Sacramento) and started playing sports at 5 years old. He played baseball and soccer but gravitated toward basketball (AAU circuit) and football, initially playing tight end before moving to quarterback at the pee wee level. Strong attended Will C. Wood High, where his father (Chris) worked for three decades. He made varsity as a sophomore and was the backup quarterback, completing 39 of 52 passes for 459 yards and five touchdowns in 2015. Strong became the starter as a junior and posted 69.2 percent completions (184-for-266) for 2,732 yards and a 26-4 touchdown-to-interception ratio in 2016. The summer prior to his senior season, he underwent knee surgery and missed the 2017 season. Strong lettered three years in basketball and set several school records. As a junior, he averaged 18.1 points, 12.8 rebounds and 2.8 assists and earned league MVP honors in both basketball and football. He didn't play his senior year because of his knee surgery.

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Strong was the No. 76 pro-style quarterback in the 2018 class and the No. 227 recruit in California. Several Mountain West programs came by Wood to see him, but the offers didn't follow, especially after he sat out his senior season. While in Reno for a basketball tournament in the spring of his junior year, Strong had a campus visit at Nevada and received his first (and only) scholarship offer. He became the first commitment in Nevada's 2018 recruiting class, and the program stayed loyal to the scholarship after Strong missed his final season with his knee injury. His father (Chris) played basketball at UC-Davis. Strong graduated with his degree in management (December 2021). He elected to skip his redshirt senior season and the team's bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall passer and checks the size boxes ... strong, confident arm and not afraid to rip throws into quick-expiring windows ... has a natural feel for downfield touch on verticals ... puts too much air under deep passes but gives his receivers ample time to track the ball ... can work left-to-right progressions with tempo, and not shy taking the checkdown if available ... makes subtle, short steps in the pocket to navigate the rush ... coaches are able to open the playbook and add more to his plate midweek (former head coach Jay Norvell: "Very intelligent kid. He can handle volumes of information we give him.") ... set the school record with 299 consecutive pass attempts without an interception (second-longest streak in MWC history) ... named a team captain ... is all over the Nevada passing record books, finishing third in school history in passing yards (730 behind Colin Kaepernick) and passing touchdowns (eight behind Kaepernick).

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have the quickness or escapability to consistently move the pocket once flushed ... not a threat to run (only 37 rushing yards in 2021, not including lost sack yardage) ... setup and release tend to lag, giving defenders a chance to jump throws ... too many throws have a low launch point ... relies too much on his arm and not enough on his hips or legs to drive throws ... doesn't have the body twitch to accelerate his process when the walls close in ... needs to do a better job staying on schedule with his eyes and placement ... smart, but still very young (NFL scout: "He won't be ready to run an NFL quarterback room for another year or two, at least.") ... has been beaten up over his career, including a collarbone fracture in his first career start (August 2019) ... major durability concern relates to the health of his right knee — diagnosed with osteochondritis dissecans lesions (July 2017), where the cartilage detaches from the bone, requiring surgery and sidelining him for his senior year of high school; underwent another surgery (February 2021) to have cadaver cartilage added to his right knee; had an knee arthroscopy to clean scar tissue (August 2021) prior to his final season in college.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Nevada, Strong played in former head coach Jay Norvell's version of the air-raid offense and became the first player in school history to earn Mountain West Offensive Player of the Year (and he did it twice). Although his early season consistency in 2021 didn't match his 2020 film, he rushed back from his offseason knee surgery (normally a 10-month recovery time), and that affected his performance. He still managed to set a school-record with 36 passing touchdowns as a junior. Strong has the arm talent to make the defense cover every inch of the field, and his velocity helps mask average anticipation with his reads. Aside from questions about his knee durability, his lower body fundamentals aren't a strength to his game, as he lacks the foot quickness to easily move the pocket and regain his balance as a passer. Overall, Strong has natural passing instincts and can rip throws all over the field when on schedule, but he is a limited play-extender with mixed results versus pressure that will limit his NFL ceiling unless addressed. As long as the medicals on his knee come back clean, he falls somewhere in the range of Mason Rudolph as an NFL prospect.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

7. BAILEY ZAPPE | Western Kentucky 6004 | 215 lbs. | rSR. Victoria, Texas (East) 4/26/1999 (age 23.01) #4

BACKGROUND: Bailey Zappe (ZAP-ee), who is one of two children, was born and raised in Victoria, which is near the Gulf Coast halfway between Houston and San Antonio. He started playing football at 5 years old and competed in the Crossroads Youth League. Zappe attended Victoria East High, where he was a three-year starter at quarterback. He posted 3,241 passing yards and 42 touchdowns as a junior, adding 221 rushing yards and three touchdowns. As a senior, Zappe led East to the Class 5A Division II quarterfinals and finished with 3,770 passing yards and 52 total touchdowns (37 passing, 15 rushing).

A no-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Zappe wasn't ranked by recruiting services and went overlooked as a college recruit. After his senior season, he received only one college football scholarship offer: Houston Baptist, an FCS-level program that didn't start playing football until 2013. After starting four seasons at quarterback for the Huskies, Zappe took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility and entered the transfer portal. He heard from a dozen FBS-level programs and was close to transferring to Tennessee before a coaching change in Knoxville. Instead, he decided to join his Houston Baptist offensive coordinator Zach Kittley, who had just accepted the offensive coordinator position at Western Kentucky (three HBU teammates also transferred to WKU). Zappe accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6005	217	31 1/2	9 3/4	73 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only)

STRENGTHS: Cerebral passer with excellent retention and execution ... passing vision stretches both horizontal and vertical ... quick reaction time to read and get the ball up and out ... the football doesn't explode off his hand, but he pushes throws downfield with outstanding touch and confidence to all levels ... skillfully alters arm angle and throws a very catchable ball ... smooth footwork in his setup ... allows route combinations to develop while climbing/sliding away from pressure ... WKU coaches call him an "on-field coach" because of his intelligence and intangibles ... earned All-Academic honors throughout his time at Victoria East, Houston Baptist and Western Kentucky ... set almost every passing record (career, single-season, single-game) at Houston Baptist ... prolific 2021 season at WKU, breaking FBS records for single-season passing touchdowns, previously held by Joe Burrow, and passing yards, previously held by B.J. Symons ... recorded more wins in one year at WKU (nine) than four years combined at HBU (eight).

WEAKNESSES: Fastball has average life ... throws well to areas, but will need to be more precise with his accuracy vs. NFL coverages ... ball placement suffers when he attempts to rush throws ... thrived with predetermined reads and pure progressions and wasn't asked to consistently anticipate/read the whole field ... not shy pulling the trigger before deciphering the coverage ... inconsistent hip and lower body mechanics in delivery and follow-through ... needs to better anticipate pressure packages pre- and post-snap ... escape and scrambling skills are average at best ... doesn't have ideal height for the position ... spent almost all of his career in the same quick-strike, spread system.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Western Kentucky, Zappe played the past four seasons in former offensive coordinator Zach Kittley's version of the spread, air-raid offense that Kittley learned from his five years as an assistant at Texas Tech (2013-17). Zappe eclipsed 10,000 yards passing in his four seasons at Houston Baptist (2017-20) and then had a historic 2021 season at WKU, setting FBS single-season records for passing touchdowns (62) and passing yards (5,967). With the offense ingrained in him, Zappe was a rhythmic decision-maker in college and knew where to go with the football and how to stay on time. But his average arm strength and inconsistencies when asked to anticipate or make full-field reads will be tough to overcome vs. NFL speed. Overall, there is nothing explosive about his arm or legs, but Zappe has a natural feel for touch and trajectory with the mind/intangibles that will smooth his transition to the NFL. He projects favorably to Case Keenum and should be a longtime NFL backup and possible spot-starter.

GRADE: 5th Round

8. JACK COAN | Notre Dame 6032 | 218 lbs. | rSR. Sayville, N.Y. (Sayville) 12/9/1998 (age 23.39) #17

BACKGROUND: Jack Coan, who is one of three children, grew up in Sayville, N.Y., (south shore of Long Island) and played multiple sports but focused on lacrosse and football, playing quarterback since elementary school. He attended Sayville High, where he was a four-year starter at quarterback, earning All-County honors all four years. After throwing for 1,695 yards and 21 touchdowns as a freshman, Coan had his best season as a sophomore, when he set Long Island single-season records with 3,431 yards and 40 touchdowns. As a junior, he finished with 2,499 yards and 53 total touchdowns (36 passing, 17 rushing). Coan was named the New York Gatorade Player of the Year as a senior with 71.8 percent completions, 2,162 yards, and 31 touchdowns, adding 766 rushing yards and 11 rushing touchdowns. He set the Long Island career records for passing yards (9,787) and touchdown passes (128). Coan also lettered in lacrosse, earning All-County and All-Division honors.

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Coan was the No. 20 pro-style quarterback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of New York (behind OT Isaiah Wilson). He initially committed to play lacrosse at Notre Dame during his freshman year of high school, but his focus switched to football when his recruitment as a quarterback took off. Coan picked up offers from several top programs like Louisville, Miami (Fla.) and Michigan, but he felt a connection with the coaches at Wisconsin and signed with the Badgers. After missing the 2020 season with a broken foot, he lost his starting spot to Graham Mertz, who was the highest-ranked quarterback recruit in school history. After the 2020 season, Coan decided to enter the transfer portal and transferred to Notre Dame for his final season of eligibility. His younger sister (Bella) committed to play lacrosse at Quinnipiac University. His uncle (Danny) played wide receiver at Division III SUNY Cortland. His aunt (Christina) played volleyball at Quinnipiac. Coan graduated with his degree in real estate and urban land (with a 3.34 GPA) from Wisconsin (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl and won the Pat Tillman Award at the event.

PRO DAY	6031	217	31 3/8	9 3/4	75	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Tall, sturdy passer with solid build ... doesn't have a howitzer for an arm, but can drive the ball when needed ... able to layer or loft throws in between coverages ... throws a catchable ball with slightly above-average accuracy ... gets the ball out with a smooth, compact delivery ... efficient with his progressions and doesn't panic locating secondary reads ... senses pressure and responds with composed pocket movements, climbing, sliding and resetting his base ... takes care of the football, with only two fumbles in 2021 ... very steady playing temperament with dependable football character ... no questions about his toughness (had a dislocated finger on his right hand reset in between plays late in the fourth quarter vs. Toledo before throwing the game-winning touchdown) ... finished with a 23-8 record as a starting quarterback (12-6 at Wisconsin; 11-2 at Notre Dame) ... set several statistical career bests as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Limited rushing athleticism and won't threaten defenses with his feet (only six rushing first downs in 2021) ... methodical mover and doesn't have the mobility to consistently move the pocket ... accuracy and decision-making drop quickly outside the pocket or when forced to speed up his process ... has moments of trepidation and allows the pocket to swallow him up ... pre-snap reads run hot-and-cold, and doesn't consistently see all 11 defenders ... guilty of staring down his reads, and leads defenders to his target ... missed the 2020 season because of a broken right foot (October 2020) and required surgery.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Notre Dame, Coan played in offensive coordinator Tommy Rees' multiple scheme. After missing the 2020 season at Wisconsin because of a broken foot, he found himself Wally Pipped in Madison and transferred to South Bend for his final season. He led the Irish to 11 wins, and his 65.7 percent completions ranked third in school history for a single-season. Coan is a resilient competitor and efficient passer with a natural feel for where to attack the defense. Although he isn't a consistent play-extender when flushed, he has impressive movements within the pocket to buy valuable extra fractions of a second. Overall, Coan has some athletic limitations, but he does a great job finding rhythm in the passing game and delivers with timing and placement. He has the on-field talent and football character to be a capable NFL backup.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

9. EJ PERRY | Brown 6015 | 211 lbs. | rSR. Andover, Mass. (Andover) 8/16/1998 (age 23.70) #4

BACKGROUND: Ernest Joseph "EJ" Perry IV, who is one of three children, grew up in an athletic family and started playing sports at 3 years old. He played baseball, basketball and football throughout his childhood and was often coached by his father (EJ III), who was also the head coach at Andover (Mass.) High. Brown was a four-year starter at quarterback at Andover, where he was a three-time All-Conference honoree. He had his most productive season as a senior with 3,398 passing yards, 1,006 rushing yards, and 60 total touchdowns (47 passing, 13 rushing). Perry earned First Team All-State honors as a senior and finished his career with 114 career touchdown passes, which ranks second-most in state history. He also lettered in baseball and basketball.

A two-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Perry was the No. 89 pro-style quarterback in the 2017 class and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Massachusetts. He received mostly Ivy and Patriot League offers before he received a scholarship offer from Boston College, which was his only Power 5 offer and his second from BC (previously received a scholarship offer for baseball). After two seasons as a backup, Perry elected to transfer to FCS-level Brown, where he played for his uncle (James) who was a record-breaking passer at Brown and was hired as head coach in 2019. Perry joined the Brown basketball team following the 2019 season, where he played in two games (didn't play in 2020 because of COVID-19). His father played basketball at Colby College and has been a longtime high school coach in Massachusetts, coaching football, basketball and volleyball. He has seven uncles who played college athletics at programs like Harvard, New Hampshire and Boston College. Perry graduated with his degree. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl, where he earned the game's offensive MVP honors.

													(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: All-around athlete capable of playing multiple sports in college ... mobility is an integral part of his success, throwing on the move or picking up yards with his legs (designed or improvised) ... balanced in his drops/rollouts and always in a ready throwing stance ... efficient release to get the ball up and gone ... plays with clear confidence, and smaller windows won't scare him ... solidly built to power through off-balance tackle attempts ... instinctive ball-handler with the competitive grit that ignites the team ... takes coaching and criticism well, moving on from mistakes quickly ... consistently productive in two seasons at Brown, leading the Ivy League in total yards both seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Adequate height and build, but below average hand size ... ordinary arm strength and lacks tight velocity on seam or out throws ... passes lose some life when throwing on the run ... needs to improve anticipation and trigger to hit targets as they come open and before defenders can drive on the throw ... tends to lead defenders to his preferred reads and must learn how to better manipulate the coverage ... routinely forces throws into heavy coverage, especially while improvising ... needs to slow down his mind post-snap to avoid costly mistakes ... must take better care of the football as a passer and runner (11 fumbles in 2021) ... gets what he can as a runner, but his speed and elusiveness aren't anything exciting ... didn't face top talent on a consistent basis in the Ivy League ... saw meaningful action against a Power 5 opponent only once while at Boston College (12-for-21, 57.1 percent, 98 yards passing, 0 TDs, 0 INTs vs. Clemson in 2018).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Brown, Perry was the point guard of head coach James Perry's spread, motion offense. Despite disappointing results (4-16 record as a starter) and lackluster supporting cast, he was the most productive player in the Ivy League during the 2019 and 2021 seasons, setting a single-season league record with 3,678 yards of total offense as a junior. A confident and athletic prospect, Perry was only the second player in school history to receive an invitation to the NFL Scouting Combine. Behind a suspect offensive line in college, he was conditioned to play hero-ball and developed several bad habits (mental and physical), both within structure and when improvising. Overall, Perry has the mobility and competitive nature that help compensate for his shortcomings, but average arm strength and inconsistent post-snap decision-making will be tough to mask versus NFL defenses. His intangibles and athleticism could earn him a back-up role or at worst land him on a practice squad.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

10. DUSTIN CRUM | Kent State 6010 | 210 lbs. | rSR. Grafton, Ohio (Midview) 1/5/1999 (age 23.31) #7

BACKGROUND: Dustin Crum, who is one of four children, was born and raised in Grafton, Ohio, (30 miles west of Cleveland) and attended Midview High, where his father (Scott) was the offensive coordinator. He became the starter as a sophomore and had his best season with 3,323 passing yards, 1,175 rushing yards and 57 total touchdowns (39 passing, 18 rushing), earning First Team All-District and All-State honors. As a senior, Crum led Midview to a 9-2 record and reached a career-best 1,557 rushing yards, adding 2,615 passing yards and 46 total touchdowns (32 passing, 14 rushing). He was named the District Offensive Player of the Year for the second time and again earned All-State honors. Crum finished his prep career with the county and school records for passing yards (8,585) and touchdown passes (103). He also lettered in baseball and basketball and was a two-time conference champion in both sports.

A two-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Crum was the No. 85 pro-style quarterback in the 2017 class and the No. 85 recruit in the state of Ohio. Despite high-level production at the prep level, he was overlooked as a recruit and didn't receive his first FBS-level offer until after his junior season. That offer was Kent State, which turned out to be his only offer. His uncle (Mike) played on the offensive line at Eastern Michigan and Youngstown State. Crum took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID-19 and returned to Kent State for his fifth season in 2021. He graduated with his degree in aerospace engineering (May 2021) and entered the sports management master's program. Crum accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Athletic play-extender with rush skills and toughness outside the pocket ... creative instincts with the ball in his hands ... shows a feel for touch in the short-to-intermediate game ... takes what the defense gives him and doesn't overthink things ... efficiently moves the pocket to buy time for route development ... uses his eyes and shows veteran awareness ... played poised with steady nerves late in games (17-0 touchdown-to-interception ratio in the fourth quarter in college) ... takes care of the football, with a low turnover rate (one interception every 72.0 pass attempts in his career and only four fumbles in 2021) ... was the holder on special teams for four seasons ... durable and finished his career second in school history in total yards (9,472) and passing touchdowns (55).

WEAKNESSES: More of an aimer than driver with his throws, lacking ideal zip ... ball placement isn't a strength, especially on downfield and out patterns ... deep ball floats and gives defenders a chance to react ... needs to be quicker with his recognition and release ... doesn't consistently trust the pocket or blocking scheme ... average height, build and size measurements ... inconsistent climber, and tends to drop his eyes and look to improvise when he feels a hint of pressure (was the eighth-most sacked FBS quarterback in 2021) ... not shy taking hits and showing off his toughness, but needs to be smarter as a finisher in the NFL ... of 32 career starts, only five came against Power 5 programs.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Kent State, Crum was productive in offensive coordinator Andrew Sowder's zone-read scheme. With a 12-47 record in the five years prior to Crum taking over as the starter, Kent State was a doormat program in the MAC, but Crum went 17-13 as the starter over the past three seasons, taking home the 2021 Vern Smith Award as the best player in the conference. The son of a high school coach, Crum has dual-threat skills and joined Josh Cribbs as the only players in school history to surpass 9,000 yards of total offense. He doesn't have the arm talent to scare defenses in the intermediate-to-deep part of the field and will need to be protected by scheme at the next level. Overall, Crum is an instinctive competitor and shrewd decision-maker, but his mediocre ball placement and average physical tools will be amplified vs. NFL speed. A Connor Shaw-type of prospect, he will likely start on an NFL practice squad and try to work his way up from there.

GRADE: 7th Round

11. KALEB ELEBY | Western Michigan 6006 | 208 lbs. | rJR. Maryland Heights, Mo. (Pattonville) 3/13/2000 (age 22.13) #5

BACKGROUND: Kaleb Eleby (El-uh-bee), who is the oldest of five boys, was born and raised in Maryland Heights, Mo., a northern suburb of St. Louis. He started playing football at the pee wee level and continued through high school. Eleby attended Pattonville High, where he was a four-year letterman and three-year team captain (high school teammates with offensive lineman Marquis Hayes, also a prospect in the 2022 NFL Draft class). He had his best season as a senior, when he led Pattonville to a 10-win season and 2017 conference championship before falling in the state title game. Eleby was named Class 5 Missouri Player of the Year and earned First Team All-State, All-District and All-Conference, finishing his final season with 2,831 passing yards and 27 touchdowns. For his career, he totaled 9,735 passing yards and 95 touchdowns, setting every Pattonville passing record. Eleby also saw time on defense and lettered in basketball and track.

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Eleby was the No. 27 pro-style quarterback in the 2018 class and the No. 10 recruit in the state of Missouri. He received offers from Power 5 programs like Illinois and Iowa State, but he connected with the Western Michigan coaches and signed with the MAC program. The plan was to redshirt Eleby as a true freshman, but he was the second-best quarterback on the roster and pressed into action when starter Jon Wassink was injured. Eleby decided to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Not shy attacking defenses at all levels (one of three FBS passers to average 9.1 yards per attempt or higher in 2021) ... enough juice in his arm to deliver on-time from the opposite hash ... can drop the ball in the bucket downfield ... shows respectable accuracy and timing over the middle of the field and puts the ball where his receivers can catch and run ... able to climb and quicken his release with bodies around him ... gives his targets a chance to make plays without being irresponsible (only 11 career interceptions) ... scans quickly and keeps track of lurking safeties/linebackers ... doesn't lack confidence on the field or off, which rubs off on his teammates ... one of the most productive quarterbacks in the MAC the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average height and frame by NFL standards ... stares holes through intended targets, gift-wrapping his intentions to defenders ... average arm strength with an inconsistent feel for ball speed ... ball placement falls off when he attempts throws on the move ... unbalanced weight distribution, and mechanics lack refinement ... inconsistent pocket awareness and will run himself into sacks ... peeks at the rush, taking focus away from passing reads ... average athlete outside of structure and not much of a threat with his legs ... received all of the adjustments from the sideline ... ball security must improve with 18 career fumbles, including 10 in 2021.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Western Michigan, Eleby starred in offensive coordinator Eric Evans' RPO-based scheme. There is no doubt he benefited from a pair of NFL wide receivers (D'Wayne Eskridge, Skyy Moore) the past two seasons, but he deserves credit as well, leading the MAC in passing touchdowns in 2020 and passing yards in 2021. Eleby has sound accuracy and decision-making when he is able to stay in rhythm, giving his targets a chance to make plays. While he doesn't lack confidence, he is an average-twitch passer, and his tape shows a player who could have greatly benefited from another season or two at the college level.

Overall, Eleby put plenty of splash plays on tape that are encouraging, but his snap-to-snap consistency and lack of high-end traits are concerning for his next-level jump. He has the talent to survive in the NFL, even if it means a year or two on the practice squad to start.

12. COLE KELLEY | Southeastern Louisiana 6073 | 249 lbs. | rSR. Lafayette, La. (Teurlings) 10/27/1997 (age 24.50) #15

BACKGROUND: Cole Kelley, who has two older brothers, grew up in Lafayette, La., and attended Teurlings Catholic High, a private Catholic school. He became the varsity starter as a junior and led the team to back-to-back district championships and the playoffs in his two seasons as a starter. Kelley passed for 2,980 yards and 27 touchdowns as a junior, adding three rushing touchdowns to earn First Team All-State and All-District honors. As a senior, he again earned All-State and All-District honors with 3,203 passing yards and 28 touchdowns, adding eight rushing scores. Kelley also lettered in basketball and earned All-State honors as a junior, averaging 19 points and 10 rebounds per game (didn't play as a senior in order to focus on football training).

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Kelley was the No. 39 pro-style quarterback in the 2016 class and the No. 47 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He received offers from several nearby Group of 5 programs like Louisiana, Louisiana Tech, Southern Miss and Tulane. But Kelley was drawn to the pro-style offense at Arkansas, committing to the Razorbacks over Oklahoma State. After three seasons in Fayetteville, he decided to transfer and enrolled at FCS-level Southeastern Louisiana. His dad (Roger) played football at Louisiana-Monroe. His older brother (Lance) played wide receiver, safety and linebacker at Louisiana (2007-11). Kelley accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl, earning game MVP honors.

STRENGTHS: Above average arm strength to drive the ball to every inch of the field, regardless of his base mechanics ... can take mustard off his fastball to layer throws overtop coverage ... confident deep-ball passer (almost a third of his touchdown passes traveled at least 20 yards in the air) ... quick-footed big man (All-State basketball player in high school) who can slide and be more than a stationary passer ... can be a weapon as a ball carrier, either as a battering-ram in short-yardage or when scrambling for the sticks (had at least one 10-plus-yard run on all eight 2021 tapes studied) ... coaches say the light bulb finally came on for him as a super senior in terms of commitment to the work ... head-turning production in 2021 with 5,615 yards of total offense, the third-most in a season in FCS history (184 yards behind Steve McNair's record) ... his 72.1 percent (685-for-950) career completion percentage at Southeastern is an FCS record.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent field vision and late to eliminate things ... eye manipulation is undeveloped, and he's more of a see-it thrower, lacking in anticipation ... must sharpen his timing and placement for the next level ... moves well for a big man, but pocket movements are unbalanced and sometimes aimless ... struggled to find any type of rhythm against SEC competition while at Arkansas ... ball security must improve, with 25 fumbles over the past three seasons, including 15 in 2021 ... older prospect; will turn 25 during his NFL rookie season ... weight has fluctuated over the years and must stay at a consistent level (was north of 270 pounds last year) ... maturity will be fully investigated by NFL teams: was arrested on suspicion of DWI (November 2017) and suspended for one game (Arkansas Bret Bielema: "He's going to have to do a lot of growing up. ... I think he's got to understand what life is like without football.") ... produced against lower competition, facing only one FBS opponent (Louisiana Tech) over his last two seasons as a starter.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Southeastern Louisiana, Kelley posted record-breaking production in head coach Frank Scelfo's offense. After a tumultuous three years at Arkansas (on and off the field), he reinvented himself back in his home state, winning the Walter Payton Award (FCS Heisman Trophy) in 2020 and leading the FCS in passing yards, total offense and completion percentage in 2021. Kelley is a big-armed passer who can deliver to every level of the field while also relying on his mobility when necessary. However, he needs to quicken his eyes, expand his vision and improve his anticipation for the next level. Overall, Kelley has imposing physical traits (size, arm strength, quick movements) with remarkable production, but he got away with some bad habits at the FCS-level and will need to find better rhythm to survive in the NFL. His game gives off strong Cardale Jones vibes.

13. BROCK PURDY | Iowa State 6005 | 212 lbs. | SR. Gilbert, Ariz. (Perry) 12/27/1999 (age 22.34) #15

BACKGROUND: Brock Purdy, who is one of three children, grew up in Gilbert, Ariz., a southeastern suburb of Phoenix. He attended Perry High, where he shared the quarterback duties as a sophomore, posting an 8-11 touchdown-to-interception ratio. Purdy battled mononucleosis the summer before his junior season and missed the first three games, but he emerged as one of the top passers in the state with 3,333 passing yards, 842 rushing yards and 48 total touchdowns (42 passing, 6 rushing). As a senior, he was named the Arizona Gatorade Player of the Year and earned First Team All-State for the second straight year, leading Perry to a 12-2 record and the Class 6A state championship game. Purdy finished his final season with 4,405 passing yards and 57 touchdown passes (both 6A state records), adding 1,016 rushing yards and 10 rushing touchdowns. Over his prep career, he posted 8,937 passing yards and 107 touchdown passes.

A three-star quarterback recruit out of high school, Purdy was the No. 36 pro-style quarterback in the 2018 class and the No. 12 recruit in Arizona (fourth-ranked quarterback in the state). He didn't start to receive interest until after his junior season, picking up offers from nearby schools like New Mexico State and UNLV. After his record-setting senior season, Purdy received his first Power 5 offer from Kansas in December 2017, followed by Illinois and Texas A&M before signing day. Alabama initially offered him a preferred walk-on spot before making it a full scholarship offer. Iowa State entered the picture a few weeks before signing day, and Purdy developed a connection with Matt Campbell that led him to Ames. His father (Shawn) played college baseball at Miami and had an eight-year stint in minor-league baseball (1991-98). His older sister (Whitney) played softball at Spartanburg Methodist (2016-18) and Southeastern University (2019-20). His younger brother (Chubba), who was Perry's quarterback after Brock, played two seasons at Florida State (2020-21) before recently transferring to Nebraska. Purdy accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Quick setup and compact arm-action release ... athletic pocket mover with footwork that is tied to his mind ... slides to buy time and efficiently regain balance ... works through things quickly with the field sense to understand where his outlets are ... very accurate in the short-to-intermediate game, driving the ball on outs or crossers ... coaches say he developed resiliency over the past four years ... high-intangibles player with hard-working and humble attitude (head coach Matt Campbell: "There's no greater competitor that I've been around ...") ... durable four-year starter, starting 46 consecutive games ... the most productive quarterback in school history, holding almost every Iowa State passing record.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized, and the pocket can eat him up ... arm strength is mediocre, especially when he doesn't incorporate his base or hips ... consistently late and off-the-mark as a deep-ball passer, giving defenders time to adjust and make a play ... caught bird-dogging his targets ... process is too easily disrupted by the pass rush, allowing his mechanics and reads to break down ... doesn't take care of the football (fumbled in six different games in 2021, including three against Oklahoma) ... was benched during the 2021 Cy-Hawk rivalry game against Iowa ... total touchdown production declined from 35 as a sophomore to 24 as a junior and 20 as a senior.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Iowa State, Purdy operated out of the shotgun in offensive coordinator Tom Manning’s balanced scheme. He finished his prolific career as the all-time winningest quarterback in Cyclones history (30-17) and owns 32 school records, including total offense (13,347) and total touchdowns (100). Purdy is a cerebral passer who controls his ball speeds well to layer throws and deliver with placement away from defenders. His average arm strength and inconsistent responses to pressure led to mistakes on film and will be further exposed vs. NFL speed. Overall, Purdy is sharp and athletic with a productive resume, but he is undersized with unremarkable physical tools, forcing him to be perfect with his accuracy and timing. He projects as a potential NFL backup with a Colt McCoy-like ceiling.

His most productive season came during his junior year when he led Manvel to a 13-1 record and passed for 3,193 yards and 47 touchdowns (only three interceptions), adding 780 rushing yards and 12 scores on the ground. As a senior, King finished with 2,898 passing yards and 43 touchdowns (only five interceptions) with 640 rushing yards and eight touchdowns to earn District MVP honors. He finished his prep career with 10,464 passing yards, 3,440 rushing yards and a state-record 126 touchdowns, breaking Kyler Murray’s record of 117.
A three-star recruit out of high school, King was the No. 18 athlete in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 63 recruit in the state of Texas. He finished with an offer sheet that included Clemson, Michigan State and others, and he originally committed to TCU before re-opening his recruitment after his senior year. King opted to stay close to home and sign with Tom Herman and Houston. With Greg Ward at quarterback, King split his time between quarterback and wide receiver in his first two seasons with the Cougars. Opening with a 1-3 record in 2019, the new Houston coaches asked King to redshirt to preserve his eligibility for another season in 2020. However, he elected to enter the transfer portal and transferred to Miami (Fla.). King took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to the Hurricanes for the 2021 season before a season-ending shoulder injury. His mother (Cassandra) is a breast cancer survivor. His father (Eric), who played college athletics at Texas A&M Kingsville, passed away from a heart attack at age 48 in February 2020. King earned his undergraduate degree at Houston and is working toward his master’s degree at Miami. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Exciting athlete ... elusive feet in the pocket to dart around pressure and create second- and third-chance throws ... shifty in space to make pursuit miss and force missed tackles ... clean release and rapid zip on short-to-intermediate throws ... strong-willed passer who isn’t afraid to fire strikes into tight windows ... processes quickly with the vision of a veteran ... has experience as a receiver and looks natural catching the football ... became the first player in Houston history to score three different ways in one game (passing touchdown, receiving touchdown, kick return touchdown) ... team captain at both Miami and Houston with outstanding make-up and competitive drive (NFL scout: “He’s a ‘yes sir, no sir’ type of guy and the hardest worker in the program.”) ... very even-keeled and poised in high-pressure situations, playing some of his best in fourth quarters ... comfortable changing positions if necessary (King: “I’m open to doing whatever it takes to make a roster.”).
WEAKNESSES: Small, compact frame with undersized features ... inconsistent touch and placement on throws, making catches more difficult for his targets ... has messy mechanics and tends to hold the ball too long ... elusive athlete, but his pocket presence and movements are inconsistent ... hasn’t played wide receiver since the 2017 season and will face a learning curve at the new position ... both of his knees need to be cleared medically: suffered a torn meniscus to his left knee (November 2016) in a weight training accident; re-injured his meniscus during 2017 camp and missed the first two games; suffered a torn meniscus in his right knee (November 2018); Suffered a torn ACL and meniscus in his right knee in the bowl game (December 2020) and underwent surgery in January; missed most of his final season because of a left shoulder injury (September 2021), requiring surgery.
SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Miami (Fla.), King was productive under former Hurricanes offensive coordinator Rhett Lashlee, which marked the first time since high school that he had the same coordinator in back-to-back years. Despite injury roadblocks, King put together a remarkably productive career, including 11,242 total yards and the FBS record with at least one passing touchdown and one rushing touchdown in 16 consecutive games (bested Tim Tebow’s previous record of 15 consecutive games). King moves with twitch to avoid defenders and fire quick throws as a passer, although because of his below-average size and inconsistent touch, most NFL teams see wide receiver and return man as his best chances at a pro future. The Houston coaches said he was the most dynamic receiver on the team in 2016 before he moved to quarterback (61 catches for 520 yards and three touchdowns in college). Overall, King is undersized, and his history of injuries is concerning, but he has exciting athleticism to make the transition to wide receiver while also contributing in the backfield with his ball-handling skills.

SUMMARY: Chase Garbers was a three-year varsity starter at Corona del Mar, finishing his prep career with 69.0 percent completions, 7,970 passing yards and 90 passing touchdowns. A four-star recruit, he was courted by SEC and Ivy League programs, but he stayed on the West Coast, where he was a four-year starter. He was the team MVP as a senior and set several career highs as a passer and rusher, finishing with the school records for rushing yards and rushing scores by a quarterback. Garbers is a good-sized athlete with the body movements to maneuver the pocket and work his feet to his target. He delivers with touch to layer throws over coverage, although his deep-third placement isn't a strength. His read-to-read timing is inconsistent, and he tends to lock on his preferred option. Overall, Garbers doesn't have too many traits to get excited about, but he has enough mobility and short-to-intermediate accuracy to get the attention of coaches in an NFL camp.

SUMMARY: Skyler Thompson was born in Palmyra, Mo., and lost his mother (Teresa Lynn) to breast cancer when he was 6 years old. His family moved to the Fort Osage two years later where he started playing football. A three-year starter in high school, Thompson was the 2015 Missouri Gatorade Player of the Year, leading Fort Osage to the state title. A three-star recruit, he started 40 games the past five years and showed improvements each season, although he missed 13 games because of injury over the past two years. Thompson is a sound decision-maker with a strong arm and adequate touch, but his ball placement wavers, especially on secondary progressions. While creative as a scrambler, he prematurely peeks at the rush and abandons reads instead of navigating the pocket. Overall, Thompson is a dual threat prospect who takes care of the football, but it is unlikely that his inconsistent accuracy and mechanics will show substantial improvement in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Aqeel Glass, who is the oldest of three children, grew up in the St. Louis area and attended Lutheran High (teammates with DE Ronnie Perkins). After 40 total touchdowns (32 passing, eight rushing) as a junior, he committed to FIU (his first FBS offer), but decommitted after a coaching change, flipping to Alabama A&M (his father's alma mater). A five-year starter and three-time captain, he became the most decorated quarterback in school history, winning back-to-back SWAC Player of the Year honors. A large and loose passer, Glass showcases his body movements in and out of the pocket with easy velocity to make downfield or power throws. While his consistency has improved, it is not a strength to his game, and he must show better read efficiency and timing to challenge NFL defenses. Overall, Glass has the size and arm talent worth developing, but his ball placement and decision-making must improve once in an NFL camp for him to stay on the roster.

SUMMARY: Jarrett Guarantano (gar-an-TAN-o), who has a sister, started receiving college scholarship offers in the eighth grade, but he wasn't the starter at Bergen Catholic until his junior year. A four-star recruit, his father (James) was a record-setting receiver at Rutgers, but he committed to Tennessee over the Scarlet Knights. He had a roller-coaster five seasons in Knoxville, where he struggled to live up to his recruiting hype. He transferred to Washington State in 2021 and started the season opener, but a left knee injury plagued him all season (played only 37 snaps). Guarantano moves well for his size and made key improvements over the years with his pre-snap reads and patience as a passer. However, he needs to stay locked in mentally, and his passes tend to sail on him. Overall, Guarantano is a well-built, athletic passer with improved composure and a respectable arm worth bringing to an NFL camp, but his accuracy and inconsistent trigger hold him back.

SUMMARY: Chris Oladokun (oh-la-DOE-kun) was born and raised in Tampa, Fla., and started playing quarterback at the youth level. He attended Alonso High before transferring to Sickles High as a senior, posting 15 touchdowns in 2015. A three-star recruit, he committed to South Florida, where he spent three years before transferring to Samford. After two years, he transferred to South Dakota State in June 2021 and won the starting job, becoming the third player in school history to reach 3,150 passing yards in a season. An athletic mover, Oladokun effectively moves the pocket and creates off-schedule with his quick feet and whip of an arm. He has a quick release, but needs to be more controlled and repeatable with his mechanics, which should give a boost to his ball placement. Overall, Oladokun needs to fine-tune his read timing, decisions and technique, but he is a poised passer with functional athleticism and arm strength to warrant practice squad consideration.

SUMMARY: Zerrick Cooper, who is the youngest of four, was born and raised in Miami and attended Jonesboro High (20 miles south of Atlanta). After missing his junior year with an ACL injury, he earned all-state honors as a senior quarterback and safety. A four-star recruit, he committed to Clemson (over Miami and Ohio State), but with Trevor Lawrence blocking him in 2018, he transferred to FCS Jacksonville State. He set a high bar after setting school records in 2018, although his final two seasons fell short of expectations. Cooper is an exciting athlete, especially in the RPO game, with effortless arm velocity to drive the football. He is able to buy extra time with his legs, but his touch and placement are inconsistent on tape, and he must improve his post-snap decision-making when his first read isn't there. Overall, Cooper has inconsistent rhythm and accuracy as a passer, but he is a well-built, physically-gifted athlete with NFL-quality arm strength and toughness.

SUMMARY: Levi Lewis, who is one of five children, was born and raised in Baton Rouge, La., and attended Scotlandville Magnet. As a senior, he led the program to a 13-1 record and the 2016 state championship game, earning First Team All-State with 40 total touchdowns. A three-star athlete recruit, Lewis committed to Louisiana over Iowa State (he led ULL to an upset win over the Cyclones in September 2020). A three-year starter, he posted a 35-7 record and passed Jake Delhomme for the school-record with 74 passing touchdowns. A lefty passer, Lewis keeps his eyes elevated amid chaos and delivers with zip and a pretty deep ball. While he had an impressive 74-18 touchdown-to-interception ratio, his throws tend to sail, and he doesn't consistently see all 11 defenders. Overall, Lewis' tape shows plenty of positive plays to be optimistic about his abilities, but his below-average size and inconsistent mechanics and decisions will be tough to overcome in the NFL.

1. KENNETH WALKER III | Michigan State 5092 | 211 lbs. | JR. Arlington, Tenn. (Arlington) 10/20/2000 (age 21.52) #9

BACKGROUND: Kenneth “Kenny” Walker III, who is one of seven children, was born and raised in Memphis and started playing sports at age 4. He played baseball, basketball and wrestled throughout his youth, but football was always his favorite activity, playing in pee-wee and middle school. Walker attended Arlington High (just outside of Memphis) and became the starting running back on varsity as a sophomore, posting 877 rushing yards and 11 total touchdowns. He had 175 carries for 1,205 yards and 17 touchdowns as a junior, adding 22 catches for 411 yards and six touchdowns. As a senior captain, Walker missed three games but still posted 1,403 rushing yards and 27 rushing touchdowns, leading Arlington to the 2018 6A state playoffs and earning All-State and All-Region honors. He finished his prep career with 493 carries for 3,485 yards (7.1 average) and 41 touchdowns, adding 64 catches for 1,058 yards and 16 receiving touchdowns.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Walker was the No. 143 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 57 recruit in the state of Tennessee. He collected numerous FCS scholarship offers from programs like Illinois State, Indiana State and Mercer. But Walker wanted to play “big time” college ball and originally committed to Kent State before visiting and earning an offer from Wake Forest (his only Power 5 offer). After two seasons at Wake Forest as a backup (zero starts), Walker entered the transfer portal and committed to Michigan State for the 2021 season. After earning All-America honors and the Doak Walker Award as college football’s top running, he elected to skip his final season of eligibility and the 2021 bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Rocked-up build, and grew up in the weight room ... explosive lateral agility to juke defenders or shift between lanes ... able to plant and go in a blink to sharply redirect his path and leave pursuit off-balance ... has the long speed to out-pace pursuit ... shows a natural feel for spacing and how to make defenders miss (Walker: "After I get the hand-off, I just let my instincts take over.") ... presses the line before bursting through the hole or making sharp 90-degree turns and accelerating outside ... NFL-level vision and gather skills to hit holes at their infancy ... physical runner to stay on his feet at contact and escape tackle attempts ... effective in the screen game (zero drops on 16 targets in 2021) ... dependable ball security, with only two career fumbles (only one in 2021 as a full-time starter) ... driven individual and gives 100% effort on and off the field ... workhorse for the Spartans in 2021 ... outstanding production in his one season at Michigan State, finishing second in the FBS in rushing yards (1,636) ... led the FBS in yards after contact (1,168) and finished second in runs 10-plus yards (46) in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Runs high and tight and needs to improve his pad level ... his long strides hinder his fluidity and ability to work tight spaces ... low batting average as a pass blocker, and his technique needs rebuilt from the ground up ... guilty of half-hearted cuts or shoulder chips ... only 19 career catches and untested as a route runner ... inconsistent finishing skills when targeted away from his body ... stayed durable in college, but prior to his senior year of high school, blood clots were found in his lungs, and he was originally told that his football days were done; he took blood thinners (one shot twice a day for three months) and was finally cleared, missing only three games as a senior in 2018.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Michigan State, Walker was the featured weapon in offensive coordinator Jay Johnson's multiple run scheme. After two seasons at Wake Forest, he transferred to East Lansing and had a prolific 2021 campaign with 136.3 rushing yards per game and 18 rushing touchdowns, finishing sixth in the voting for the Heisman Trophy (highest finish by a MSU player since 1988). With his vision and contact balance, Walker generates impressive burst off his plant foot to dart away from trouble and break tackles (led the FBS with 89 forced missed tackles in 2021). Once he clears the first wave, he can hit an extra gear to reach the corner or fend off chasing defenders. Overall, Walker must improve as a pass catcher and pass protector, but his instinctive ability to press the line, set up his cuts and create yardage will translate to the pro game, similar to former Pro Bowler Garrison Hearst. He projects as an immediate NFL starter.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 35 overall)

2. BREECE HALL | Iowa State 5112 | 217 lbs. | JR. Wichita, Kan. (Northwest) 5/31/2001 (age 20.91) #28

BACKGROUND: Breece Hall, who has an older sister, grew up in Omaha with his mother (LaRhonda McDaniel) before the family moved to Wichita in 2010. He focused on basketball and football growing up and played both at Northwest High School. After spending most of his sophomore year on the JV team, Hall had a breakout junior season with 2,082 rushing yards (10.3 yards per carry) and 32 touchdowns, adding 12 catches for 130 yards and two touchdowns. As a senior, he earned First Team All-State and All-Metro honors for the second consecutive year, helping the program to a 12-1 record and runner-up finish in Class 5A. Hall finished his senior season with 2,127 rushing yards and 29 touchdowns and 20 catches for 588 yards and eight touchdowns in 2018. He finished his prep career with 4,516 rushing yards. Hall also lettered in basketball at Northwest.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hall was the No. 22 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Kansas (QB Graham Mertz was No. 1). With little varsity action until his junior year, he went widely overlooked as a recruit until Iowa State found his tape and offered him midway through his junior year. The secret was out as offers from Kansas State, Michigan, Ole Miss and others soon followed. But Hall embraced the culture fit and relationship with the Cyclones' coaching staff, choosing Iowa State over Nebraska (and enrolled early). His stepfather (Jeff Smith) was a running back at Nebraska and was drafted in the 10th round of the 1985 NFL Draft, playing four seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs and Tampa Bay Buccaneers (Hall wears No. 28 because of Smith). His cousin (Roger Craig) played 11 seasons in the NFL (1983-93) and won three Super Bowls with the San Francisco 49ers. His cousin (Hunter Sallis) was a five-star guard in the 2021 basketball recruiting class and signed with Gonzaga. Hall elected to skip his final season and the 2021 bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Well-distributed body mass built to handle the load ... skilled at forcing missed tackles with his lateral agility and vision ... able to slam on the brakes and smoothly redirect his cuts ... his blocking scheme patience usually pays off for him, allowing the point of entry to develop ... impressive play strength through congestion ... drops his pads and finishes with contact balance, not making it easy on tacklers ... smooth body control as a pass catcher to adjust and pull in erratic throws ... gutsy in pass protection with the poise and power to get better ... low fumble rate, putting the ball on the ground once every 200 offensive touches in college ... already carries himself like a pro and competes with an overachieving mindset (head coach Matt Campbell: "He has always been ready for the moment.") ... finished his career with 11 school records, including scoring (338), total touchdowns (56) and rushing touchdowns (50).

WEAKNESSES: His impressive stopwatch speed doesn't always show on tape ... average suddenness and doesn't have multiple gears under the hood ... inconsistent pressing the line of scrimmage ... he is more of a screen target than proven route runner, and needs further development with his route tempo/depth ... he will cut or chest up blockers in pass protection and needs to develop his hand use ... his competitive urgency is much more impressive as a runner than blocker.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Iowa State, Hall was entrenched as the starter since his freshman year in offensive coordinator Tom Manning's zone scheme. Overlooked as a high school recruit, Hall quickly established himself as one of college football's top ball carriers (finished top-10 in the Heisman voting as a sophomore and junior), setting an FBS record with a rushing touchdown in 24 consecutive games. Hall, who is Iowa State's all-time leading scorer, has a strong understanding of his strengths as a player and is a disciplined athlete by nature. He posted outstanding testing numbers, but there are times on tape you wish he showed more of an escape gear. Overall, Hall has room to improve as a blocker and pass catcher and he doesn't consistently play up to his testing numbers, but he runs with outstanding patience, vision and athletic footwork to be a starting-caliber back in the NFL. He projects best in a zone-based scheme (inside or outside).

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 41 overall)

3. ISAIAH SPILLER | Texas A&M 6003 | 217 lbs. | JR. Spring, Texas (Klein Collins) 8/9/2001 (age 20.72) #28

BACKGROUND: Isaiah Spiller, who is the oldest of three children, grew up in College Station while his father finished his degree at Texas A&M. He started playing youth football at age 8 and later attended Klein Collins High in Spring, a northern suburb of Houston. After rushing for 545 yards as a sophomore, Spiller posted 198 carries for 1,285 yards and 23 touchdowns as a junior, adding 15 catches for 313 yards and four touchdowns receiving. He had his best season as a senior with 1,493 rushing yards and 20 touchdowns, earning First Team All-Region and District MVP honors for the second consecutive season. Spiller finished his prep career with 3,587 scrimmage yards and 53 total touchdowns. He also lettered in track and was part of the 4x100 and 4x200 relays and set career bests of 11.25 in the 100 meters and 22.32 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Spiller was the No. 9 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 23 recruit in the state of Texas (top running back in the state). He collected offers from Michigan, Penn State and others before committing to Oklahoma (his childhood idol was Adrian Peterson). However, he de-committed and flipped to Texas A&M after Jimbo Fisher was hired as head coach. His father (Fred) was a tight end at Texas A&M (1999-2001) before a herniated disc forced him to medically retire around the same time Isaiah was born. Spiller elected to skip his final season and the 2021 bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Instinctive runner with patient, controlled feet to shake defenders ... creates his own yardage with his vision and decision-making ... sticks his foot in the ground and gets north-south with timing ... aggressive, determined finisher through holes and into contact ... solidly-built and stays square to absorb hits ... above-average pass-catcher, especially on angle and wheel routes ... catches outside his frame and regularly makes difficult grabs (zero drops in 2021) ... willing blocker with the play strength to get the job done ... described as “smart” and “coachable” by the A&M coaching staff ... durable and didn’t miss a game over the past three seasons ... consistently productive, finishing his career ranked seventh in school history in rushing yards (2,993) and 19th in scrimmage yards (3,578).

WEAKNESSES: Taller runner who needs to run with better pad level and forward lean ... plays quick and controlled, but his open-field moves aren’t dynamic ... missing a fifth-gear to be true home-run threat ... his pass protection tends to be hit-or-miss ... he is an eager blocker but needs to improve his patience and angles ... ball security isn’t a glaring concern with only one fumble in 2021, but fumbled six times in his career ... accounted for only 42.8% of the team’s carries in 2021 and the rotation helped keep him fresh ... minimal special teams experience.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Spiller broke into the starting lineup as a freshman and has been reliable as the featured back in head coach Jimbo Fisher’s zone-based scheme. Leading the Aggies in rushing three consecutive years, he posted similar production each season with his yards per carry average going from 5.4 to 5.5 to 5.6. Spiller is a good-sized back with the controlled feet, processing speed and tempo to pick through the defense, forcing missed tackles with his instincts and contact balance. He is an average athlete and his pass protection must continue to improve, but his ability as a pass catcher alone should keep him playing on Sundays for a long time. Overall, Spiller needs to be more consistent with his pad level and blocking, but he has outstanding footwork, patience and vision and ties it all together to maximize each carry. He has all the tools to develop into a three-down NFL starter.

4. TYLER ALLGEIER | BYU 5106 | 224 lbs. | rJR. Fontana, Calif. (Kaiser) 4/15/2000 (age 22.04) #25

BACKGROUND: Tyler Allgeier (Al-jeer), who has a younger sister, grew up in Fontana (50 miles east of Los Angeles) with his mother (Ester) in the same house where she was raised (along with his grandparents and uncle). He started playing organized sports at age 3 and signed up for tackle football at age 7. His first love was soccer, but he decided to focus on football when he enrolled at Kaiser High. A two-way player, Allgeier was a three-year varsity starter at both running back and linebacker, rushing for 981 yards as a sophomore backup in 2015. As a junior, he became the starter and rushed for 1,635 yards (7.0 average) and 17 touchdowns with 29 receptions and 48 total tackles. Allgeier had his best season as a senior with a school-record 2,470 rushing yards (10.7 average) and 29 touchdowns to earn All-State honors. He added 37 tackles, 3.0 sacks and an interception on defense in 2017. Allgeier finished his prep career as the school’s all-time leading rusher with 5,086 rushing yards and 56 rushing touchdowns. He also ran track and had personal bests of 11.14 in the 100 meters, 23.04 in the 200 meters, 42’5 in the shot put and 5’8 in the high jump.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Allgeier was the No. 228 running back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 372 recruit in the state of California. Despite his productive high school career, he went largely overlooked as a recruit with only Division II Southern Nazarene (Okla.) offering a partial scholarship. BYU offered him a preferred walk-on spot, and he fell in love with the program. Allgeier worked at Walmart as a freshman to help pay his tuition, which was nearly double compared to what most students pay since he is Catholic and not a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. After two seasons in the program, he was put on full scholarship in January 2020. Allgeier elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Big-boned frame with a solid build ... runs with athletic steps/moves, and his eyes and feet are tied together with strings ... quick to read his blocks, press the hole and make timely cuts ... patient but decisive runner with minimal wasted motion (and won't run up the back of his blockers) ... has the contact balance and heavy pads to squeeze through slivers of daylight between the tackles ... picks up steam once he gets going with better-than-expected second-level speed ... 33.8% of his carries in 2021 resulted in a first down or touchdown ... reliable screen/check-down option with excellent focus and body control as a pass catcher ... effective lead blocker on quarterback runs and stayed alert in pass protection to locate and put his shoulder in the blitzers' belly ... humble by nature and earned his success by out-working everyone with his "nothing is given" attitude ... didn't complain when the coaches moved him to linebacker for most of the 2019 season (26 tackles) ... durable and handled a full workload in 2021 while avoiding injury ... highly productive 2021 season and finished tied for No. 1 nationally in rushing touchdowns (23) and was one of only four players to reach 1,600 rushing yards to set a BYU single-season record ... needed only two seasons to rank top-five in school history in several career categories, including rushing yards and rushing touchdowns.

WEAKNESSES: Not a burst runner, with only average perimeter speed ... his ordinary wiggle is a result of his tight hips and inconsistent pad level ... his broken tackles are usually because of force rather than avoiding defenders ... runs physical but would benefit from exploding into contact more ... can get caught leaning in pass protection, giving rushers a chance to make a move ... fumbled six times in college, including four times in 2021 ... found himself contained against the top two run-defending teams on the 2021 schedule, averaging just 3.2 yards per carry (42/135/1) vs. Baylor and Utah ... only one season (2019) of special teams experience.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at BYU, Allgeier grew into a bell-cow role in first-year offensive coordinator Aaron Roderick's balanced attack. Over the past two seasons (24 games), he averaged 113.8 rushing yards and 1.5 rushing touchdowns per game (best in the nation over that span) and finished his career with a 6.4 yards-per-carry average (BYU record). A decisive ball carrier, Allgeier shows a lot of the ancillary traits necessary to be productive at the next level and competes with the attitude and determination of a former walk-on (see his chase-down forced fumble on 2021 Arizona State tape). Although he isn't overly elusive, he runs through arm tackles with his body strength and contact balance (70.9% of his yardage in 2021 came after initial contact). Overall, Allgeier isn't an explosive runner, but he runs with an instinctive feel and quick feet for a bigger ball carrier and shows the passing game potential to be an every-down NFL back. He reminds me of Arizona Cardinals RB James Conner.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

5. JAMES COOK | Georgia 5110 | 199 lbs. | SR. Miami, Fla. (Central) 9/25/1999 (age 22.59) #4

BACKGROUND: James Cook, who has six siblings, grew up in the Carol City neighborhood of Miami Gardens and started playing football at age 5. Throughout his childhood and youth leagues, he became a well-known in the Miami area for his ability on the football field and started receiving attention from colleges prior to high school. Cook enrolled at Miami Central High and made an immediate impact on varsity with 715 rushing yards as a freshman, including an MVP performance with 178 yards and three touchdowns in the 2015 Class 6A state championship game. Because he was older for his grade, he decided to reclassify and become a junior for the 2016 season, skipping his sophomore year. As a senior, Cook was named a U.S. Army All-American and First Team All-County with 782 yards and 10 touchdowns on 91 carries. A two-way player, he also had three interceptions and a pair of defensive touchdowns in 2017. Midway through his senior year, Cook transferred to Miami Northwestern High and lettered in track in 2018, setting a personal-best 10.53 in the 100-meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Cook was the No. 3 all-purpose back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of Florida. In the eighth grade, he received his first offer from his hometown Miami (Fla.), and others from top programs like Alabama, Clemson, and Ohio State soon followed. After his freshman year, Cook committed to Florida State, a program he was familiar with from his brother's playing days. However, he reopened his recruitment the summer before his senior season. Midway through his senior year, Cook committed to Georgia. His older brother (Dalvin), who starred at Florida State and was drafted in the second round of the 2017 NFL Draft, is a three-time Pro Bowl running back. His older brother (DeAndre Burnett) played college basketball at Miami (2013-15) and Ole Miss (2015-17) before a professional career overseas. His father (James Sr.) passed away in December 2020 from complications of diabetes. His uncle (Anthony Jones), who was a victim of a drive-by shooting in 2018, was a running back at FIU (2015-19) and spent training camp with the Seattle Seahawks in 2020. Cook accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but pulled out a week before the event.

PRO DAY	5114	204	31	9 1/8	76 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Energetic feet in space ... displays the lower body agility to sidestep tacklers and create his own yardage ... shows patience at the line of scrimmage with a feel for lane development ... varies his pace to navigate ... flies through the crease to create conflict for linebackers and safeties ... deceiving lower body strength to squirm out of the grasp ... natural pass-catching traits, and comfortable snaring throws away from his frame (one drop on 74 career targets) ... natural tracking skills downfield ... dangerous on swing screens, and has an expanded route-running inventory for a running back ... only two career fumbles in college ... impressive yards per carry (6.5) and yards per catch (10.9) career averages.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal build and size for NFL work ... mediocre contact balance ... runs tough, but doesn't power through arm tackles consistently and often goes backward at contact ... inconsistent open-field moves ... needs to show better second-level vision ... runs out of gas downfield and can be caught from behind ... bad habit of taking too many steps while waiting for holes to open ... must refine his hand and anchor technique in pass protection to take on NFL rushers ... needs to bet quicker with his ID skills as a pass blocker ... off field requires vetting: arrested and charged with driving with an open container and an invalid driver's license (December 2019) ... lack of size leads to durability concerns; missed one game as a junior because of a shoulder injury (October 2020).

SUMMARY: A part-time starter at Georgia, Cook shared the running back duties with Zamir White in offensive coordinator Todd Monken's scheme. He averaged better than 6.1 yards per carry in each of his four seasons in Athens, and his role expanded as a senior, leading the team in all-purpose yards per game (67.5) and in rushing five times. Cook has shifty feet to make controlled cuts against the grain and instinctively navigate holes at the line of scrimmage. Although he will be limited as an inside runner, he has legitimate versatility to flex out wide and run routes as a pass catcher. Overall, Cook doesn't have the contact balance or build of a full-time ball carrier like his older brother, but he can be a dynamic, versatile threat with his pass-catching skills and balanced athleticism to gravitate toward space.

6. DAMEON PIERCE | Florida 5095 | 218 lbs. | SR. Bainbridge, Ga. (Bainbridge) 2/19/2000 (age 22.19) #27

BACKGROUND: Dameon Pierce, who is one of three children, was born and raised in Bainbridge in southwest Georgia (close to both the Alabama and Florida state lines). After his mother (Shameeka Rogers) signed him up for football at age 7 (against his wishes), he started at running back and became an immediate local legend at the youth and middle school levels, leading his teams to multiple undefeated seasons and championships. Pierce attended Bainbridge High and was a four-year starter, leading the Bearcats in rushing each season. After rushing for 910 yards as a freshman, he exploded with 2,060 rushing yards (6.7 yards per carry) and 33 touchdowns as a sophomore, adding 13 catches for 148 yards. Pierce earned Class 5A All-State honors as a junior with 1,686 rushing yards (6.9 yards per carry) and nine touchdowns while setting the school single-game record with 330 yards. He had his most productive season as a senior and again earned All-State honors as he finished with 2,123 rushing yards (9.4 yards per carry) and 33 total touchdowns. Pierce finished his prep career with 6,779 rushing yards and 94 total touchdowns, becoming just the 10th player in state history to surpass 6,700 career rushing yards. He also ran track as a sophomore and posted a personal-best 11.91 in the 100 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Pierce was the No. 8 running back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 25 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received his first offers (Auburn and Florida State) during his sophomore season and verbally committed to Alabama the summer prior to his junior season. However, Pierce de-committed from the Crimson Tide after his junior year and flipped to Florida over Auburn and home state Georgia, which signed the No. 1 back in the class (Zamir White). Pierce accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Compactly built, and looks like an NFL back ... runs with attitude and power in his legs ... outstanding contact balance and feel between the tackles ... displays the sharp footwork and body control to hug blocks and burst to open space ... eyes and feet stay on the same page ... only saw 19 targets in 2021 but caught every one, including a few seam and wheel routes ... not only a finisher as a ball carrier, but also as a blocker ... not shy clearing the road as a lead blocker, and his physical chips will put defensive linemen on their backs in pass protection ... fumbled three times in college, but zero fumbles in 2021 ... the Florida coaches say his football passion is "evident" in practices and games ... carries himself with humble confidence that was instilled in him by his parents (went into the stands to thank the UF band after the 2021 bowl game) ... logged 441 special teams snaps (mostly on kickoff coverages) and finished his career with 11 special teams tackles ... his 13 rushing touchdowns in 2021 were one behind Emmitt Smith's single-season school record for running backs.

WEAKNESSES: His vision runs hot-and-cold ... his speed is average, limiting his ability to attack the perimeter ... one-note runner after he clears the first wave ... not a proven big-play creator (of his 206 carries the past two years, only two resulted in a 25-plus yard play) ... late to lower his pads into contact at times ... will invite physical contact rather than avoiding it ... only one season as the starter, and the Florida coaches gave him 15-plus touches in a game only twice in his career (50 games played in Gainesville) ... never reached 600 yards rushing in any of his four seasons in college.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Florida, Pierce was part of a backfield rotation in former head coach Dan Mullen's spread offense (only 374 offensive touches in his career). One of the most productive high school players in Georgia history, he underwhelmed in his first three years in the Gators' pass-happy offense, but he made the most of his senior season and impressed when he got on the field. Pierce has a thick lower half and strength through his core and displayed improved reliability in 2021 (no fumbles, no drops, steady blocker). He has ordinary speed and can be inconsistent stringing moves together, but he runs through contact with short-area explosion and treats every run like it's his last. Overall, Pierce doesn't have the résumé of a bell-cow back or big-play creator, but he has an NFL build and run style with the instincts and finishing skills to be a better pro than college player. He has plenty of tread left on his tires with NFL starting potential in both gap and zone schemes.

7. BRIAN ROBINSON JR. | Alabama 6015 | 225 lbs. | rSR. Tuscaloosa, Ala. (Hillcrest) 3/22/1999 (age 23.10) #4

BACKGROUND: Brian Robinson Jr. was born and raised in Tuscaloosa and grew up just minutes from the Alabama campus. He attended Hillcrest High (alma mater of Chicago White Sox shortstop Tim Anderson) and shared the backfield duties his first two seasons. As a junior, Robinson helped lead the team to the playoff semifinals and set the single-game Class 6A rushing record with 447 yards on 29 carries (15.4 average) against Clay-Chalkville. As a senior, he again led Hillcrest to the playoff semifinals and finished the 2016 season with 161 carries for 990 yards and 18 touchdowns, adding 24 catches for 302 yards and two touchdowns to earn Second Team All-State honors. Robinson also lettered in track and registered a personal-best 11.04 in the 100 meters at sectionals.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Robinson was the No. 8 running back in the nation and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Alabama. He collected offers from several SEC programs including Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, Ole Miss and South Carolina. The Crimson Tide already had a pair of five-star backs in the 2017 recruiting class in Najee Harris and Cam Akers (who later flipped to Florida State), but that didn't deter Robinson, who grew up a die-hard Alabama fan. He exhausted his college eligibility after the 2020 season but took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility due to the pandemic. His cousin (Josh Lanier) played wide receiver at North Alabama (2016-18), Alabama (2019-20) and Jackson State (2021). Robinson graduated with his degree (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Looks like a linebacker with his well-proportioned, muscle-bound frame ... physical runner who produces natural power when he stays downhill ... keeps his feet chopping to drive through contact ... creates a point of entry when there isn't one ... finishes his carries and grinds out every yard he can ... not a speedster but not a slug either and can vary his speeds due to his acceleration and footwork ... connects his feet with his eyes to make athletic cuts and string together multiple moves at a time ... takes care of the football with only two career fumbles (none as the feature back in 2021) ... uses his body power and eager hands to square and halt rushers in pass protection ... dependable option on screen plays (two drops on 38 targets in 2021) ... was an "outstanding" special teams player, according to head coach Nick Saban ... showed mental toughness and patience to wait his turn in a crowded running back room ... finished his career 11th in school history in rushing yards.

WEAKNESSES: Average burst between the tackles ... will struggle to avoid immediate traffic at the line of scrimmage ... occasionally late setting up his moves and finding his rhythm ... large target for defenders and will struggle to make himself small through creases ... showed better decision-making as a senior, but his anticipation still has room for improvement ... not a consistent make-you-miss back in space ... wasn't a home-run hitter in college (only three of his 545 career carries resulted in a 25-plus yard play) ... limited route tree experience as a pass-catcher ... has tread left on his tires, but his violent run style could lead to durability issues in the NFL.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Alabama, Robinson was the feature running back in offensive coordinator Bill O'Brien's pro-style scheme. A backup his first four years in the program, the Tuscaloosa native patiently waited his turn and took advantage of his opportunity to start in 2021, leading the Tide in rushing. A hungry, downhill runner, Robinson moves like an agile tank with the power to accelerate through contact or the footwork maneuver around it. Although he has only average burst through the hole and out of his cuts, he appeared more decisive as a senior, which helped him force missed tackles and consistently gain yards after contact. Overall, Robinson isn't a proven big-play threat, but he is a physical ball carrier with the one-cut instincts and third-down upside to carve out a role in an NFL backfield similar to Latavius Murray.

8. KYREN WILLIAMS | Notre Dame 5092 | 194 lbs. | rSO. St. Louis, Mo. (St. John Vianney) 8/26/2000 (age 21.67) #23

BACKGROUND: Kyren Williams, who is one of three children, grew up in the St. Louis area and started playing flag football in first grade and tackle football in third grade. After attending a public middle school, he enrolled at St. John Vianney High, an all-boys Catholic school in Kirkwood, Mo., and the alma mater of former NFL quarterback Trent Green. Despite missing part of his sophomore season with a hip pointer, Williams led the team to the 2016 state championship, mostly as a slot receiver. He moved to more of a backfield role as a junior and finished with 922 rushing yards, 774 receiving yards and 34 total touchdowns, adding 37 tackles, 3.0 sacks and four interceptions on defense as a safety and linebacker. Williams led Vianney to the 2018 Class 5 state title as a senior (the school's second in three years), rushing for a state championship game-record 286 yards. He rushed for 2,035 yards as a senior, recorded 55 catches for 725 yards and scored 40 total touchdowns, adding 92 tackles, 8.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks and eight interceptions on defense. He also had a passing touchdown as he earned 2018 Class 5 offensive player of the year honors. Williams finished his career with several school records, including career touchdowns (112), receptions (204), receiving yards (2,696) and interceptions (13). He finished second in school history in career rushing yards (3,947) and career total yards (6,643).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Williams was the No. 24 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Missouri (Alabama WR Jameson Williams was No. 1). Kyren Williams started to receive scholarship offers as a sophomore and narrowed down his final three to Michigan, Missouri and Notre Dame. Williams always gravitated toward the Irish and voluntarily took extra classes at St. Louis Community College prior to his senior year of high school so he could enroll early in South Bend in January 2019. His father (Larry) played linebacker at Northern Illinois. His uncle (James Gregory) was a nose tackle at Alabama and was a member of the 1992 national championship team. His uncle (Darren Holmes) was a defensive lineman at Kansas State in the early 1990s. His grandfather (Kenneth Gregory) was a defensive back at Missouri (1970-73). His younger sister (Grace) is a freshman lacrosse player at Missouri Western. Williams elected to skip his final two seasons of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He also opted out of Notre Dame's 2021 bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Short, compact body type ... runs low to the ground with natural balance to pinball off contact ... takes quick, controlled steps to clear expiring holes and cut away from trouble ... stays patient behind his blocks as an inside runner ... trusts his eyes to navigate through traffic ... not a forceful runner, but will pump his legs through contact and step out of tackle attempts ... quick, reliable hands as a pass catcher to snatch the football in stride (42 catches and only one drop in 2021) ... has the quick feet to beat press from the slot or separate mid-route ... gutsy in blitz pickup, squaring and striking defenders ... averaged 10.8 yards as the featured punt returner in 2021 (14/151/0) ... goal-oriented individual with a long list of references ready to glow about his character (voted a team captain as a sophomore) ... durable runner with back-to-back 1,000-yard rushing seasons and no major injuries while averaging 20.5 offensive touches per game the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Below average long-speed and won't out-run NFL defensive backs ... disappointing testing results at the NFL Combine ... stretch runs to the perimeter will be tougher in the NFL ... doesn't have push-the-pile power as an inside runner ... lacks shifty creativity in the open field ... tends to lose momentum out of his cuts ... too easily tripped up by ankle tackles ... his ball security must improve, with eight fumbles over the past two seasons ... willing in pass protection, but gave up 27 pressures over the past two seasons because of his lack of size and consistent technique.

SUMMARY: Williams earned the starting role the past two seasons in offensive coordinator Tommy Rees' zone-based scheme. He was a slot receiver before he was a running back in high school and proved himself as an all-purpose weapon for the Irish (was the only FBS player in 2021 to surpass 1,000 yards rushing, 350 yards receiving and 100 yards as a return man). Williams is highly effective on counters and cutbacks with the plant-and-go quickness to make strong cuts in any direction. He has limited inside power, but is a problem-solving runner thanks to his sharp footwork and blend of patience and decisiveness. Overall, Williams is an average athlete and ideally projects as more of a complimentary back in the NFL, but he is an elite competitor with the darting quickness and pass-catching skills to be a third-down weapon. He shows some similarities to New England Patriots RB James White.

9. ZAMIR WHITE | Georgia 5116 | 214 lbs. | rJR. Laurinburg, N.C. (Scotland) 9/18/1999 (age 22.61) #3

BACKGROUND: Zamir (zuh-MEER) "Zeus" White, who has a younger sister, was born and raised in Laurinburg (10 minutes from the South Carolina border). He started playing football at age 6, and it quickly became his passion, excelling through middle and high school. White attended Scotland High, where he became the starting running back on varsity as a freshman and finished his prep career top-10 in state history with 7,169 rushing yards and 127 total touchdowns (Scotland went 50-6 in his four seasons). As a senior, he rushed for 2,086 yards and 34 touchdowns on 148 carries (14.1 average), but the team's playoff hopes were dashed when he went down with an ACL tear in the second round. White won numerous awards in 2017, including the North Carolina Gatorade Player of the Year and USA Today First Team offense. He also starred in track with personal bests of 10.58 in the 100-meters and 22.87 in the 200 meters.

A five-star recruit out of high school, White was the No. 1 running back in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 9 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of North Carolina. After his freshman season, he collected dozens of scholarship offers and considered Alabama, Clemson, North Carolina, and Ohio State before committing to Georgia. Zamir was born with several complications, including a cleft lip, cleft palate and leaking kidneys, and wasn't expected to live more than a few weeks. But aside from numerous hospital stays and scars from several surgeries, White had a healthy childhood. His biological father has been in and out of jail throughout much of White's life. White graduated with his degree in housing management & policy (Fall 2021). He elected to skip his final season of eligibility to enter the 2021 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5117	217	31	8 5/8	75 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Developed physique that was built from countless weight room hours ... physical and instinctive as an inside runner ... strong, quick footwork to generate burst out of his cuts ... short-stepper who keeps his feet married to his eyes as he patiently adjusts to the moving parts at the line of scrimmage ... lowers his pads and plows forward with point-of-attack violence ... runs with a strong foundation and the body balance to break tackles ... refuses to go down without a fight ... willing in pass protection and will stick his shoulder into the gut of rushers ... only three career fumbles ... the football field and weight room are his safe spaces and where he feels the most comfortable ... called a "great leader" by head coach Kirby Smart for the example he sets on the practice field and taking care of his body ... has overcome his share of adversity, including multiple knee injuries ... led the Georgia in rushing the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent setting up his moves and will cut into contact ... one-cut-and-go runner who struggles to string moves together ... above-average stopwatch speed, but it doesn't always show on the field ... wasn't given many pass protection responsibilities, and shows obvious inexperience ... poor foundation as a blocker, and looks out of control adjusting to blitzers ... only 21 pass targets in his college career ... shared the workload at Georgia (only five career games with 15-plus offensive touches) ... the medical feedback will be important after tearing both ACLs: suffered a torn ACL in his right knee in his final high school game (November 2017) and tore the ACL in his left knee on a non-contact play in a summer practice (August 2018).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, White was the lead back in offensive coordinator Todd Monken's scheme. He led the Bulldogs in rushing the past two seasons and had a lion's share of the carries, although he was mainly used on early downs and doesn't have ideal passing down experience as a receiver and blocker. Nicknamed Zeus, White runs behind his pads and barrels through contact with the body strength and balance to break tackles. Although he isn't super slippery or creative, he has the vision, patience and agility to pick and slide through the muck at the line of scrimmage. Overall, White was part of a deep backfield at Georgia and is unproven on passing downs, but he has the ideal build, footwork and mentality to be a dynamic one-cut runner. He has NFL starting potential if the medicals aren't a concern.

10. ABRAM SMITH | Baylor 5115 | 213 lbs. | rSR. Abilene, Texas (Abilene) 9/14/1998 (age 23.62) #7

BACKGROUND: Abram Smith grew up in Abilene and started playing flag football at age 6 and tackle football a year later. He attended Abilene High and played varsity football as a freshman, scoring a touchdown on his first two carries (one of only two freshman the past 25 years to play varsity at Abilene). Smith became a starter as a sophomore and posted 915 rushing yards and 10 touchdowns before an ACL tear ended his 2014 season. He returned as a junior and earned Honorable Mention All-State honors with 1,814 rushing yards and 24 touchdowns. Smith had his best season as a senior with 1,939 rushing yards (8.2 average) and 34 touchdowns, adding 84 yards receiving and a kick return touchdown. He led the program to an 11-2 record and received 2016 Class 6A Second Team All-State and District MVP honors. Smith finished his prep career with multiple school records, including career rushing yards (4,955), all-purpose touchdowns (77) and 100-yard rushing games (31).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Smith was the No. 53 running back in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 132 recruit in the state of Texas. He initially committed to Tulsa before re-opening his recruitment and visiting Baylor and Texas Tech. Smith grew up rooting for Baylor and became part of Matt Rhule's first recruiting class in Waco, enrolling early in January 2017. He moved to linebacker midway through the 2019 because of depth problems (didn't play defense in his four years of varsity football at Abilene). After two seasons on defense, the coaches moved him back to running back during 2021 spring practice. Smith graduated with his degree in health, kinesiology and leisure studies (first in his family to attend college). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Decisive one-cut, north-south runner ... his feet are controlled and quick ... accelerates smoothly and carries his momentum through his cuts ... his timing and vision stay on schedule ... disciplined between the tackles, and won't try to bounce everything ... keeps his legs churning through contact ... physical finisher and makes defensive backs regret trying to tackle him one-on-one ... squares and looks to unleash power in pass protection ... experienced on special teams coverages (493 career snaps) ... unselfish teammate and does what is best for the team (had near zero experience when the Baylor coaches asked him to move to linebacker) beloved in the Baylor locker room for his competitive spirit and astute personality (head coach Dave Aranda: "Abram's got a learner's heart. You can never give him enough.") ... plenty of tread on his tires after only 283 offensive touches in college ... led the Big 12 in rushing yards in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: His feet can be late to clear short areas ... not a creative or shifty back ... inconsistent pad level, and his size can work against him ... not proven as a pass catcher and will drop some easy ones ... needs to expand his résumé of routes ... only two fumbles in 2021, but holds the ball low and loose and needs to tighten up his ball security ... physical presence as a blocker, but his technique and discipline aren't on the same level yet ... suffered a torn ACL as a sophomore in high school (October 2014) and a torn ACL and MCL as a freshman at Baylor (April 2017) ... only one full-season in college of regular work as a running back.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Baylor, Smith emerged as an ideal fit in offensive coordinator Jeff Grimes' wide-zone scheme in 2021 and became one of the best stories in college football. After a prolific high school rushing career, he played primarily on special teams and at linebacker over his first four seasons in Waco, averaging 11.5 tackles as the starting weakside linebacker in the final four games of 2020. The coaches asked him to return to running back as a senior, and he led the Big 12 rushing yards and was one of only five FBS players to reach 1,600 rushing yards in 2021. A patient yet decisive downhill runner, Smith trusts his blocking and shows the nimble footwork to clear creases. His receiving, blocking and ball security are areas that can be improved, but NFL scouts have zero questions about his coachability and intangibles. Overall, Smith won't be an ideal fit for every scheme, but he is tailor-made for outside/split zone run game with his one-cut quickness and feel for lane development. He not only brings value to the backfield but is well-versed on defense and special teams to potentially offer three-way versatility.

11. TYRION DAVIS-PRICE | LSU 6003 | 211 lbs. | JR. Baton Rouge, La. (Southern Lab) 10/23/2000 (age 21.51) #3

BACKGROUND: Tyrion "Ty" Davis-Price grew up in Baton Rouge and started playing football at the pee-wee level for the South Baton Rouge Jaguars. He attended Southern University Lab School on the LSU campus, where he was teammates with several future FBS players such as LB Christopher Allen, LB Damone Clark and others. Davis-Price was a three-year letterman and helped the program to a 14-1 record as a sophomore and the 2016 state championship. He had his best season as a senior, leading Southern Lab to a 12-2 record behind his 2,521 rushing yards and 29 touchdowns. Davis-Price earned First Team All-State and U.S. Army All-American honors. He also lettered in track (sprints and relays) and set personal bests of 7.20 in the 60-meters, 10.85 in the 100 meters and 23.18 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Davis-Price was the No. 8 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Louisiana (No. 2 running back in the state behind John Emery Jr.). He had no shortage of interest, with programs like Alabama, Clemson, Georgia, Michigan, Penn State and others submitting offers. But as a Baton Rouge native, Davis-Price grew up an LSU fan and fulfilled his childhood dream by signing with the Tigers. He was the second-highest ranked running back in LSU's 2019 recruiting class behind Emery. His daughter (Brooklyn Mae) was born in June 2021. Davis-Price elected to opt out of the 2021 bowl game and skip his senior season to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Big-boned frame with well-proportioned mass ... drops his pads between the tackles and absorbs hits, picking up yards post-contact thanks to his run balance and power ... functional vision at the line of scrimmage, and collects his feet to make controlled cuts ... above-average open-field speed for his size ... one of the more consistent pass-blockers in this year's running back draft class because of his lateral quicks and base strength ... his most productive runs came in the second half of games ... was at his best late in the season, averaging 123.3 rushing yards per game over the final seven games in 2021 ... offers proven durability but also plenty of tread still left on the tires.

WEAKNESSES: Runs quick for his size, but not explosive, especially when attempting to stretch runs to the perimeter ... inconsistent pacing and feel for where the next block is coming from ... doesn't receive high marks for creativity ... will make too much contact inside, sometimes with his own blockers ... not a true make-you-miss ball carrier at the second level ... struggled to find the end zone in 2021, scoring a touchdown in only three of his 12 games ... didn't have a drop in 2021, but didn't see many targets and is largely unproven besides the occasional dump-off ... fumbled three times on 221 touches in 2021 ... didn't play on special teams coverages in college ... averaged less than 5.0 yards per carry each of his three college seasons.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at LSU, Davis-Price emerged as the Tigers' lead back in former offensive coordinator Jake Peetz's multiple-run scheme (gap and zone). After he was the backup to Clyde Edwards-Helaire on LSU's 2019 national title team, he led the Tigers in rushing each of the past two seasons, breaking the single-game LSU rushing record with 287 yards vs. Florida in 2021. Davis-Price is a stout runner to grind out short yardage, but he can also mash the gas when he has an open lane. Although he still has work to do as a pass catcher, he was a closer on the 2021 tape, getting better as the game progressed (3.9 yards per carry in the first half, 5.6 yards per carry in the second half). Overall, Davis-Price isn't who you turn to if you want creativity or elusiveness, but he is a physical, downhill back who can break tackles late into games and hold his own in pass protection. He can be part of an NFL rotation well beyond his rookie contract if he stays committed.

GRADE: 5th Round

12. RACHAAD WHITE | Arizona State 6003 | 214 lbs. | rSR. Kansas City, Mo. (Center) 1/12/1999 (age 23.29) #3

BACKGROUND: Rachaad White, who is the youngest of four brothers, grew up in Kansas City and started playing flag football at age 5. He attended Center High, where he lettered in basketball and football. White played three years on varsity, lining up at safety on defense and running back and slot receiver on offense. After sitting out most of his junior season with a collarbone injury, he earned First Team All-State, All-District and All-League honors as a senior with 1,325 rushing yards and more than 2,000 all-purpose yards.

A no-star recruit out of high school, White struggled to garner attention from college football programs. With zero Division I offers, he committed to Division II Nebraska-Kearney and redshirted in 2017. With his sights set on playing at a bigger program, White transferred to Mt. San Antonio Community College in Walnut, Calif. After rushing for 392 yards and two touchdowns in 2018 as a redshirt freshman, he became the starter as a sophomore and posted 1,264 rushing yards (6.4 average) and 10 touchdowns, adding 216 receiving yards and a pair of receiving touchdowns. A three-star junior college recruit, White was the No. 3 juco running back in the 2020 recruiting class and originally verbalized to UCLA. However, the Bruins decided to go in a different direction shortly before signing day. White considered offers from Indiana and Utah State before committing to Arizona State in May 2020. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Quick, elusive feet to shake defenders in the hole ... shows the lateral agility to avoid the trash and bounce runs wide ... keeps his body compact and feet underneath him to make fast decisions and sharp cuts ... his eyes quickly find pursuit to set up moves and force missed tackles ... can be a nightmare for a flat-footed safety in open waters ... accelerates cleanly post-cut ... feet are constantly moving, helping him escape the grasp and peel off tackle attempts ... above-average body control and pass-catching traits (his 48 targets in 2021 led all Pac-12 backs) ... secures catches through contact ... has experience running routes from the slot and out wide ... plays with a nose for the end zone with 22 touchdowns in 15 games played at ASU (scored multiple touchdowns in eight of those games) ... his coaches call him "thoughtful" and "mature" and the type of teammate they want in the locker room ... accounted for a first down or touchdown on 44.2% of his 224 offensive touches at ASU.

WEAKNESSES: Lean muscle definition throughout his long frame ... average long speed, and can be caught from behind ... more quick than straight-line fast ... ordinary physicality and balance, which slows his momentum through contact ... lack of run strength limits his ability to create movement in short-yardage situations ... hyper-focused on the man in front of him and not the space he is cutting toward ... his patience at the line of scrimmage runs hot and cold ... willing in pass protection, but his base and technique are undisciplined ... late to recognize and pick up extra pressures ... limited return and special teams experience ... missed one game as a senior with a right leg injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Arizona State, White was the featured back in offensive coordinator Zak Hill's scheme. From Division II to junior college to Tempe, he took a winding journey to the NFL's doorstep, but he bet on his talent and work ethic and averaged 6.4 yards per carry during the past two seasons as the Sun Devils' leading rusher. White out-leverages pursuit with his lateral agility and decision-making on the move, which allows him to create chunk plays despite his average top-end speed. Though he needs to improve in pass protection, he is a dependable pass-catcher with tracking skills and body control. Overall, White will leave some production on the field, but his explosive darting run style allows him to collect his feet and find yardage that wasn't blocked for him. He projects as a backup capable of steady NFL playing time.

13. PIERRE STRONG | South Dakota State 5113 | 207 lbs. | rSR. Little Rock, Ark. (McClellan) 12/10/1998 (age 23.38) #20

BACKGROUND: Pierre Strong Jr. grew up in Little Rock and attended McClellan Magnet High, where he was a four-year varsity letterman on the football field. He played both ways as a cornerback on defense and wide receiver and running back on offense. After 10 touchdowns (six rushing, three receiving, one kickoff return) as a sophomore, Strong led McClellan to the 2015 5A state championship as a junior, earning All-Conference and All-State honors with 2,345 rushing yards and 32 touchdowns. As a senior, he rushed for 1,423 yards and 25 touchdowns on 146 carries (9.7 average) before he suffered a hairline fracture in his right collarbone late in the season. Strong also lettered in track at McClellan.

A two-star running back recruit out of high school, Strong wasn't ranked by the online recruiting services and went widely overlooked as a recruit. After leading McClellan to the state championship as a junior, he received interest from his home state Arkansas, but an offer never arrived. Strong received a handful of FCS scholarship offers and committed to South Dakota State over Central Arkansas, Eastern Illinois and Missouri State. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Composed feet between the tackles ... sets up his moves and sticks his foot in the ground to cut away from would-be tacklers ... has widescreen vision, and shows a natural feel for lane development ... presses the hole before cutting back ... outstanding speed on outside zone to create chunk plays and create conflict for second-level defenders ... capable receiver out of the backfield with steady hands (also went 9-for-9 for 208 yards and six touchdowns as a passer in college) ... highly productive and became just the third player in school history to reach 4,500 career rushing yards.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized and lacks ideal build or growth potential ... mediocre run power and would benefit from more finishing toughness ... inconsistent balance at contact hinders his ability to break tackles ... too easily grounded at first contact ... not super elusive in the open field, with hints of stiffness that limit his redirect skills ... fumbled five times as a senior and needs to improve his ball protection ... most of his production came vs. FCS-level competition.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at South Dakota State, Strong was the lead back in former offensive coordinator Jason Eck's zone scheme. After helping the Jackrabbits to the FCS title game in the spring of 2021, he led the FCS in rushing as a senior and finished his career No. 3 all-time on the school's rushing list (4,527 yards). Strong averaged an impressive 7.2 yards per carry during his career, mostly vs. FCS competition, but had no trouble running all over Colorado State on his 2021 tape (his only FBS opponent the past two seasons). He has home run ability when he finds the runway (30 runs of 15-plus yards) and creates conflict for second-level defenders with his ability to shake, rattle and roll. Overall, Strong doesn't have ideal build or contact balance, which might limit his pro ceiling, but he runs with speed, tempo and controlled feet to follow his blocks to daylight, especially on outside zone. He has potential as a third-down or committee back in the right situation.

GRADE: 5th Round

14. TYLER BADIE | Missouri 5080 | 197 lbs. | SR. New Orleans, La. (Briarcrest Christian) 2/7/2000 (age 22.23) #1

BACKGROUND: Tyler Badie (BAY-dee) was born in New Orleans before his family was displaced in 2006 because of Hurricane Katrina. They moved to the Baltimore suburb of Randallstown, Md., where Badie started playing youth football and running track. When he was 11, he competed in the 2011 AAU Junior Olympics as a sprinter and finished 47th in the 200 meters (28.24) and 44th in the 400 meters (1:03.93). Badie attended Friends School of Baltimore for high school and lettered in basketball and football. Prior to his junior year, his mother got a new job in Memphis, and he transferred to Briarcrest Christian for his final two prep years. As a junior, Badie started at cornerback (25 tackles, one interception) and was the backup at running back (40 carries, 400 yards, three touchdowns). He became the featured running back as a senior and earned All-Metro honors with 1,186 rushing yards and 18 rushing touchdowns, adding 19 receptions for 306 yards and three touchdowns. Badie also lettered in basketball at Briarcrest Christian.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Badie was the No. 28 all-purpose back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 43 recruit in the state of Tennessee. He didn't receive much recruiting attention in Baltimore and was the backup running back as a junior at Briarcrest Christian, so his recruitment got a late start. Badie received several FCS offers, then committed to Memphis until Missouri reached out with an offer. On signing day, he chose Missouri over Memphis and stayed loyal even when Ole Miss (his preferred destination) called at the last minute with a possible scholarship spot. Badie graduated with his degree in sport management (May 2021) and is working toward his master's degree in counseling psychology. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Rocked-up, muscular body ... sudden footwork to make sharp lateral cuts away from trouble ... runs low to the ground with the strong lower body and balance to pinball off contact at the second level ... instinctive runner with a natural feel for lane development ... his eyes and feet are tied together ... excellent pass-catching skills to snare the ball from his frame ... seamlessly puts the ball away and creates on angle and swing routes ... only two drops on 107 targets the past two seasons ... fumbled twice in college, but not since his sophomore season ... has kick return experience (35/525/0) ... seemed to get better as games went on (6.8 yards per carry in the second half of games in 2021) ... senior captain ... despite his size, he stayed durable throughout college and played in 46 games ... can be used across the formation ... set the Missouri single-season record with 1,604 rushing yards in 2021, including five 200-yard performances (the most in the SEC since 2000).

WEAKNESSES: Short, maxed-out frame with sub-200 pound playing weight ... physical runner but doesn't have the power to break tackles at the line of scrimmage or push the pile ... will gamble on the big play at times instead of taking what is available ... guilty of being too patient behind the line of scrimmage ... willing but limited in pass protection, lacking the anchor or length to halt rushers ... inconsistent vision, and needs to do a better job anticipating pressure angles as a blocker ... his only special teams experience in college came on kickoff returns ... had only one season as the full-time back.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Missouri, Badie was the feature back in head coach Eli Drinkwitz's zone-base run scheme. After spending three years in the shadow of Larry Rountree, he was among the most productive backs in the FBS in 2021, including ranking third in rushing yards per game (133.7) and second in all-purpose yards per game (161.6). Badie has quick feet and bursts to top speed in an instant to attack the crease and clear holes. A tough, competitive runner, he doesn't have an ideal frame for NFL work, but he has high-end receiving skills (first in school history to reach 1,000 yards rushing and 1,000 yards receiving) and stayed durable in 2021 with the second-most offensive touches (322) in college football. Overall, Badie is undersized with average run strength, but he is a twitchy, juiced-up ball carrier with the balance, field vision and pass-catching traits to be an asset in an NFL backfield. He projects as a multidimensional weapon in the Tarik Cohen mold.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

15. SNOOP CONNER | Ole Miss 5101 | 222 lbs. | JR. Hattiesburg, Miss. (Hattiesburg) 8/1/2000 (age 21.74) #24

BACKGROUND: Jarod "Snoop" Conner grew up in Bay Springs, Miss., and got his nickname from his mother (Michelle Cole), who thought her son looked like a "little snoop dog" when he was younger. His first love was basketball before picking up football and starting his high school career at Sylva Bay Academy. Seeing time at quarterback and running back, Conner transferred to Hattiesburg High early in his sophomore season and scored eight touchdowns in 2016. As a junior, he became the starting quarterback and led Hattiesburg to a 14-1 record with its only loss coming in the state title game. Conner finished the 2017 season with 2,555 passing yards, 25 touchdowns and five interceptions, adding 1,442 rushing yards and 28 touchdowns on the ground. As a senior, he was named Class 5A Mr. Football with 2,324 passing yards, 24 touchdowns, and nine interceptions with 1,622 rushing yards and 27 rushing touchdowns. Conner finished his prep career with 8,411 total yards, including 3,465 rushing yards and 63 total touchdowns. He also played linebacker throughout his high school career.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Conner was the No. 62 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 30 recruit in the state of Mississippi. He picked up offers from Memphis, Louisiana, South Alabama, Southern Miss and Tulane, giving a verbal commitment to Memphis prior to his senior year. However, Conner flipped to Ole Miss after his senior season. His daughter (Royal) was born in prior to his sophomore year in high school (August 2016). Conner elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Well-built with thickness in his lower and upper halves ... runs compact with square pads and an angry attitude ... oiled up with the run strength that leaves defenders sliding off him ... it often requires multiple tacklers to get him on the ground ... excellent vision on stretch plays, where he can get going downhill and maneuver around road blockers ... willing in pass protection, and was often used as a lead back on designed quarterback runs ... wasn't heavily targeted but showed soft hands and reliable focus as a screen target (zero drops the last two seasons) ... durable and logged only 336 touches in college, leaving plenty of tread on his tires ... has a nose for the end zone and leaves Ole Miss No. 3 in school history with 26 career rushing touchdowns (one spot ahead of Archie Manning).

WEAKNESSES: Takes a moment to get going or change directions after gearing down ... impatient at the line of scrimmage, and prematurely gives up on developing run lanes ... gets bounce happy, and that won't fly vs. NFL speed ... not a make-you-miss back at the second level ... only two of his 144 offensive touches in 2021 resulted in a 25-plus yard play ... doesn't have an extensive receiving background ... squares at contact in pass protection but doesn't play up to his size because of poor technique (drops his eyes, doesn't anchor) ... was never asked to be a workhorse in college (only three times in 35 career games did he have 15-plus offensive touches).

SUMMARY: A three-year backup at Ole Miss, Conner was part of a crowded backfield in head coach Lane Kiffin's RPO-based scheme. He spent most of his career as a third-stringer, but the Rebels spread out their rushing production as Ole Miss was the only FBS team in 2021 with four players with at least 500 rushing yards. Conner was at his best near the goal line, with 19 of his 26 career rushing touchdowns coming from five yards or less, including 14 one-yard runs. Although he doesn't run with the creativity to be a home-run hitter (only two carries of 25-plus yards in 2021), he will hit plenty of singles and doubles (led Ole Miss running backs with 22 runs of 10-plus yards in 2021). Overall, Conner needs to improve his run tempo and third-down skills to see regular NFL work, but he has the vision, balance and toughness to be more than just a goal-line back. Like in college, his ideal NFL fit will be part of a committee.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

16. HASSAN HASKINS | Michigan 6016 | 228 lbs. | rJR. St. Louis, Mo. (Eureka Senior) 11/26/1999 (age 22.42) #25

BACKGROUND: Hassan Haskins Jr. grew up in south St. Louis and attended Eureka Senior High (28 miles southwest of downtown St. Louis). He earned varsity playing time as a sophomore and rushed for 819 yards and seven touchdowns in five games before a dislocated toe ended his 2015 season. As a junior, Haskins rushed for 1,509 yards on 242 carries and 19 touchdowns, adding 36 catches for 294 receiving yards and two touchdowns as a receiver and 34 tackles and 12.0 sacks as a pass rusher on defense. As a senior, he was the 2017 Missouri 6A Offensive Player of the Year and First Team All-State with 2,197 rushing yards on 255 carries (8.6 average) and 31 touchdowns, including five 200-yard rushing performances. Haskins caught 12 passes for 165 yards and two touchdowns and returned a punt for a touchdown, adding 25 tackles and 9.0 tackles on defense. He also lettered in basketball and track, including placing second in the high jump (6'7) at the 2017 state championship. His personal best in the 100 meters was 11.54.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Haskins was the No. 49 running back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Missouri. He had only one Power 5 scholarship offer (Purdue) entering his senior season until Michigan entered the picture when it came across his film in 2017. Haskins committed to the Wolverines shortly after they offered, and he became the fourth-lowest recruit in Michigan's 2018 recruiting class. His older brother (Maurice Alexander), who also attended Eureka Senior, was a fourth-round pick (No. 110 overall) by the St. Louis Rams in the 2014 NFL Draft and played six seasons at safety (2014-19). Haskins elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but pulled out because of injury.

PRO DAY	6017	227	32	9 1/4	76 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – left high ankle)

STRENGTHS: Big-bodied back with power through his legs, lower-half and torso ... picks up his knees and drives through contact, making him difficult to tackle ... patient and quick as an inside runner and stays balanced in traffic ... accelerates into the hole and consistently falls forward ... high-level competitor with the ball in his hands, and runs with purpose ... didn't fumble in college (476 offensive touches) ... voted the "Toughest Player of the Year" by his teammates in 2021 ... physical mentality as a blocker, and holds up well in pass protection ... experienced on special teams coverages (278 career snaps) ... his coaches say he is "universally respected" in the locker room because of his work ethic and determination in everything he does ... broke a 53-year record at Michigan with 20 rushing touchdowns in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have the speed to out-leverage defenders on the perimeter ... won't be a take-it-the-distance runner in the NFL (of his 270 carries in 2021, only three resulted in runs of 25 yards or more) ... open-field burst is average, and he won't consistently make would-be tacklers miss in space ... unproven as anything more than a screen target in the passing game ... only one season of full-time production in college ... had a durable career, but found himself banged up after the 2021 season and couldn't participate in the Senior Bowl or NFL Combine.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Michigan, Haskins took over the lead running back role in former offensive coordinator Josh Gattis' power-gap scheme. After spending time at linebacker during his redshirt year, he shared the running back duties the next two seasons before emerging as the Wolverine's workhorse as a junior, finishing as one of only four FBS running backs with 1,300-plus rushing yards and 20 rushing touchdowns in 2021 (also led FBS in carries that resulted in a first down). Haskins' best trait is his ability to consistently finish forward (only six negative rushing yards in 2021) and break tackles with power, flexibility and body control. He can drop his hips for a bigger back, but he doesn't have the speed or elusive qualities to out-leverage pro defenses. Overall, Haskins' NFL role might be limited because of his lack of dynamic athleticism, but he runs with outstanding contact balance and hard-charging instincts and gets the job done as a blocker. He projects as a complimentary power back with special teams value.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

17. JEROME FORD | Cincinnati 5104 | 210 lbs. | rJR. Tampa, Fla. (Armwood) 9/12/1999 (age 22.63) #24

BACKGROUND: Jerome Ford attended Armwood High School in Mango, Fla., where he contributed on offense, defense and special teams. Ford was part of a crowded backfield at Armwood and shared snaps with Erin Collins (NC State, Northern Illinois) and Brian Snead (Ohio State, Austin Peay), who were both highly recruited. As a senior, he finished with only 22 carries for 159 yards (7.2 average) and two touchdowns. But the coaches found a home for him at slot receiver to get him on the field, and Ford responded with 42 catches for 827 yards (19.7 average) and eight touchdowns as Armwood advanced to the 2017 Class 6A state championship game. Ford also lined up on defense in the front seven and notched seven tackles and a pair of sacks. He finished his high school career with 22 total touchdowns and scored four different ways (12 receiving, four rushing, three kick returns, three fumble returns). Ford also lettered in track and set personal bests of 10.50 in the 100 meters and 21.96 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ford was the No. 12 all-purpose back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 66 recruit in the state of Florida. He compiled an impressive offer list, including Cincinnati, Nebraska, North Carolina and Tennessee. But once Alabama got involved his senior year, Ford couldn't say no to Nick Saban and signed with the Crimson Tide. He redshirted in 2018 and started the 2019 season opener but fell behind Najee Harris and Brian Robinson Jr. on the running back depth chart. After the 2019 season, Ford entered the transfer portal, saying he never felt comfortable with Alabama's culture. He had several Power 5 programs reach out, but his connection with Gino Guidugli (Cincinnati's former running backs coach and now offensive coordinator) led him to the Bearcats. Ford graduated with his undergraduate degree (December 2021). He elected to skip his final season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Runs with an effective mix of size and speed ... quick-footed with the lateral agility to change his gaps while staying square ... efficiently collects his feet in the open field with the plant-and-go burst to frustrate pursuit angles ... has a take-it-the-distance linear gear with three rushes of 75-plus yards in 2021 (40-yard dash confirmed his speed on tape) ... flashes compact power and keeps his feet pumping through contact to make it difficult on tacklers ... shows soft hands on screens and wheel routes ... adapted well with the Cincinnati program (head coach Luke Fickell: "He embodied the 'humble and hungry' culture we have built here.") ... only one season of starting wear and tear on his body ... excellent production in 2021, becoming just the fifth player in school history to reach 1,300 rushing yards in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Spotty creativity at the line of scrimmage, and will hesitate without a clear point-of-entry ... inconsistent run patience, and runs into traffic ... needs to improve his timing to hit the lane as it develops ... runs with high pads and takes too many blows to his body ... exposes the ball and increases the odds of it coming loose (six fumbles on his 316 offensive touches at Cincinnati) ... inconsistent pass protection technique and base strength ... missed one game as a senior because of a left ankle injury (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Cincinnati, Ford became the Bearcats' lead back as a junior in former offensive coordinator Mike Denbrock's spread RPO offense. The Alabama transfer was a key reason behind Cincinnati's run to the 2021 College Football Playoffs, leading the AAC in rushing and matching the school record for rushing touchdowns (19) in a season. Ford has the lateral footwork and body strength to keep plays alive, flashing the open-field juice to gash defenses (averaged 6.1 yards per carry in his career). However, his vision and patience lack consistency, and he needs to improve his ball security and blocking to maintain the trust of his coaches. Overall, Ford has room to improve his eyes and timing at the line of scrimmage to be more of a creator, but he has an effective blend of size, strength and speed with upside catching the football. He can provide a punch to an NFL team's depth chart.

GRADE: 6th Round

18. KEAONTAY INGRAM | USC 5116 | 221 lbs. | SR. Carthage, Texas (Carthage) 10/26/1999 (age 22.51) #28

BACKGROUND: Keaontay (kee-ON-tay) Ingram, who is one of 10 children, was born and raised in East Texas and attended Carthage High. He earned All-District honors as a sophomore running back with 637 rushing yards, 189 receiving yards and nine touchdowns. Ingram earned All-State honors as a junior with 2,244 rushing yards and 32 touchdowns, averaging 7.0 yards per carry and catching 47 passes for 492 yards and four touchdowns. As a senior, he led Carthage to an undefeated 16-0 record and the 2017 4A Division-I state championship. He was named First Team All-USA with 2,327 rushing yards (9.8 yards per carry) and 37 touchdowns, adding 284 receiving yards and two touchdown grabs. Ingram set the Carthage career record with 76 touchdowns.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ingram was the No. 6 running back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 15 recruit in the state of Texas (top-ranked running back). He collected 30 scholarship offers from heavy hitters like Georgia, Ohio State and USC but wanted to stay in Texas and ultimately committed to Texas over Texas A&M. Ingram led the Longhorns in rushing in 2019, but he battled injuries in 2020, and Bijan Robinson supplanted him as the starter. He entered the transfer portal and resurfaced at USC for the 2021 season, leading the Trojans in rushing. Ingram accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tough runner to get on the ground thanks to his compact body and run balance ... excellent patience and feel in zone ... presses the hole and widens pursuit before sticking his foot in the ground to make sharp cuts ... not blocking dependent, and has an eye for escape routes ... his natural instincts allow for sudden lane change ... quickly attacks space with the hips and lateral footwork to make defenders miss ... has the size and lower body strength to develop into more of a power grinder on inside runs ... dependable screen target with natural adjustment skills ... averaged better than 5.8 yards per carry in his two seasons as a full-time starter ... appeared to get stronger later in the 2021 season.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't always run with the physicality between the tackles that his size suggests ... his vision and decision-making looks great on one play, but then tardy the next ... too dependent on east-west bouncing when he doesn't like what he sees inside ... needs a few steps to reach his top speed, which will be tougher to mask vs. NFL pursuit ... late to identify the blitz in pass protection and finds himself caught in no-man's land ... missed the final four games of his junior season with a high ankle sprain (November 2020); missed two games as a senior with a rib injury (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at USC, Ingram took over the featured back role with the Trojans in former offensive coordinator Graham Harrell's scheme. He enjoyed moments of success in Austin for his home state Longhorns, but he transferred after a forgettable 2020 season and reinvented himself as a senior at USC. Ingram is a patient zone runner with spurts of burst and an instinctive understanding of when to keep it play-side or when to cut it. He runs with the compact power to shred arm tackles, but he needs to use that play strength and awareness to be more reliable as a blocker. Overall, Ingram needs to play with consistent decision- making and be more of a physical finisher, but he runs with terrific balance and cut quickness for his size. He has a decent chance of making an NFL roster if he brings his best version to training camp.

GRADE: 6th Round

19. TY CHANDLER | North Carolina 5112 | 204 lbs. | rSR. Nashville, Tenn. (Montgomery Bell) 5/12/1998 (age 23.96) #8

BACKGROUND: Tykevious “Ty” Chandler grew up in Pleasant View (half hour north of Nashville) and played youth football for the Pleasant View Eagles. He enrolled at Montgomery Bell Academy in the seventh grade and made the varsity team as a freshman. Chandler was named Tennessee’s 2015 Division II AA Mr. Football as a junior with 2,558 yards and 31 touchdowns. As a senior, he led Montgomery Bell to an 8-2 record and finished with 2,252 rushing yards and 39 touchdowns, again earning Tennessee Mr. Football honors. Chandler finished his prep career with 6,158 rushing yards (seventh-best in state history) and 92 touchdowns (third-best in state history). He also lettered in track (sprints and relays) and set personal bests of 10.96 in the 100 meters and 22.04 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Chandler was the No. 5 running back in the 2017 recruiting class (one spot behind D’Andre Swift) and the No. 5 recruit in the state of Tennessee. He received several high-profile offers and put together a final seven of Auburn, Duke, Florida, Georgia, Ohio State, Ole Miss and Tennessee. The chance to stay close to home won out in the end as he signed with the Volunteers. After four seasons in Knoxville, Chandler took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and entered the transfer portal for his fifth season, transferring to North Carolina. His father (Chico) played running back at Ole Miss. Chandler graduated with his degree in recreation and sport management (December 2020) from Tennessee. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Excellent quickness through the hole, and his speed only picks up at the second and third levels ... patiently reads his blocks and doesn’t require gaping holes; only a sliver will do ... squares his pads and keeps his legs churning to consistently pick up more yards than he should ... showed improved determination in 2021 compared to his Tennessee tape ... takes care of the football, with only one fumble over the last two seasons ... productive pass catcher with dynamic ability on angle routes ... will have the occasional drop, but shows generally dependable hands ... was the regular kick returner earlier in his career and averaged 18.1 yards per return, including one touchdown return as a freshman ... was productive at Tennessee before having a career year for the Tar Heels as a senior transfer.

WEAKNESSES: Owns a lean build with very average definition ... not a violent or powerful runner at the line of scrimmage ... his vision is OK but not a strength to his game, and he is at his best when directed to the hole ... needs a moment to reset himself at the second level, giving pursuit a chance to close in ... late set-up and average body control take a dent out of his elusiveness rating on Madden ... better toughness than I expected in pass protection, dropping his shoulder into rushers, but his technique and consistency must improve in this area ... doesn’t have a ton of special teams experience aside from kick returner.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at North Carolina, Chandler had a strong senior season in offensive coordinator Phil Longo’s RPO-based multiple scheme as he tried to fill the shoes of the departed Javonte Williams and Michael Carter. After four productive seasons at Tennessee (his 3,245 all-purpose yards rank top five in Volunteers’ history), he transferred to Chapel Hill for his final season and finished top three in the ACC in rushing yards and rushing touchdowns. Despite inconsistent vision and play strength, Chandler attacks holes with burst and tempo and then hits another gear to weave through the defense. He is experienced running routes and producing as a pass catcher, and his blocking should continue to get better. Overall, Chandler isn’t the most creative runner between the tackles, but he is a multi-dimensional back with above-average speed and solid contact balance. His versatility will be valued by NFL teams who ask a lot of their backs.

20. TRESTAN EBNER | Baylor 5106 | 206 lbs. | rSR. Henderson, Texas (Henderson) 1/2/1999 (age 23.32) #1

BACKGROUND: Trestan (TRESS-tan) Ebner (EBB-nurr), who is the third of four children, grew up in East Texas in the small town of Henderson (about three hours north of Houston). He started playing football at age 9 and later attended Henderson High, where he was a three-year letterman and played both ways as a receiver and cornerback. As a sophomore, Ebner posted 40 catches for 918 yards and 11 touchdowns, adding 68 tackles and four interceptions to earn All-State Honorable Mention honors on both offense and defense. He missed a portion of his junior year with injuries, finishing with 15 catches for 230 yards and two touchdowns, adding four rushing scores and two interceptions. As a senior, Ebner helped Henderson to an 11-2 record and was more of an all-purpose player, earning All-District honors as a receiver and return man. He finished the 2016 season with 57 catches for 1,074 yards and 16 touchdowns along with 69 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks, and two forced fumbles on defense. He also earned All-District honors in basketball and lettered in soccer and track, setting personal bests of 10.67 in the 100 meters, 21.90 in the 200 meters and 21’4.25 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Ebner was the No. 28 athlete in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 62 recruit in the state of Texas. He initially received an offer from SMU as a junior and committed. However, Ebner reopened his recruitment after more schools showed interest. He narrowed his choice to Baylor and TCU and signed with the Bears, becoming part of Matt Rhule’s first recruiting class. Ebner took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Waco for his fifth season. His older brother (Tre) played basketball at Kilgore Junior College. He graduated with his degree in communications (December 2021). Ebner accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Compact ball carrier with plus speed ... shows rhythm and timing in his lateral movements to escape trouble ... his eyes instinctively find open space to redirect his course ... solidly built with a low center of gravity to consistently pick up positive yards after contact ... high school wide receiver, and shows a natural feel as a route runner ... dependable hands, and drops were scarce on film (holds the Baylor record for career catches by a running back) ... experienced special teamer and return man with three career kickoff return touchdowns, averaging 25.3 yards per return (47/1,187/3) ... durable and set the school record for games played (61).

WEAKNESSES: Undersized by NFL standards for the position ... inconsistent tempo and stop-start skills as he sorts through blocks ... shows hints of hip and ankle stiffness when he attempts to make sudden plant-and-go cuts ... runs quick and tough, but not explosive or physical through contact ... smaller target as a pass catcher, forcing his quarterback to be precise with throws ... his technique and awareness as a pass blocker are both underdeveloped ... his ball security is a problem, fumbling four times as a senior ... his career rushing production won't get you excited.

SUMMARY: A part-time starter at Baylor, Ebner was a do-it-all weapon in offensive coordinator Jeff Grimes' wide-zone scheme, playing second-fiddle to Abram Smith in 2021. Though his rushing production increased in his final season, he was the most productive as a receiver and return man, earning back-to-back Big 12 Special Teams Player of the Year honors the last two seasons (finished his career No. 2 in school history with 4,582 all-purpose yards). Ebner is comfortable running routes from the backfield or slot with the coordinated ball skills to adjust and finish grabs. He has above-average speed with balance and a compact build, although his creativity and decision-making at the line of scrimmage are not strengths to his game. Overall, Ebner probably doesn't make an NFL roster as a running back alone, but his pass-catching versatility and special teams experience will give him an advantage in an NFL camp.

21. ZAQUANDRE WHITE | South Carolina 6001 | 215 lbs. | rSR. Cape Coral, Fla. (North Ft. Myers) 12/21/1998 (age 23.35) #11

BACKGROUND: ZaQuandre "Quan" White, who is the youngest of five boys, grew up in Cape Coral after his family moved there when he was six months old. He started playing football at age 7 and originally attended Island Coast High as a freshman. White transferred to North Fort Myers High for his final three seasons, where he played for head coach Earnest Graham, who played running back for nine seasons (2003-11) in the NFL. As a junior, White served a six-game suspension for throwing a punch during a preseason game, but he returned and rushed for 956 yards in five games, including a 372-yard, five touchdown performance. As a senior, White rushed for 779 yards on 124 carries (6.3) and six touchdowns, adding 17 tackles and an interception at free safety. He also lettered in track and set personal-bests in of 7.10 in the 60 meters, 11.22 in the 100 meters and 22.82 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, White was the No. 7 running back in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 26 recruit in the state of Florida (top running back). He verbalized to Florida State as a junior and stayed committed, signing with the Seminoles over Louisville and Miami (Fla.). After redshirting in 2016, he moved to linebacker in 2017 and recorded 22 tackles. After the 2018 season, White found himself academically ineligible, and he transferred to Iowa Western Community College for the 2019 season returning to the running back position. He was a junior college All-American and rushed for 876 yards (6.4 yards per carry) and 10 touchdowns. A three-star juco recruit, White was the No. 1 running back and No. 15 recruit overall and he committed to South Carolina over Arkansas, Tennessee, and South Florida. He opted out of South Carolina's bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Runs with springs in his legs to instantly bounce from gap-to-gap ... sudden footwork to stop-start and force off-balance pursuit angles with his cutting skills ... urgent runner, and plays full speed at all times ... regains his speed post-cut to pick up chunks quickly ... flies through holes and runs with the lower body strength to slice through contact ... arm tackles usually aren't enough to get him down ... twists, turns and keeps his feet firing to routinely fall forward and pick up extra yards ... serviceable receiver and blocker with a solid feel for blitz recognition ... fumbled twice in 2020 but showed improved ball security as a senior (zero fumbles) ... logged only 125 career carries at the FBS level and has plenty of tread left on the tires.

WEAKNESSES: Taller stature and runs upright into contact ... below-average vision, especially as an inside runner ... impatient, undisciplined runner who doesn't allow things to develop because he keeps his foot on the gas pedal ... quickly abandons the play design and looks to bounce outside ... runs into too much contact because of his lack of tempo ... will blow his tires attempting to make cuts before the rest of his body is ready ... lacks a breakaway gear and can be tracked down ... has receiving skills, but the focus drops add up ... needs more reps in pass protection, catching and hugging rushers because of poor technique ... the interview process will be crucial to his draft grades ... has a history of undisciplined outbursts: suspended six games as a junior in high school for fighting mid-game and served a half-game suspension (October 2018) for throwing a punch vs. Clemson.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at South Carolina, White shared the running back duties as a senior in offensive coordinator Marcus Satterfield's scheme. After floundering for two seasons at Florida State and his first year at South Carolina, he led the Gamecocks in rushing six times in 2021 and averaged 6.6 yards per carry (third-highest in a single season in school history). A fun player to watch, White is highly spontaneous and combustible thanks to his springy lower body and ability to force missed tackles. However, his vision is sporadic, and he quickly abandons play design because of his inability to anticipate block/lane development, treating each run like an all-or-nothing situation. Overall, White has an erratic run style because of his lack of patience and tempo, but he is a bouncy athlete with contact strength and elusive cutting skills. He can carve out a complimentary NFL role with improved discipline as a runner, receiver and blocker.

22. D'VONTE PRICE | FIU 6013 | 210 lbs. | rSR. Punta Gorda, Fla. (Charlotte) 6/2/1999 (age 22.91) #24

BACKGROUND: D'Vonte Price, who is the youngest of five children, was raised in Punta Gorda (100 miles south of Tampa on the Gulf coast). He started playing running back at age 4 for the Charlotte Warriors youth team and later attended Charlotte High, where he was a three-year letterman. As a senior, Price helped Charlotte to a 12-1 record with 526 rushing yards, 379 receiving yards and 10 total touchdowns in eight games (missed five games due to a broken collarbone). He earned Honorable Mention All-District honors in 2016 and finished his prep career with 1,265 rushing yards and 34 touchdowns. Price was also a standout performer on the track team, including a first-place finish in the 110-meter hurdles (14.09) at the 2017 regional championship. He also set personal bests of 22.68 in the 200 meters and 22'1.75 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Price was the No. 112 running back in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 294 recruit in the state of Florida. At only 5-10 and 175 pounds as a high school senior, he picked up a handful of FBS offers, including Liberty, Marshall and South Florida, but FIU showed the most interest, even after he missed almost half of his senior year because of injury. Price, who was recruited by FIU assistant and current Buffalo Bills safeties coach Bobby Babich, committed to the Panthers shortly after his final high school game. His twin brother (G'Vonte), who was born an hour before D'Vonte, was also recruited by FIU, but he didn't qualify academically and decided to enter the workforce. His cousin (Anthony Henry) played cornerback in the NFL for nine seasons (2001-09). D'Vonte's daughter (Malayah) was born stillborn in July 2020. Price, who has never cut his hair and never plans to, was expected to be a part of the 2021 NFL Draft but took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season. Price accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Well-built back with thick legs and a strong trunk ... has a track background with the open-field acceleration to pick up chunk yardage ... has a feel for block development and marries his feet with his eyes (former FIU head coach Butch Davis: "Price has as good of vision and natural running ability as all the great backs I've been around.") ... controlled footwork in the hole to make sharp cuts ... uses a smooth lateral slide at the line of scrimmage to bounce runs when the inside hole isn't there ... has enough juice to break tackles when he drops his pads into contact ... flashes encouraging pass-catching traits ... played on every special teams coverage his first three years in the program ... no stranger to the weight room and cares about his strength and conditioning (added 50 pounds of good weight since high school) ... finished his career No. 2 in school history in rushing yards (2,203).

WEAKNESSES: Taller back with inconsistent pad level ... runs with quickness for his size, but not sudden or shifty ... doesn't consistently drive his momentum through contact as a power runner ... too easily tripped up by ankle tackles ... comfortable catching passes on screens and angle routes, but will have occasional focus drops (three in 2021) ... willing in pass protection, but can be blown up by blitzers because of a shaky anchor and fundamentals ... fumbled five times in his career, including twice as a senior ... not a proven workhorse (only three games of 20-plus offensive touches in his 49 collegiate games).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at FIU, Price was part of a committee his first three years before becoming the featured starter in former offensive coordinator Andrew Breiner's scheme. Despite the program struggling the past two years (FIU was 0-16 vs. FBS competition), he was consistently productive with a 5.9 yards per carry average behind a below-average offensive line. Price is a good-sized athlete with acceleration and balance through the hole and a natural feel for block development. He has functional receiving traits and the frame to be effective as a blocker but needs refinement in both areas to be a reliable any-down player.

Overall, Price is an upright back who lacks suddenness, but he is athletic for his size with the footwork and vision to navigate the line of scrimmage. His upside in the passing game and on special teams can keep him on an NFL roster as a backup.

23. JERRION EALY | Ole Miss 5081 | 189 lbs. | JR. Walnut Grove, Miss. (Jackson Prep) 8/19/2000 (age 21.69) #9

BACKGROUND: Jerriion (Jair-E-un) Ealy grew up in Leake County in central Mississippi and started playing sports at age 5. He gravitated toward baseball and football as his go-to sports, and that would continue through high school and college. Ealy attended Jackson Preparatory School in the state's capital, where he helped the program to four consecutive state titles during his prep career. After rushing for 896 yards as a freshman and 971 yards as a sophomore, he had his most productive season as a junior with 180 carries for 1,743 yards and 32 touchdowns, adding 578 receiving yards and eight touchdown grabs in 2017. Ealy was named an Under Armour All-American as a senior with 1,526 rushing yards on 167 carries and 24 touchdowns. He finished his prep career with 5,136 rushing yards and 105 total touchdowns. Ealy was a standout baseball player at Jackson Prep, batting .373 with six home runs and 24 RBI as a senior. He also lettered in track and finished first at the 2018 state championship in the 100 meters (10.61) and 200 meters (21.98) and second in the long jump (21'9.75).

A five-star recruit out of high school, Ealy was the No. 3 running back in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 29 overall) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Mississippi (behind LB Nakobe Dean and OT Charles Cross). He originally committed to Ole Miss after his junior season, but after his senior year he decided to re-open his recruitment just weeks before signing day. Ealy visited and considered Alabama, Clemson and Mississippi State before re-committing to Ole Miss as the top-ranked player in the Rebels' 2019 class. Out of high school, Ealy was drafted in the 31st round (No. 932 overall) of the 2019 MLB Draft by the Arizona Diamondbacks but did not sign. Ealy played in 13 games as a freshman center fielder at Ole Miss and posted a .321 on-base percentage before the season was cut short because of the pandemic. He didn't play baseball as a sophomore after offseason shoulder surgery. He elected to skip his senior season at Ole Miss and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Two-sport athlete in college (football and baseball) and state champion sprinter in high school ... shows plant-and-burst skills to stick his foot in the ground and get upfield ... runs with energetic feet and balance to pick his way through traffic and come out the other side ... lowers his pads and finishes strong at the sticks ... catches the ball cleanly, and finished second on the team in catches in 2021 ... only two career fumbles, and both came his freshman season ... productive return man, averaging 25.4 yards per kick return with two touchdowns ... averaged at least 5.1 yards per carry each season ... finished his career as only the sixth player in school history to reach 2,200 rushing yards.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks desired size and strength for inside work in the NFL ... plays fast, but his speed won't be the trump card that it was in college ... inconsistent timing with his reads and decisions ... tends to dance too much in the backfield ... can improve his open-field moves (I expected more splash plays on his tape) ... below average in pass protection, and with his size, blocking will likely never be a strength to his game ... his lack of size leads to durability concerns; missed the 2020 bowl game due to a right shoulder injury that required off-season surgery (and sidelined him for the 2021 baseball season); missed one game as a junior because of concussion symptoms (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ole Miss, Ealy was the main attraction of the Rebels' running back committee in head coach Lane Kiffin's RPO-based scheme. Even without a grueling workload (averaged 13.7 offensive touches per game in his career), he became just the fifth player in school history to reach 2,000 rushing yards and 20 rushing touchdowns in his career. Although he is more quick than explosive, Ealy has athletic feet and competitive run style to give defenders the slip and create extra yards for himself. However, I expected better tempo and more chunk plays for a player of his talent (only five runs of 30-plus yards in his final 300 carries in college). Overall, Ealy has his limitations, which makes him more of a hybrid back, but his athletic versatility as a rusher, receiver and returner can be an asset in the right situation. He projects best in a Nyheim Hines-type of role.

24. ZONOVAN KNIGHT | NC State 5107 | 209 lbs. | JR. Bailey, N.C. (Southern Nash) 4/11/2001 (age 21.05) #7

BACKGROUND: Zonovan "Bam" Knight, who has two older brothers, grew up in Bailey (35 miles east of Raleigh) with his mother. He started playing football in the fourth grade and continued playing through middle school. He enrolled at Southern Nash High (alma mater of Julius Peppers) and was a two-way player, making an impact on offense (running back) and defense (cornerback). Knight became a starter as a sophomore in Nash's Wing-T offense and rushed for 1,142 yards on 139 carries (8.2 average) and 18 touchdowns. As a junior, he posted 142 carries for 1,877 yards (13.2 average) and 27 touchdowns. Knight had his most productive season as a senior with a school-record 2,054 rushing yards on 124 carries (16.6 average) and 26 touchdowns, adding a receiving touchdown and three return touchdowns (two punt returns, one kickoff return). He finished his prep career as the school's all-time leading rusher (5,073 rushing yards), averaging 12.5 yards per carry. Knight also lettered in track and set personal bests of 23.00 in the 200 meters, 55.50 in the 400 meters and 40'2 in the triple jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Knight was the No. 27 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 16 recruit in the state of North Carolina. He received offers from several ACC and SEC programs including North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia Tech and originally committed to Duke as a junior. However, Knight flipped to NC State as a senior. He received his "Bam" nickname from his uncle because he would make "bam-bam" sounds from banging his toys as a toddler. Knight decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Decisive read-and-cut burst to make the first wave miss ... mashes the gas pedal to accelerate through holes ... shows quick feet in tight spots for sharp directional change ... rocked-up build and displays better run strength and toughness than expected ... runs with above-average contact balance and hates to be tackled (one of the best missed tackle rates in 2021) ... reliable screen target with dependable hands (zero drops in 2021) ... averaged 29.8 yards per kickoff return (31/923/3) and is the only player in school history with three kickoff return touchdowns (joined Nyheim Hines as the only players in NC State history with multiple 100-yard kickoff returns) ... played in every game the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Tested like an average athlete ... his run patience runs hot-cold, which leads to bad habits like running up the back of his blockers ... too upright through the hole, and his pad level must improve ... can be inconsistent navigating run lanes because of his streaky tempo ... saw very few targets in high school in a Wing-T offense and is still developing his pass-catching skills ... room to improve the details and efficiency of his routes ... showed improvement in pass protection each season, but still needs work with his technique and body angles ... ball security isn't a strength to his game (seven fumbles in his career) ... he started all 12 games in 2021 but only led the team in rushing in half of them, accounting for 37.6% of the team's total carries ... was sidelined for 2021 spring practices following shoulder surgery.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at NC State, Knight was the headliner of the Wolfpack's running back rotation in offensive coordinator Tim Beck's zone-based scheme. Despite sharing the carries, he led the team in rushing each of his three seasons in Raleigh (with identical production each year) and finished his career No. 1 in school history in rushing yards per game (5.45) and yards per kickoff return (29.8). Knight has decent play speed and hates to be tackled — he was undoubtedly the tag champion in his neighborhood growing up. Though he runs with a tough, slashing style, his inconsistent patience and pad level can slow down his tempo. Overall, Knight needs to continue developing the ancillary areas of the position (ball security, blocking, receiving), but he combines vision with quick reactions to cut away from defenders and create chunk plays. He projects as a rotational back in the NFL with kick return value.

GRADE: 7th Round

25. ISAIH PACHECO | Rutgers 5103 | 216 lbs. | SR. Vineland, N.J. (Vineland South) 3/2/2000 (age 22.16) #1

BACKGROUND: Isaih Pacheco (pa-CHECK-o), the youngest of five children, grew up in south New Jersey and started playing football at age 7. He attended Vineland South High. where he was a four-year starter at quarterback while also seeing snaps at running back and safety. After accounting for more than 2,000 total yards his first two seasons, Pacheco rushed for 1,107 yards (9.2 average) and 15 touchdowns as a junior, adding 519 passing yards and eight touchdowns through the air and five interceptions on defense. As a senior, he led Vineland South to an 8-2 record and a second consecutive conference title and playoff appearance. A First Team All-State performer, Pacheco finished his final season with 1,414 rushing yards (9.2 average) and 18 touchdowns while adding 598 passing yards and 28 tackles and two interceptions at safety. He also lettered in baseball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Pacheco was the No. 30 running back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 17 recruit (top-ranked running back) in the state of New Jersey. After his junior season, Rutgers was his first FBS offer, followed by Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Maryland and UConn. Pacheco decided to stay close to home and committed to Rutgers. He has endured multiple violent tragedies: His older brother (Travoise Cannon) was stabbed and killed in January 2016, and his older sister (Celeste Cannon) was murdered in September 2017. Pacheco opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitations to the 2022 Hula Bowl and 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Ripped physique, and clearly focuses on weight/strength training ... excellent short-area agility to make lateral cuts away from congestion as he looks for greener pastures ... transfers his run energy between cuts to brush off arm tackles ... outstanding acceleration once he finds a speed track ... physical finisher and fights through contact, especially in the open field with a head of steam ... durable and dependable: logged 100-plus carries each season and fumbled only once the last three years ... voted a team captain as a senior ... was the featured kick returner as a freshman at Rutgers, averaging 19.3 yards per return (18/348/0) ... didn't give up many pressures in pass protection on tape.

WEAKNESSES: Impatient, overaggressive play style, and runs himself into trouble ... questionable instincts to create for himself ... chunk plays were lacking on his tape (only 8.9% of his carries in 2021 resulted in a run of 10-plus yards) ... has some tightness in his hips, hindering his ability to make defenders miss ... inconsistent open-field vision in the screen game, and wasn't a pass-catching threat ... soft hands out of the backfield but drops too many easy ones ... his blocking vision and set-up isn't quite on an NFL level just yet ... didn't play on special teams since his freshman season ... missed only one game with injury, which came as a sophomore after cutting his foot while removing ankle tape (November 2019) ... most productive season came in 2019, and never averaged better than 5.0 yards per carry in a season (4.96 average as a freshman was the closes).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Rutgers, Pacheco was the lead back in offensive coordinator Sean Gleeson's balanced scheme. He led the team in rushing each of the past three seasons and posted consistent yet unspectacular production playing behind a lackluster offensive line (finished his career No. 7 on the school's all-time rushing list with 2,442 yards). Pacheco pounds his typewriter feet with quickness and violence as he picks through the congestion and looks for a speed track to show off his wheels. Though his urgent run style is a plus, it also works against him as he battles inconsistent tempo at the line of scrimmage. Overall, Pacheco is a fast, energetic runner with the toughness and pass-blocking upside to stick in the NFL, but he needs to add patience and pace to his run diet and play with better control to have a chance at a pro career.

26. JASHAUN CORBIN | Florida State 5111 | 202 lbs. | rJR. Rockledge, Fla. (Rockledge) 8/20/2000 (age 21.69) #0

BACKGROUND: Jashaun (JAY-shawn) Corbin grew up in Rockledge (50 miles east of Orlando on the Atlantic coast) and started his prep career at Holy Trinity Episcopal Academy, where he saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman running back and safety. He put himself on the recruiting map as a sophomore with 1,865 rushing yards on 205 carries (9.1 average) and 22 touchdowns, adding 345 receiving yards and a pair of interceptions on defense. As a junior, Corbin rushed for 1,022 yards and 11 touchdowns with 619 receiving yards and seven receiving touchdowns. On defense, he finished with 47 tackles, two interceptions and one forced fumble. Corbin transferred to Rockledge High School as a senior and posted 2,252 all-purpose yards and 23 touchdowns. He also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 10.87 in the 100 meters, 22.18 in the 200 meters, 5'7 in the high jump (5'7) and 21'5.75 in the long jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Corbin was the No. 8 all-purpose back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 49 recruit in the state of Florida. He received almost 40 scholarship offers and initially committed to Tennessee before flipping to Florida State as a junior in May 2017. However, when Jimbo Fisher left the Seminoles to take the head coaching job at Texas A&M in December 2017, Corbin decided to follow him, signing with the Aggies. After a productive freshman season, he became the Aggies' starter as a sophomore but missed most of the 2019 season with injury. Corbin decided to enter the transfer portal and transferred to Florida State where he was ruled immediately eligible. He graduated with his degree (December 2021). Corbin bypassed his final season of eligibility to enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Corbin accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Shows lateral agility both in space and tight quarters ... shifty runner with the footwork to shake loose from the defender's tractor beam ... has widescreen vision with a natural feel for crease and cutback angles ... allows his blocks to develop, and patience is a key element of his run style ... keeps his feet firing at contact and won't make it easy on tacklers ... registered the two longest runs in the ACC in 2021 (89-yarder and 75-yarder) ... was asked to run a variety of angle and swing routes and is comfortable catching the football ... steps up and gets his hands dirty in pass protection ... averaged 25.0 yards per kickoff return with one touchdown (24/601/1) ... the coaching staffs at Texas A&M and Florida State both praise his humble, reliable nature ... plenty of tread left on those tires.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary contact balance and power between the tackles ... will struggle to burst and flatten the corner as an outside runner vs. NFL speed ... overly patient at times and gives defenders the chance to course-correct pursuit ... will run before securing the catch and can be a more consistent finisher ... three fumbles in the past two seasons ... comes with workload concerns ... not a polished blocker and must continue to hone his mechanics ... missed the 2019 season after his upper hamstring came off his tailbone (September 2019), requiring season-ending surgery and a rigorous rehab.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Florida State, Corbin was part of a committee backfield in former offensive coordinator Kenny Dillingham's gap-based scheme. After a major hamstring injury in 2019 at Texas A&M, he regained his form with the Seminoles and led the ACC in yards per carry in 2021, although he appeared to lose steam down the stretch (averaged 7.9 yards per carry in the first seven games, but only 3.6 yards per carry in the final five contests). Corbin uses his peripheral vision to settle his feet and set up his cuts, both at the line of scrimmage and at the second level. However, he is more quick and timely than dynamic or explosive. Overall, Corbin doesn't have ideal burst or contact balance by NFL standards, but he offers patience, vision and pass-catching versatility to potentially round out an NFL backfield.

27. KENNEDY BROOKS | Oklahoma 5105 | 209 lbs. | rSR. Mansfield, Texas (Mansfield) 10/8/1998 (age 23.56) #26

BACKGROUND: Kennedy Brooks grew up in Mansfield (20 miles south of Fort Worth) and attended Mansfield High. A four-year varsity letterman, he had his breakout season as a junior with 3,522 rushing yards and 42 touchdowns on 431 carries (8.2 average), earning First Team All-State honors. As a senior, Brooks rushed for 2,865 yards and 40 touchdowns to earn First Team All-State and Class 6A MVP honors, leading Mansfield to a 10-win season and 2016 conference title. He finished his prep career with 7,658 rushing yards and 96 touchdowns on 885 carries (8.7 average). Brooks also lettered in track (sprints and relays) and set a personal bests of 11.07 in the 100 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Brooks was the No. 16 running back in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 35 recruit in the state of Texas. He picked up offers from Michigan, Tennessee, Texas A&M and several others and was considered a Wisconsin lean. However, Brooks grew up idolizing Adrian Peterson and rooting for Oklahoma, and he committed to the Sooners when they extended a late offer. He elected to opt out of the 2020 season amid the pandemic before returning to the team for the 2021 season.

STRENGTHS: Owns a frame suitable for NFL work ... outstanding patience to set up his blocks and tempo his runs ... has a natural feel for where the next block is coming from ... runs with balance, lean and trust in the blocking scheme ... flashes lower body agility to cut away from tacklers ... has the body strength to keep his legs alive while defenders slide off him ... logged eight rushes of 30-plus yards in 2021 ... fumbled only once in his college career, which came his freshman year ... his career in Norman hit several road blocks, but he kept working his way back ... averaged 7.03 yards per carry over his career.

WEAKNESSES: Can absorb hits, but you want to see him dish out more violence ... inconsistent pad level at contact, and can be driven backwards ... looks to press the hole, but his patience can quickly turn into hesitancy ... doesn't run with suddenness, and he needs to be quicker to mash the gas and cut upfield ... mediocre speed, and it will be tougher for him to break off long runs in the NFL ... targeted only 25 times in the passing games over the past two seasons and dropped four passes ... his pass protection is disjointed and currently unreliable ... his off-field character will be heavily scrutinized; he was publicly accused of mental and physical abuse by a former girlfriend (Mallory Jech) who claimed he was protected "because he plays football" after the university's Title IX office cleared him of any violation (Jech: "I'm not doing this for attention or for anyone to feel sorry for me. I'm doing this for every girl who is too scared to speak up against their abuser.").

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oklahoma, Brooks was a productive back in former head coach Lincoln Riley's balanced offense. He was part of a crowded running back room in his time in Norman, sharing carries with numerous talented backs (Rodney Anderson, Trey Sermon, T.J. Pledger, Rhamondre Stevenson, Eric Gray), but he took advantage of his touches, becoming just the fourth player in school history with 1,000-plus rushing yards in three separate seasons. Brooks has a controlled, short-stepping run style with the balance to pick his way through traffic at the line of scrimmage. His lack of violence as a finisher is bothersome, and his inconsistencies as a pass catcher and blocker need to be addressed. Overall, Brooks lacks explosive traits and speed, but he has a great feel for tempo and patience with the subtle moves to stay out of the defender's crosshairs. His best chance to stick in the NFL will with a zone-heavy run team.

28. SINCERE MCCORMICK | UTSA5084 | 205 lbs. | JR.Converse, Texas (Judson)9/10/2000 (age 21.63)#3

BACKGROUND: Sincere McCormick, who has one brother, was born in Long Beach, Calif., and grew up with his mother (Precious). He played pee-wee football growing up, but his family struggled to find stability and was even homeless for a stretch. After briefly moving to Las Vegas, his family put down roots in the San Antonio area, where he played football throughout middle school. He attended Converse's Judson High, where he was teammates with several future FBS players, including defensive lineman DeMarvin Leal. After rushing for 691 yards as a sophomore, McCormick, who also played safety on defense, was named the District's Offensive Player of the Year as a junior with 1,211 rushing yards and 13 touchdowns. He helped Judson to a 13-1 record as a senior, including a district championship. McCormick finished his final season with 1,489 rushing yards on 145 carries (10.3 average) and 22 touchdowns, adding 11 receptions for 235 yards and a touchdown grab. He finished his prep career with 3,407 yards and 49 total touchdowns. McCormick also lettered in track and set personal bests in the of 11.89 in the 100 meters (11.89), 23.02 in the 200 meters and 20'8.5 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McCormick was the No. 102 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 215 recruit in the state of Texas. Being high school teammates with Leal, he saw plenty of high-profile college recruiters come through Judson, but his lack of size left him overlooked. McCormick received a couple Power 5 offers (Colorado and Syracuse), but he decided to stay close to home and sign with Texas-San Antonio along with his Judson teammate and fellow three-star recruit Rashad Wisdom. His daughter (Legacy) was born in November 2020. McCormick elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft, opting out of the bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Built low to the ground with smooth hips ... has the foot quickness and balance to stretch runs outside and then cut back toward daylight to force missed tackles ... shows take-it-the-distance speed (four rushes of 65-plus yards in 2021) ... quick to scan and choose his gap ... steady hands out of the backfield (zero drops the past two seasons) ... awarded a single-digit jersey number for his toughness ... durable and missed only two games in his three-year career, but none because of injury (opted out of the 2021 bowl game and missed one game as a junior for the birth of his daughter) ... above-average production and set dozens of school records, including total touchdowns (35) and all-purpose yards (4,438).

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal size and build by NFL standards ... competitive but not powerful or an inside grinder ... overaggressive at the line of scrimmage, running up the backs of his blockers ... impatient and doesn't always allow blocks to develop ... plays quick but not consistently explosive ... average creator and late to make open-field moves ... didn't fumble in 2021 but had five fumbles in his first two seasons ... needs to expand his running back route tree ... soft hands in pass protection, and needs to show better finish as a blocker ... wasn't used on special teams coverages.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at UTSA, McCormick was the featured back in offensive coordinator Barry Lunney Jr.'s multiple run scheme. The program's win totals went from 4 to 7 to 12 in his three years in the program, setting the UTSA records for rushing yards in a game (251), season (1,479), and career (3,929). McCormick has excellent footwork to make lateral cuts and hit the accelerator to scamper away from pursuit. He has adequate vision at the line of scrimmage but needs to develop his patience because he doesn't have the run strength to consistently power through front-seven defenders in the NFL. Overall, McCormick is undersized (as a runner and blocker) with inconsistent run tempo, but he stays low to the ground with balance and quick feet to pick away at the defense. He can round out an NFL team's running back depth chart, although his limitations as a blocker and special teamer will be working against him.

29. MAX BORGHİ | Washington State5093 | 210 lbs. | SR.Arveda, Colo. (Pomona)4/23/2000 (age 22.01)#21

BACKGROUND: Massimiliano "Max" Borghi (bor-GEE), who is the middle child of three, was born and raised in the Denver area and discovered football in the second grade. He attended Pomona High School and was called up to varsity as a freshman. Borghi rushed for 998 yards and nine touchdowns as a sophomore, adding 503 receiving yards and five touchdowns. As a junior, he posted 824 rushing yards before suffering a torn ACL and MCL in the playoffs. Borghi returned as a senior and led Pomona to a 12-2 record and its third consecutive state title appearance, capturing the 2017 5A state championship. He was named the 5A state player of the year and finished his final season with 1,690 rushing yards and 27 touchdowns, adding 115 receiving yards and two return touchdowns on special teams.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Borghi was the No. 16 all-purpose back in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Colorado. He initially committed to Colorado after his junior season before decommitting and reopening his recruitment. Borghi considered Stanford with the chance to follow in the footsteps of his mentor, Christian McCaffrey. But he was drawn to Mike Leach's offense and he signed with Washington State. His father (Steve) grew up in Milan and immigrated to the United States from Italy in elementary school. Borghi elected to opt out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted an invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Built low to the ground with natural thickness in his chest, legs and wrists ... accelerates well into the hole and when attacking the perimeter ... savvy runner at the line of scrimmage, with the vision and patience to allow blocks to develop ... runs with low pads and won't waste time dancing ... soft-handed receiver out of the backfield, with outstanding body control to immediately become a threat once the ball hits his mitts ... his pass protection needs continued development, but it is much better than his underclassman tape ... fumbled twice in college, and both came his freshman season ... scored 41 total touchdowns in 39 games played.

WEAKNESSES: Muscle-bound in his core, hindering his quick directional change ... doesn't play with the explosive lateral burst for easy lane change ... has marginal run power and struggles to keep his feet flowing with energy through contact ... small target as a receiver, and doesn't have an extensive catch radius ... his lack of length also hinders him as a blocker ... missed the first three games of his junior season with a back injury (September 2020); suffered a torn ACL and MCL in his knee as a junior in high school (November 2016) ... didn't play on special teams in college and hasn't returned kicks since high school.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Washington State, Borghi was a versatile back initially in Mike Leach's Air Raid scheme followed by two seasons in Nick Rolovich's run-and-shoot pass offense. He averaged 98.2 yards of total offense per start in college and is one of the few running backs in this class with 150-plus career catches. Borghi runs with a good mix of quickness and patience and routinely gets what is blocked for him. However, he doesn't force many tackles and is more likely to run away from contact than through it. Overall, Borghi's role will be limited in the NFL because of his average size, run strength and agility, but he is an instinctive runner and natural hands-catcher. He is a poor man's Danny Woodhead who can make an NFL roster as a change-of-pace option.

30. JAYLEN WARREN | Oklahoma State 5080 | 204 lbs. | rSR. Salt Lake City, Utah (East) 11/1/1998 (age 23.49) #7

BACKGROUND: Derrell "Jaylen" Warren was born in Clinton, N.C., and grew up in Salt Lake City where he enrolled at East High as a freshman. After seeing varsity action as a sophomore, he emerged as one of the best backs in the state as a junior with 1,974 rushing yards and 19 touchdowns, earning Class 4A MVP honors and leading East to the 2015 state championship. As a senior, Warren led East to a 14-0 record and a second consecutive 4A state title and put together the most productive rushing season in Utah high school history. He broke the single-season rushing record with 3,099 yards, becoming the first player in state history to surpass 3,000 rushing yards in a season. Warren rushed for at least 186 yards in all 14 games and was named Utah's Mr. Football in 2016.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Warren would have been higher ranked and more widely recruited but he didn't have the grades and admittedly didn't take school seriously. He enrolled at Snow College in 2017 and was named the 2018 NJCAA National Offensive Player of the Year as a sophomore with 1,435 rushing yards, averaging 8.6 yards per carry. A three-star junior college recruit, Warren received two FBS scholarship offers and committed to Utah State over Hawaii. After two seasons, he took advantage of the extra year of eligibility from COVID and entered the transfer portal in November 2020, committing to Oklahoma State for his final college season. Warren accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl, but was unable to participate.

STRENGTHS: Sturdy and compact build ... quick, decisive footwork to efficiently scan and execute zone runs ... instinctively sets up his cuts to force fly-by tackles by defenders (see 2021 Boise State tape) ... his low center of gravity helps him absorb hits and bounce off contact ... his leg drive and competitive run style makes it tougher for defenders to ground him in the open field ... resets his eyes after he clears the line of scrimmage and shows enough speed to take it the distance ... takes care of the football (only two fumbles on 218 offensive touches in 2021) ... caught the ball well on his 2021 tape, with zero drops charted.

WEAKNESSES: Average run power at the line of scrimmage ... more quick than explosive as a runner, and needs to gather his balance before making cuts ... inconsistent patience that will lead him to freelance off-script at times ... might have trouble gaining the corner vs. NFL-level pursuit ... has reliable hands out of the backfield but wasn't a dynamic screen target at Oklahoma State ... put some decent blocking reps on tape, but the below-average reps that resulted in direct disruption of the quarterback are tough to overlook ... missed one game as a junior because of a spine disc injury (September 2019).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Oklahoma State, Warren emerged as the starting back in offensive coordinator Kasey Dunn's zone scheme. After showing promise at Utah State, he bet on himself by joining a crowded Oklahoma State backfield in 2021 and was a playmaker in the Big 12, announcing himself as a possible draft pick. Warren has outstanding initial footwork and vision to put himself in position to find the vulnerable areas at the line of scrimmage. He runs with competitive violence, although he will struggle to keep his momentum through early congestion. Overall, Warren's broken tackles will be harder to come by vs. NFL pursuit, but he impulsively reads his blocks and uses foot quickness to dart his way to greener pastures. He will compete for a complimentary role in an NFL backfield.

31. TYLER GOODSON | Iowa 5090 | 197 lbs. | JR. Suwanee, Ga. (North Gwinnett) 11/10/2000 (age 21.47) #15

BACKGROUND: Tyler Goodson, who is the oldest of three boys, grew up in North Carolina and started playing football at age 5. When he was in the sixth grade, his family relocated to Georgia for his father's job, originally living in Forsyth County. The family later moved to Gwinnett County (northeast suburb of Atlanta), and Goodson attended North Gwinnett High, which has produced several NFL players including TE Jared Cook and OT Ja'Wuan James. After sharing the running back duties on varsity as a freshman and sophomore, Goodson missed four games as a junior because of a sprained ankle and turf toe, but he returned for the playoffs and rushed for 898 yards in four games as North Gwinnett captured the 2016 7A state championship. He finished his junior season with 178 carries for 1,437 yards and 25 touchdowns. As a senior captain, Goodson was named the Georgia Player of the Year with 159 carries for 1,180 yards and 25 touchdowns, also earning All-County and All-State honors. He also lettered in baseball, basketball and track.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Goodson was the No. 43 running back in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 66 recruit in the state of Georgia. His recruitment took off after North Gwinnett's championship in 2016 with offers from Iowa, Iowa State, Kentucky, Michigan State, Nebraska and Washington State. Goodson committed to the Hawkeyes the summer before his senior year and didn't waver after Clemson and Michigan entered the picture late. His younger brother (Taylor) played defensive back at North Gwinnett before joining Mercer in its 2020 recruiting class. Goodson elected to skip his senior season and Iowa's bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Functional patience and vision at the line of scrimmage, doing a great job locating backside cuts ... displays the lateral quickness to juke away from pursuit without losing steam ... has the footwork to competently stutter-and-go ... can absorb brushes with defenders and maintain his balance ... reads his blocks well at the second level ... doesn't lose his speed on breakaway runs ... solid pass-catching option thanks to his soft hands (only one drop on 38 targets in 2021) ... has experience running routes from the slot or out wide ... stayed healthy in his career, and no Big Ten player produced more rushing yards over the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Lean torso and overall frame for the position ... not an inside banger, and runs light ... braces early for contact and will choose the sideline over grinding extra yards ... bad habit of turning his back into contact instead of lowering his pads ... takes too many steps at the line of scrimmage ... inconsistent dropping his hips to smoothly change directions ... frantic eyes, and quick to abandon the blocking design ... his pass-blocking can be a roller coaster ... inexperienced on special teams coverages ... accounted for only one touchdown run in his final 10 games (194 carries) in 2021.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Iowa, Goodson saw his carries and impact increase each year in offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz's zone-based scheme. He led the Hawkeyes in rushing each of his three seasons in Iowa City, including career bests as a junior, finishing top five in the Big Ten in rushing yards. Goodson has athletic footwork with adequate vision and patience to work to open space. However, he is too much of a finesse back who struggles to create through contact or finish in tight quarters. Overall, Goodson has NFL-quality lateral quickness and pass-catching skills, but his average explosiveness and run toughness will limit his touches at the next level. His best path to an NFL roster spot will be to find a team that values his receiving ability.

SUMMARY: Kevin Harris attended Bradwell Institute in Hinesville and rushed for 4,100 yards at the prep level, including 1,556 yards and 22 touchdowns as a senior. A three-star recruit, Harris committed to South Carolina (his lone Power 5 offer), where he had a breakout sophomore season as one of only four FBS running backs with at least 113.0 rushing yards per game and 15 touchdowns in 2020. He required back surgery after his sophomore season, and his productivity dropped in 2021. Harris is a strong, balanced runner who keeps his pads square to the line of scrimmage. His vision and ball security (one career fumble) are strengths to his game, but his burst is inconsistent and his poor change-of-direction skills hinder his ability to sink or cut away from trouble. His inconsistent tendencies on passing downs must improve. Overall, Harris has a physical appetite and hammers what is blocked for him, but his monotone speed and bland creativity lower his next-level ceiling.

SUMMARY: Leddie Brown started his prep career at Eastern Christian Academy (Md.), which was run by David Sills IV, but the program shut down after his sophomore year. As a junior, he led Smyrna High (Del.) to the 2016 state title before transferring to Neumann-Goretti High in Philadelphia as a senior, rushing for 899 yards and 11 touchdowns. A three-star recruit, he followed his West Virginia connections and eclipsed 1,000 rushing yards as a junior and senior in Morgantown. A physical grinder, Brown lowers his pads into contact to finish while also showing the lateral footwork to sidestep road blocks and switch run lanes at the line of scrimmage. While fumbles were an issue for him (five in 2021), he is willing in pass protection and catches the ball smoothly away from his frame. Overall, Brown doesn't have explosive traits that will scare NFL defenses, but he has the run balance to stay afloat and the third-down upside that gives him a fighting chance.

SUMMARY: Master Teague III grew up outside of Nashville and rushed for 2,031 yards as a junior at Blackman High in Murfreesboro before missing most of his senior season (ankle injury). A four-star recruit, he signed with Ohio State over several SEC schools, and although he didn't quite live up to expectations, he was a productive second fiddle behind JK Dobbins (2019), Trey Sermon (2020) and TreVeyon Henderson (2021). Teague finished his OSU career with 5.5 yards per carry and plenty of tread left on his tires. He is built like a tank to run with downhill power, but also has the speed of a race car to out-leverage pursuit. Though straight-line explosive, he isn't slippery or shifty to patch together multiple moves. Despite his thick frame, he can be run over in pass pro because of poor base and fundamentals. Overall, Teague has underwhelming film, but there is meat still left on the bone, and his height/weight/speed have NFL teams interested for offense and special teams.

SUMMARY: Benjamin "BJ" Baylor was a four-year starting running back at Wharton High and earned District MVP honors as a senior with 1,997 rushing yards. A three-star recruit, Oregon State was his only Power 5 scholarship offer, and he signed with the Beavers. After waiting his turn behind Jermar Jefferson and Artavis Pierce, he became the starter as a senior and was the only player in the Pac-12 to average better than 100 yards rushing per game in 2021. Although indecisive at times when the defined run isn't there, Baylor runs with burst and attitude to maximize yardage when he picks a lane. He is able to work around early traffic thanks to his agile footwork and acceleration to escape out the back door. There is plenty of tread left on his tires, but he is also inexperienced in areas (four fumbles in 2021). Overall, Baylor needs to become more reliable with his ball security, blocking and pass-catching, but he runs with foot speed and pacing to gash defenses.

SUMMARY: Alexander “Zander” Horvath (HOR-voth) was a two-year starter at Marian High and finished with a school-record 3,373 rushing yards and 50 touchdowns in his career. A no-star recruit, he didn’t receive any FBS scholarships and originally accepted a preferred walk-on spot at Indiana to play linebacker before flipping to Purdue as a fullback. He shared the rushing duties over the last four seasons, setting career bests in rushing and receiving as a junior in 2020. Horvath has linebacker size with sculpted muscle and pop at contact as a lead blocker. He tested well above average for a fullback, and although his tape doesn’t show an explosive athlete, his agility, balance and straight-line speed are impressive. He needs to improve his patience and pad level if he hopes to receive NFL carries. Overall, Horvath lacks the instincts of a full-time ball carrier, but he has the blocking upside, pass-catching skills and special teams experience to compete for an NFL roster spot.

SUMMARY: CJ Verdell was a four-year letterman at Mater Dei Catholic, leading the team to the 2015 state championship. He combined for 4,740 rushing yards in his junior and senior seasons and was named the San Diego Offensive Player of the Year. A three-star recruit, he committed to Oregon over other Pac-12 offers and enjoyed immediate success with back-to-back 1,000 yard rushing seasons in 2018 and 2019. However, he was limited by injuries his final two seasons, including a major leg injury as a senior. Verdell is an athletic and urgent runner to shoot through holes and quickly attack open space. Though he runs decisive and tough, his lack of run power limits him between the tackles. On passing downs, he shows adequate screen game skills, but was barely a speed bump at times in pass pro. Overall, Verdell battled unfortunate injuries over the second half of his Ducks career, but his quick feet and contact balance will give him a chance to make an NFL roster.

SUMMARY: TJ Pledger started his prep career at Chaminade High in Los Angeles, rushing for more than 4,000 yards in three seasons. He transferred to IMG Academy in Bradenton, Fla., for his senior year. A four-star recruit, he signed with Oklahoma over Nebraska and spent three seasons as a backup (split carries with Rhamondre Stevenson in 2020). He entered the transfer portal and landed at Utah, where he finished second on the team in rushing and averaged 6.7 yards per carry in 2021. Studying his tape, there was a consistent theme: Pledger always had an escape plan and consistently picked up yardage after contact. He is compactly built and quick to press, sort and finish each run with urgency. He appears to have soft hands, although he needs to expand his horizons as a blocker and third-down player. Overall, Pledger was a dependable backup in college, and his short-area burst and contact balance could land him in a running back rotation in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Greg Bell was born in San Diego and starred at Bonita Vista High, rushing for 2,632 yards and 34 touchdowns as a senior. He went the junior college route after high school because of academics and then landed at Nebraska. Unhappy with his playing time, he transferred closer to home at San Diego State, but missed all of 2019 after a resistance band snapped and hit him in the eye. He battled a foot injury throughout 2020, but returned healthy with career-bests as a super senior in 2021. Bell doesn't have breakaway speed, but he follows his blocks and is quick to clear holes. He is below average in two critical areas that lower his draft grade: ball security (fumbled six times in 2021) and third-down ability. He doesn't have the foundation of a sturdy pass blocker and was rarely targeted as a receiver. Overall, Bell is a highly determined competitor with vision and cutting skills, but needs to prove his reliability, especially on passing downs, for an NFL team to trust him.

SUMMARY: Ronnie Rivers was born in Castro Valley and attended Freedom High, where he rushed for 2,239 yards and scored 33 touchdowns as a senior in 2016. A two-star recruit, he grew up in a Fresno State family, and there was no doubt where he would commit once he received the offer. He logged at least 100 carries all five seasons with the Bulldogs and led the team in rushing each of his final four years. He finished No. 3 on the school's all-time rushing list, only 56 yards behind his father (Ron), who played six years in the NFL (1995-2000). Ronnie has explosive feet and lateral agility to cut away from defenders and bounce off contact. He doesn't have the base strength to slow down rushers, but he thrives in the screen game with his quick hands and offers punt return experience (7.8 career average). Overall, Rivers lacks the size or skill set to be anything more than a complimentary back, but his shifty feet and receiving skills could earn him a Boston Scott-like role.

1. GARRETT WILSON | Ohio State 5116 | 183 lbs. | JR. Austin, Texas (Lake Travis) 7/22/2000 (age 21.77) #5

BACKGROUND: Garrett Wilson, who is one of five children, grew up in Dublin, Ohio (northwest suburb of Columbus), where he won multiple youth football titles as a quarterback and starred on the AAU circuit in basketball (his favorite sport). In the sixth grade, his family moved to Austin, Texas, because of his father's job, and Wilson attended Hudson Bend Middle School. After enrolling at Lake Travis High (alma mater of Baker Mayfield), he played varsity as a freshman wide receiver and was one of the team's top weapons as a sophomore, finishing with 53 catches for 699 yards and 12 touchdowns in 2016. Wilson had a prolific junior season with 98 receptions for 1,774 yards and 26 touchdowns (32 touchdowns total) and was named the 2017-18 Central Texas Athlete of the Year. He missed six weeks as a senior because of a minor back injury, but still finished the 2018 season with 1,151 receiving yards and 19 touchdowns. Wilson was named a U.S. Army All-American and finished his prep career with 204 catches for 3,359 yards and 55 total touchdowns. He was a three-year member of the Lake Travis varsity basketball team and earned First Team All-Central Texas honors as a junior, averaging 21.0 points per game (didn't play as a senior because he enrolled early at Ohio State). Wilson also lettered in track and set personal bests in the 100 meters (11.39) and long jump (21'5.25).

A five-star recruit out of high school, Wilson was the No. 2 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 20 player overall) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Texas (behind OL Kenyon Green and DL DeMarvin Leal). He had no shortage of suitors, with over 30 major offers before narrowing his list to two, choosing his old home (Ohio State) over his new home (Texas) and enrolling in January 2019. Wilson also received scholarship offers from several Division I basketball programs (he would have pursued basketball if he was bigger). His father (Kenny) played collegiate basketball at Davidson (1981-84) and is in the school's Hall of Fame, ranking seventh in program history in points (1,573). Kenny played briefly with the NBA's Denver Nuggets. His older brother (Cameron) played wide receiver at Iowa (2012-13) and Ohio (2014) before legal troubles. His older brother (Donovan) played running back at Bowling Green (2013-17). Wilson elected to skip his senior season, including the Rose Bowl, and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Elite body control and ball skills to make fluid midair adjustments ... explosive twitch in release package ... defenders better get their hands on him quickly, because he has the short-area explosion to create separation in tight spaces ... rare understanding of route leverage for his age ... snatches without breaking stride and instinctively sets up his cuts ... decelerates on command to give tacklers the slip ... plays bigger than he is, and shows the reflexes and contortion skills to win when covered (impressive 61.8 percent success rate in contested situations) ... physical with the ball in the air to high-point with his long arms, strong hands and terrific hand-eye coordination ... responsible for four plays of 50-plus yards (three receptions, one rush) in 2021 ... punt return experience, averaging 5.9 yards per return (35/205/0) ... impressive competitor with the intangibles desired for the next level (NFL scout: "The OSU coaches say he carried himself with the demeanor and work ethic of a professional when he was a freshman.") ... played primarily in the slot in 2020 and outside in 2021 ... production improved each season, and he leaves Columbus ranked top-10 in school history in receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns.

WEAKNESSES: Has a slender, lean-muscle frame and lacks ideal body mass ... loose route runner, and needs to be sharper with his body movements and footwork ... plays physical but not powerful, and needs to continue improving his functional strength to fend off aggressive NFL cornerbacks ... average sustain skills as a perimeter blocker ... for a player with tremendous ball skills, drops too many easy passes ... build will lead to durability questions; missed one game as a junior because of concussion-like symptoms (November 2021); missed more than a month of senior year in high school because of a back injury (October 2018).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Ohio State, Wilson was the X receiver in head coach Ryan Day's multiple spread offense, lining up primarily outside in 2021 after spending 2020 in the slot. Despite never leading Ohio State in receiving in any of his three seasons, his production increased each year, and he was one of only six FBS pass catchers to average more than 95.0 receiving yards and 1.0 touchdown per game in 2021. A Division I basketball recruit out of high school, Wilson credits basketball (his favorite sport) for developing the route athleticism and fluidity in and out of his breaks that makes him a true three-level threat on the football field. With his long arms and uncanny adjustment skills, he catches the ball well outside his frame and is comfortable operating with bodies around him. Overall, Wilson needs continued route refinement, but he makes the playbook come alive with his ability to get open before and after the catch thanks to his athleticism and instincts. With his slender frame, elite body control, and catch-point skills, he reminds me of CeeDee Lamb.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 10 overall)

2. JAMESON WILLIAMS | Alabama 6014 | 179 lbs. | JR. St. Louis, Mo. (Cardinal Ritter) 3/26/2001 (age 21.09) #1

BACKGROUND: Jameson Williams, who is one of four children, was born in St. Louis and grew up in a track family. He started playing football at the youth level and later enrolled at Cardinal Ritter College Prep, a Catholic high school in St. Louis. After seeing immediate varsity action as a freshman and sophomore, Williams recorded 36 catches for 1,062 yards (29.5 average) and 15 touchdowns as a junior, adding three kick returns for touchdowns. As a senior, he led Cardinal Ritter to the 2018 Class 3 state championship game, finishing the season with 68 receptions for 1,626 yards (23.9 average) and 22 touchdowns to earn All-State honors. Williams was even more prolific on the track team with a 37.28 in the 300-meter hurdles, which broke Ezekiel Elliott's state record. He led Cardinal Ritter to the 2018 state title as a junior, winning state titles in the 300-meter hurdles (37.47) and 400 meters (48.68). During his prep career, he set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.54), 200 meters (21.23), 400 meters (47.23), and long jump (22'11.5).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Williams was the No. 13 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 82 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Missouri. His first scholarship offer came during his sophomore year from Syracuse, and he received almost 50 offers in total. His final choice came down to Alabama and Ohio State, and he chose the Buckeyes. After two seasons and only 15 catches in Columbus, Williams found himself behind Chris Olave, Garrett Wilson and Jaxon Smith-Njigba and elected to enter the transfer portal during the spring of 2019. After less than a week in the portal, he announced his transfer to Alabama and joined the Tide in summer of 2021. His father (James Sr.) ran track collegiately at Abilene Christian. James Sr. met his wife (Tianna) on the track team at Sumner High in St. Louis. Jameson's older brother (James Jr.) ran track at Northwest Missouri State (2013-17). His older sister (Ja'lanne) ran track at Wayland Baptist. His younger brother (Jaden) currently runs track at Western Texas College. Williams elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Track sprinter with “see-ya” speed ... light feet to beat press and explode upfield ... makes sharp, 90-degree route cuts without gearing down ... quick to sink hips and stop on a dime at the top of his stem, creating opportunities for comebacks, double-moves, etc. ... runs with a long, fluid gait to track and adjust to the football, especially on deep passes (set Alabama single-season record and led the FBS with four touchdowns of 70-plus yards in 2021) ... has the length to pull down throws and snatch the ball in stride ... impressive body control to contort and make midair adjustments ... deceiving run power after the catch to keep balance through contact ... has springs in his calves to make wide, lateral cuts and force missed tackles ... speed destroys pursuit angles in the open field ... talented gunner on punt coverage, and finished his career with 279 special teams snaps and nine tackles ... averaged 35.2 yards per kick return with two touchdowns (10/352/2) ... coaches speak highly of his preparation habits (Bill O’Brien: “I can’t say enough about his competitiveness. He’s a player that goes out and practices every day like it’s a game.”) ... elite receiving production as a junior, finishing as one of only three FBS players to reach 1,500 receiving yards and 15 touchdowns catches in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Slight frame with skinny limbs and minimal bulk ... will rely on his body and wrists to finish catches ... needs to cut down on focus drops ... can be late to recognize coverages ... marginal ball security because of tendency to hold the ball loose and away from his body (two fumbles in 2021) ... limited blocker right now and must improve play strength and want-to ... only one season of production ... suffered a torn ACL in his left knee in the National Championship Game (January 2022), which sidelined him during the draft process (underwent surgery on January 18, 2022).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Alabama, Williams was the Z receiver in offensive coordinator Bill O’Brien’s scheme and caught passes from Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Bryce Young. After he was blocked on the Ohio State depth chart for two years, he transferred to Tuscaloosa for the 2021 season and made a tremendous impact in his six months with the Tide, becoming the third player in school history to reach 1,500 receiving yards in a season. Williams was born into a track family and shows elite speed in his routes and with the ball in his hands (responsible for 10 of Alabama’s 11 longest plays in 2021). He might not be a natural hands-catcher, but he has outstanding tracking skills and can flip his hips with balance to make easy adjustments on the football. Overall, Williams is rehabbing a torn ACL, but if healthy, he has the field-stretching speed and ball instincts to be a big-play weapon. He projects as an NFL starter with a chance to be special in a downfield passing offense.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 13 overall)

3. DRAKE LONDON | USC 6037 | 219 lbs. | JR. Moorpark, Calif. (Moorpark) 7/24/2001 (age 20.76) #15

BACKGROUND: Drake London, who is one of two children, was born and raised in Ventura County, Calif., just north of Los Angeles. His family moved to Moorpark (50 miles north of L.A.) in 2004, and he played every sport he could but always gravitated toward basketball (his first love) and football. London started playing tackle football in fifth grade and starred on the AAU circuit for hoops. He attended Moorpark High, where he played both basketball and football all four years. As a junior, London led the team to the Division 5 championship and earned Second Team All-Area honors with 51 catches for 1,032 yards and 11 touchdowns. He finished with 62 receptions for 1,089 yards and 12 touchdowns in 2018 and took home numerous All-American and All-State awards. Also as a senior, London led the basketball team to the 2018-19 Division 3AA quarterfinals with 29.2 points, 11.9 rebounds and 3.8 assists per game (his 42 3-pointers as a senior rank No. 3 all-time in Ventura County for a single season). He earned All-County honors in both basketball and football.

A four-star recruit out of high school, London was the No. 35 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 33 recruit in the state of California. He was also a three-star basketball recruit and ranked as the No. 30 shooting guard in the country. London received more than 20 scholarship offers for football, including Notre Dame and Oregon, but USC and Virginia were the two programs that committed to him in both sports. Growing up a USC and Reggie Bush fan, he committed to the Trojans the summer before his senior year (his scholarship was for football, not basketball). After his freshman football season, London joined the basketball team and logged three rebounds (no points) in six minutes over two games. After his breakout sophomore season in football, he decided not to join the USC basketball team for the 2020-21 season. His older sister (Makayla) is a model and social media influencer (around 400,000 followers on Instagram). London elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(scheduled for April 15)

STRENGTHS: Long, rangy frame with growth potential ... basketball background with impressive leaping skills and high-pointing instincts ... large, accepting hands with the focus to win contested catches and play through contact ... fluid ball adjustments to snatch and quickly get upfield ... long-striding route runner, and creates underneath cushion by pushing deep routes ... uses lower-body flexibility to sink and cut at the top of routes ... gains proper depth and works back to the ball, securing catches away from his frame to keep defenders at bay ... back-shoulder throws are automatic ... college defensive backs didn’t want to tackle him, and he provides YAC skills thanks to his toughness and ability to stay afloat ... not shy banging as a blocker ... lined up in the slot as a freshman and sophomore before moving outside as a junior ... voted a team captain for the 2021 season ... described by coaches as a “humble homebody” with a blue-collar attitude ... remarkable production as a junior prior to his ankle injury — joined Texas Tech’s Michael Crabtree in 2007 as the only Power 5 players to average 11.0 catches through eight games.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent route pacing ... ran a basic route tree in college ... break quickness is crisp, but not explosive ... will have frustrating drops (eight in 2021) ... not shy pushing off defenders downfield (sometimes more obvious than others) ... aggressive after the catch, but doesn't have much make-you-miss ability in the open field ... needs to continue adding bulk and developing his body ... willing, but sloppy on-the-move blocker ... lined up almost exclusively to the left of the formation on his 2021 tape ... missed the final four games of his junior year and most of the pre-draft process because of a broken right ankle (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at USC, London was the X receiver in former offensive coordinator Graham Harrell's scheme, lining up outside (left of formation) after being slot-only the previous two years. He was on pace to smash Marqise Lee's USC single-season receiving records in 2021 before his ankle injury but was still recognized as the top offensive player in the Pac-12. The ultimate respect for a wide receiver is when everyone knows the ball is going to him, yet the defense can't stop it. That sums up London's junior season (15 targets per game), which was his first as a football-only athlete in his life. Formerly a two-sport athlete, his basketball background is evident with his elite high-pointing skills to play through contact and thrive above the rim. Overall, London needs continued development with his route running, but he provides big-play ability with his outstanding size, athleticism and ball skills, including extraordinary instincts when the ball is in the air.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 15 overall)

4. CHRIS OLAVE | Ohio State 6003 | 187 lbs. | SR. San Ysidro, Calif. (Mission Hills) 6/27/2000 (age 21.84) #2

BACKGROUND: Chris Olave (oh-LAV-aye), who is the youngest of three boys, was born in San Ysidro and spent his freshman and sophomore years at Eastlake High in Chula Vista, a suburb of San Diego. With his parents looking for a stricter education, the family moved to north San Diego and enrolled Olave and his older brother at Mission Hills High (alma mater of San Francisco 49ers linebacker Fred Warner). However, the state athletic board ruled them ineligible for the 2016 season, and Olave was forced to sit out his junior year of football. As a senior, he set San Diego section records with 1,764 receiving yards and 26 touchdowns on 93 receptions, also playing defensive back on defense and adding a punt-return touchdown. He also lettered in baseball, basketball and track at Mission Hills, running personal bests in the 100 meters (10.82), 200 meters (22.36) and long jump (23'6).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Olave was the No. 68 wide receiver in the country and the No. 47 recruit in the state of California. College programs frequented Mission Hills in 2017, but mainly to see quarterback Jack Tuttle, who is Olave's best friend. Ohio State's Ryan Day (then in his first season as offensive coordinator) visited to see the quarterback, but it was Olave catching passes during practice who stole the show. After not playing as a junior, Olave was underrecruited, and Ohio State was one of the first schools to offer him a scholarship. He grew up an Oregon fan, but they entered the picture too late, and Olave committed to the Buckeyes over UCLA, USC and Utah (where Tuttle committed). Olave was the third-lowest-ranked recruit of the 26 enrollees in Ohio State's 2018 class. His older brother (Isiah) played cornerback at FCS-level UC Davis (2014-18). His older brother (Josh) played cornerback at Azusa Pacific (2017-19) before transferring to FCS-level Weber State for the 2020 and 2021 seasons. Olave graduated with his degree in consumer and family financial services (December 2021). He opted out of the Rose Bowl and declined his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6004	185	31 1/4	9 1/4	72 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only — choice)

STRENGTHS: Skilled at tracking and adjusting to the football, especially when he has the defender in a trail position ... uses late, crafty hands to mask the arrival of throws ... above-average route acceleration to eliminate cushions and create conflict for zone or off-coverage ... wins early with his release package and has the speed to be a legit deep threat ... controlled, linear route angles and doesn't drift ... smooth body movements in and out of route breaks with minimal gear-down needed ... remarkable along the sideline, dragging and toe-tapping like a dancer ... always working back to the ball and keeping plays alive ... played on punt coverage all four seasons (95 snaps) and had two blocked punts his first two seasons ... humble by nature and considered the "big brother" in Ohio State's talented wide receiver room (former Ohio State teammate Jameson Williams: "Chris is an excellent person ... just the big bro to everybody.") ... led team in receiving touchdowns three consecutive seasons ... leaves Columbus ranked third on the school's all-time reception list (176) and fifth in receiving yards (2,711).

WEAKNESSES: Slender, lean-muscle body type ... unimpressive build hinders success rate in contested situations ... will brace for contact and doesn't have the body strength to routinely break tackles ... very average after the catch, and forced missed tackles were rare on his senior tape ... plays faster in his routes than as a ball carrier ... skill set isn't ideal for quick game and underneath throws ... has a bad habit of relying on his body at times to finish catches ... didn't fumble in 2021, but fumbled four times in 2020 ... able to stalk block and latch onto corners, but lacks the power to move or sustain his man.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ohio State, Olave was the Z receiver in head coach Ryan Day's multiple spread offense. Despite never reaching 1,000 yards receiving in a season, his production was steady, and he finished his career as the Buckeyes' all-time leader in touchdown catches (35), passing David Boston. Olave is a smooth route runner with the downfield speed and tracking instincts to consistently win as a deep threat. He knows how to create spacing in his routes and won't waste steps out of his breaks, but he isn't a tackle-breaker and doesn't show the same elusiveness after the catch. Overall, Olave has an average body type and marginal play strength, but he is a polished pass catcher with dependable ball skills and a unique feel for pacing coverage. He projects as a starting Z receiver and a productive WR2 on the depth chart in the NFL.

5. TREYLON BURKS | Arkansas 6020 | 225 lbs. | JR. Warren, Ark. (Warren) 3/23/2000 (age 22.10) #16

BACKGROUND: Treylon (tray-luhn) Burks was born and raised in Warren, Ark., (about an hour north of the Arkansas-Louisiana border) and is an avid hunter (deer, hogs, etc.) and fisherman. He attended Warren High and was a four-year varsity letterman, becoming the first freshman starter for Bo Hembree, the longtime head coach (Hembree on Burks: "As a football player, he's the best I've ever coached."). Burks lined up at quarterback and wide receiver on offense, linebacker on defense and handled kicking, punting and return duties on special teams. As a sophomore, he helped Warren to the 2016 Class 4A Championship. As a junior, he finished with 45 catches for 1,090 yards and 11 touchdowns and 114 carries for 936 rushing yards and 27 touchdowns. He added 84 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss and five interceptions (three returned for touchdowns) on defense and four touchdowns (three punt returns, one kick return) on special teams. As a senior, Burks posted eight catches for 244 yards and four touchdowns, along with three passing touchdowns, before a knee injury ended his 2018 season. He finished his prep career with 151 catches for 3,403 yards and 43 touchdowns. Burks also lettered in baseball and basketball.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Burks was the No. 16 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 103 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Arkansas. He received offers from Clemson, Florida State, LSU and Michigan, but he decided to stay in-state and signed with Arkansas, following in the footsteps of past Warren wide receivers Jarius Wright, Greg Childs and Chris Gragg. He elected to skip his senior season and the bowl game to declare for the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Large, sturdy frame with body thickness and fluidity ... dangerous with the ball in his hands thanks to his acceleration, vision and competitiveness ... above-average body control and ball skills to make impressive adjustments to passes... out-rebounds opponents, and defenders on his hip don't disrupt his concentration ... draws defensive penalties thanks to physicality and ability to play through contact ... tracks the ball naturally over his shoulder ... effective deep target (slot fades, go routes, etc.) — caught 12 of 18 targets of 20-plus yards in 2021 (zero drops) ... uses jab steps to quickly enter his routes and stack corners ... doesn't lose speed out of breaks, and has the juice to run away from pursuit ... maintains route balance while hand-fighting for position ... waits until the final moment to attack back-shoulder throws ... competes with warrior toughness and often plays through injuries ... effective blocker, and play strength is the result of his work in the weight room (380-pound bench press, 500-pound squat, 320-pound power clean) ... averaged 10.8 yards as the team's featured punt returner as a true freshman (12/130/0) ... experienced lining up outside, slot, inline and in the backfield ... became the fourth player in school history to record a 1,000-yard receiving season.

WEAKNESSES: Helped by high volume of screens and quick targets — 45 of 66 catches in 2021 (68.2 percent) came within 10 yards of the line of scrimmage ... novice-level route runner ... need to see improved urgency with route setup and tempo ... didn't face much press coverage in college and was helped by pre-snap motion ... most (77.0 percent) of his snaps came from the slot in college ... still learning how to effectively use his body to shield defenders ... physical blocker but will fall asleep at the wheel at times, allowing defenders to gain leverage ... impressive ball skills but will needlessly attempt one-hand catches at times ... physical style of play leads to durability concerns — tore the ACL in his left knee (October 2018) as a senior in high school.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Arkansas, Burks was the slot receiver in offensive coordinator Kendal Briles' up-tempo, RPO-based scheme. With 82.9 percent of his career snaps coming in the slot, inline or in the backfield, he was deployed across the formation to create mismatches and led the Razorbacks in receiving yards each of the past three seasons. With his vision and acceleration, Burks has the skills to turn quick-hitters into big plays, breaking tackles with his balance, body strength and competitive toughness (led the SEC with 22 plays of 20-plus yards in 2021). He can also track the football downfield with his large catch radius, although his separation skills can be mitigated by his undeveloped rhythm as a route runner. Overall, Burks is underdeveloped as an outside route runner, but he is a dynamic weapon with the ball in his hands and boasts the unique blend of size, athleticism and ball skills to grow into an NFL team's No. 1 receiver. He compares to a linebacker-sized Deebo Samuel in a similar scheme.

6. JAHAN DOTSON | Penn State 5105 | 178 lbs. | SR. Nazareth, Pa. (Nazareth Area) 3/22/2000 (age 22.10) #5

BACKGROUND: Jahan (JUH-han) Dotson, who is the youngest of two boys, was born in Newark, N.J., before his family moved to Nazareth, Pa., (70 miles north of Philadelphia) to live in a safer environment (his parents commuted to New Jersey for work). He started playing football at age 4 and began his prep career at Nazareth Area High, where he combined for 125 catches for 1,866 yards and 25 catches as a freshman and sophomore. Dotson also played cornerback on defense and had four interceptions in 2015 as a sophomore. He transferred to The Peddie School in Hightstown, N.J., for his junior year and posted 23 catches for 503 yards and three touchdowns in five games before an injury ended his 2016 season. Dotson returned to Nazareth Area High for his senior season and recorded 62 catches for 889 yards and 15 touchdowns in 2017, earning First Team all-state honors. Over his three years at Nazareth, he set school records for receptions (187), receiving yards (2,755) and receiving touchdowns (40). Dotson also lettered in basketball and track, winning the state championships in the 4x100 relay (41.86) and the long jump (24'4.5) as a sophomore in 2016. He set personal bests in the 100 meters (11.04) and 200 meters (21.78).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Dotson was the No. 36 wide receiver in the country and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Pennsylvania. He received offers from all of the top programs, including Alabama, Georgia, Michigan, Ohio State and USC. Dotson originally committed to UCLA at the start of his senior season, but he backed off that pledge in December after Jim Mora was fired as head coach. He flipped to in-state Penn State (recruited by then wide receivers coach Josh Gattis) and was part of an impressive recruiting class that included several future pros, including Micah Parsons, Jayson Oweh and Pat Freiermuth. His mother (Robin) was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, a cancer that affects bone marrow, in 2019 and again in 2021 after two years of remission. Dotson skipped the 2021 bowl game. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but later pulled out of the all-star game.

PRO DAY	5107	181	30 1/2	9 1/2	75 1/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	15 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Outstanding speed before and after the catch ... uses lower-body suddenness to release and separate mid-route ... crafty route runner and nestles in the corner's blind spot ... executes double-moves very well and is often left waiting for the ball to arrive downfield ... big, strong hands and plays through the football (only two drops on 138 targets in 2021) ... excellent tracking skills and displays the "my ball" confidence of a much bigger player ... body control and hand-eye coordination make spearing the football mid-stride a breeze ... 10 of 21 career touchdowns were 40-plus-yard receptions ... served two seasons as PSU's main punt returner, averaging 14.0 yards per return with one touchdown ... experienced across the formation (slot and outside) ... wasn't a team captain, but coaches speak highly of his veteran presence in the receiver room ... production increased each season in Happy Valley — catches (91), receiving yards (1,182) and touchdown catches (12) in 2021 each rank second in a single season in school history.

WEAKNESSES: Smallish frame with limited bulk ... marginal body strength and can be knocked off his route path by defenders ... had a low success rate in contested situations vs. Big Ten corners, and it will only be tougher vs. NFL defensive backs ... occasionally allows the ball into his body ... guilty of tipping his routes based on the coverage ... missed tackles were surprisingly uncommon on his film ... doesn't have the length or play strength to sustain blocks in space.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Penn State, Dotson lined up across the formation in offensive coordinator Mike Yurcich's offense. He became the fourth player in school history to reach 1,000 receiving yards in a season and finished his career second in school history in catches (183) and touchdown grabs (25) and fourth in receiving yards (2,757). A polished pass catcher, Dotson puts defenders in conflict with his twitchy speed to defeat press and manipulate coverages at the stem. Although he is undersized, he has above-average hands and natural body control with maybe the largest catch radius of any sub-5-foot-11 receiver I have ever scouted. Overall, Dotson isn't a tackle-breaker, and his marginal play strength will be more noticeable vs. NFL defenders, but his dynamic speed, route instincts and ball skills make him a difficult player to cover one-on-one. He is an NFL starter in the Diontae Johnson mold with better hands and punt-return skills.

7. SKYY MOORE | Western Michigan 5095 | 195 lbs. | JR. New Kensington, Pa. (Shady Side) 9/10/2000 (age 21.63) #24

BACKGROUND: Skyy Moore grew up in Steelers' country just outside of Pittsburgh in western Pennsylvania. He attended Shady Side Academy, where he was a four-year letterman as a dual-threat quarterback and cornerback (teammates with WR/CB Dino Tomlin, the son of Pittsburgh Steelers head coach Mike Tomlin). After missing most of his sophomore year because of an ankle injury, Moore was named the 2017 Allegheny Conference Player of the Year on offense and defense (four interceptions) as a junior. As a senior, he led Shady Side to a 9-0 regular-season record, the 2018 conference championship and No. 1 ranking in Class 2A. However, Moore suffered a fractured ankle in the first round of the playoffs, ending his high school career. He earned First Team All-State and Conference Offensive Player of the Year (second consecutive year) honors as a senior with 1,412 passing yards, 1,590 rushing yards and 44 total touchdowns (22 passing, 22 rushing). Moore finished his prep career with more than 100 total touchdowns and became the first player in league history to run for 1,000 yards and pass for 1,000 yards in back-to-back seasons. He also earned All-Conference honors as a point guard in basketball and ran track as a senior, setting a personal best in the 100 meters (11.86).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Moore was the No. 217 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 44 recruit in the state of Pennsylvania. His recruitment picked up steam after his junior season with 15 offers, but much of the attention came from the FCS, including offers from the Ivy League. Moore committed to Western Michigan over Buffalo and Rice and moved from cornerback to wide receiver shortly after he enrolled. He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5096	191	31 1/4	10 1/4	74 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	15 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Displays the short-area quickness to win at the line or out of his breaks ... large, sudden hands to quickly find and stab the football (largest hands among receivers at the Combine) ... has mastered pulling in throws behind him without breaking stride ... wasn't targeted deep very often, but showed the tracking skills to do it ... runs strong, balanced routes ... uses stutter steps and functional strength to fight through the jam ... quickly leverages routes with his ability to defeat press ... instinctive with the ball in his hands ... compact body type and physical after the catch, slipping or breaking the first tackle after the catch ... competes with a massive chip on his shoulder, both on and off the field ... a two-way player in high school, always thought of himself as a natural defensive guy, and brings that toughness to the wide receiver position ... one of only five FBS players to average at least 7.9 catches per game in 2021 and one of only four with at least 95 catches, 1,200 yards, and 10 touchdowns.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't always play up to timed speed ... needs to continue honing his setup and stem skills to create separation vs. NFL-level cornerbacks ... 85 percent of targets came within 20 yards of the line of scrimmage ... average-sized target for the quarterback ... willing as a blocker, but it is not a strength ... tends to drop his eyes and lunge, missing his block ... minimal special teams experience, and wasn't used as a regular returner or coverage player ... missed two games because of injury the past two seasons and had a history of ankle injuries in high school: suffered a fractured left ankle as a senior (November 2018), requiring surgery, and missed almost all of his sophomore year because of a broken ankle (September 2016).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Western Michigan, Moore was a boundary wide receiver (slot and outside) in offensive coordinator Eric Evans' RPO-based scheme. A quarterback and cornerback in high school, he made the switch to receiver at WMU, learned under Dee Eskridge and became the first 1,000-yard receiver since Corey Davis (2016), averaging 5.7 catches per game over his 30 games for the Broncos. A physically and mentally tough competitor, Moore creates route leverage with his foot quickness and is extremely reliable at the catch point thanks to his large, sticky hands and quick-reaction ball skills. Although he isn't an explosive YAC threat, he flashes natural instincts with the ball in his hands and makes it a chore for defenders to get him on the ground. Overall, Moore might have trouble creating sizable passing windows vs. NFL coverage, but he has outstanding hands and reflexes with the detail-oriented mindset to grow into a three-level threat. He projects best as an NFL slot receiver.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 39 overall)

8. GEORGE PICKENS | Georgia 6032 | 195 lbs. | JR. Hoover, Ala. (Hoover) 3/4/2001 (age 21.15) #1

BACKGROUND: George Pickens Jr., who goes by his middle name “Malik” with his family, grew up in central Alabama and attended Hoover High. After playing on the freshman team in 2015, he starred on the junior varsity team as a sophomore and moved up to varsity as a backup later in the season. As a junior, Pickens earned First Team All-State honors with 46 receptions for 735 yards and five touchdowns, adding a pair of punt-return touchdowns. He helped lead Hoover to the 2018 league title and finished his senior year with 69 catches for 1,368 yards and 16 touchdowns, along with a kick-return touchdown. Pickens earned Under Armour All-American and First Team All-State honors and was a finalist for the Class 7A Player of the Year award.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Pickens was the No. 4 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 24 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Alabama. He started receiving scholarship offers as a sophomore (before he became a varsity starter as a junior), and Auburn made him a priority from the start. Pickens committed to the Tigers in July 2017 while also considering offers from Georgia, LSU, Miami and Tennessee. After a year-and-a-half commitment to Auburn, he surprised many by flipping to Georgia on signing day. It marked back-to-back years that the top-ranked recruit in Alabama left the state for college (Justyn Ross in 2018). Pickens’ older brother (Chris Humes) was a defensive back at Arkansas State (2012-16) and spent time with the Oakland Raiders as an undrafted free agent before playing two seasons with the CFL’s Winnipeg Bombers. Pickens elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Tall, long athlete with growth potential ... has both short-area quickness and deep speed ... wins over the top with the ball-tracking skills to go and get the football ... graceful in midair to make full-extension grabs ... comfortable catching the ball away from his frame ... makes tight, 90-degree cuts to square off routes ... sinks and snaps hips on comebacks ... fluid at the stem to hit another gear on post or corner routes ... works back to the ball at all three levels ... 71.1 percent of career catches resulted in a first down or touchdown ... powers through press and plays with some dog to him ... looked like he belonged in the SEC the moment he arrived in Athens as a true freshman ... experienced lining up inside, outside and all over the formation.

WEAKNESSES: Lean-framed, and would benefit from continuing to add bulk ... will lose body position to physical cornerbacks downfield ... still learning how to be a more precise route runner ... has some wasted steps or momentum in route setup, and needs to develop better consistency ... excessive steps vs. press, and learning how to be more efficient at the line ... occasionally allows throws to get on top of him ... only average post-catch acceleration, and not very elusive ... willing blocker, but falls off contact quickly ... had several immature moments early in his career: ejected from a game as a freshman for trading punches with a Georgia Tech defender, and was suspended for a half the following game (November 2019); was flagged for unsportsmanlike conduct for spraying water on a Tennessee player on the sideline (October 2020) ... missed most of the 2021 season because of a torn ACL in his right knee during 2021 spring practices (March 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, Pickens was the X receiver in offensive coordinator Todd Monken’s balanced scheme. Shortly after he enrolled, Bulldogs’ coaches said he was the most talented receiver on the roster, and he didn’t disappoint (led the team in receiving in 2019 with several freshman receiving records), but his past two seasons were marred by injuries, most notably his 2021 ACL tear. Pickens is a balanced athlete, with fluidity at the stem and the wheels to win vertically, skillfully tracking the deep ball. While his competitiveness is a plus, he lacks discipline in several areas of the position and lost a year of on-field development because of his injury. Overall, Pickens has a discount sticker on him after missing most of the 2021 season, but he is a graceful athlete with outstanding ball-tracking and 50-50 finishing skills. He has WR1 traits and potential if he returns to pre-injury form and continues to refine his routes.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 47 overall)

9. JALEN TOLBERT | South Alabama 6011 | 194 lbs. | rSR. Mobile, Ala. (McGill-Toolen) 2/27/1999 (age 23.17) #8

BACKGROUND: Jalen Tolbert was born and raised in Mobile, Ala., and was a three-sport star at McGill-Toolen High, a private Catholic school. After earning a spot on varsity as a sophomore, his playing time increased throughout his junior year as the team went 13-1 and won the 2015 7A state championship. Tolbert finished his junior year with 14 catches for 135 yards, with most of that production coming in the four playoff games. He became a full-time starter as a senior and posted 37 receptions for 696 yards and nine touchdowns as McGill-Toolen reached the 7A state championship game for the second consecutive year. He also lettered in baseball and basketball, helping lead the basketball team to the state title his junior season (didn’t play basketball as a senior).

A two-star recruit out of high school, Tolbert was the No. 415 wide receiver in the country and the No. 108 recruit in the state of Alabama. He didn’t become a starter until his senior year, so his recruitment was delayed as well. Tolbert was planning to attend FCS-level Jacksonville State after committing there as a senior, but South Alabama (located in Mobile) extended a scholarship a few weeks before signing day. He strongly considered late offers from Michigan State and Vanderbilt but decided to stay close to home and sign with South Alabama, making the rare decision to choose the Sun Belt over the Big Ten and SEC. Tolbert also planned to play baseball at South Alabama but chose to focus on football. He graduated with his degree in leisure studies (May 2021) and is working on a second degree in interdisciplinary studies. Tolbert accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Smooth athlete ... skilled at releasing at the line and throttling his speed mid-route, which allows him to stack corners vertically ... brakes cleanly at the stem with sudden feet to redirect in any direction ... drives corners off the top of his routes ... above-average tracking and adjustment skills to snare inaccurate passes ... strong mitts to win 50-50 balls and finish catches through contact ... does a great job working back and high-pointing or attacking the ball with his long arms before it gets to him ... turns into a defensive back when necessary, so either he catches it or no one does ... added slot responsibilities as a senior ... faced only one Power 5 program over his final 34 games but made it count (7/143/1 vs. Tennessee in November 2021) ... rewrote the receiving records books at South Alabama, including career catches (178), receiving yards (3,140), touchdown catches (22) and 100-yard receiving games (10).

WEAKNESSES: Drop rate increased as a senior ... doesn't have breakaway speed after the catch ... prone to drifts prior to his route breaks, tipping his path ... not elusive, and missed tackles were infrequent on film ... squeezes too tight along the sideline, allowing the corner to run him out of bounds ... half-hearted blocker, and won't go looking for work if he doesn't have to ... minimal experience on special teams coverages in college ... fumbled twice over his final two seasons and needs to better protect the football.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at South Alabama, Tolbert was the X receiver in offensive coordinator Major Applewhite's offense and lined up across the formation (unlike his underclassman tape). After bypassing scholarship offers from Power 5 programs to stay close to home, he became the most prolific receiver in South Alabama history, including the first player in school history to reach 1,000 receiving yards in a season (he did it twice). Aside from the occasional focus drop, Tolbert shows impressive catch-point timing and adjustment skills. Although he doesn't have elite top-end speed, he has fluid footwork and uses slight hesitation in his route breaks so he can mash the gas and create pockets of separation. Overall, Tolbert needs to tighten up a few areas of his game, but he has NFL starting traits with his ability to track deep or sink and work back to the football.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 59 overall)

10. CHRISTIAN WATSON | North Dakota State 6041 | 208 lbs. | rSR. Tampa, Fla. (Plant) 5/12/1999 (age 22.96) #1

BACKGROUND: Christian Watson, who has four siblings, grew up in Tampa, Fla., and started playing football at age 3. He attended H.B. Plant High, where he played with several future FBS recruits like Whop Philyor, Thomas Allen and Micah McFadden (all three committed to Indiana). A late bloomer physically, he earned a spot on varsity as a junior wide receiver and safety and hit a four-inch growth spurt after the season. As a senior, Watson helped lead Plant to a 13-1 record, losing the 2016 Class 7A state title game to St. Thomas Aquinas. He finished his senior year with 23 catches for 393 yards (17.1 average) and eight touchdowns while also returning kicks. Watson also lettered in track and set personal bests in the 200 meters (23.66) and long jump (18'3).

A two-star recruit out of high school, Watson was the No. 501 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 536 recruit in the state of Florida. With very little production and film his first three years of high school, he wasn't being recruited to play college football. But Watson was a late developer, and North Dakota State stumbled upon him in the spring of 2016 as he was physically maturing into a high-level receiver. The FCS powerhouse offered him in the summer, and Watson committed weeks later before the start of his senior year. FBS programs started to show interest, but Watson shut down his recruitment after committing to North Dakota State. His father (Tazim Wajed, formerly known as Tim Watson) played defensive back at Howard and was a sixth-round pick in the 1993 NFL Draft by the Green Bay Packers, spending five years in the NFL (1993-97). His older brother (Tre) played linebacker at Illinois (2014-17) and Maryland (2018) and for the Montreal Alouettes in the CFL. His uncle (Cedric) played defensive end at Marshall in the mid-'90s. His cousin (Jordin Sparks) is a Grammy Award winning singer. Watson graduated with his degree in university studies (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Long, athletic frame ... accelerates with gliding strides to eat up grass and pick up speed as he goes ... uses subtle pacing to stack and separate vertically from corners ... tracks well on deep post patterns, gearing up/down to settle underneath the football ... averaged at least 18.3 yards per catch each of his four seasons at NDSU ... climbs the ladder to pull down throws ... displays the upper-body flexibility to adjust and stab throws away from his body with his large hands ... won't slow at the catch point, and looks to finish with toughness as a ball carrier ... active weapon on jet sweeps and end-arounds, and started one game at RB as a senior (49/403/2) ... competitive as a blocker ... has kick-return experience, averaging 26.4 yards per return with two touchdowns (26/686/2) ... eighth player in school history to reach 2,000 receiving yards.

WEAKNESSES: Slender muscle tone, and needs to keep adding bulk ... mediocre play strength will be more pronounced vs. NFL corners ... allows throws to get on top of him, and must improve pass catching focus ... unusually high number of drops (12) in final two seasons ... control and balance as a route runner break down quickly vs. physical corners ... press technique lacks maturation ... has return experience, but didn't play on coverages ... medicals will be important after multiple surgeries to repair torn cartilage in his knee (2019 offseason); missed three games as a senior because of a hamstring injury ... all 52 career games came vs. FCS competition.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at North Dakota State, Watson was an outside receiver in offensive coordinator Tyler Roehl's run-heavy scheme. A late bloomer who fell through the recruiting cracks, he developed into one of the best deep threats in the FCS (20.4 yards per reception during his career) with four touchdowns of at least 65 yards in 2021. With his smooth acceleration, Watson displays vertical tempo as a route runner and is quarterback-friendly with the way he works back to the ball and expands his catch radius. He never faced an FBS opponent while at NDSU and will see a sizable jump in speed and physicality when facing NFL competition. Overall, Watson is unpolished as a route runner and must improve his consistency at the catch point, but he is an intriguing size/speed athlete with the explosiveness to win vertically. He projects as a WR4 as a rookie with WR2 upside and offers kick-return experience.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 61 overall)

11. JOHN METCHIE III | Alabama 5112 | 187 lbs. | JR. Brampton, Canada (St. James) 7/18/2000 (age 21.78) #8

BACKGROUND: John Metchie III, who is one of five boys, was born in Taiwan to his Taiwanese mother (Joyce) and Nigerian father (John). Shortly after he was born, his family moved to the capital city of Accra in the West African country of Ghana for six years before moving to Brampton in Ontario, Canada. Metchie, who also played lacrosse and soccer growing up, didn't start playing football until middle school, when he joined the Brampton Bulldogs. Hoping for better opportunities academically and athletically, he left his family and moved to the United States at age 14, enrolling at St. James School in Hagerstown, Md., for high school. A four-year letterman and starting wide receiver, Metchie posted 132 catches for 2,506 yards and 26 touchdown grabs, adding 825 rushing yards, 11 rushing touchdowns and five return touchdowns. He graduated from St. James at age 17 and attended The Peddie School (Hightstown, N.J.) for one final prep year.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Metchie was the No. 40 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of New Jersey. He received more than 20 scholarship offers from top-level programs like Georgia, Michigan and Notre Dame. But Metchie was sold on Alabama's demanding, no-nonsense regiment and committed to the Crimson Tide over Penn State. The Alabama coaches supported his extra year at the prep level. In a different country than his family, he was unable to see them in person for two years during the pandemic. Metchie elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5110	189	30 1/2	9 1/4	74 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout — left knee)

STRENGTHS: Athletic, detail-oriented route runner ... transitions weight well to shake free of coverage with little wasted motion in his breaks ... expansive release package to evade press, and establishes initial leverage ... quick to dissect coverage and cleverly adjusts his throttle to set up defenders ... tracks the ball extremely well, and consistently hand-catches outside his frame ... catch-point focus appears to increase in high-traffic areas ... continually works to get uncovered, and the work he puts in to create chemistry with his quarterbacks is obvious ... competitive after the catch and more slippery than expected ... graded very well as a blocker, and takes pride in his production without the ball ... already carries himself like a professional and out-works everyone (head coach Nick Saban: "This guy is the epitome of what you look for in a wide receiver. He is tough. He plays hurt. He plays physical. He gets open. He makes catches. He makes plays. He never complains.") ... plays across the formation, and is comfortable inside or outside ... excellent production the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Average-sized target ... will look to run before securing, leading to occasional concentration drops ... room to tighten up his stem skills to be more sudden with his footwork ... can do a better job stacking cornerbacks once he turns on the jets ... had two receptions of 50-plus yards in his first game in the starting lineup in September 2020, but none in his next 196 targets ... below-average touchdown rate, averaging a touchdown every 10.3 receptions in college ... medical process will be important after suffering a torn ACL in his left knee (December 2021) in the SEC Championship Game, which sidelined him for the draft process; played through ankle and shin injuries in 2020 and required separate surgeries on both after the season; was diagnosed with an enlarged heart in high school.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Alabama, Metchie was the X receiver in offensive coordinator Bill O'Brien's scheme, lining up both outside and in the slot. He became a starter for the Tide when Jaylen Waddle went down with his ankle injury in the fifth game of the 2020 season and flourished catching the ball from Mac Jones and Bryce Young the past two seasons. Metchie, who has a worldly background and lived on three different continents before his seventh birthday, adopted a fierce work ethic and devotion to his craft, which is evident on film. He has outstanding body control and adjustment skills, although he is guilty of the occasional focus drop (had more career drops than TD catches). Overall, Metchie has only average size and speed, but he is a seasoned route runner who understands how to manipulate coverage and be a quarterback's best friend. As long as he makes a full recovery from his ACL tear, he can be a quality No. 2 receiver in the NFL.

12. ALEC PIERCE | Cincinnati 6031 | 211 lbs. | SR. Glen Ellyn, Ill. (Glenbard West) 5/2/2000 (age 21.99) #12

BACKGROUND: Alec Pierce, who is one of three brothers, grew up in the Chicago suburbs and was a standout track athlete in middle school. He attended Glenbard West High (25 miles from downtown Chicago), where he was a four-sport letterman but a late bloomer on the football field. A two-way player at safety and wide receiver, Pierce hit a growth spurt and made varsity as a junior, where he had 10 catches for 420 yards (42.0 average) in Glenbard West's run-focused offense. As a senior, he was named the conference's MVP with 25 receptions for 372 yards and five touchdowns, along with four interceptions and three sacks on defense. He earned 2017 All-State and All-County honors. Pierce, who also played basketball, helped lead the volleyball team to a state championship his junior season. Looking for a change, he joined the track team as a senior and helped set school records in the 4x100 (42.16) and 4x200 (1:27.53) relays. Pierce set personal bests in the 100 meters (11.20), long jump (21'2) and triple jump (45'11.75).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Pierce was the No. 174 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 25 recruit in the state of Illinois. With only 35 catches in high school, he was widely overlooked as a recruit, with mostly MAC and FCS offers. Upon the recommendation by Cincinnati commit Ben Bryant (a quarterback at a rival high school), the Bearcats took a look at the 190-pound Pierce and offered him a scholarship midway through his senior year. His father (Greg) played football at Northwestern, and his mother (Stephanie) played volleyball at Northwestern. His older brother (Justin) was an All-CAA basketball player at William & Mary (2016-19) before he transferred to North Carolina (2019-20) and now plays professionally in Europe. His younger brother (Caden) is a senior at Glenbard West and recently committed to play basketball at Princeton. Pierce graduated with his degree in mechanical engineering (December 2021), completing the five-year program in three and a half years. Pierce accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6027	208	32 7/8	9 1/8	79	-	-	-	-	-	4.20	-	- (couldn't finish a clean 3-cone in five tries)

STRENGTHS: Tall, angular frame ... swift strider, and accelerates quickly to stack corners vertically ... accomplished prep high jumper and volleyball player with above-average high-pointing and leaping skills ... tracks the football naturally downfield ... the game appears to slow down for him at the catch point, allowing him to make graceful adjustments on the ball ... gives his quarterback a large target thanks to his size and strong hands to finish over defensive backs ... sharp footwork in his releases to slip past the jam ... played extensively as a gunner on special teams his first two years (seven tackles), and coaches experimented with him at linebacker as a freshman ... made Bruce Feldman's annual Freak List and broke Cincinnati's skill-position record with a 675-pound deadlift ... became fifth player in school history to earn CoSIDA First Team Academic All-American honors ... named a 2021 team captain ... shows the same competitive fire as both a receiver and blocker ... ranks No. 9 in school history in receiving yards (1,851).

WEAKNESSES: Ran a basic route tree in college ... has worked hard to add good weight but has a lean frame and might be near tapped out ... average play strength and will have trouble vs. physical cornerbacks ... will use his length too liberally at times when attempting to separate at the top of routes ... average elusiveness, and didn't have much YAC on film ... long strider, and will be slow to gather and separate in small spaces ... underwent an arthroscopic procedure on his knee (September 2020) and missed four games; injured left shoulder (October 2020) and required a brace ... only five 100-yard receiving games in 30 career starts.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Cincinnati, Pierce was an outside receiver in former offensive coordinator Mike Denbrock's spread RPO offense. His development was a slow burn the first three years, including an injury-riddled 2020 season, but he blossomed as Desmond Ridder's No. 1 option in the passing game as a senior and led the team in receiving (72.5 percent of his catches the past two seasons resulted in a first down). Pierce is physical to the football, and his heightened focus is the same at the catch point whether he is wide open or triple-covered. Although he is still honing his route running and separation skills, he is a long, limber athlete who has the ball skills to consistently win in the air. Overall, Pierce is still adding branches to his route tree, but he is a pass catching weapon who is at his best vertically with his springy athleticism and ball-tracking skills. He can be a down-the-road starter.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 89 overall)

13. DAVID BELL | Purdue 6007 | 212 lbs. | JR. Indianapolis, Ind. (Warren Central) 12/14/2000 (age 21.37) #3

BACKGROUND: David Bell was born and raised in east Indianapolis and attended Warren Central High (alma mater of former NFL quarterback Jeff George), where he starred in both basketball and football. He was a four-year varsity player at wide receiver and combined for 240 receptions for 4,467 receiving yards and 55 touchdowns. As a senior, Bell led Warren Central to a 14-0 record and the 2018 Class 6A state championship, finishing his final season with 85 catches for 1,542 yards and 22 touchdowns. As a junior, he led the Warren Central basketball team to an undefeated 2017-18 season and the 4A state championship. Bell was named the 2018 Gatorade State Player of the Year and was a U.S. Army All-American.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Bell was the No. 19 wide receiver in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Indiana (behind George Karlaftis). He received interest from numerous national programs and whittled his options to Indiana, Iowa, Ohio State, Penn State and Purdue. Bell committed to Purdue because of proximity so that his family, specifically his disabled grandmother (Karen Butler), could see him play. He elected to skip his senior season and the bowl game to declare for the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with the body control and coordination of a former basketball player ... strong hands, and drops are infrequent ... tracks and adjusts to the ball in flight to simplify difficult targets ... clears the jam with quick feet and hand swipes ... uses tempo and body fakes mid-route to attack defender's leverage ... swift strider, and stays on the same route plane vertically ... has a physical play demeanor, and forces defenders to use proper tackling mechanics to get him on the ground ... coaches say he consistently plays through minor injuries (head coach Jeff Brohm: "I think he's a phenomenal receiver and an even better person.") ... highly productive, and finished his three-year career fourth in school history in receptions (232), fifth in receiving yards (2,935), fifth in receiving touchdowns (21) ... he set the Purdue record with 17 100-yard receiving performances in 29 career games.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks explosive top gear to shake defenders at the top of his routes ... average long speed and needs a few steps to get going ... long press corners can slow him off the line ... change-of-direction skills are average ... physical and balanced with the ball in his hands, but not shifty ... inconsistent vision and creativity after the catch ... averaged less than 13.0 yards per catch for his career ... willing, get-in-the-way blocker, but doesn't control the point of attack, and his blocking isn't a strength ... missed one game as a junior because of concussion protocol (September 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Purdue, Bell was the X receiver in head coach Jeff Brohm's spread scheme, lining up both inside and outside. In his three seasons in West Lafayette, the Indianapolis native led the team in receiving each season and finished his career with 101.2 receiving yards per game (No. 1 among all active FBS players in 2021). Bell is a smooth, savvy pass catcher with dependable ball skills (4.7 percent career drop rate) and flashes Michael Pittman-like ability at times. He is efficient in and out of his routes, but his ability to uncover is based more on route subtleties and not route suddenness. Overall, Bell doesn't have ideal speed or explosive traits by NFL standards, but he is a productive ball-winner with the body control and toughness that translate to the pro game. He projects as a high-floor, low-ceiling NFL starter.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 95 overall)

14. WAN'DALE ROBINSON | Kentucky 5080 | 178 lbs. | JR. Frankfort, Ky. (Western Hills) 1/5/2001 (age 21.31) #1

BACKGROUND: Wan'Dale Robinson, who has a younger sister, was born and raised in Frankfort, Ky., (about 25 miles west of Lexington) and started playing football at the youth level. He attended Western Hills High and became one of the most productive players in school history. After serving as a backup as a freshman on varsity, Robinson rushed for 2,014 yards and 28 touchdowns as a sophomore, adding 28 receptions for 434 yards and three touchdowns. As a junior, he rushed for 2,330 yards and 33 touchdowns and caught 25 passes for 343 yards and six touchdowns. Robinson earned Kentucky's Mr. Football and the Gatorade Kentucky Player of the Year as a senior in 2018. He finished his final season with 1,973 rushing yards, 725 receiving yards and 47 total touchdowns (30 rushing, 11 receiving, two punt returns, two touchdown passes, one interception and one fumble recovery). On defense, Robinson accounted for 113 tackles, 12.0 tackles for loss, and three interceptions as a senior. He finished his high school career with 8,582 scrimmage yards (6,795 rushing and 1,787 receiving) and 118 offensive touchdowns, and his 781 career points rank No. 2 in Kentucky history. Robinson also lettered in track as a junior and participated in relays.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Robinson was the No. 1 all-purpose back in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 87 overall) and the top recruit in the state of Kentucky. He picked up offers from national powers like Alabama, Ohio State and Michigan, but his final choice came down to nearby Kentucky and Nebraska. He initially announced Kentucky as his choice midway through his senior year before flipping to Nebraska a month later. After two seasons with the Cornhuskers, Robinson left the program and transferred to Kentucky, citing his frustration with the Nebraska offense and Kentucky's commitment to throwing the football. His father (Dale) played football at Western Kentucky and now trains athletes at his gym in Frankfort. Robinson elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Versatile weapon with dynamic open-field athleticism ... instinctive field vision to skirt tacklers and weave through the defense ... tough to tackle one-on-one thanks to lateral agility and balance ... uses speed releases to slip the jam and quickly enter his routes ... catches the ball cleanly in stride without gearing down ... able to adjust and make diving grabs when necessary ... in his element on swing/flare routes ... was also used as a running back, averaging 4.9 yards per carry (141/691/4) ... toughness (with or without the ball) definitely belongs in the strengths column, and head coach Mark Stoops refers to him as the "ultimate competitor" ... productive junior season as one of only three FBS players to average 8.0 catches or better per game.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized with below-average height, weight, length and growth potential ... smaller target for his quarterback ... can make guys miss, but doesn't have the run strength to consistently break tackles ... lacks elite speed, and can be caught from behind ... needs to improve the pacing and setup of his routes ... ho-hum in contested situations ... physical cornerbacks can slow him and disrupt his timing ... worked primarily out of the slot, and unproven outside the numbers ... minimal punt-return experience, averaging just 2.1 yards per return (7/15/0).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Kentucky, Robinson worked primarily out of the slot in offensive coordinator Liam Coen's scheme (a discipline of Sean McVay). After two mediocre seasons with Nebraska, he transferred back home for the 2021 season and had the most prolific receiving season in Kentucky history, setting school records for catches (104), receiving yards (1,334) and 100-yard receiving games (six). Robinson is hyper-quick and slippery to create pockets of separation out of his breaks and elude pursuit after the catch. He has excellent field awareness with the ball in his hands, but his routes are a little rough, and he has more career drops (11) than receiving touchdowns (10). Overall, Robinson is undersized and quicker than fast, but he is a catch-and-go creator with outstanding vision and athleticism in the open field. He has potential to be a starting NFL slot receiver and return man.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

15. CALVIN AUSTIN III | Memphis 5076 | 170 lbs. | rSR. Memphis, Tenn. (Harding) 3/24/1999 (age 23.09) #4

BACKGROUND: Calvin Austin III was born and raised in Memphis and started playing football and running track in elementary school. He attended Harding Academy, where he made varsity in track as a freshman and varsity football as a sophomore. Austin played wide receiver, defensive back and as a returner on special teams and helped lead Harding to three consecutive Division II state playoff appearances. After 482 receiving yards as a sophomore, he had his best season as a junior with 43 catches for 871 yards and 14 touchdowns, adding two rushing touchdowns to earn First Team All-State honors. As a senior, Austin averaged 153.0 all-purpose yards per game and added three interceptions on defense. He finished his prep career with 49 total touchdowns (24 receiving, 8 rushing, 6 punt returns, 5 kick returns, 4 interception returns, 2 fumble returns) and 3,492 all-purpose yards. Austin was even more accomplished in track, winning nine state championships and setting five school records. He set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.55), 200 meters (21.25) and 400 meters (48.35).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Austin was the No. 88 athlete in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 32 recruit in the state of Tennessee. His dream was to be a hometown hero and play for Memphis (also the university his father attended), but the football coaches didn't offer a scholarship. The Memphis track and field coaches offered him a scholarship, but Austin's plan was to run track and play football wherever he went. With the Bear Bryant rule in effect (if you play football, you cannot hold a scholarship in another sport), he joined the Memphis football team as a preferred walk-on and had to pay his way. After a standout performance vs. Houston midway through the 2019 season, Austin was officially put on scholarship. He was a part of the Memphis track team for two years and mostly ran relays (4x100, 4x400). His older sister (Cami) was a gymnast at Division III Centenary (La.). Austin graduated with his degree in political science (December 2020). Austin skipped the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	5076	170	29 1/2	9	73	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	11 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Track athlete with above-average straight-line speed ... uses early hesitation to win over the top (five receptions of 50-plus yards in 2021) ... quick, controlled feet to collect himself at the top of routes ... has a feel for leveraging routes and finding open coverage zones ... dependable hands, and adjusts his body to scoop or dive when needed ... excellent tracking skills to adjust his route path and go get it ... quick to snatch, put the ball away, and reset his vision ... short but not slight, and runs with balance to fend off physical defenders ... averaged 11.1 yards per punt return with a pair of touchdowns (29/323/2) ... was a member of the Memphis track team for two years and finished seventh in the 60 meters (6.84) at the 2020 AAC Track & Field Championships ... tough guy, and played through a painful ankle injury most of his senior year ... No. 1 in the AAC in 2021 with 95.8 receiving yards per game.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized and doesn't have the body type to get much bigger ... lack of length hinders him in tight coverage, leading to a low success rate in contested situations ... short arms also show with cornerbacks escaping his block attempts ... the fight is usually over when press corners get their hands on him at the line ... benefited from a lot of quick game (hitches, screens, etc.) in Memphis' offense and must continue to expand route tree ... flashes shifty skills after the catch, but struggled to consistently stack moves ... had three muffed punts the past two seasons.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Memphis, Austin was primarily an outside receiver in former offensive coordinator Kevin Johns' scheme, but also lined up in the slot and the backfield. A former walk-on and member of the Memphis track team, he posted back-to-back 1,000-yard receiving seasons and ranks top-five in program history in career receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns. My favorite part of his game is how quickly he goes from pass catcher to runner — it's seamless for him, and that immediate explosion puts added stress on coverage pursuit. For a player with his measurements and speed, I expected more missed tackles after the catch. Overall, Austin's size will always be an issue, but his ball skills and athleticism with and without the football give him a chance to be a WR3 or WR4 in an NFL offense. His punt-return skills will help him stick on an NFL roster.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

KHALIL SHAKIR | Boise State

5117 | 196 lbs. | SR.

Murrieta, Calif. (Vista Murrieta)

BACKGROUND: Khalil (kuh-LEEL) Shakir (shuh-KEER), who is one of four children, was born in Virginia and made several moves growing up as his father (Attiyah) was a master sergeant in the Marines. After spending time in Hawaii and Japan, the family moved back to the states when Shakir was in sixth grade and settled in Southern California. His favorite sport growing up was soccer, but he fell in love with football in junior high. He attended Vista Murrieta High, where he was called up to varsity action as a freshman. He became a starting wide receiver as a sophomore and accounted for 46 catches for 914 yards and 10 receiving touchdowns in 2015. As a junior, Shakir became more of an all-purpose weapon and averaged 7.1 yards per carry with six rushing scores, adding a pair of receiving touchdowns and seeing time on defense as a safety. He had his most productive season as a senior with 149.4 all-purpose yards per game. Shakir finished the 2017 season with 906 rushing yards (8.9 yards per carry), 243 receiving yards (15.5 yards per reception) and nine total touchdowns to earn All-District honors. He finished his prep career with more than 4,500 all-purpose yards.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Shakir was the No. 22 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 44 recruit in the state of California. He started to receive scholarship offers after his sophomore season and finished with several Pac-12 offers, including Colorado, UCLA and Washington State. Shakir committed to Boise State midway through his senior season. His older brother (Attiyyah Jr.) ran track at Coker University (2015-17). His older sister (Rahni) ran track at Livingstone College (2014). His younger brother (Tyreese) is a rising sophomore defensive back at FCS-level Portland State. Shakir became engaged to his fiancé (Salyer) in March 2022. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Polished route runner ... uses hesitation and timing to lull defenders and shake loose at the top of routes ... doesn't give away his route path too early ... natural hands-catcher and snatches well in stride ... can twist his body to make midair adjustments ... accounted for a first down or touchdown on 75.3 percent of receptions ... quick first step to escape press or threaten defenders after the catch ... much tougher than he looks, and can take hits over the middle while finishing catches ... one of two permanent team captains in 2021, and coaches call him "selfless" and a "true" team guy ... averaged 8.0 yards per punt return (23/184/0) and 23.8 yards per kick return (8/190/0) ... also had 71 carries and five pass attempts over his career ... finished his career No. 5 in school history in catches (208) and No. 4 in receiving yards (2,878).

WEAKNESSES: Quicker-than-fast, and lacks ideal long speed (doesn't consistently play up to his timed speed) ... flashes some elusiveness, but missed tackles were infrequent on film ... shorter arms, and needs to add more bulk to his frame ... aggressive NFL cornerbacks will be able to out-muscle him mid-route ... will attempt to trap the ball or run before securing it, leading to easy drops ... has the same number of career drops (20) as touchdown catches (20) ... half-hearted blocker on screens and in the run game.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Boise State, Shakir was the H receiver in offensive coordinator Tim Plough's offense, lining up primarily in the slot. One of the most prolific receivers in school history, he averaged 121.5 all-purpose yards during his junior and senior seasons, which was No. 1 in the Mountain West Conference over that span. While he isn't a true burner, Shakir skillfully uses gear control to set up defenders and create pockets of separation with his short-area quickness. He has terrific body control, which is evident in his routes, at the catch point and as a ball carrier. Overall, Shakir has average triangle numbers, but he is a crafty route runner with excellent hand-eye coordination and adjustment skills. He projects best in the slot and can handle return responsibilities.

17. DANNY GRAY | SMU 5117 | 186 lbs. | SR. Dallas, Texas (James Madison) 4/1/1999 (age 23.08) #5

BACKGROUND: Danny Gray was born in Ruston, La., and grew up in Lancaster, Texas, a southern suburb of Dallas. He attended James Madison High in South Dallas, where he was a four-year letterman and played on both sides of the ball at wide receiver and cornerback. As a junior, Gray was named District MVP and took home All-State honors with 34 catches for 699 yards (20.6 average) and 13 touchdowns. He also lettered in basketball and track. As a senior, Gray won the Texas 3A State Championship in the 100 meters (10.70) and 4x100 relay (41.61) and set a personal best in the 100 meters (10.59) at regionals.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Gray was the No. 86 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 73 recruit in the state of Texas. He received offers from Kansas, North Texas and UTSA before committing to Missouri the summer before his senior year. Gray signed with the Tigers during the early signing period but didn't qualify academically and couldn't join the team. He signed with Blinn Community College and posted 15 catches for 409 yards and six touchdowns as a freshman. Gray was the team's leading receiver as a sophomore with 54 catches for 877 yards and eight touchdowns to earn 2019 First Team All-Conference honors. A three-star JUCO recruit, he was the No. 13 overall recruit and the No. 3 wide receiver. Gray received offers from several high-profile schools like Auburn, Florida State, Ole Miss and Tennessee. He originally committed to TCU before flipping to his hometown SMU for his final two seasons of eligibility. Gray accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding athletic traits ... has the speed to eat up cushion and stack corners vertically (22.01 mph during Senior Bowl) ... displays natural tracking skills downfield and times his attack well to make grabs over his shoulder or in front of defenders ... explosive and instinctive after the catch with multiple gears to erase pursuit angles ... shows stem twitch as a route runner to sink his weight and give the quarterback a target ... not a one-trick pony, and can attack the defense at various depths ... willing and ready as a blocker ... led SMU in receiving yards and receiving touchdowns as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Slender frame and lacks ideal build ... tracks the football well to be in position, but an inconsistent finisher with too many throws off his hands ... had a combined 10 drops the past two seasons, including seven in 2021 ... needs to continue developing play strength ... marginal contact balance, and doesn't break many tackles ... physicality is not his weapon of choice ... unproven vs. a steady diet of press coverage ... unrefined making coverage reads to properly set up corners ... minimal experience on special teams at SMU ... lack of size leads to durability questions; missed multiple games each of his two seasons at SMU.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at SMU, Gray was an inside and outside wide receiver in former offensive coordinator Garrett Riley's version of the Air Raid scheme. After two years at the JUCO level, he showed off his big-play ability with the Mustangs the past two seasons, leading the team in receiving yards and receiving touchdowns in 2021. A light-footed athlete, Gray can fly before and after the catch, and his targets on tape were evenly distributed to every level of the field. He does a great job with his over-the-shoulder tracking, but his lackluster finishing skills will draw groans from the quarterback and fans. Overall, Gray requires more polish with his routes and drops, but with his field speed and playmaking potential, he is just scratching the surface of his ability. He has skills to develop into a weapon as a team's WR3.

18. KYLE PHILIPS | UCLA 5112 | 189 lbs. | rJR. San Marcos, Calif. (San Marcos) 6/17/1999 (age 22.86) #2

BACKGROUND: Kyle Philips, who has an older sister, grew up north of San Diego and attended San Marcos High, where he was a four-year varsity letterman at both cornerback and wide receiver. As a sophomore, he caught 54 passes for 757 yards and seven touchdowns. Philips led the team as a junior with 65 receptions for 909 yards and 11 touchdowns, adding a punt-return touchdown. As a senior, he was among the most productive receivers in the region, posting 1,318 receiving yards with 59 catches and 10 touchdowns, adding two interceptions and a punt-return touchdown. Philips also lettered in track, with a personal-best 11.48 in the 100 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Philips was the No. 48 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 38 recruit in the state of California. He fielded offers from Arizona State, Michigan, Northwestern and Oregon before committing to UCLA, enrolling in January 2018. Philips graduated with his degree in political science from UCLA. He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Athletic footwork to win at the line of scrimmage and at the top of routes ... creates pockets of separation to operate ... has the short-area shake to cross the defender's face and attack the middle of the field ... natural body control to flip his hips and adjust to off-target throws ... trained eyes after the catch to create and maximize his touches ... deceiving body strength to wriggle out of the grasp after the catch ... checks boxes for toughness and competitive nature ... impressive punt-return skills, and averaged 19.8 yards per return in his career with a pair of touchdowns (25/496/2) ... only Pac-12 player with double-digit touchdown catches in 2021 ... led team in receptions each of the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized frame with below-average bulk and length ... smaller catch radius lowers quarterback's margin of error ... small hands, and will look to run before securing, leading to focus drops ... below average in contested situations, and doesn't play bigger than he is on paper ... sudden feet, but often takes too many steps, creating extra motion in his breaks ... plays quick, but his top-end speed is average ... can be removed from his route path by subtle contact ... unproven as a deep-ball tracker (only three of his catches in 2021 came when he was targeted 20-plus yards downfield) ... slot-only in college.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at UCLA, Philips lined up exclusively in the slot in head coach Chip Kelly's offense. The first Bruins pass catcher to lead the team in catches three consecutive years in almost two decades, he finished fourth in UCLA history with 163 career receptions. With his shifty feet and throttle control, Philips can give defenders the slip and intuitively create passing windows for his quarterback. However, he has a small catch radius, and his effectiveness drops the further downfield he goes (70 percent of his 2021 catches came on targets within 10 yards of the line of scrimmage). Overall, Philips is role-specific as an undersized, quicker-than-fast, slot-only target, but he has the ready-made skills to be productive in that role in the NFL. His punt-return ability only boosts his draft grade.

19. JUSTYN ROSS | Clemson 6035 | 205 lbs. | rJR. Phenix City, Ala. (Central) 12/15/1999 (age 22.37) #8

BACKGROUND: Justyn Ross was born and raised in Phenix City, Ala., (near the Alabama-Georgia border) by his single mother (and by his grandmother while his mother was deployed). He attended Central High, where he lettered in basketball and football, becoming the first freshman in head coach Jamey DuBose's 25-year stint to earn a spot on varsity. Ross finished his junior season with 38 catches for 663 yards and eight touchdowns. As a senior, he led Central to a 12-1 record with 37 receptions for 730 yards and 13 touchdowns, adding a pair of punt-return touchdowns. Ross received First Team All-State honors in 2017 and was a finalist for Alabama's Mr. Football.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ross was the No. 7 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 45 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Alabama. He started receiving SEC scholarship offers as a freshman in high school and eventually narrowed down his final list to Alabama, Auburn and Clemson. Ross forged a close bond with head coach Dabo Swinney and signed with the Tigers, which marked the first time the highest-ranked recruit from the state of Alabama signed with a school other than Alabama or Auburn since 2003. His mother (Charay Franklin) had him when she was 16 and spent two tours in the Navy (2001-05) before joining the Alabama National Guard, where she has been deployed to Afghanistan (twice) and Kuwait. After back-to-back seasons affected by injury, Ross elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Tall, limber athlete with a remarkable catch radius ... above-average high-pointer, and uses his arms to deftly fend off competition ... above-average hand-eye coordination to make midair adjustments with ease ... moves like a smaller athlete ... can control his gears to shake a defender after the catch or force overpursuit ... fluid strider to pace his routes and keep cornerbacks off balance ... shows sink at the top of his routes ... has the footwork to work the sideline ... above-average compete skills any time he steps on the field, and some of his best tape came vs. the top opponents on the schedule ... led the team in receptions or receiving yards each of his three seasons on the field.

WEAKNESSES: Lean features, and has room to continue getting stronger ... not a sudden mover, and his speed is more build-up than instant ... needs to add more branches to his route tree ... benefited from a high volume of isolation routes designed to create mismatches in coverage ... might face early struggles vs. physical press-man corners ... almost all of his impressive YAC plays are from his freshman tape ... receiving and scoring production declined each season ... uncertain medicals are a red flag: missed the 2020 season because of a bulging disc and congenital fusion condition in his neck and spine (discovered when he felt a tingling sensation after taking a hit during spring practice in March 2020), requiring surgery in June 2020; missed the final three games of his junior season because of a stress fracture in his left foot that required surgery (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Clemson, Ross was an inside and outside receiver in former offensive coordinator Tony Elliott’s scheme. He looked like a future first-round pick after his freshman season, including a remarkable performance in the Tigers’ 2018 national title run with a combined 12 catches for 301 yards and three touchdowns in the two playoff wins (vs. Notre Dame and Alabama). However, Ross’ career trajectory took a detour the past two seasons because of concerning injuries (spinal surgery in 2020 and foot surgery in 2021). He isn’t an elite speed or burst player on tape, and his testing numbers confirmed that. But he can vary his route speed to keep defenders on his hip and displays the length, body control and focus to snare outside his frame. Overall, Ross’ NFL evaluation hinges on his medicals, but he is a long, limber athlete with maybe the largest catch radius of any receiver in the draft class. He is a risky prospect and tough projection because there is no guarantee he returns to pre-injury form.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

20. BO MELTON | Rutgers

5110 | 189 lbs. | rSR.

Mays Landing, N.J. (Cedar Creek)

#18

BACKGROUND: Miles “Bo” Melton, who is the middle child of three boys, grew up in Mays Landing, N.J., (about 20 miles from Atlantic City). He attended Cedar Creek High in Egg Harbor, where he was a multisport athlete and played offense and defense for the football team. After starting as a sophomore, Melton led Cedar Creek to the 2015 South Jersey championship as a running back, wide receiver and defensive back. He earned First Team All-State honors as a junior with 31 catches for 676 yards and 11 touchdowns, adding 742 rushing yards and 13 rushing scores. As a senior, Melton posted 51 catches for 766 yards and nine touchdowns with 451 rushing yards and seven rushing touchdowns to again earn First Team All-State honors. He also lettered in basketball and track, winning league titles in the 100 meters (10.70) and 200 meters (21.71) as a senior.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Melton was the No. 37 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 5 recruit in the state of New Jersey. He put together an impressive dance card as a recruit, receiving scholarship offers from national programs like Michigan, Ohio State, Oregon and Penn State. But Melton is a legacy at Rutgers and was drawn to stay in-state, committing to former head coach Chris Ash and the Scarlet Knights. His parents met at Rutgers: His father (Gary Sr.) played wide receiver (1987-91), and his mother (Vicky) played basketball (1989-93), leading the team to the 1993 conference championship. Bo’s older brother (Gary Jr.) played defensive back at FCS-level Delaware State (2013-16). His younger brother (Max) is a rising junior cornerback at Rutgers. Melton took advantage of the NCAA’s extra year of eligibility and returned to Rutgers for a fifth season in 2021. He opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	5107	190	31 1/8	8 5/8	76 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.10	6.81	18 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Has the top-end speed to stretch the field vertically ... open-field brake-and-balance skills exploit holes in coverage ... gets defenders widened or turned with his body/head fakes ... uses slide-and-burst footwork to release and win at the line of scrimmage ... savvily shifts gears to be a threat after the catch ... competitive toughness shows with confidence to work heavily patrolled areas ... has experience (in high school and college) as a running back, and can be productive from anywhere in the formation ... two-year team captain, and will be an asset in an NFL locker room ... has some return experience, averaging 24.4 yards on kickoff returns and 16.0 yards on punt returns ... finished career No. 6 in school history in career catches (164) despite spotty quarterback play.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary height, build and length ... physical defenders won’t beat him up, but they can disrupt the timing of his route depth ... doesn’t have the play strength to out-physical NFL defenders ... needs to mix up route tempo to keep defenders guessing ... struggled to finish catches on tape when defensive backs crowded his air space ... more drops during his career than you want to see ... plays tough in traffic, but his focus can be inconsistent ... fumbled twice in 2021 ... missed one game as a senior because of a right shoulder injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Rutgers, Melton was an outside wide receiver in offensive coordinator Sean Gleeson’s balanced scheme. Despite never reaching 650 receiving yards in a season, he led the Scarlet Knights in receiving three consecutive years and became the 10th player in school history to reach 2,000 receiving yards. With his body control and multiple gears, Melton is skilled at forcing defenders off-balance in coverage, creating opportunities for himself at the stem. There is a level of craftiness to his game with and without the football, but his size, play strength and contested-catch skills all fall in the average category. Overall, Melton’s production and performance were impeded to a degree because of his college offense, but he checks boxes for speed, savvy and competitive toughness, which should translate well to the next level.

21. KEVIN AUSTIN JR. | Notre Dame 6023 | 200 lbs. | rJR. Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. (North Broward) 3/30/2000 (age 22.08) #4

BACKGROUND: Kevin Austin Jr. grew up in South Florida and attended North Broward Prep in Coconut Creek, Fla. He was a four-year letterman on offense (wide receiver) and defense (defensive back). As a sophomore, Austin led the team with 43 catches for 713 yards and 12 touchdowns, adding an interception on defense. He led the conference in receiving as a junior with 41 catches for 1,021 receiving yards and 21 total touchdowns (13 receiving, six rushing, one fumble return, one kickoff return). As a senior, Austin earned First Team All-District honors with 35 receptions for 761 yards and 11 touchdowns, setting a Broward County single-game record for receiving yards (329). He also lettered in track and set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.98), 200 meters (21.93), discus (139'1.75), and high jump (5'4).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Austin was the No. 14 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 82 overall) and the No. 19 recruit in the state of Florida. He received 35 offers and whittled his final list to Duke, Miami, Notre Dame and Tennessee, signing with the Irish. He was the second-highest ranked recruit in Notre Dame's 2018 class. Austin earned his undergraduate degree (winter 2022). He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6026	209	33 1/8	9 1/4	79 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers; no bench)

STRENGTHS: Muscular body type with size and definition ... head-turning athletic testing numbers ... has build-up momentum to power through routes ... functional play strength to get off press or win body position mid-route ... able to stack and track in order to win on deep balls (three catches of 50-plus yards in 2021) ... smooth body adjustments to reach back and pull in throws ... impressive short-area burst to help create room to work at the top of routes ... remarkable first-down rate in college ... an above-average blocker with the skills to be even better ... worked back from several roadblocks earlier in his career to have a productive 2021 season.

WEAKNESSES: Only one season of production and steady playing time ... drops too many easy ones when he tries to snatch and put it away ... plays up to his size at the catch point but not after the catch, with mediocre tackle-breaking or YAC skills on tape ... routes and releases lack nuance ... didn't play on special teams coverages in college ... served full-season suspension in 2019 (repeated team violations), and off-field decision-making has been questioned by NFL teams (NFL scout: "Coaches say he's a bright kid, but maturity has been an issue since his freshman year.") ... required two surgeries on his left foot in a three-month span and was sidelined most of 2020: suffered a fractured fifth metatarsal (July 2020) and required surgery; rushed back and broke his foot again (October 2020) and required another surgery.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Notre Dame, Austin lined up primarily outside in offensive coordinator Tommy Rees' scheme, seeing some snaps in the slot. Highly recruited out of South Florida, his career was sidetracked by suspension and injuries, but his talent was evident on 2021 tape, as he led the Irish in receiving. A well-built athlete, Austin was a chain-moving machine when he was on the field, with 81.5 percent of his career catches resulting in a first down or touchdown. He is a physical route runner and gives his quarterback a good-sized catch radius, but he will need to pay closer attention to the details of the position to take the next step in his development. Overall, Austin is stamped with a buyer-beware label from scouts because of his injuries and past mistakes, but he is a talented pass catcher with outstanding testing athleticism who has yet to play his best football. At a certain point in the draft, his upside will be worth the risk.

GRADE: 5th Round

22. ERIK EZUKANMA | Texas Tech 6017 | 209 lbs. | rJR. Fort Worth, Texas (Timber Creek) 1/25/2000 (age 22.26) #13

BACKGROUND: Chukwuerika "Erik" Ezukanma (E-zoo-comma), who is one of seven children, started playing football in elementary school. He attended Keller Timber Creek High, where he was a three-year letterman, breaking into the starting lineup as a sophomore receiver. Ezukanma had a breakout junior season with 88 catches for 1,494 yards and 24 total touchdowns, leading Timber Creek to its first winning season and second playoff appearance. He earned 2016 District Offensive MVP and All-State honors and set a school single-game record with 14 catches for 272 yards. With his quarterback graduating (QB Cade Schrader signed with FCS-level Tarleton State), his stats took a slight dip as a senior, as he finished with 37 catches for 687 yards and nine touchdowns to earn U.S. Army All-American honors. Ezukanma finished prep career with 2,471 receiving yards and 32 touchdown grabs.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ezukanma was the No. 49 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 39 recruit in the state of Texas. He received offers from several SEC programs (Arkansas, Missouri, Ole Miss, Texas A&M), but he committed to Kliff Kingsbury and Texas Tech over SMU and Utah. Ezukanma was the highest-ranked recruit in the Red Raiders' 2018 class (the only four-star recruit). He elected to skip Texas Tech's 2021 bowl game and his senior season to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with excellent body control ... strong strider to get on top of corners while staying available to his quarterback ... plays strong to the football with long arms to track and high-point ... made key improvements on 50-50 balls, maintaining his focus in a crowd ... efficiently transitions from pass catcher to ball carrier ... flashed big-play potential with five receptions of 45-plus yards in 2021 ... toughness shows before and after the catch and as a stalk blocker ... steady locker room guy, and served as a team captain as a redshirt freshman ... consistent production each season.

WEAKNESSES: Linear route runner, and ran a basic route tree in college ... ordinary separation quickness, and will need time to develop better route setup and trickery to keep NFL corners honest ... guilty of excessive contact pre-catch to create separation ... can break tackles with run strength, but won't make NFL defenders miss in space ... has quickness to sidestep press, but will use excessive steps other times and will need to mature his release package ... missed one game in his final season because of concussion protocol (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas Tech, Ezukanma was the Z receiver in former offensive coordinator Sonny Cumbie's version of the Air Raid offense. His production was a tad feast or famine (seven games with less than 60 receiving yards in 2021), but he led the team in receiving yards each of the past three seasons despite catching passes from five different starting quarterbacks. Ezukanma is a big, athletic target with smooth change of direction for a player his size, making late adjustments to the football. While he is comfortable in contested situations, that is because he struggles to create a ton of separation. Overall, Ezukanma is a predictable route runner with only average speed, but he is a natural ball-tracker with toughness and talent down the field. He projects as a WR4/WR5 who could see opportunities and move up the depth chart in the right situation.

GRADE: 5th Round

23. TYQUAN THORNTON | Baylor 6023 | 181 lbs. | SR. Miami, Fla. (Booker T. Washington) 8/7/2000 (age 21.73) #9

BACKGROUND: Tyquan (tye-KWON) Thornton, who is one of five children, grew up in South Florida and attended Booker T. Washington High. After spending his freshman and sophomore seasons as a backup wide receiver, he became a starter for his final two seasons. Thornton finished his prep career with 1,133 receiving yards and 10 touchdowns, adding three rushing touchdowns and three passing touchdowns (he also saw time at quarterback). He was also a standout in track with personal bests in the 100 meters (10.50), 200 meters (21.07), and 400 meters (46.77).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Thornton was the No. 53 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 56 recruit in the state of Florida. After his breakout junior season, his first offer came from Baylor, and he committed in March 2017. Thornton collected several other offers from programs like Florida, Georgia, Miami and Tennessee, and he flipped to the Gators the summer prior to his senior year. However, he changed his mind again before signing day and signed with Matt Rhule and the Bears. LSU did not offer him in football, but Thornton received a scholarship from the Tigers to run track. He has a young son. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Long-striding athlete with track speed that translates to the football field ... confident hands-catcher away from his frame (only three drops on 98 targets in 2021) ... finishes catches through contact surprisingly well on tape (made major improvements in this area from previous years) ... has the leaping skills and length to expand catch radius and make grabs over defenders ... linear route runner with controlled footwork, which helps him create stride-length separation ... has toe-tapping skills along the boundary ... tougher than expected as a blocker ... one of only three Big 12 players with double-digit touchdown grabs in 2021 ... finished his career top-10 in school history in catches, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns.

WEAKNESSES: Rail thin with minimal bulk and the skinniest wrists in the draft (6 1/8 inches) ... tiny hands (8 1/4 inches) won't create much confidence when it comes to winning 50-50 balls in the NFL ... not much of a catch-and-go threat, and needs to do a better job putting himself in position for YAC opportunities ... won't break tackles and offers very little power as a ball carrier ... lack of play strength will be more evident vs. physical press corners ... routes are straightforward and lack deception ... doesn't offer much value on special teams ... slender frame creates durability concerns.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Baylor, Thornton was the X receiver in offensive coordinator Jeff Grimes' balanced scheme. After a listless junior year, he had the senior season he needed to be taken seriously as an NFL prospect, leading the team in receiving and finishing top-10 in school history in most receiving categories. Thornton has legit vertical speed (he had a full-ride scholarship to run track at LSU out of high school) to get overtop coverage and win down the field (seven receptions of 40-plus yards in 2021). He made key improvements as a senior in terms of finishing grabs through contact, but he can be taken out of commission early when press corners connect (smallest hands and skinniest wrists in the draft). Overall, Thornton will have a tougher time masking his lack of build or play strength vs. NFL competition, but his speed plays at any level, and his midair adjustment skills could be what keep him on an NFL roster.

24. MAKAI POLK | Mississippi State 6031 | 195 lbs. | rSO. Richmond, Calif. (El Cerrito) 8/4/2001 (age 20.73) #10

BACKGROUND: Makai (muh-KY) Polk, who has two younger brothers, was born in Berkeley, Calif., and grew up in the Bay Area. He started playing football at age 5 and kept playing through high school. Polk originally attended El Cerrito High (north of Oakland) for his freshman year before transferring to Susan Miller Dorsey High in Los Angeles for his next two seasons. He played primarily defensive back at Dorsey, posting 44 tackles as a sophomore and 52 tackles and two interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) as a junior. For his senior year, Polk transferred back up to El Cerrito, where he played both ways and led the team to the 2018 conference title. He earned First Team All-Conference on defense with 42 tackles and eight interceptions and Second Team All-Conference on offense with 30 catches for 900 yards and 10 touchdowns. Polk also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests in the 100 meters (11.94), 200 meters (24.56), high jump (5'2), and long jump (21'5).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Polk was the No. 99 athlete in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 127 recruit in the state of California. He got his first taste of recruiting at Dorsey, where he was teammates with Kayvon Thibodeaux. Polk received double-digit offers, including several Pac-12 offers. He ultimately decided to stay in the Bay Area and commit to Cal (as an athlete) over Oregon, Washington State and others. After two seasons with the Bears, Polk entered the transfer portal after the 2020 season and transferred to Mississippi State, joining head coach Mike Leach, who recruited him out of high school at Washington State. His grandfather (Harry Brown) played basketball at Cal (1970-72). After one season in Starkville, Polk decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Owns a stretched-out frame with functional height and length ... reaches top speed quickly for initial route acceleration ... efficient footwork to snap out of his breaks ... instinctive at the catch point to post up and make late adjustments ... above-average ball-tracking skills to make grabs over his shoulder or work back to throws along the sideline ... will use his body to protect catches from late rakes by corners ... productive on deep balls, catching nine of 13 targets that traveled at least 20 yards ... outstanding production in 2021, becoming just the fifth player in SEC history to reach 105 catches in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Narrow torso and lean limbs ... lacks a pull-away gear, and his 40 time reflects that ... wasn't the type of catch-and-run threat on tape that scares defenses ... lined up only to the right of the formation in 2021, and his route tree was basic ... mediocre play strength, and smaller corners can disrupt his releases at the line ... only 52.4 percent of catches resulted in a first down or touchdown ... traps the ball more often than ideal ... doesn't appear to love blocking ... meager special teams experience ... only one season of high-level production in college.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Mississippi State, Polk was an outside wide receiver in head coach Mike Leach's Air Raid offense, lining up exclusively on the right side of the formation. After two seasons at Cal, he transferred to the SEC and quickly adjusted to better competition, finishing second in the FBS in catches (but not in the top 30 in receiving yards). Polk is at his best at the catch point, where he shows off his smooth body control and focus to locate and isolate the football. He continually works to get uncovered, but doubters will see a one-year wonder who thrived more because of scheme than NFL-level receiving traits. Overall, Polk doesn't have the deep speed or route running prowess to concern NFL cornerbacks, but he has the length and ball-tracking skills that will translate to any level of football. Although not a ready-made NFL player, he has some tools that can be developed.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

25. VELUS JONES JR. | Tennessee 5116 | 204 lbs. | rSR. Saraland, Ala. (Saraland) 5/11/1997 (age 24.96) #1

BACKGROUND: Velus (VAY-lus) Jones Jr. grew up in Mobile, Ala., where he started playing football at age 4. He moved 10 miles north to Saraland at age 8 and later attended Saraland High. After becoming a starting wide receiver on varsity as a sophomore, Jones had a breakout junior season with 51 receptions for 1,118 yards (21.9 average) and nine touchdowns, earning First Team All-State honors and leading Saraland to a 13-win season. As a senior, he posted 48 catches for 945 yards (19.7 average) and 10 touchdowns, adding two rushing touchdowns and two special teams touchdowns. Jones earned 2015 First Team All-State and USA Today All-Alabama honors. He also lettered in track and finished second in the 100 meters (10.87) at the 2016 state championships. Jones set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.56), 200 meters (21.69) and long jump (18'11).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Jones was the No. 79 wide receiver in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 16 recruit in the state of Alabama. His recruitment really took off after his junior season, and Jones surprised many when he looked outside the SEC and committed to Steve Sarkisian and USC in April 2015. He formed a bond with Mobile native Tee Martin, his main recruiter for the Trojans. After Sarkisian left the program, Jones reopened his recruitment and considered Michigan, Oklahoma and Tennessee before re-committing to USC (same signing class as WR Michael Pittman Jr.). After his grandfather suffered a stroke, Jones entered the transfer portal in March 2019 and looked to return home, but his NCAA waiver was denied. He returned to the Trojans for the 2019 season and entered the transfer portal again, landing at Tennessee (Martin was assistant head coach to Jeremy Pruitt). Jones took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility and returned for his sixth season (and second at Tennessee) in 2021. He graduated with his degree in sociology at USC (December 2019) and earned his master's degree in agricultural leadership, education and communications from Tennessee (December 2021). Jones accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, returning to his native Mobile.

STRENGTHS: Strong, compact frame, and plays physical through contact ... releases around press and accelerates to top speed quickly ... has the fluidity in his lower body to shake corners mid-route ... was used often on catch-and-go routes (screens, sweeps, etc.) designed for YAC ... really competitive after the catch, and flashes burst off his plant foot to find yards for himself ... steady hands, and drops were uncommon on his 2021 tape ... accomplished kick returner with a pair of touchdown returns (124/2,973/2) ... led the SEC in kick-return yardage in 2020 and 2021, and ranks second in kick-return yards (1,947) in USC history ... added punt-return duties as a senior, averaging 15.1 yards per return (18/272/0).

WEAKNESSES: Better speed as a ball carrier than route runner, slowing his stride slightly as he turns to locate ... inconsistent route tempo, and prematurely tips his path ... needs to better set up defenders based on his coverage reads ... has slight stiffness in his hips, which hinders his ability to sink at the top of routes ... can be baited into extra contact downfield ... fumbled twice in 2021, including a costly muffed punt that contributed to a loss ... spent six seasons in college and will turn 25 shortly after he is drafted ... struggled through a hamstring injury during fall practice and the first month of the 2021 schedule.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Tennessee, Jones was a slot receiver in head coach Josh Heupel's up-tempo spread offense. After four seasons at USC (caught passes from Sam Darnold in 2017), he transferred to Knoxville, where he was the SEC Special Teams Player of the Year in 2021 and saw his role grow on offense as a senior (the only FBS player with at least 700 receiving yards, 500 kick-return yards, and 200 punt-return yards). Jones has terrific top-end speed, with the vision, balance and compete skills to create with the ball in his hands as a returner or catch-and-go threat (80.7 percent of his receptions in 2021 came within 10 yards of the line of scrimmage). While he flashes burst in his lower body, he doesn't have the tempo or setup skills in his patterns to consistently create separation vs. sticky corners. Overall, Jones has a limited route tree and is still developing his rhythm as a receiver, but he has a smooth accelerator with solid ball skills. He offers value as a return man, special-teamer and back-end-of-the-roster receiver (similar to Pharoh Cooper).

26. CHARLESTON RAMBO | Miami (Fla.) 6005 | 184 lbs. | rSR. Cedar Hill, Texas (Cedar Hill) 8/10/1999 (age 22.72) #11

BACKGROUND: Charleston Rambo grew up south of Dallas and started playing football at the youth level. He attended Woodrow Wilson High in Dallas and made a name for himself on the football field. After his sophomore year, Rambo transferred to Cedar Hill High, which plays Class 6A (the state's highest classification). After missing the first month of the season with a wrist injury, he finished his junior season with 23 catches for 423 yards and seven touchdowns. As a senior, Rambo led Cedar Hill to an 11-win season and finished with 87 receptions for 1,590 yards and 25 touchdowns. He also lettered in track at Cedar Hill with personal bests in the 200 meters (22.94) and high jump (6'0).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Rambo was the No. 27 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 28 recruit in the state of Texas. He picked up more than 30 scholarship offers and strongly considered Florida, Notre Dame and Texas before committing to Oklahoma prior to his senior year. Rambo was one of three wide receivers in the Sooners' 2017 recruiting class along with CeeDee Lamb and Hollywood Brown. After four up-and-down seasons in Norman, he decided to enter the transfer portal and landed at Miami (Fla.) for the 2021 season. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding length/speed combination ... mixes gears as a route runner and attacks the defender's leverage to find pockets of separation ... shows the one-step quickness to beat press and release vertically ... stays collected at the top of routes, decelerating on command ... adjusts to the ball in-flight, and tracks the ball naturally over his shoulder ... stabs away from his body, and provides a large strike zone for the quarterback ... stretches out his stride post-catch to take it the distance ... better blocker than expected thanks to his stubbornness ... spent less than a year with the Hurricanes but earned immediate respect with his quiet, humble persona ... offers kick-return experience, averaging 21.7 yards per return (15/326/0) ... highly productive senior year, becoming just the fifth player in Hurricanes history to surpass 1,000 receiving yards in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Lean-muscled frame, and needs to continue developing play strength ... can be out-physicalled by defenders and slowed mid-stem ... not a consistent finisher in traffic, and loses focus when crowded ... occasionally allows the ball into his body ... has slight tightness through his hips ... marginal elusiveness after the catch, and missed tackles were random on his film ... relies on lower body to beat press, and must develop his hand techniques ... only one season of high-level production, and had to leave an explosive offense to do it.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Miami (Fla.), Rambo was an outside wide receiver in former offensive coordinator Rhett Lashlee's power spread scheme, lining up almost exclusively to the right of the formation. After he struggled to break through during his four years at Oklahoma, he put together the most prolific receiving season in Hurricanes' history with school records for catches (79) and receiving yards (1,172) in 2021. With his plant and burst, Rambo has terrific separation quickness and doesn't lose speed out of his cuts. His lean features aren't ideal vs. physical defensive backs, but he played with improved confidence and finishing skills as a senior. Overall, Rambo can be out-matched in contested situations, but his blend of speed, body control and tracking skills translate well to the NFL level. His game reminds me a lot of former Dallas Cowboy (new Miami Dolphin) Cedrick Wilson.

27. ROMEO DOUBS | Nevada 6017 | 201 lbs. | SR. Los Angeles, Calif. (Jefferson) 4/13/2000 (age 22.04) #7

BACKGROUND: Romeo Doubs (Dubs), who is one of four children, grew up in South Los Angeles and developed a love for football at age 4. He started playing at the Pop Warner level and then at Thomas Jefferson High, where he was a three-year letterman, playing quarterback, wide receiver and safety. As a junior, Doubs had 866 rushing yards and 332 passing yards in Jefferson's wing-T offense, accounting for nine total touchdowns. He had his most productive season as a senior, he had 1,757 rushing yards on 93 carries (18.9 average) and 354 receiving yards on 13 receptions (27.2 average). Doubs totaled 37 total touchdowns (28 rushing, five receiving, three kickoff returns, one fumble recovery) in 2017 and earned First Team All-City honors. As a defensive back, Doubs combined for 18 interceptions and two forced fumbles over his prep career. He also ran track (sprints and relays) and set personal bests in the 100 meters (11.34) and 200 meters (22.93).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Doubs was the No. 188 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 136 recruit in the state of California. He didn't have any scholarship offers during his junior season, but that quickly changed, as he received more than a dozen offers prior to his senior year (several schools saw him at safety, others wanted to keep him at quarterback or move him to receiver). Doubs received two Power 5 offers (Rutgers and Washington State) but felt a connection at Nevada (his first college offer) and signed with Jay Norvell's squad, who sold him on the move to wide receiver. His older brother (Jarmaine Jr.) played cornerback at West Los Angeles College (2014-15), FCS-level Southern Utah (2016-17) as a walk-on and then in the Indoor Football League for the San Diego Strike Force in 2019. Doubs opted out of Nevada's bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6016	204	32 7/8	10 1/8	78 1/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	13 (bench press only — knee)

STRENGTHS: Decent height/length combination ... wins at the line of scrimmage with initial quickness and immediate acceleration ... sharp footwork on in-breaking and out-breaking routes to give quarterbacks a window ... can stretch screens into explosive plays thanks to his athletic change of direction ... good-sized hands translate to a low drop rate ... flexible body adjustments to react to wild passes ... ranked sixth in the FBS in yards per punt return (14.2) in 2021 ... finished his career averaging 11.9 yards per punt return, including one touchdown (39/463/1) ... quiet personality and "all business," according to teammates ... one of the most productive wide receivers in Nevada history, and tied the school record with 19 catches in a single game as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Lean torso and limbs ... ordinary play strength will hinder him in the NFL ... lacks physicality in his routes, and can be bumped off his path ... struggles vs. the jam, relying more on shake than sound hands ... rudimentary route runner, and must add more branches to his route tree ... will have some double-catches, and needs to be more consistent tracking the ball into hands ... needs to improve footwork along the sideline and understand where he is ... below-average blocker, and must develop more of an edge ... sidelined at the Combine and pro day because of a knee injury.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Nevada, Doubs was primarily an outside wide receiver in former head coach Jay Norvell's version of the Air Raid offense. A high school quarterback, he made a quick transition to receiver with the Wolf Pack and finished his career fourth in school history in receiving yards (one spot ahead of Nate Burleson). Doubs lived with QB Carson Strong and TE Cole Turner since his freshman year, and that chemistry was clear on the football field with his ability to make plays at all three levels. While he has the footwork to separate out of his breaks, he must improve his tempo and setup on non-linear routes. Overall, Doubs doesn't consistently play bigger than he is, but he has the speed to stack cornerbacks vertically or be a catch-and-go creator. He projects as a potential fourth receiver on an NFL depth chart with punt-return value.

28. DAI'JEAN DIXON | Nicholls State 6025 | 205 lbs. | rSR. New Orleans, La. (Edna Karr) 10/16/1998 (age 23.53) #5

BACKGROUND: Dai'Jean (DAY-jhon) Dixon was a two-sport standout at Edna Karr High in New Orleans, lettering in basketball and football. Along with fellow wide receiver Racey McMath (sixth-round pick in the 2021 NFL Draft by the Tennessee Titans), he helped lead the team to back-to-back appearances in the state championship game as a junior and senior, including a 14-0 record and state title in 2016. As a junior, Dixon posted 23 catches for 346 yards and three touchdowns. As a senior, he finished with 42 receptions for 1,004 yards and 11 touchdowns, earning Honorable Mention All-State honors.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Dixon was starting to hear from major FBS programs after his promising junior season, but he was arrested for gang rape (January 2016) midway through his junior year. Charges were never filed, but no FBS teams were interested at that point, and he signed with Nicholls State of the FCS. He was also arrested for marijuana possession with intent to distribute (August 2019). He was expected to enter the 2021 NFL Draft (and received a 2021 Combine invite) but elected to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to school for a fifth season in 2021. Dixon accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

PRO DAY	6023	203	33	9 3/4	78	-	2.65	1.68	32 1/2	10'2"	-	-	2 (stood on Combine shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Tall, lithe athlete with long-striding speed to tilt the field in his favor ... coordinates steps and uses controlled body movements to shake defenders before or after the catch ... uses body lean and paces route acceleration to sell corners and settle in zones ... has large, accepting hands, and catches the ball well away from his body to keep defenders from accessing the catch point ... plays physical through contact, and doesn't get punked by muscled-up corners ... skilled stalk blocker ... effectively uses length to stave off defenders in the run game or enlarge his catch radius ... above-average production, leading the team in receiving four consecutive seasons (only player in school history with multiple 1,000-yard receiving seasons).

WEAKNESSES: Will tip pitches as a route runner ... needs to develop hand technique to better defeat the jam ... average play strength, and has room to add more bulk to his lean-limbed frame ... make-you-miss moves won't be as effective vs. NFL competition ... several former coaches speak highly of his character and maturation, but his background requires extensive vetting because of his off-field history ... will be a 24-year-old NFL rookie ... doesn't have experience against top cornerback play.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Nicholls State, Dixon was the X receiver in offensive coordinator Rob Christophel's scheme. He became the most prolific pass catcher in school history, passing Mark Carrier and setting the Nicholls State records for catches (237), receiving yards (3,802) and touchdown receptions (35) — he is also the school's all-time leader in scoring (216 points). Dixon is an imposing target with the catch radius to match, frequently reeling in throws well outside his frame. He will rush his routes at times, but he shows an understanding of pacing and footwork at the stem to create his own separation. Overall, Dixon will face a learning curve vs. the more physical and sudden corners in the NFL, but he has three-level potential with his smooth acceleration, length and ball skills.

GRADE: 6th Round

29. DONTARIO DRUMMOND | Ole Miss 6007 | 215 lbs. | rSR. Laurel, Miss. (Laurel) 8/22/1997 (age 24.68) #11

BACKGROUND: Dontario Drummond, who is the middle child of three boys, grew up in Laurel, Miss., (90 miles southeast of Jackson) and started playing football at age 5. He started to take basketball and football more seriously as a teenager at Laurel High. A four-year varsity letterman, Drummond, who was high school teammates with OT Charles Cross, helped lead Laurel to the 2014 state championship with 26 catches for 569 yards and eight touchdowns as a sophomore. As a junior, he finished with 41 receptions for 704 yards and eight touchdowns. Drummond had his most productive season as a senior with 1,568 receiving yards and 17 touchdowns, which ranked top-five in the state and earned him Second Team All-State honors. He recorded four special teams touchdowns as a senior (two punt returns, two kick returns) and finished his prep career with 3,474 all-purpose yards. Drummond also lettered in baseball and basketball, leading Laurel to the 2015-16 Class 5A state championship as a junior (earned MVP honors with 23 points in the title game).

A two-star recruit out of high school, Drummond was forced to go the JUCO route and enrolled at East Mississippi Community College. He helped lead the team to back-to-back JUCO national titles in his two seasons and combined for 95 catches for 1,466 receiving yards, and 21 touchdowns, earning First Team JUCO All-American honors as a sophomore. A three-star JUCO recruit, Drummond was the No. 6 wide receiver and the No. 56 JUCO recruit overall. Looking to stay in his home state, he committed to Ole Miss over Arkansas, Kansas and others. Drummond took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility and returned to Oxford for a fifth season in 2021. His father (Kelvin Chinn) was incarcerated (drug charges) for a portion of Dontario's childhood. Drummond accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Compact, well-developed build ... strong, confident hands ... operates with bodies around him, and finishes catches through contact ... hands-catches high, low or anywhere outside his frame ... flashes explosiveness that is pleasantly surprising ... little wasted motion in his route breaks thanks to his body control and plant quickness ... gravitates toward open zones in coverage ... runs with physicality after the catch ... looks to lock up defenders as a blocker in the run game ... averaged 9.3 yards per punt in college ... emerged as the go-to receiver in the Ole Miss offense as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Adequate speed and change-of-direction skills ... needs to expand route tree at the NFL level ... thrived on a lot of slants and quick-hitters in the Ole Miss offense (75 percent of 2021 catches were within 10 yards of LOS) ... needs to show more attention to detail with route pacing ... lacks ideal separation quickness ... tends to freelance with his hands vs. press ... overzealous blocker, and will draw holding penalties (three in 2021) ... overage and will turn 25 before first NFL game.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ole Miss, Drummond operated mostly out of the slot in head coach Lane Kiffin's RPO-based, shotgun spread scheme. After Elijah Moore's departure, he graduated to the top of the Rebels' wide receiver depth chart as a senior and was one of only five SEC receivers with at least 75 catches and 1,000 receiving yards in 2021. Drummond is a thick, muscular target with the snatch-and-secure skills to stab the ball with a man on his hip. While not a true burner or proven deep threat, he flashes explosive traits before and after the catch. Overall, Drummond has ordinary length, speed and route running prowess, but he is a balanced athlete with the hand strength and toughness to carve out a role for himself in the NFL.

30. JALEN NAILOR | Michigan State 5112 | 186 lbs. | rJR. Palmdale, Calif. (Bishop Gorman) 3/2/1999 (age 23.16) #8

BACKGROUND: Jalen Nailor was born in Long Beach, Calif., and grew up in Palmdale (60 miles north of Los Angeles), where he developed a love for baseball and football at a young age. He moved to Las Vegas for high school, where he attended football powerhouse Bishop Gorman. Nailor was a four-year varsity letterman, seeing time at running back, wide receiver and safety. After 259 receiving yards as a sophomore, he led the team in receiving as a junior with 52 catches for 929 receiving yards and 14 touchdowns, helping Bishop Gorman to a 15-0 record and a No. 1 ranking nationally. As a senior, Nailor earned First Team All-State honors, leading Bishop Gorman to its ninth consecutive state championship in 2017. He finished his final season with 41 catches for 807 yards and 12 touchdowns, adding 18 tackles and one interception (returned for a touchdown) at defensive back. Nailor finished his prep career with 108 catches for 1,995 yards and 28 touchdowns. He also lettered in track and won four state titles as a senior, helping Bishop Gorman to its first-ever team track state championship. He won state titles in the 100 meters (10.70) and 200 meters (21.57), which are both school records. He was also a member of the state-winning 400-meter and 800-meter relay teams.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Nailor was the No. 118 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Nevada. He was originally committed to Arizona State, but he reopened his recruitment after Todd Graham was fired, committing to Michigan State over Nebraska and Utah. Nailor was one of numerous Bishop Gorman players who signed with FBS schools in the 2018 class, including Brevin Jordan (Miami) and Dorian Thompson-Robinson (UCLA). His father (Jamar) played wide receiver at Long Beach City College and Division II New Mexico Highlands, setting the school record with 18 touchdown grabs in 1996. Nailor decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5113	192	30 3/8	9	73 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	14 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Owns smooth acceleration to be a home run threat every time he touches the ball (high school state champion in the 100 meters, 200 meters) ... seamlessly transfers speed in his cuts ... blessed with the natural balance to alter momentum without losing his bearings, which raises his potential as a route runner ... makes grabs without breaking stride ... tracks the ball well, and his coordination helps him adjust to erratic throws ... 78.1 percent of receptions the past two seasons resulted in a touchdown or first down ... offers experience as a punt returner (6.0 average) and kick returner (19.9) ... takes blocking responsibilities seriously, shielding his man and mixing things up.

WEAKNESSES: Still searching for game film where he wins in closely contested windows ... focus is too easily disrupted (combined for nine drops the past two seasons) ... routes are flat and don't accurately represent his athletic tools ... has a tough time matching the physicality of cornerbacks ... has struggled to stay healthy and never played double-digit games in a season in college because of injuries, missing most of the 2019 season with a broken foot (September 2019) and four games as a junior with a right hand injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Michigan State, Nailor was an outside receiver in offensive coordinator Jay Johnson's scheme. Injuries robbed him of consistent playing time in college, but he was a big-play threat when healthy (three receptions of 60-plus yards in the first half vs. Rutgers in 2021). As an athlete, Nailor is explosive with the natural balance and acceleration to create after the catch or make an impact as a returner. However, he lacks tempo and instincts as a route runner, and NFL quarterbacks will quickly lose trust in him unless he becomes more dependable. Overall, Nailor has the fluid athleticism that creates conflict for defenses, but he is more gadget weapon than polished receiver right now, and you have to be creative in the ways you get him touches. His lack of durability complicates his draft projection.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

31. BRAYLON SANDERS | Ole Miss 6001 | 194 lbs. | rSR. Hogansville, Ga. (Callaway) 1/21/1999 (age 23.27) #13

BACKGROUND: Jontavious Braylon Sanders is a native of Hogansville in western Georgia (near the Alabama border) and attended Callaway High. A three-year letterman, he was primarily a wide receiver but also started several games at quarterback as a junior to utilize his athleticism. As a senior, Sanders led Callaway to a 13-1 record, losing in the state playoff semifinals. Playing mostly receiver, he finished the 2016 season with 49 catches for 1,073 yards and 20 touchdowns, earning Second Team Class 2A All-State honors. Sanders was also a four-year starter in basketball, earning First Team All-Region honors as a sophomore, junior and senior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Sanders was the No. 71 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 49 recruit in the state of Georgia. His first offer came his sophomore year from Georgia, but he narrowed down his final choice to Colorado State and Ole Miss, signing with the Rebels. Sanders took advantage of the NCAA's extra season of eligibility and returned to Oxford for his fifth season in 2021. He graduated with his degree in sport and recreation administration. Sanders accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and was a late addition to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6000	196	30 7/8	10	75 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.25	6.96	12 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Excellent space athlete ... proven deep threat with speed and vertical tracking skills (led Power 5 with 22.9 yards per catch in 2021) ... uses jab steps and ankle flexion to cleanly escape the jam and enter routes ... controls body movements at route stems and when adjusting to off-target throws ... steady, dependable hands away from his body ... competitive after the catch and as a perimeter blocker ... posted his best production as a senior, including at least one catch of 22-plus yards in eight of 12 games.

WEAKNESSES: Never reached 25 receptions in any of his five seasons in college ... average-sized target and catch radius ... struggles in traffic, and catch rate plummets when defenders crowd his air space ... didn't run an extensive route tree in college ... needs to become more detail-oriented in his sink and snap ... able to mix his gears, but lacks the elusiveness to pile up missed tackles ... minimal special teams experience as both a returner and on coverages ... battled through numerous minor injuries (hamstring, ankle, etc.) that sidelined him throughout his college career.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Ole Miss, Sanders was an outside receiver in head coach Lane Kiffin's RPO-based, shotgun spread scheme. Although he never finished better than second on the team in receiving, he consistently flashed NFL potential, especially as a downfield target (posts, nines, etc.), as he averaged 21.1 yards per catch in his career. Sanders can win off the line to stack corners vertically and track the football. He has above-average body control to attack erratic throws, but he wasn't a consistent go-up-and-get-it receiver on tape. Overall, Sanders needs to add more nuance to his route running, especially as an underneath target, but NFL teams are interested in his vertical skills and athletic upside. He has the potential to settle in as a WR4/WR5 as an NFL rookie.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

32. TRÉ TURNER | Virginia Tech 6013 | 184 lbs. | SR. Greensboro, N.C. (Northwest Guilford) 4/21/2000 (age 22.02) #11

BACKGROUND: William "Tré" Turner III, who is the middle child of three boys, was born and raised in Greensboro, N.C., and appeared destined for a career in basketball based on his early love for the sport. He followed in his brother's footsteps and starred on the AAU circuit throughout middle school, distancing himself from a short stint on the football field. Turner enrolled at Northwest Guilford High and decided to give football another try but was unable to play as a freshman because of Osgood-Schlatter Disease (rapid growth). He joined the football team as a sophomore and started slow but finished in a big way, posting 60 catches for 990 yards and 10 touchdowns. As a junior, Turner recorded 52 receptions for 1,065 yards (20.5 average) and 12 touchdowns, adding 30 tackles, nine passes defended and a pick-six on defense. He played in the first six games as a senior before a shoulder injury shut him down the rest of the season, finishing with 24 catches for 567 yards (23.6) and six touchdowns to earn First Team All-Area honors for the second consecutive year. Turner finished his prep career with 31 total touchdowns. He also lettered in basketball all four years, enjoying his best season as a sophomore wing with 19.6 points, 6.5 rebounds, 2.7 assists and 2.1 steals per game.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Turner was the No. 34 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of North Carolina. He was also a three-star basketball recruit and received offers from mid-majors like Appalachian State, Maryland-Eastern Shore, North Carolina A&T, UNC-Greensboro and Western Carolina. However, Turner's focus switched to football as it became clear that was his best chance at a professional career. He attracted an impressive offer list that included national programs like Florida, Miami (Fla.), Notre Dame, Oklahoma and Penn State, but he ultimately chose Virginia Tech over Florida State and North Carolina. His older brother (P.J. Hairston) was a small forward at North Carolina (2011-13) and first-round pick (No. 26) in the 2014 NBA Draft by the Miami Heat, playing three seasons in the NBA. His father (William Turner Jr.) was a wide receiver at NC State in the early 1990s. Turner opted out of the bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	31 1/2	8'11"	4.51	7.06	- (stood on Combine measurements, runs)

STRENGTHS: Strong route acceleration to hit the jets and out-flank coverage ... uses gliding steps to win at the line ... displays an array of body fakes to shake off corners ... physical to the football, and his basketball background is evident ... his midair adjustments wear out the rewind button on the clicker ... confident in his hands and won't slow at the catch point, setting up YAC opportunities ... terrific open-field instincts as a ball carrier to forced missed tackles and run toward his help ... looks to get involved as a blocker with a knack or stalking and keeping his man occupied ... steady production each season.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average build, bulk and arm length ... runs tough, but not powerful ... more likely to go backward at contact than bowl over the tackler ... too easily jostled mid-route, and can be locked down if he doesn't win his release ... route-break quickness is average, and I expected more consistent separation for a player with his foot speed ... four career fumbles ... special teams snaps increased as a senior, but lacks ideal experience in that area ... battled numerous injuries over his career, including a bout of pneumomediastinum (air stuck between the lungs) as a senior and wasn't allowed to fly (November 2021); battled a sports hernia and plantar fasciitis in his right foot (November 2020) as a junior; senior year of high school was cut short because of shoulder surgery.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Virginia Tech, Turner was an outside receiver (primarily to the right of the formation) in former offensive coordinator Brad Cornelsen's offense. Despite poor quarterback play during his time in Blacksburg, he produced steady receiving numbers and finished fifth in Hokies history in catches (134) and receiving yards (2,292). Turner was a basketball-focused athlete much of his life, and that shows on the field with his ability to frame his grabs and finish through contact. While he uses tempo as a route runner, he will need to improve his attention to detail to overcome his lack of ideal physical traits. Overall, Turner's lackluster play strength and separating skills are disappointing, but his above-average acceleration and ball skills will give him a fighting chance to earn an NFL roster spot, especially if he improves on special teams.

33. JOSH JOHNSON | Tulsa 5104 | 183 lbs. | rSR. Little Rock, Ark. (Central Arkansas Christian) 8/10/1999 (age 22.72) #4

BACKGROUND: Joshua “Josh” Johnson, who is one of five children, started playing football at age 7 and grew up in the Little Rock area. He attended Central Arkansas Christian, where he was a four-year letterman, playing both ways at wide receiver and cornerback. Johnson had his best season as a junior with 87 catches for 1,245 receiving yards and eight touchdowns, earning All-State honors and leading CAC to a 12-1 record in 2015. As a senior, he missed time because of an ankle injury but still finished with 38 receptions for 636 yards and eight touchdowns, earning All-Conference for the third consecutive year and Second Team All-State honors. Johnson finished his prep career with 180 receptions for 2,711 yards and 30 touchdowns.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Johnson was the No. 117 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Arkansas. He collected scholarship offers from Minnesota, Notre Dame, Oklahoma State and others and initially committed to Indiana in November 2015. However, Johnson had a change of heart and flipped to Iowa State prior to his senior season. After redshirting in 2017 and seeing limited action in 2018, he entered the transfer portal in April 2019 and announced his transfer to Tulsa a month later. Johnson received an NCAA waiver to be eligible for the 2019 season. His father (Frank) played football at Tulsa. His brother (Frankie) was a cornerback at Tulsa (1996-2000). Johnson accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Plays with consistent speed and gear-change in his movements ... crisp and controlled footwork for natural route adjustments ... understands defensive back leverage and rapidly settles feet to maximize windows ... quickly enters routes thanks to his fluid release skills ... catches the ball well away from his frame without breaking stride ... has decent length with better than expected catch radius for his size ... didn't shrink on 2021 Ohio State tape (8/149/1) ... set career-bests as a senior, finishing as one of only three AAC players to exceed 1,000 yards receiving in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Lean-framed target with smaller hands ... drop rate decreased each of the past two seasons, but 28 career drops in college is not what you want to see ... too many concentration drops, especially when working the middle of the field ... too many throws in his direction resulted in an interception on tape ... play strength as both a receiver and blocker leaves a lot to be desired ... unimpressive instincts and breakaway speed after the catch ... unproven as an outside receiver with 95 percent of career snaps coming from the slot ... didn't play on many special teams coverages in colleges.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Tulsa, Johnson was a slot receiver in head coach Philip Montgomery's offense. After starting his college career at Iowa State, he transferred to Tulsa and had a career year as a senior, leading the team in receiving and finishing third in the AAC in receiving yards. With his play speed, Johnson is able to close cushion and mix his gears, creating natural separation from coverage. However, he registered more drops than touchdown catches each season at Tulsa and needs to be more reliable at the catch point to stick. Overall, Johnson doesn't have the physical traits or ball skills that will strike fear in the heart of defenses, but he is a promising route runner and can get open for his quarterback. He is a potential back-end-of-the-roster possession target.

GRADE: 7th Round

34. TANNER CONNER | Idaho State 6030 | 226 lbs. | rSR. Kent, Wash. (Kentridge) 3/20/1998 (age 24.11) #80

BACKGROUND: Tanner Conner, who is the oldest of three boys, grew up in Kent, Wash., 30 minutes south of Seattle. He was a multisport standout at Kentridge High and was a three-year letterman in football. Conner became a full-time starting receiver as a senior and earned Second Team All-Conference honors with 20 receptions for 488 yards (24.4 average) and five touchdowns. As a defensive back, he finished the 2015 season with 48 tackles and six interceptions, earning First Team All-Conference. Conner lettered one season in basketball and four years in track, where he was highly decorated. He won numerous 300-meter hurdle championships, including the 2016 state title (37.44). Conner also set personal bests in the 110-meter hurdles (14.09 — second in the state), 200 meters (22.42), 400 meters (58.65), long jump (22'8.5) and triple jump (41'4.5).

A no-star recruit out of high school, Conner didn't have any scholarship offers to play football. He was recruited for track by several programs, and on his official visit to Idaho State in June 2016, he also dropped off his football highlight tape to the football coaches. The coaches decided to offer him a scholarship for football and agreed to allow Conner to be a dual-threat athlete (since his scholarship was for football, he was technically a walk-on for track). He was a five-year member of the Idaho State track team and earned three Big Sky championship titles in the 60-meter hurdles (7.73) and 110-meter hurdles (14.03). He set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.51) and 200 meters (21.54). His father (Andy) played linebacker at Oregon (1988-91) and spent time in the NFL with the Seattle Seahawks and Los Angeles Rams before a career-ending shoulder injury. Tanner graduated with his degree in criminology (April 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Remarkable size/speed athlete with extensive track background ... accelerates well into routes, with the strong strides to build up speed on vertical patterns ... uses dynamic speed cuts to create passing windows ... hyper foot quickness to brake, balance and change directions at the stem ... fluid at the catch point with leaping skills ... better hands and catch-point focus than expected ... fires out of stance with jab steps and hand swipes to get by the jam ... able to take away pursuit angles after the catch when he turns on the jets ... worked hard to develop his body composition and add good weight (couldn't do one rep of 225 pounds on the bench when he started college, now he is at 19 reps).

WEAKNESSES: Lifelong dual-sport athlete, and has never been able to focus solely on football ... doesn't show nuance in his route running, rounding and forecasting his path ... rigid through hips and knees at the stem, and lacks efficiency in and out of breaks ... late to recognize and react to coverages ... improv skills are lacking when the quarterback breaks the pocket ... struggles with lateral balance, which shows when evading press ... tends to rely on his body to finish catches ... needs to improve body position downfield at the catch point ... can be disrupted mid-route by physical defensive backs.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Idaho State, Conner was an inside and outside receiver in former head coach Rob Phenicie's spread scheme. A dual-sport athlete most of his life, he was a late bloomer on the football field because of his year-round competition schedule as he balanced football and track. With linebacker size, Conner has above-average linear speed and foot quickness with better than expected tracking and ball skills as a pass catcher. With his track background, getting from A to B as fast as possible is ingrained in him, but he needs to learn that not every route is a race, and controlled tempo and rhythm are important factors in his route construction. Overall, Conner will require time to develop a more detailed approach to his routes, but he is a unique height/weight/speed athlete capable of unlocking additional football skills now that he can dedicate himself to one sport. He is a practice-squad candidate as either a wide receiver or F tight end.

TY FRYFOGLE | Indiana
6011 | 204 lbs. | rSR.
Lucedale, Miss. (George County)

BACKGROUND: Tyrese “Ty” Fryfogle grew up in Lucedale, Miss., a small town 20 miles from the Alabama border. He attended George County High (alma mater of former Buffalo Bills WR Eric Moulds), where he became the program’s all-time leading receiver. After becoming a starter as a sophomore, Fryfogle finished his junior season with 52 catches for 952 yards and 10 touchdowns, earning All-Region honors. As a senior, he led George County to its first postseason appearance in six years and earned First Team All-State honors with 89 receptions for 1,432 yards and 14 touchdowns in 2016. Fryfogle also earned two varsity letters on the basketball team.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Fryfogle was the No. 243 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 41 recruit in the state of Mississippi. He received offers from Idaho, Indiana and Ole Miss (his father’s alma mater) and likely would have committed to Ole Miss, but Rebels assistant coach Grant Heard (a former teammate of Ty’s father) left Ole Miss to become the wide receivers coach at Indiana. Fryfogle followed and committed to the Hoosiers. His father (Trey) played wide receiver at Ole Miss (2000-02) before he was dismissed because of a “violation of team policy.” Ty’s younger brother (Deuce Knight) is a rising sophomore quarterback at George County and already has an offer from Indiana for the 2025 recruiting class. Fryfogle took advantage of the NCAA’s extra year of eligibility and returned to Bloomington for his fifth season. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6011	209	30 7/8	9 1/2	74 1/2	-	-	-	38	9'11"	4.47	7.15	13 (stood on Combine runs)

STRENGTHS: Able to beat single coverage thanks to his route tempo and body control ... wipes defender’s hands away naturally to get off press ... sells double-moves, and makes instinctive adjustments mid-route ... runs to proper depth and makes clean breaks for sharp, 90-degree cuts on digs/outs ... tracks the ball naturally, with late hands to snare throws before the defender can react ... has leaping ability to climb the ladder and attack at the highest point (his coaches nicknamed him “jump ball”) ... voted a team captain in 2021 ... offers inside/outside versatility ... dependable, and finished top-three on the team in receiving each of the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary frame, build and length ... not a burner and will struggle to out-pace NFL corners vertically ... plays with adequate quickness out of his breaks, but lacks explosive qualities ... had a bad case of the dropsies in his final season and appeared to battle focus issues ... success rate in contested situations was disappointing on tape ... shows field vision with the ball in his hands, but lacks the elusive qualities to be a true YAC threat ... below-average sustain strength as a perimeter blocker ... special teams experience is sparse ... disappointing production and performance in his final season.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Indiana, Fryfogle was an inside and outside receiver in former offensive coordinator Nick Sheridan’s scheme. He was named the top wide receiver in the Big Ten in 2020 (first player in Big Ten history with back-to-back 200-yard receiving games), but his production dropped off in 2021 with spotty quarterback play (didn’t reach 100 yards receiving in any of his 12 starts). Fryfogle has squeaky clean route transitions, and he wins more with details than sudden movements. While his ability to high-point is a strength to his game, he battled focus issues as a super senior (his touchdown-to-drop ratio went from 7-2 in 2020 to 1-8 in 2021). Overall, Fryfogle is a route technician who makes himself available early and late, but his physical traits are average by NFL standards, and he isn’t a consistent separator on tape. He will need to add special teams duties if he hopes to stick on an NFL depth chart.

GRADE: 7th Round

36. JAIVON HEILIGH | Coastal Carolina 6004 | 202 lbs. | SR. Venice, Fla. (Venice) 9/2/1999 (age 22.66) #6

BACKGROUND: Jaivon (JAY-von) Heiligh (HIGH-lee) grew up in Venice on Florida's Gulf Coast and became a record-setting pass catcher at Venice High. After he was called up to varsity as a freshman, he had 63 catches for 944 yards and 11 touchdowns as a sophomore. Heiligh earned Second Team All-State honors as a junior with 58 receptions for 861 yards and 10 touchdowns. As a senior, he set single-season Florida records for catches (131), receiving yards (2,359) and receiving touchdowns (32), catching passes from 2017 Mr. Football Bryce Carpenter. Heiligh helped lead Venice to the 2017 state championship and finished runner-up for Class 7A Player of the Year (behind Carpenter). His 252 career receptions are a state record, and his 3,964 career receiving yards rank No. 2. Heiligh also lettered in basketball at Venice.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Heiligh was the No. 324 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 340 recruit in the state of Florida. Despite his record-setting senior season, he was widely underrecruited because of his lack of high-end speed, and he received mostly MAC offers (Bowling Green, Buffalo, Ohio). While recruiting Carpenter, Coastal Carolina head coach Jamey Chadwell offered Heiligh as well, and the two teammates committed to the Chanticleers as a package deal. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Advanced route runner ... lulls corners with crafty hesitation before switching gears to get overtop corners ... closes cushion in a flash, and smooth in-and-out of the drive phase ... decelerates cleanly to create pockets of separation ... owns strong, confident hands, and works well with bodies around him ... does a great job working back to the ball and using his body to shield defenders ... adequate length to snare away from his frame ... uses lateral quickness to avoid the jam and stay on time ... led the team in receiving each of the past three seasons, becoming the second player in school history to reach 1,000 yards receiving in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Accelerates smoothly, but lacks an explosive top gear ... middling route speed that cornerbacks have no trouble matching ... average suddenness and leaping skills, and will be out-high-pointed by cornerbacks ... most of YAC production was by design, not his own creation ... mediocre play strength will be more of an issue vs. physical NFL corners ... underpowered as a perimeter blocker ... wasn't a playmaker in the return game in college, averaging only 6.7 yards per punt return.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Coastal Carolina, Heiligh was an inside and outside receiver in head coach Jamey Chadwell's spread offense. A record-setting receiver in high school, his production improved each season at Coastal, and he leaves as the school's all-time leader in catches (191) and receiving yards (2,825). Heiligh is a natural hands-catcher with a high football IQ and excellent timing in his route movements to find soft zones or create leverage vs. man coverage. However, his athletic testing was below average, confirming concerns on tape. Overall, Heiligh is a pedestrian athlete by NFL standards with questionable physicality to make a living on the outside, but he is a route technician with strong hands and a feel for always making himself available for his quarterback. He is a potential slot option.

37. DEVON WILLIAMS | Oregon 6050 | 210 lbs. | rJR. Lancaster, Calif. (Antelope Valley) 7/6/2000 (age 21.81) #2

BACKGROUND: Devon (Dev-in) Williams grew up in Southern California and attended Antelope Valley High in Lancaster (an hour north of Los Angeles). He was a do-everything athlete and played on both sides of the ball. As a junior, Williams played quarterback and posted 53.0 percent completions (71-for-134) for 1,150 yards, 11 touchdowns, and four interceptions, adding 397 rushing yards, three rushing touchdowns, 87 receiving yards, and two receiving touchdowns. On defense, he had 55 tackles, five interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) and four forced fumbles as a linebacker and safety. As a senior, Williams was named a Second Team All-American and First Team All-State performer as a wide receiver and safety. He finished his final year with 71 catches for 1,157 yards, and 13 touchdowns, adding 67 tackles, five interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) and two forced fumbles in 2017. Williams also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests in the 110-meter hurdles (15.37), long jump (21'8.75), and triple jump (41'4.25).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Williams was the No. 6 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 40 overall) and the No. 6 recruit in the state of California (No. 2 receiver in the state behind Amon-Ra St. Brown). Schools recruited him for different positions, and he narrowed his final choice to Alabama, Oregon, USC and Utah, signing with the Trojans. After serving as a backup true freshman, Williams was expected to push for a starting role in 2019, but he was stuck behind Michael Pittman Jr., Tyler Vaughns and St. Brown, and he entered the transfer portal after only two games. After spending time at Oregon State, Williams decided to enroll at Oregon, where he spent the next two seasons. His mother (Jennifer) passed away because of gallbladder cancer in the summer of 2021. His daughter (Aurela Luna) was born in August 2021. Williams elected to skip his senior year and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Large-framed, long-limbed athlete ... rangy pass catching skills when the ball is in the air ... accurately times his attack to high-point and out-jump defenders to the football ... consistently works himself past the sticks (74.3 percent of catches in 2021 resulted in a first down or touchdown) ... focus drops were tough to find on tape, and hand strength stands out ... physical after the catch to be more than a possession target ... doesn't take blocking duties lightly, using size to his advantage ... led Oregon in receiving each of his two seasons in Eugene.

WEAKNESSES: Questionable route awareness, and late to recognize coverages ... stems are more rounded than sharpened ... needs a moment to get back up to full speed after being slowed mid-route ... will struggle to escape the jam of NFL press corners ... physical defenders give him trouble ... hears footsteps when attempting to work the middle of the field ... doesn't always play up to his size, with a low success rate in contested situations ... below-average elusiveness to routinely force missed tackles or create as a ball carrier ... offers very little on special teams coverages ... production doesn't jump off the page.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oregon, Williams was an outside receiver in former offensive coordinator Joe Moorhead's scheme. A former top recruit, he spent less than two seasons at USC before transferring to Oregon, where he led the Ducks in receiving each of the past two seasons, but his career production looks more like single-season numbers. Williams is a large target for his quarterback thanks to his frame, body control and ball skills to go get the football. However, he is a one-speed route runner who doesn't consistently play up to his size or physicality. Overall, Williams has rangy leaping skills when the ball is in the air, but he struggles to create consistent separation and requires extensive route work to secure a roster spot in the NFL.

38. REGGIE ROBERSON JR. | SMU 5110 | 192 lbs. | rSR. DeSoto, Texas (Horn) 10/14/1998 (age 23.54) #21

BACKGROUND: Reginald "Reggie" Roberson Jr. (RAH-ber-son), who is one of two children, grew up in DeSoto, Texas (20 miles south of Dallas). He attended Bishop Dunne Catholic School for three years, where he lettered in basketball, football and track. As a sophomore and junior, Roberson helped lead Bishop Dunne to back-to-back 12-1 seasons, winning the 2014 state championship. Due to an increase in tuition at Bishop Dunne, he transferred to Dr. John D. Horn High in Mesquite for his senior season, where he caught 60 passes for 1,060 yards and 11 touchdowns. Roberson earned First Team All-District honors and was named the District's Special Teams MVP with 748 return yards, including a kick-return touchdown. He also ran track at Horn and set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.59), high jump (5'10), and long jump (19'5).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Roberson was the No. 112 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 110 recruit in the state of Texas. He originally committed to Kansas but decommitted halfway through his senior year and reopened his recruitment. Roberson had a final four of Illinois, Utah, Washington State and West Virginia, committing to the Mountaineers. After the 2017 season, he decided to leave Morgantown and transfer closer to home because of his parents being ill. He enrolled at SMU and was granted an eligibility waiver to join the team for the 2018 season. Roberson missed most of the 2020 season injured and elected to return for a fifth year in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to participate because of injury.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding speed (when healthy) ... uses an explosive top gear to separate from coverage or pursuit ... speed releases allow him to quickly enter his routes and win at the snap ... snaps off patterns with foot quickness in/out of his breaks ... tracks the deep ball well ... steady hands to make clean grabs and put the ball away ... can make the first man miss thanks to his acceleration ... return duties were sporadic, but has a 98-yard kick-return touchdown on his résumé ... named a senior captain and overcame the adversity of multiple season-ending injuries.

WEAKNESSES: Didn't look quite the same in 2021 compared to pre-injury tape ... didn't face much press in college and will face an adjustment period vs. bump-and-run NFL corners ... wasn't asked to run a full route tree in the SMU offense ... strong hands, but focus drops were a slight issue in 2021 ... doesn't appear comfortable with crowded catch points ... not very elusive in the open field, lacking fluid change-of-direction skills to pile up missed tackles ... suffered back-to-back season-ending injuries with a right foot injury (November 2019) and torn ACL in his left knee (October 2020).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at SMU, Roberson was the X receiver in former offensive coordinator Garrett Riley's version of the Air Raid scheme, lining up exclusively to the left of the formation. After transferring from West Virginia, he established himself as one of the best deep threats in college football for the Mustangs, becoming just the sixth player in school history with at least 2,700 receiving yards and 23 touchdown grabs (the previous five were all draft picks, including Courtland Sutton and Emmanuel Sanders). When healthy and at full speed, Roberson has explosive gear change as a route runner to out-pace cornerbacks at every level of the field. However, he didn't play with the same confidence in 2021 compared to his pre-injury tape, as his drops increased and his yards per catch decreased from 19.6 (2019-20) to 12.3 (2021). Overall, Roberson has the linear athleticism and tracking skills to be a deep-ball weapon at the next level, but his draft grade is dependent on medicals and whether or not teams have confidence he can return to his pre-injury form.

39. ISAIAH WESTON | Northern Iowa 6034 | 214 lbs. | rSR. Albertville, Minn. (St. Michael) 10/25/1997 (age 24.51) #80

BACKGROUND: Isaiah Weston, who is one of three children, was a multisport standout at St. Michael-Albertville High outside of Minneapolis. He earned All-Conference honors as a junior with 29 catches for 673 yards and seven touchdowns, adding a rushing touchdown. As a senior in 2015, Weston led St. Michael-Albertville to a 12-1 record and the conference, section and state championships. He was named District MVP as a senior and earned All-State honors with 41 catches for 933 yards (22.8 yards per catch) and 13 touchdowns. Weston also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests in the 110-meter hurdles (14.06), 300-meter hurdles (43.67), high jump (6'7) and long jump (23'5).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Weston was the No. 289 wide receiver in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 18 recruit in the state of Minnesota. He didn't receive an offer from Minnesota or any other FBS programs and committed to Northern Iowa over South Dakota State. He took advantage of the NCAA's extra season of eligibility and returned to UNI for a sixth season in 2021. Weston accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

PRO DAY	6035	211	32 1/8	9 3/4	78	-	-	-	-	-	4.40	7.27	- (stood on Combine runs, jumps, bench)

STRENGTHS: Impressive height/weight/speed athlete ... vertical acceleration to work the sideline and track over his shoulder ... averaged almost 23 yards per catch over his career ... decent job catching the football outside of his frame, occasionally showing off his full extension ... showed improved catch-point focus as a super senior ... can work back to deep sideline passes or avoid mid-route obstructions ... quick off the ball to work himself through the jam ... has the size to grow into a better blocker ... added more slot duties on his 2021 film ... led the team in receiving twice in the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't play up to his size with any consistency ... below-average effectiveness in traffic ... concentration levels drop quickly when defenders crowd his air space ... stiff-hipped at the stem, and broadcasts his intentions ... struggles to mix his gears to manipulate coverages ... minimal run-after-catch skills, and won't make anyone miss ... unimpressive functional strength and flexibility as a point-of-attack blocker ... suffered a torn ACL in camp (August 2018) and underwent season-ending surgery; battled injuries throughout the shortened 2020 season ... older prospect, and will be a 25-year-old NFL rookie ... FCS-only experience.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Northern Iowa, Weston was primarily an outside receiver in offensive coordinator Ryan Clanton's scheme, also seeing snaps in the slot. After missing the 2018 season with an ACL injury, he put himself on the NFL radar with an All-American 2019 season, averaging more than 21 yards per catch each of the past three seasons. Weston is a good-sized target with solid ball skills and speed that cornerbacks must respect. Despite his size, he doesn't use it consistently to gain an advantage, and he struggles to sink or explode in/out of his route breaks or after the catch. Overall, Weston has a narrow skill set that will limit his role on an NFL roster, but he has outstanding triangle numbers (height, weight, speed) to be a potential field-stretcher and WR4/WR5 for an NFL team.

SUMMARY: Slade Bolden was a standout baseball and football player at West Monroe High (No. 1 in his class academically with a 4.0 GPA). He earned 2017 Gatorade Player of the Year honors in Louisiana as a dual-threat quarterback with 3,082 yards (1,622 passing, 1,460 rushing) and 40 total touchdowns. A three-star recruit, he committed to Alabama over TCU as a wide receiver and became a starter in 2021, finishing third on the team in receptions behind Jameson Williams and John Metchie. Operating primarily out of the slot, Bolden is quicker than fast with an instinctive feel in the underneath passing game, allowing him to find zone pockets. Quarterbacks will appreciate his dependable hands and initial separation, but his catch radius is average, and he struggles to create his own space before and after the catch. Overall, Bolden is an ordinary size-speed athlete with clear limitations, but his toughness on special teams could help him secure an NFL slot role.

SUMMARY: Jequez Ezzard (Ezzurd) was born in Atlanta and attended Hapeville Charter Academy, where he was an All-Conference receiver and return man. Lightly recruited, he signed with FCS-level Howard, where he had back-to-back standout seasons before missing the 2019 season because of injury. He transferred to Sam Houston State and led the Bearkats to the 2020-21 FCS National Championship, earning All-American honors as a junior and senior. Ezzard has outstanding instincts with the ball in his hands, using elusive start-stop quickness to zig when defenders zag. He accounted for 10 receptions of 40-plus yards during the past two seasons but will struggle with physicality at the line and the catch point. He scored a touchdown once every 4.7 catches in college and averaged 12.3 yards as a punt returner. Overall, Ezzard is undersized and lacks ideal top-end speed, but he catches the ball well and skillfully shifts gears to force pursuit off-balance as a slot or returner.

SUMMARY: Samori (suh-MORE-ee) Toure (TOO-ray) grew up in Beaverton and Portland and became the all-time leading receiver at Westview High. A two-star recruit, he committed to FCS-level Montana, where he rewrote the school's record books with his All-American 2019 season. After the 2020 season was postponed, he transferred to Nebraska in January 2021 for his final season and led the Huskers in receiving, including two 70-plus-yard catches (only Alabama's Jameson Williams had more). Toure is a salesman in his routes with the pacing and controlled feet to create pockets of separation at the stem. He caught the ball well on his Nebraska tape, with the focus to track without slowing his momentum. However, he needs to improve his balance through contact and in the open field to shake tacklers. Overall, Toure struggles with physical press coverage and crowded catch points, but he has the explosive route speed to earn a spot on an NFL depth chart.

SUMMARY: Johnny Johnson III transferred from Buckeye Verrado to Chandler High prior to his junior season (teammates with N'Keal Harry). As a senior, he led Chandler to the 2016 state championship with 77 catches for 1,274 yards and eight touchdowns. A three-star recruit, he had only one offer (UNLV) until Oregon reached out with a scholarship. He had his best season in 2019 with a team-best 836 receiving yards and finished his Ducks career with 139 receptions. Johnson has experience working inside, outside and at every level of the field and put a deep inventory of routes on tape. He flashes short-area burst for quick passing windows and some juice after the catch. However, he can be outmuscled up and down the field and needs to be more of a playmaker when the ball is in the air. Overall, Johnson is a quality pass catching prospect who lacks distinguishing traits, which will make it tough for him to pass more talented receivers on the depth chart.

SUMMARY: Michael “Mike” Woods II was a three-year starting receiver at Magnolia High, where he combined for 155 catches, 2,988 receiving yards and 41 touchdowns in 31 games over his final three prep seasons. A three-star recruit, he originally committed to SMU before following Chad Morris to Arkansas when he became the Razorbacks’ head coach. After three seasons, he sought out a more explosive offense and transferred to Oklahoma for the 2021 season. Woods has a long, slender frame with some build-up speed to stack coverage on vertical patterns. He uses his length to reach back or snatch the ball outside of his frame, but focus drops plagued him during his career. He is a linear route runner and lacks the instincts or stem deception to routinely snap his hips and create easy separation. Overall, Woods displays a rangy catch radius and long-striding athleticism, but doesn’t have any special qualities to distinguish him on an NFL depth chart.

SUMMARY: Jerreth Sterns, who is one of seven children, played both ways for former NFL quarterback Jon Kitna at Waxahachie High, finishing his senior year with 18 touchdowns and eight interceptions. Unlike his older brother (Caden) who was a five-star recruit, Jerreth was only a two-star recruit and signed with Houston Baptist. He caught passes from Bailey Zappe there, and along with Zappe he transferred to Western Kentucky for the 2021 season and led the FBS in receiving. Sterns is undersized and doesn’t have acceleration that threatens coverage. Though he is a smaller target, he catches the ball cleanly and plays with the toughness of a bigger player. He feasted on underneath zones but does have the route-running ability to attack the intermediate and post. Overall, Sterns is small and lacks explosive top-end speed, which is a tough combination to overcome in the NFL, but his elite production, strong hands and ability to find space give him a chance in the slot.

SUMMARY: Davontavean “Tay” Martin was a three-sport (basketball, football, track) star at Ellender Memorial in Houma. He earned first team all-state as a senior with 45 catches for 751 yards and eight touchdowns, adding two interceptions on defense. A three-star recruit, he flipped from Tulane to Washington State, where he started for two seasons. In order to be closer to home (has a three-year old daughter and three younger siblings), he transferred to Oklahoma State, backing up Tylan Wallace in 2020 and leading the team in receiving in 2021. Martin is a tall, lean athlete with natural flexibility and route pacing to give his quarterback a target. He uses his length to make athletic adjustments on the football, and crowded catch points don’t bother him, which is important because he struggles to separate on his own. Overall, Martin is a quicker-than-fast athlete who must improve his drop rate, but he plays strong through contact with the mindset of an X wideout.

SUMMARY: Deven Thompkins played at three different high schools in four years, including his senior season at Dunbar as a receiver and cornerback. As a recruit, he heard from a few FCS-level programs until Utah State entered the picture with an offer. After three productive seasons, he briefly entered the transfer portal (has two children under four years old and had recently split from his wife), but he returned in 2021 and had an All-American senior year with a school-record 102 catches for 1,704 receiving yards. Thompkins is an undersized target for the quarterback, but he makes fluid adjustments and catches the ball in stride (only eight drops on 276 career targets). He flashes twitch in his lower body as a route runner, but it is important for him to win early because physical defenders can disrupt his route timing. Overall, Thompkins is small and not getting any bigger, he is a fearless competitor with dependable ball skills and explosive speed worthy of slot snaps in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Britain Covey was a do-everything quarterback at Timpview High, leading the team to 26 consecutive wins, including back-to-back 4A state titles. He signed with Utah and was a Freshman All-American before taking a two-year religious mission in Chile. He returned in 2018 and was the team's leading receiver before a right knee injury hindered him during the 2019 season. He returned in 2021 and again earned All-American status as a return man. Covey is an electric athlete with the innate proximity awareness and cutting quickness that makes him a dangerous returner. He averaged 11.7 yards per punt return with five career touchdowns on special teams (four punt returns, one kick return). He is an undersized target in the passing game, but he separates underneath and creates YAC plays for himself. Overall, Covey is role specific, but his instinctive vision and suddenness give him a realistic chance of playing in the NFL as a slot and return man.

1. TREY MCBRIDE | Colorado State 6035 | 246 lbs. | SR. Fort Morgan, Colo. (Fort Morgan) 11/22/1999 (age 22.43) #85

BACKGROUND: Trey McBride, who is one of five children, was born in Greeley, Colo., and moved with his family to Fort Morgan (80 miles east of Denver) in 2003 where he started playing football at 6. He was a three-sport standout at Fort Morgan High and set the school records for points in basketball and home runs and RBIs in baseball. On the football field, McBride was a four-year letterman and played on both sides of the ball, lining up at nine positions over his career. He earned First Team All-State and team MVP honors as a junior and senior, despite missing part of his final season with a collarbone injury. McBride finished his prep career with 89 catches for 1,737 yards and 23 touchdowns, adding 361 rushing yards and three touchdowns. On defense, he totaled 310 tackles, 14.0 sacks, and seven interceptions and also had six blocked punts on special teams.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McBride was the No. 67 tight end in the country and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Colorado. He received offers from several FBS programs like California, Colorado, Kansas State and Wyoming, but Colorado State got an early start from recruiting his older brother. McBride committed to Colorado State during his senior year. He has lesbian parents (Kate and Jennifer) who had five children via four different sperm donors (Trey has never met his biological father). His older brother (Toby) just finished a six-year career as a defensive end at Colorado State (2016-21). Trey's twin brother (Dylan) wrestled collegiately at Western Colorado. McBride accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

WEAKNESSES: Will lean into his routes and take away any mystery where he is headed ... must do a better job mixing his route speeds ... not going to force many missed tackles after the catch ... doesn't have the inline power to control defenders as a blocker ... must do a better job repositioning his feet and hands after initial contact ... struggles to win blocking angles vs. twitchy defenders ... long-armed defenders can attack his chest and steer him ... too many penalties (eight) for a senior, including multiple holding calls ... had a touchdown called back on the Toledo tape for his blocking below the waist ... his production as a receiver plummeted in the red zone (CSU offense relied on the run game in the red zone) ... below average touchdown production, averaging a touchdown every 16.4 receptions.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Colorado State, McBride lined up predominantly inline and wing in former head coach Steve Addazio's run-focused offense. The 2021 Mackey Award winner, he became the first tight end in school history to lead the team in receiving since 1984 (did it twice) and became just the fourth player in MWC history to earn unanimous All-American status (first in Colorado State history). McBride is a reliable target over the middle of the field with excellent hands, natural ball adjustments and the competitive toughness to finish through contact. He lacks deception in his routes to easily shake coverage and must do a better job re-setting his hands and feet as a blocker once defenders attack his frame. Overall, McBride is a better version of Hayden Hurst – not super dynamic, but a competitive receiver and blocker with the reliable focus and urgency that will translate to the NFL game. He can play either the Y or F tight end positions.

----	---------------------	------------------------	--------------------------------	-----------------------	-----

BACKGROUND: Greg Dulcich (Dull-sitch), who is the youngest of four children, grew up in Glendale (10 miles north of downtown Los Angeles). He attended St. Francis High in La Canada Flintridge where he played quarterback on the junior varsity team as a sophomore. Dulcich moved up to varsity as a junior and shifted to a hybrid tight end role, catching 30 passes for 406 yards and four touchdowns in 2016. He became the team's go-to pass-catcher as a senior and led St. Francis to a 12-2 record and a spot in the 2017 state championship game. Dulcich finished his final season with 50 catches for 1,168 yards and 12 touchdowns, adding two touchdown passes as the backup quarterback and 21 tackles and two pass break-ups on defense. He was also a standout basketball player at St. Francis.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Dulcich wasn't ranked by the online recruiting services for the 2018 recruiting class and struggled to attract interest from FBS programs. His productive senior season helped him earn late offers from FCS programs like Eastern Illinois, Columbia and San Diego, but at only 215 pounds, he couldn't get any Pac-12 teams to bite. His high school head coach (Jim Bonds) played quarterback at UCLA and helped Dulcich receive a preferred walk-on opportunity with the Bruins. Dulcich redshirted in 2018 and filled out his frame and he was put on scholarship on his 20th birthday (March 2020). He graduated with his bachelor's degree in political science (December 2021). He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Dulcich accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Explosive athlete out of the slot ... has take-it-the-distance speed and does a lot of his damage on crossers where he can pluck in stride ... quickly attacks vacated zones, snaps his hips and gives the quarterback a clear target ... his acceleration leads to big plays (six catches of 30-plus yards in 2021) ... long arms and steady hands to expand his catch radius ... outstanding first-down rate (76.5%) over the last two seasons ... able to make the first guy miss after the catch ... high achiever on and off the field, earning Academic All-American status in 2021 with a 3.52 GPA (UCLA head coach Chip Kelly: "His work ethic is off the charts.") ... has some growth potential to add more mass to his frame (added 35 pounds since he enrolled at UCLA) ... excellent production the last two seasons, leading Pac-12 tight ends in receiving in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Average-sized frame with lean limbs ... doesn't have the functional strength to control the point of attack as a blocker ... wears down quickly in pass protection ... inconsistent with his hand placement and leverage points ... blocks with wide hands, which often leads to obvious holds (flagged for holding three times in 2021) ... his "want-to" as a blocker is OK, but can be better ... lowers his eyes and gets his upper half overextended in the run game ... gets upright in his routes and lacks fluidity at the stem ... can do a better job sealing defenders off the passing lane.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at UCLA, Dulcich was a hybrid Y tight end in head coach Chip Kelly's offense, splitting his snaps 50/50 between inline and detached. A former walk-on, he became a starter prior to the 2020 season and led the Bruins in receiving each of the last two years, adding a big-play threat to the offense (three touchdown catches of 50-plus yards). Dulcich is at his best as a "big slot" with his ability to find open zones or attack the seam/crossers with his pull-away acceleration (averaged 17.6 yards per catch in his career). As a blocker, his pass protection has a quick expiration date and he needs to continue developing his play strength and hand technique. Overall, Dulcich needs continued maturation as a blocker, but he is explosive as a pass-catcher with a good-sized catch radius and separation burst before and after the catch. He projects best as an "F" tight end in the NFL with mismatch value.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 80 overall)

3. JEREMY RUCKERT | Ohio State 6054 | 252 lbs. | SR. Lindenhurst, N.Y. (Lindenhurst) 8/11/2000 (age 21.71) #88

BACKGROUND: Jeremy Ruckert, who is the oldest of two boys, was born and raised in Lindenhurst (located on the southern shore of Long Island). Soccer was his go-to sport growing up and he was a standout goalkeeper on club teams through middle school and into high school. After he enrolled at Lindenhurst High, Ruckert switched his focus to football and played both ways as a wide receiver on offense and linebacker on defense. He earned First Team All-Long Island honors each of his final three seasons and had his best year as a senior, leading Lindenhurst to a 12-0 record and the school's first state title in 2017. Ruckert finished his senior year with 61 catches for 1,094 yards and 13 touchdowns and was named First Team All-USA Today and New York's Gatorade State Player of the Year. He added 61 tackles, 13.0 sacks and two interceptions as a senior on defense. Ruckert finished his prep career with 222 receptions for 3,133 yards and 37 touchdowns.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ruckert was the No. 2 tight end in the 2018 recruiting class (behind Brevin Jordan) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of New York. Every major college program (Alabama, LSU, Texas, etc.) offered him a scholarship, but he narrowed his final choice to Michigan, Notre Dame, Ohio State and Wisconsin. The summer before his senior year, Ruckert committed to Urban Meyer and the Buckeyes. His younger brother (Will) is a rising junior defensive lineman at Division-III SUNY Cortland. Ruckert graduated with his degree in human development and family sciences (August 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but missed the second half of the week after suffering a foot injury.

STRENGTHS: Large, strong hands and routinely catches outside his frame ... remarkable hand-eye coordination and trains his brain speed to master his ball-catching focus ... average long-speed, but accelerates quickly with his first step ... shows patience and flexibility at the stem and is a stickler for route details ... won't shrink vs. physical coverage ... has the frame to bounce off tackle attempts ... physical appetite as a blocker and blows up backside defenders ... unselfish player and embraced his role in the OSU offense ... the Buckeyes strength staff says he is "never satisfied" with his improvements and doesn't have an "unmotivated bone in his body" ... scored a touchdown every 4.5 catches in college ... finished his career second all-time in school history in touchdowns catches (12) by a tight end ... durable college career (47 games played) and stayed off the injury list.

WEAKNESSES: Hard-charging blocker, but his overaggressive mentality often leaves him off-balance ... shorter arms and struggles to break down as an on-the-move blocker ... a high school wide receiver who is still learning pass protection angles ... limited route tree in college ... sets up his routes well, his separation is average ... unproven attacking the downfield seam – only eight career targets (five catches) on throws that traveled 20-plus yards in the air ... only one career catch over 30 yards ... lacks elusive qualities and non-threatening after the catch (averaged only 4.8 YAC per reception in his career) ... lackluster receiving production and never had more than 57 yards in a single game in college (only two games above 50 yards receiving) ... suffered plantar fasciitis to his left foot at the Senior Bowl and was sidelined for the Combine.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Ohio State, Ruckert worked primarily inline and in the slot in head coach Ryan Day's offense (mostly "11" personnel). He played 714 offensive snaps as a senior, but the tight end position in OSU's offense is used mostly as a blocker or decoy as he saw only 39 targets in 2021 (3.0 targets per game) after totaling only 34 targets his first three years combined. An athletic big man, Ruckert was a standout soccer goalie growing up, which helped develop his ball skills on the football field, showing the toughness and concentration to finish catches through contact. He fires out of his stance as a blocker, but often to the detriment of his balance, struggling to establish point-of-attack leverage. Overall, Ruckert must become a more consistent blocker, but he is a strong-willed athlete and ball-winner who can make natural adjustments because of his flexibility and focus. He is a strong candidate to be a better pro than college player with a skill set reminiscent of Adam Trautman.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 85 overall)

4. CADE OTTON | Washington 6050 | 247 lbs. | rSR. Tumwater, Wash. (Tumwater) 4/15/1999 (age 23.04) #87

BACKGROUND: Cade Otton was born into a football family in Tumwater, located just outside the capital city of Olympia. He played for his grandfather, legendary high school football coach Sid Otton, at Tumwater High and helped lead the team to four consecutive playoff appearances and a 47-5 record. Never leaving the field, Otton was a three-way player at linebacker, tight end and long-snapper and made varsity as a freshman. As a junior, he led Tumwater to a 13-1 record and the 2015 2A state championship game, earning All-State honors at tight end and linebacker. As a senior, Otton was named the 2A state player of the year and Conference MVP with 39 receptions for 733 yards and 13 touchdowns on offense and 107 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and 3.0 sacks on defense. He finished his career with school records for catches (95), receiving yards (1,705) and receiving touchdowns (33), adding 284 total tackles on defense. Otton also lettered in basketball at Tumwater.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Otton was the No. 23 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of Washington (No. 2 tight end in the state behind Hunter Bryant). He received scholarship offers from Power 5 teams like BYU, Nebraska and Washington as well as a few Ivy League programs like Harvard and Yale. Otton committed to the Huskies the summer before his senior year. He married his wife (Sierra), who he met in the eighth grade and dated since high school, in January 2021. His grandfather (Sid) coached high school football for 49 seasons and is the all-time winningest coach in state history, including six state championships. His father (Tim) was the defensive coordinator at Tumwater under his head coach father. His uncle (Brad) was a two-year starting quarterback at USC (1994-96) and went undrafted in the 1997 NFL Draft before signing with the Washington Redskins. Otton accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but was unable to participate due to injury.

STRENGTHS: Passes the eye test with a solidly built frame ... natural hands-catcher outside his frame ... excellent body control to track, extend and snag without breaking stride ... balanced and disciplined as a route-runner ... uses body/head fakes to leverage the middle of the field ... gets the most out of every time he touches the ball, lowering his pads and keeping his feet alive ... physical inline blocker and runs his feet at the point of attack ... resets himself mid-block to sustain ... improved blocking awareness in both the run game and passing game ... outstanding personal and football character and grew up in a family of football coaches ... stayed off the injured list for the first 39 games of his career before his season-ending ankle injury as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Average speed player ... lacks burst out of his breaks to surprise defenders ... doesn't have elusive traits and won't scare defenses after the catch ... wasn't asked to stretch the seam on 2021 film and was hidden underneath ... needs to do a better job turning into a defensive back to prevent interceptions when targeted ... ball security can be better (two fumbles on 91 catches) ... needs to do a better job moving his feet as a blocker to stay in lockstep with his hands and upper body ... average hip snap to shock defensive ends at contact ... minimal special teams experience outside of field-goal attempts ... missed final two games of his senior year and most of the pre-draft process because of a left ankle injury (November 2021), which required surgery ... below average production (single-digit career touchdowns) and never reached 350 receiving yards in a single season.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Washington, Otton spent the majority of his time inline with his hand on the ground in former offensive coordinator John Donovan's pro-style scheme. After a productive sophomore year under Chris Petersen, he was criminally underutilized the last two years, averaging only 8.9 yards per catch as a senior (only 46.4% of his receptions resulted in a first down or touchdown). The grandson of the all-time winningest high school head coach in the state of Washington, Otton is stout and athletic in the passing game as both a route-runner and blocker and he is physical to the football with the hand strength to sustain catches through contact. He is comfortable doing the dirty work, but too often he clutches with his hands while his stagnant feet attempt to catch up. Overall, Otton lacks dynamic traits before or after the catch, but he is a catch-point finisher, nuanced route-runner, and he takes his blocking responsibilities seriously. He projects as a prototypical Y tight end in the NFL.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 92 overall)

5. JELANI WOODS | Virginia 6071 | 253 lbs. | rSR. Ellenwood, Ga. (Cedar Grove) 10/9/1998 (age 23.55) #0

BACKGROUND: Jelani (juh-LAW-nee) Woods, who is the youngest of three boys, grew up in the southeast Atlanta suburbs and played football at the youth level. He started playing quarterback in middle school and continued playing at Cedar Grove High, where he was high school teammates with fellow 2022 NFL prospects DeAngelo Malone (Western Kentucky), Justin Schaffer (Georgia) and Antwuan Jackson (Ohio State). He was a four-year varsity letterman at quarterback and posted 66.7% completions, 1,489 passing yards, and 16 touchdowns as a sophomore. Woods led Cedar Grove to an 11-win season in 2015 with 62% completions, 1,992 passing yards and 20 touchdowns. As a senior, he led Cedar Grove to a 13-2 record and the program's first state championship, defeating QB Davis Mills and Greater Atlanta Christian in the title game. Woods was named the Region's Athlete of the Year and Honorable Mention All-State, finishing the 2016 season with 2,316 passing yards and 26 touchdowns. He also lettered in basketball and earned Honorable Mention All-State honors as a junior (didn't play as a senior).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Woods was the No. 31 pro-style quarterback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 70 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received a few Division I offers in basketball, but the better offers came in football from schools like Michigan and South Carolina before committing to Oklahoma State after his junior year. He signed as a quarterback, but he transitioned to a tight end role during his redshirt year in 2017. After the 2020 season, Woods entered the transfer portal and transferred to Virginia for the 2021 season. His older brother (Jay) was born with a moderate intellectual disability and struggles with mental and motor function. He graduated with his degree in management from Oklahoma State and is two classes away from his master's degree in higher education (wants to be an athletic counselor after the NFL). Woods accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Large-framed, rangy target with the arm length that makes some offensive tackles jealous ... has the long-striding acceleration to quickly chew up grass and attack the defender's leverage ... can work in the deep third of the field ... nice job settling his feet at the stem to make clean breaks ... uses his long arms and body control to pull in throws away from his frame ... his concentration doesn't fade in traffic over the middle ... runs physical through contact to break tackles ... aggressive latch-and-control blocker to shield defenders in the run game ... zero blocking penalties in 2021 ... had a career year as a senior, toughing out a foot injury ... scored a touchdown in eight of 11 games in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: His speed is more build up than immediate ... only average change-of-direction athleticism ... not going to threaten defenses after the catch (only three career catches of 35-plus yards) ... tends to drift as a route-runner and can tighten things up ... strong at the catch point, but had several double-catches on tape and there is room for him to eliminate the drops ... does a nice job as a blocker, but wasn't asked to pass block much on his 2021 tape, leaving some questions ... missed one game (and parts of others) as a senior because of a right foot injury (September 2021) ... will be a 24-year-old NFL rookie ... only one season of top-tier receiving production.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Virginia, Woods was an inline tight end in former offensive coordinator Robert Anae's balanced scheme. After transitioning from quarterback to "Cowboy Back" at Oklahoma State, he transferred to the Cavaliers for his final season and had a career year in 2021, finishing top 5 in the FBS in touchdowns among tight ends. Woods is a large-sized target with outstanding body control, wingspan and focus to expand his catch radius (70.5% of his receptions in 2021 resulted in a first down or touchdown). He isn't fluid in his releases or explosive in his routes, but he was at his best on one-cut patterns over the middle of the field (posts, corners, etc.), showing the plant-and-go athleticism to challenge coverage. Overall, Woods needs to tighten up his route-running and overall consistency, but his size, blocking potential and catch point upside are an attractive package. A prototypical Y tight end at the next level, he caters his game after Mercedes Lewis and it shows.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round (No. 98 overall)

6. CHARLIE KOLAR | Iowa State 6064 | 252 lbs. | rSR. Norman, Okla. (North) 2/10/1999 (age 23.22) #88

BACKGROUND: Charlie "Chuck" Kolar (COE-lurr), who is one of five children, was born and raised in the same house in Norman for the first 18 years of his life. He grew up playing every sport, but focused on basketball and football at Norman North High. A three-year varsity starter at tight end, Kolar made his varsity debut as a sophomore and caught passes from his older brother, who was a senior quarterback. He earned All-Conference honors as a junior with 52 catches for 920 yards and 13 touchdowns. As a senior, he led North to a 12-1 record and the Class 6A state championship game. Kolar finished the 2016 season with 66 receptions for 1,240 yards and 12 touchdowns to earn First Team All-State honors. He finished his prep career with 139 catches for 2,440 yards and 31 touchdowns. Kolar was also a starting post player on the basketball team and was teammates with Atlanta Hawks guard Trae Young. He scored a 35 on the ACT (36 is a perfect score).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Kolar was the No. 57 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 20 recruit in the state of Oklahoma. He grew up near the Oklahoma campus and both of his parents work at the university, but that offer never arrived. His recruitment started to pick up after his junior season and he committed to Iowa State, one of his first offers, prior to his senior year. Oklahoma State made a late run at him, but he stayed loyal to Iowa State. His older brother (John) played quarterback at Oklahoma State (2015-18) before transferring to Iowa State (2019) and rejoined his brother for his final season of eligibility. His mother (Maria), who is a professor at Oklahoma, played volleyball at Notre Dame. His father (Randy) is the Director of the School of Civil Engineering and Environmental Science at Oklahoma. Kolar graduated with his degree in mechanical engineering (December 2020) and a 3.99 GPA, ranking in the highest 2 percent of engineering students at Iowa State. He is currently pursuing a postgraduate degree in finance. Kolar accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall, long frame and towers over defenders ... physical to the football and consistently wins in a crowd because of his strong hands and focus ... able to locate, adjust and attack throws away from his eye level ... smooth athleticism into his routes and out of his breaks and finds space to work ... at his best when he attacks the route stem and creates separation with his physicality ... sky high first down rate with 129 of his 168 career grabs (76.8%) resulting in a first down or touchdown ... the son of two college professors and won the 2021 William V. Campbell Trophy (Academic Heisman) ... the only three-time CoSIDA First Team Academic All-American (2019-21) ... named a senior captain and called an "elite competitor" by head coach Matt Campbell ... the most productive tight end in Iowa State history.

WEAKNESSES: Plays with non-threatening speed and limited down-the-seam value ... doesn't have explosive traits or identifiable separation quickness ... his routes are basic and calculable ... guilty of using his arms to push off at the top of routes, even when he doesn't need to ... appears surprised when defenders match his physicality mid-route, which disrupts his timing and cadence ... doesn't scare defenses after the catch and doesn't break as many tackles as his frame suggests ... fumbled twice as a senior ... too passive as a run blocker and needs to be quicker sorting through things ... average-at-best striking power in his blocking hands ... struggles to reset and sustain after his initial attack fades, allowing defenders to shed and get by him.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Iowa State, Kolar was used primarily in the slot and attached inline in offensive coordinator Tom Manning's scheme, which utilized multiple tight end sets. The only three-time All-American in Cyclones history, he holds every tight end record in school history and his 23 career touchdown catches ranks third-most at Iowa State (behind Todd Blythe and Allen Lazard). Kolar is a quarterback's best friend because he makes himself available, has a large catch radius and is strong to the football. He is one of the smartest, most competitive players in this draft class, but needs to improve his point of attack and sustain skills as a blocker to expand his role. Overall, Kolar won't threaten defenses vertically and his blocking leaves a lot to be desired, but he is a big, dependable chain-mover and his ability to finish in contested situations is his calling card. He projects as a high-floor, rotational Y tight end in the NFL who can earn his paycheck in the red zone.

7. DANIEL BELLINGER | San Diego State 6047 | 253 lbs. | SR. Las Vegas, Nev. (Palo Verde) 9/22/2000 (age 21.60) #88

BACKGROUND: Daniel Bellinger, who has two siblings, was born and raised in Las Vegas and attended Palo Verde High. He was a three-sport letterman and played both ways on the football field as a linebacker and tight end. As a junior, Bellinger earned All-Conference on defense with 61 tackles, two forced fumbles and 1.0 sack, adding six receptions for 54 yards on offense. He earned First Team All-State honors as a senior linebacker, leading the team with 131 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss, 3.0 sacks and two forced fumbles. He also earned All-Conference honors on both offense and defense, finishing with 21 receptions for 371 yards and three touchdowns at tight end. Bellinger was a Second Team All-Conference forward on the basketball team and lettered in track, setting personal-bests in the 100 meters (11.04), 200 meters (23.04) and 400 meters (51.96). He was part of a 4x100 relay team that finished third at the 2018 Nevada state championships.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Bellinger was the No. 104 tight end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 14 recruit in the state of Nevada. He was recruited as a linebacker by some programs and tight end by others. Bellinger received his first offer from UNLV as a junior followed by San Diego State the summer before his senior year. He committed to the Aztecs and stayed loyal to his pledge after Cal, his lone offer from a Power 5 program, entered the picture. Bellinger has a younger (by four minutes) twin sister (Betsy), who was a track and flag football standout in high school. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl and won the practice award as the top tight end on the American squad.

STRENGTHS: Built for the NFL game with his frame and bulk ... swallows the ball with his large, accepting hands ... steady focus to watch the ball into his mitts (zero drops as a senior) ... trusts his tracking skills to locate, extend and snag with a defender on his hip ... swift strider to attack the seam ... coordinated footwork to transition at the top of routes without losing momentum ... seals the edge on down blocks ... physical hands and executes well with pins and hooks ... takes pride in his competitive demeanor in the blocking game ... voted a senior captain ... was a regular on kick and punt coverages each of the last three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Flashes burst at times out of his breaks, but more of a one-speed route-runner and struggles to set up his moves ... ran a lot of quick game and his downfield route tree needs work (only 42.3% of his catches the last two seasons resulted in a first down or touchdown) ... catches the ball well in stride, but not elusive and won't be a productive YAC threat ... needs to be quicker with his blocking hands into defenders ... not a consistent drive blocker in the run game ... five penalties as a senior (three false starts, two holding penalties) ... below average receiving production and you can count his career touchdowns on one hand ... played through numerous injuries and scouts have questioned long-term durability.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at San Diego State, Bellinger was the Y tight end in offensive coordinator Jeff Hecklinski's run-heavy scheme, lining up primarily inline. Although his targets steadily increased each season, his lackluster receiving production stands out, never reaching 360 receiving yards in a season and surpassing 65 yards receiving in a game only once (out of 43 career games). Even though he lacks instincts as a route-runner to easily uncover, Bellinger is an above average athlete for his size with natural body control and hands to cleanly catch the football. As a blocker, he is balanced and strong-minded to execute his assignments, but he lacks people-moving power in the run game. Overall, Bellinger has unimpressive receiving production and doesn't always play up to his timed speed, but he has natural ball skills and a detailed approach as a blocker. With his toughness and versatility, he projects as a backup Y tight end with upside.

GRADE: 4th Round

8. ISAIAH LIKELY | Coastal Carolina 6044 | 245 lbs. | SR. Cambridge, Mass. (Everett) 4/18/2000 (age 22.03) #4

BACKGROUND: Isaiah Likely was born and raised in Cambridge, just outside of downtown Boston. He started playing football at age 4 and then picked up basketball in the fourth grade. He attended Malden High where he played running back as a freshman before moving to safety as a sophomore. Likely became a starting wide receiver and defensive end as a junior and finished with 59 catches for 917 yards and 11 touchdowns, adding 17.0 sacks on defense. After his junior season, he transferred to Everett High, where he earned All-State honors at wide receiver (10 touchdowns) while also making plays at cornerback. Likely led the team to a 12-0 record and 2017 Division I state championship. He also lettered in basketball and became a varsity starter as a sophomore, averaging 12.7 points per game as a shooting guard.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Likely was the No. 172 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Massachusetts. He was primarily recruited as a wide receiver and received scholarship offers from several FCS programs (Bethune-Cookman, Bryant, Rhode Island, Sacred Heart) and a few FBS teams like Southern Miss and Massachusetts. However, Coastal Carolina sold him on becoming a hybrid tight end that they could feature in the offense. Likely graduated with his degree in recreation and sport management (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	238	-	-	-	4.82	2.79	1.70	-	10'3"	-	7.39	15 (stood on Combine measurements)

STRENGTHS: Above average athlete and a threat at all three levels ... excellent release quickness and acceleration into his routes ... uncovers with suddenness and timing in and out of his breaks ... productive catch-and-run target with speed to create big plays (five catches of 55-plus yards over the last two seasons) ... sticky hands and drops were rare on film (only one drop on 77 targets in 2021) ... makes fluid adjustments to the football thanks to his loose hips and hand-eye coordination ... his confidence level seemed to grow each season ... gives effort as a blocker ... physically and mentally tough and his coaches say he routinely played through injuries ... has a nose for the end zone and his 27 receiving touchdowns ranks third-most in program history (also holds the single-game record with four touchdown grabs) ... became the fifth player in school history to surpass 2,000 receiving yards.

WEAKNESSES: Lean, average-sized frame with marginal bulk and length for the position ... doesn't have the play strength to control defenders at the point of attack ... must improve his body positioning and sustain ability as a blocker ... when blocking on the move, he needs to show better breakdown skills when attempting to pick off defenders ... allows contact mid-route to disrupt his cadence ... needs to show more authority and maintain his focus with crowded catch points ... underwent offseason ankle surgery following the 2020 season.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Coastal Carolina, Likely was a versatile tight end in head coach Jamey Chadwell's spread offense, motioning across the formation and evenly splitting his snaps between slot/outside and inline. A high school wide receiver, he grew into one of the most productive tight ends in college football, finishing No. 2 in the FBS in receiving yards (912) and touchdowns (12) as a senior. Likely is a quarterback's best friend with his ability to snap out of his breaks, make himself available mid-route, and consistently pluck balls outside his frame. He is more of an oversized wideout than traditional tight end, but he plays with toughness and shows dangerous YAC skills (responsible for 14 receptions of 20-plus yards in 2021, including a 99-yard touchdown catch and run). Overall, Likely needs to be more physical and efficient as a blocker, but he has playmaking potential thanks to his loose athleticism before and after the catch and body coordination to make remarkable adjustments on the football. He projects as an "F" tight end with NFL starting potential.

9. JAMES MITCHELL | Virginia Tech 6040 | 249 lbs. | rJR. Big Stone Gap, Va. (Union) 8/11/1999 (age 22.71) #82

BACKGROUND: James Mitchell, who is one of four children, was born in Norton, Va., and developed a love for basketball and football at a young age. He attended Union High, where he was an immediate two-sport start and four-year letterman. Mitchell saw playing time at wide receiver, tight end and quarterback on offense, as well as linebacker and safety on defense and return man on special teams. He earned First Team All-State honors all four seasons as a pass-catcher, including 2017 Class 2A Offensive Player of the Year honors as a senior. Mitchell was also a four-year starter on the basketball team, finishing his prep career with more than 1,000 points.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Mitchell was the No. 62 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Virginia. He narrowed down his scholarship list to a final five: Duke, Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia Tech, committing to the Hokies after his senior season. His father is a pastor and coach and won a high school state championship in basketball in 1974. His mother (Marcia) played college basketball at Brown and ranks top 10 in school history in career rebounds. Mitchell graduated with his degree. Despite missing most of the 2021 season due to a torn ACL, Mitchell decided to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6040	248	33	9 7/8	78 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	18 (bench only – right knee)

STRENGTHS: Accelerates quickly into his routes and attacks the leverage of defenders ... has the route movements of a wide receiver ... his speed allows him to get over top linebackers and work himself open at the second and third levels (71.2% first down/touchdown rate in his career) ... his traits translate very well in the red zone ... natural hands-catcher through contact ... loose adjustment skills with the concentration to consistently snare outside his frame ... tenacious blocker and looks to run his feet to finish at contact ... constantly chopping his feet and attempting to reset his blocking leverage ... named a captain in his final season ... humble personality and someone the coaches go out of their way to talk about.

WEAKNESSES: Will round some routes and can do a better job lulling corners before shifting gears ... low missed tackle count on tape and much of his YAC opportunities were schemed for him ... his lack of length shows when long-armed defenders get into his body as a blocker ... average play strength in his hands ... his seal angles need to improve to prevent leakage ... below average production in college (only three career games with 75-plus yards and two of those came in 2019) ... his medical evaluation is critical after missing almost all of his final season with a torn ACL in his right knee (September 2021), which required surgery.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Virginia Tech, Mitchell was a versatile tight end in former offensive coordinator Brad Cornelsen's offense, splitting his time inline and in the slot. His final college numbers look more like a single-season stat line than career production, but an inconsistent Hokies' passing game and ACL injury as a senior put his career trajectory on a different path. Mitchell is a basketball athlete on grass with the scheme versatility to attack defenses in different ways. As a blocker, he doesn't have the power to control the point of attack, but he can work himself into position, ride the bull and get the job done, especially as a zone blocker. Overall, Mitchell needs to stay healthy and cultivate elements of his game, but he is a three-level pass-catching threat with outstanding body control and hand strength. He has NFL starting potential as an H-back and would be drafted higher if not for his knee injury.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

10. JAKE FERGUSON | Wisconsin 6047 | 250 lbs. | rSR. Madison, Wis. (Memorial) 1/18/1999 (age 23.28) #84

BACKGROUND: Jonathan “Jake” Ferguson, who is the younger of two boys, grew up in Madison and was often around the Wisconsin football team as the grandson of Barry Alvarez, who was the Badgers head coach (1990-2005) and athletic director (2004-21). He attended Madison Memorial High, where he was a three-sport letterman. A three-year team captain, Ferguson finished with 133 tackles, 22.0 tackles for loss and three interceptions as a sophomore linebacker. As a junior, he earned First Team All-Conference honors as a wide receiver and linebacker, recording 63 catches for 991 yards and eight touchdowns on offense and 99 tackles on defense. Ferguson battled through injuries as a senior and finished his prep career with 1,795 receiving yards and 15 touchdowns and 314 tackles, 29.0 tackles for loss and five interceptions. He also earned all-conference honors in basketball as a junior and senior and lettered in baseball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Ferguson was the No. 13 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Wisconsin. He did his due diligence and considered offers from Iowa and Nebraska, but with his family connections and up-bringing in Madison, he signed with the Badgers. His older brother (Joe) played safety at Wisconsin (2013-17) and was Jake’s teammate for one season. His father (Brad) played linebacker at Nebraska (1986-88), which is where he met Jake’s mother (Dawn Alvarez Thomas). Ferguson graduated with his degree in Communication Arts (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Averaged-sized target ... strong hands to snatch-and-secure, holding on after big hits ... appears unfazed when required to finish in traffic ... athletic feet to square off routes or post up in zone coverage ... feels defenders around him and comfortable working the middle of the field ... displays the run balance to challenge would-be tacklers after the catch ... competitive blocker, especially in the run game, and usually gets the job done ... the Wisconsin coaches say he isn’t afraid to address the team and be a vocal leader ... consistently productive and set a school-record with a catch in 47 consecutive games (every game of his career) ... finished his career third all-time in receiving yards by a tight end in school history (10 yards behind Troy Fumagalli).

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal bulk or growth potential for the position ... shorter arms and his catch radius is ordinary ... doesn’t have the speed to threaten the seam or deep half of the field (145 career catches and his longest catch was 36 yards) ... struggles to uncover vs. man and his routes lack deception ... lacks the lower body sand to consistently anchor in pass protection ... his blocking technique needs further schooling ... struggled with focus penalties as a senior, including six false start flags ... ho-hum receiving production with only 11.2 yards per reception and zero career 100-yard receiving games ... hasn’t played on special teams since his freshman season at Wisconsin ... durability isn’t a concern, although he did undergo surgery for a torn UCL in his left thumb prior to the 2019 season.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Wisconsin, Ferguson was primarily an inline tight end in head coach Paul Chryst’s offense. The grandson of Wisconsin legendary head coach Barry Alvarez, he was a model of consistency for the Badgers, catching 30-plus passes in four consecutive seasons (only draftable tight end in this class who can stay that). Ferguson has natural tracking skills and works well with bodies around him, registering only one drop on 61 targets in 2021. However, he is a one-speed runner and doesn’t have burst out of his breaks or a pull-away gear to scare defenses as a pass-catcher. He has the mentality needed for blocking duties, but his average play strength and technique will be more pronounced in the NFL. Overall, Ferguson doesn’t have much style, but he has substance because of his above average ball skills and competitiveness as a blocker. He has the upside to be an NFL team’s No. 2 tight end.

11. CHIGOZIEM OKONKWO | Maryland 6024 | 238 lbs. | SR. Powder Springs, Ga. (Hillgrove) 9/8/1999 (age 22.64) #9

BACKGROUND: Chigoziem (Chiggo-zem) “Chig” Okonkwo (OH-konk-woe), who is the youngest of three children, grew up outside of Atlanta, but his mother (Isioma) is from Nigeria and moved to the United States before she started a family. He grew up playing tennis and football, suiting up for the first time in second grade and settling in as a pass-catcher in middle school Okonkwo attended Hillgrove High (same high school as TE Evan Engram), where he was a wide receiver and tight end and three-year letterman. As a junior, he posted 38 receptions for 665 yards and eight touchdowns. Okonkwo helped Hillgrove to eight wins as a senior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Okonkwo was the No. 23 tight end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 57 recruit in the state of Georgia (third-ranked tight end in the state, one spot behind Tommy Tremble). He considered offers from Georgia Tech and Wisconsin before committing to Maryland prior to his senior season. Okonkwo was forced to sit out the 2020 season after he was diagnosed with myocarditis. He graduated with his degree in kinesiology and is pursuing his master’s degree in technology entrepreneurship. Okonkwo accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6022	243	32	9 3/4	78	-	-	-	-	9'9"	4.45	7.19	13 (stood on Combine runs and vertical)

STRENGTHS: Sculpted, muscular body type with an outstanding build ... explosive straight-line speed to quickly enter his route and get on top of coverage ... efficiently gets in and out of his breaks ... has some sink to work back to the ball and quickly become a ball carrier ... accepting hands to finish his targets and keep his drops to a minimum ... throws in traffic don't disrupt his focus ... provides some pop at contact when he frames his blocks ... his athleticism carries over to his blocking with his ability on the move, picking off defenders in the screen game ... productive final season, including 12 receptions vs. Penn State, the second-most catches by a tight end in a single game in school history (Frank Wycheck, 14).

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal height and length ... struggles to latch and sustain his blocks and his shorter arms don't make it any easier ... play strength and discipline as a blocker are best described as average ... limited inline power and hip snap to control the edge ... needs to mature his route-running instincts ... saw a heavy dose of underneath patterns (averaged less than 10 yards per catch in his career) ... medical feedback will be important: he was diagnosed with myocarditis (inflammation of the heart muscle) after feeling pain in his chest in March 2020; was forced to rest and avoid physical activity for six months while his scar tissue healed, forcing him to sit out the 2020 football season; battled a left shoulder injury in 2021.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Maryland, Okonkwo played the Y tight end position in offensive coordinator Dan Enos' scheme, lining up mostly inline and wing. After sitting out the 2020 season for what could have been a career-ending issue, he had a career year as a senior, finishing strong late in the season with 29 catches in the final four regular-season games (most catches ever by a Maryland tight end in a four-game span). Okonkwo unsurprisingly ran the fastest 40-yard dash among tight ends at the combine, which matches his impressive linear speed on the field. As a blocker, he has range and works his feet into position, but struggles to sustain or control the point-of-attack. Overall, Okonkwo doesn't need to be an elite blocker, but he needs to improve in areas to get to respectable, which will complement his athletic pass-catching potential. He projects as an H-back and special-teamer with room to grow.

12. COLE TURNER | Nevada 6064 | 249 lbs. | SR. Clackamas, Ore. (Clackamas) 3/16/2000 (age 22.12) #19

BACKGROUND: Nicolas "Cole" Turner, who has two younger sisters, grew up in Clackamas, a southern suburb of Portland. He started playing football in fifth grade and attended Clackamas High where he was a two-sport athlete. After making varsity as a sophomore, Turner posted 46 receptions for 1,091 yards and 11 touchdowns to earn First Team All-League honors. He had his best season as a senior and helped lead Clackamas to a 14-0 record and the 2017 Class 6A state championship, the first in school history. Turner led the state of Oregon with 76 catches for 1,325 yards and 20 touchdowns (scored a touchdown in 12 of 14 games) as a senior to earn First Team All-State honors. He also lettered in basketball where he earned First Team All-League honors as a senior.

A three-star recruit, Turner was the No. 49 tight end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 12 recruit in the state of Oregon. He initially received FCS interest, including offers from Ivy League schools like Columbia and Princeton, before several MWC schools entered the picture. Turner heard from Cal and Oregon, who wanted him to wait until closer to signing day to ensure there was a scholarship spot. His biggest offer came from Oregon State, but Turner formed a much better relationship with Nevada, who wanted to keep him at wide receiver, and committed as a senior. His father (Kelly) played tight end at Purdue (1987-90). Turner skipped the team's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall target with adequate length ... rolls off the line of scrimmage with the build-up speed to work the seam ... above average ball skills (only three drops on 93 targets as a senior) ... has the upper body flexibility to adjust in-flight and expand his catch radius ... natural high-pointer ... leaks into open space and finds room to operate ... his route inventory increased over the last two years ... adopted a physical attitude as a blocker, accelerating into contact to jar his target off balance ... accepted the move to tight end and committed to gaining weight, adding 35 pounds since changing positions in 2020 ... blocked a punt as a senior ... one of only four FBS tight ends with double-digit touchdowns in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Lanky body type with a narrow torso and lean lower body ... doesn't have ideal mass on his frame and probably never will ... needs to better mix his gears to manipulate coverage ... doesn't offer much route trickery ... longer strides and doesn't have short-area burst in/out of his breaks ... his routes are more rounded than squared ... doesn't have the inline power to match up with NFL defensive ends ... delivers pop, but lacks the functional strength to sustain ... doesn't show the hand placement or pad level to reset his blocks ... missed one game as a senior due to a concussion (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Nevada, Turner was a flex tight end in former head coach Jay Norvell's version of the air-raid offense, spending most of his time wide or in the slot. A wide receiver in high school and his first two seasons at Nevada, he transitioned to tight end prior to the 2020 season and was one of the most productive tight ends in college football (his 19 touchdowns over the last two seasons led all FBS tight ends). Turner is a natural hands-catcher who can win in contested situations and frequently leaves his feet to comfortably make diving grabs. He can work the seam, but struggles to separate consistently and he lacks the play strength to sustain blocks or generate movement in the run game. Overall, Turner is limited as a blocker, but skilled as a pass-catcher because of his ball skills and body control to easily expand his catch radius. He can be a poor man's Mike Gesicki in the NFL, although his one-dimensional skill set will limit his landing spots.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

13. CONNOR HEYWARD | Michigan State 5111 | 233 lbs. | rSR. Duluth, Ga. (Peachtree Ridge) 1/22/1999 (age 23.27) #11

BACKGROUND: Connor Heyward, who is the youngest of four boys, was born and raised in the Atlanta area and started playing football at age 7. He grew up playing quarterback, running back, wide receiver, linebacker and safety and that versatility continued into high school. Heyward attended Peachtree Ridge High in Suwanee where he was a three-year varsity starter (teammates with South Carolina DE Kingsley Enagbare). As a starting wide receiver as a senior, he recorded 47 catches for 580 yards and six touchdowns and also saw snaps at quarterback and running back, rushing for 261 yards and 10 touchdowns. On defense, Heyward started at safety and finished the 2016 season with 71 tackles and three interceptions while also handling the punting duties. He earned First Team All-County and Honorable Mention All-State honors as a senior captain. Heyward finished his prep career with 36 total touchdowns (17 receiving, 14 rushing, five passing). He also lettered in basketball and was a four-year starter at guard.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Heyward was the No. 53 athlete in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 72 recruit in the state of Georgia. He was recruited at several different positions and committed to Michigan State over Arizona State, Pittsburgh and Rutgers. Heyward played primarily at running back his first four seasons before transitioning to a tight end or H-back role in 2021. He briefly entered the transfer portal after the 2019 season, but decided to stay in East Lansing. His father (Craig), nicknamed "Ironhead", was an All-American running back at Pittsburgh and was drafted in the first round (No. 24 overall) of the 1988 NFL Draft by the New Orleans Saints, playing 11 seasons in the NFL. Craig was diagnosed with a brain tumor in 1998 and passed away (May 2006) when Connor was only 7. Connor's older brother (Cameron) was a defensive lineman at Ohio State and was drafted in the first round (No. 31 overall) in the 2011 NFL Draft by the Pittsburgh Steelers and has been a five-time Pro Bowler. His older brother (Corey) was a four-year starting guard on the Georgia Tech basketball team (2013-17). His older half-brother (Craig Jr.) was a walk-on running back at Middle Tennessee State (2006-09). Heyward graduated with his degree in communications (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Strong mitts as a pass-catcher to consistently finish through contact ... excellent snatching focus away from his body ... sky-high conversion rate in contested situations ... physical play style mid-route to jar defenders off his route path ... lowers his pads and barrels into contact as a ball carrier ... not a fun player to tackle and runs with the determination expected of a former running back ... has a blocking appetite ... understands his blocking assignments to connect and get into position ... has experience as a kick returner, averaging 21.9 yards per return (33/723/0) ... he ran the punt unit and was the personal protector on punts ... the coaches say he was an ignitor of the Spartans' productive 2021 season ... his bloodlines should have him well prepared for NFL life.

WEAKNESSES: Top-heavy body type with tweener size ... his lack of length is evident when attempting to block edge defenders ... relies more on toughness than technique as a point-of-attack blocker ... expanded his route tree as a senior, but his route skills remain a work in progress, especially down the field ... inefficient in/out of route breaks and needs to introduce more tempo mid-route ... inexperienced making read-based adjustments ... runs hard, but doesn't have the speed to scare defenses ... left the Michigan State team (September 2019) because he was unhappy with his playing time and role (decided to return to the team in 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Michigan State, Heyward transitioned to H-back as a senior in offensive coordinator Jay Johnson's scheme, lining up in the backfield and slot. His playing time at running back was sporadic his first four seasons and he wasn't considered a legitimate NFL prospect, although his position switch as a senior gave scouts a new perspective of his talents. Heyward makes athletic plays on the football because of his body control and focus and drops were scarce on his film. He does a great job playing through contact, but lacks ideal length and will struggle to sustain as a blocker. Overall, Heyward needs to adapt a more disciplined approach to his blocking and route-running, but he is a balanced, instinctive athlete with high-level ball skills. His versatility and toughness give him a chance to stick in a hybrid H-back role.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

14. JOHN FITZPATRICK | Georgia 6071 | 262 lbs. | rJR. Atlanta, Ga. (Marist) 3/9/2000 (age 22.14) #86

BACKGROUND: John FitzPatrick, who has four older sisters, moved to the Atlanta area when he was young. He focused on soccer growing up and thought that was his future until he outgrew the sport. He attended Marist School, a private Catholic school in Brookhaven, where he was a multi-sport letterman and teammates with Notre Dame's Kyle Hamilton. After making a jump in performance as a junior, FitzPatrick earned First Team All-State honors as a senior as he helped Marist to a 14-1 record with the lone loss coming in the 2017 Class 4A state championship game. He finished his senior year with 29 receptions for 400 yards and three touchdowns, adding 29 tackles and 3.0 sacks as a defensive end. FitzPatrick also lettered in basketball and soccer at Marist.

A four-star recruit out of high school, FitzPatrick was the No. 17 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 36 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received an avalanche of scholarship offers after his junior season from Ivy League programs (Princeton, Yale) to SEC schools (Alabama, Georgia). Ultimately, FitzPatrick committed to nearby Georgia over UCLA (where his older sister went to school). He graduated (in less than three years) with his degree in real estate (May 2021). FitzPatrick decided to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6071	262	33 3/4	10 1/4	79 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – feet)

STRENGTHS: Imposing size with solid muscle tone and room to get bigger ... moves with big-man fluidity as both a blocker and receiver ... bends his knees and shuffles his feet to achieve blocking angles ... stout at contact to absorb contact and wall off lanes ... effective on pins and outside-in blocks ... runs with high knees and strong strides mid-route to leak into space or drag across the field ... presents a large target for his quarterback with solid hands ... heavy traffic didn't appear to faze his concentration as a receiver ... half of his six catches in 2021 resulted in a 20-plus yard play ... intelligent on and off the field and his coaches call him a "high-achiever" who could be a millionaire financial investor if he wanted ... played through broken bones in his feet over the second half of the 2021 season.

WEAKNESSES: Minimal receiving production in college with only 200 career receiving yards spread out over three years ... unproven consistently scooping the ball at his knees or making full-extension grabs ... doesn't have the route speed to threaten coverage horizontally or down the seam ... not going to make tacklers miss after the catch and can be grounded by single defenders ... taller pad level with room to clean up his handwork as a pass blocker ... can be caught leaning with his desire to generate movement at contact ... flagged twice for holding in 2021 ... underwent surgery to repair stress fractures in his fifth metatarsal bone on his left foot (January 2022); underwent surgery for the same issue for his right foot four weeks later (February 2022).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, FitzPatrick was the Y tight end in offensive coordinator Todd Monken's balanced scheme. Lining up primarily inline with some detached snaps, he was an understated yet important part of the Bulldogs offense and national title run, playing through broken bones in both feet over the second half of the 2021 season. FitzPatrick blocks with a balanced, square base and the frame, play strength and toughness to be an asset in the run game. With only 32 career targets and two multi-catch games (none in 2021) in his college career, his evaluation as a pass catcher feels incomplete and unproven. Overall, FitzPatrick doesn't have the tape or résumé of a playmaking receiver, but his inline blocking and intangibles are what makes him a draftable prospect. He can find a niche as a productive Y tight end in the NFL.

15. GERRIT PRINCE | UAB 6044 | 241 lbs. | rSR. Shawnee, Kan. (Mission Northwest) 8/25/1997 (age 24.68) #20

BACKGROUND: Gerrit Prince was born and raised in Shawnee (a southwest suburb of Kansas City) where he was introduced to football at age 3 by his father. He started playing tackle football in second grade, initially at running back before moving to wide receiver. He attended Mission Northwest High where he was undersized (grew four inches the summer of his junior year) and played sparingly on varsity as a junior. As a senior wide receiver, Prince was among the leaders on offense in 2015, finishing with 645 receiving yards and five touchdowns for a team that won only one game. He also lettered in swimming and played for a club rugby team that participated in the state tournament, advancing to the 2015 state finals.

A no-star wide receiver out of high school, he was unranked by online recruiting services and went overlooked by colleges with only one year of varsity tape for a 1-9 high school team. His only next level offers came from two JUCO programs and he signed with Butler Community College (about 150 miles west of Shawnee). In his two seasons at wide receiver at Butler, Prince combined for 36 catches for 566 yards and 11 touchdowns. A no-star JUCO recruit, Prince received a handful of FBS offers and committed to UAB over Troy because of his connection with the coaching staff. He moved to a tight end and H-back role at UAB. Prince took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and returned to UAB for his sixth season of college. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl, but was limited due to a hamstring injury.

STRENGTHS: Fluid pass-catcher who doesn't strain to extend and snag ... has the accepting hands and long arms to catch the football from different eye levels ... seamless pluck-and-go transition without breaking stride for run after catch production ... effective body control as a route-runner to work himself open ... works the seams well and at his best on vertical patterns (posts, fades, etc.) ... posted at least one 20-plus yard reception in 10 games in 2021 (his 2021 North Texas tape created buzz in the scouting community) ... nice job reaching his landmarks as a blocker ... rolls into contact and runs his feet to keep defenders occupied ... experienced on special teams coverages ... UAB tight ends are expected to know the entire offense and he lined up at numerous positions, detached and tight.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks functional mass and his body needs further development (weight fluctuated between 230-250 at UAB) ... below average play strength as an inline blocker and his long arms go to waste ... doesn't have the bend or twitch to help compensate for his lack of blocking power ... looked outmatched at times on the 2021 Georgia tape ... gets impatient at times as the top of routes and needs to show better gear change to affect coverage ... his discipline is a work in progress (five penalties in 2021) ... older prospect who will turn 25 before his first NFL game ... suffered a Grade 2 hamstring strain at the East-West Shrine Bowl, which limited him at his pro day ... only 50 catches in four seasons at UAB and doesn't have an extensive résumé.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at UAB, Prince was a versatile tight end in offensive coordinator Bryant Vincent's scheme, lining up inline, flexed, slot and in the backfield as an H-back. A late bloomer in high school (only one varsity season), he spent two years as a wide receiver at the JUCO level and three years as a tight end at UAB before his breakout 2021 season, leading all FBS tight ends in yards per catch (19.4). Prince runs nifty routes and shows natural ball skills to snatch, secure, and create (averaged a touchdown every 3.6 receptions in 2021). He works hard to gain positioning as a blocker, but a power element is missing as he attempts to sustain or drive. Overall, Prince is undersized and will be limited as a blocker in the NFL, but he can work all three levels as a pass catcher and is one of the better YAC threats in this tight end class. He can be part of an NFL rotation as an F tight end and reminds me of Troy Fumagalli when he was coming out of Wisconsin in the 2018 draft class.

16. GRANT CALCATERRA | SMU 6037 | 241 lbs. | rSR. Rancho Santa Margarita, Calif. (Catholic) 12/4/1998 (age 23.40) #88

BACKGROUND: Grant Calcaterra (cal-cuh-TAIR-uh), who is the youngest of four children, is the youngest of triplets who were born prematurely (all three babies weighed less than 4 pounds). Each endured various health problems at birth (Grant required three hernia surgeries), but all three had healthy childhoods. The triplets were born in Cincinnati before the family moved to Orange County in 2002. Calcaterra grew up playing basketball, football and lacrosse, but he focused on football at Santa Margarita Catholic High. After making varsity as a sophomore wide receiver, he recorded 48 catches for 926 yards and nine touchdowns as a junior. Calcaterra was named a U.S. Army All-American and First Team All-Conference as a senior with 57 receptions for 958 yards and eight touchdowns. He also played basketball for two seasons in high school.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Calcaterra was the No. 6 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 25 recruit in the state of California. He received 25 offers and considered Florida, Texas A&M and others, but Oklahoma quickly became his desired destination due to Mark Andrews (his best friend while at Oklahoma were Andrews and Baker Mayfield). After three years at Oklahoma, Calcaterra announced his retirement (November 2019) due to multiple concussions and planned to pursue his other passion (firefighting) back home. In his one year away from the game, he took EMT classes, got his license and took a job with an ambulance company. Calcaterra also worked construction and went to fire technology school at Santa Ana College. After watching the 2020 NFL Draft, his fire for the game was "reignited" and he announced in August 2020 that he would return to college football and transfer. Calcaterra originally chose Auburn, but changed his mind after Gus Malzahn was fired. He announced he would transfer to SMU for the 2021 season, joining quarterback Tanner Mordecai, who also transferred to the Mustangs from the Sooners. His sister (Claire), who was the only girl of the triplets, played soccer at Kansas State (2017). His mother (Diane) set several DeKalb High track records, including the school record in the 400 meters. Calcaterra graduated with a degree in communications (May 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with fluid movements ... controlled feet to settle and work back to the football ... quick to read and leverage the coverage with his routes ... can work the seam and track the ball over his shoulder ... smoothly adjusts to throws outside his frame ... surprisingly efficient as a pass blocker because of his lateral footwork and eager hands to shield defenders ... good grip strength to latch and occupy defenders in space ... didn't have any blocking penalties as a senior ... named a team captain in his only season with the SMU program.

WEAKNESSES: Below average conversion rate in contested situations ... for a loose athlete, his YAC skills are bland on tape and he has a tough time forcing missed tackles ... gets too aggressive downfield (twice called for offensive pass interference in 2021) ... limited résumé as a blocker ... doesn't have the sand or body power to be a people-mover in the run game ... his anchor strength will quickly break down vs. NFL defenders ... doesn't have an extensive special teams background ... retired from football because of multiple concussions and missed most of the 2019 and 2020 seasons (he isn't sure how many concussions he has suffered).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at SMU, Calcaterra was the F tight end in former offensive coordinator Garrett Riley's version of the air raid scheme. After he was primarily a slot-only player at Oklahoma, he adjusted to a "move" tight end role with the Mustangs where he split his time between the slot and the backfield and set career bests as a pass-catcher. A fluid, but finesse pass catcher, Calcaterra moves well in his routes with the body control to make athletic adjustments on the football. However, he doesn't create a ton of separation (before or after the catch) and although willing as a blocker, he lacks the play strength to consistently win the point of attack. Overall, Calcaterra's history of concussions is a troubling part of his evaluation, but he has athletic pass-catching skills to snatch with his hand-eye coordination. He projects as a rotational F tight end in the NFL.

GRADE: 6th Round

17. AUSTIN ALLEN | Nebraska 6075 | 253 lbs. | rSR. Aurora, Neb. (Aurora) 11/10/1998 (age 23.47) #11

BACKGROUND: Austin Allen grew up near the small town of Phillips in central Nebraska. Baseball was his first love before giving up the sport in middle school to focus on basketball and football. He attended nearby Aurora High, where he was a two-sport standout, playing both offense and defense on the football team. After playing on the offensive line as a freshman, he moved out to pass-catcher as a sophomore and posted 14 catches for 148 yards and five touchdowns. As a junior, Allen led Aurora to a 12-1 record and 2015 league title before losing in the state title game. He recorded 41 receptions for 507 yards and eight touchdowns as a junior along with 51 tackles, 5.0 tackles for loss, and five interceptions at linebacker, earning First Team All-State honors on defense. Allen missed most of his senior season after suffering a knee injury playing basketball in June 2016. He lettered in basketball at Aurora and starred in summer leagues for the Nebraska Bison. After earning Honorable Mention All-State as a sophomore, Allen earned First Team All-State honors as a junior center with 15.2 points per game.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Allen was the No. 38 tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Nebraska. Up until his junior year of high school, he thought he would play college basketball and was recruited for basketball by schools like Nebraska-Omaha, North Dakota State and South Dakota State. However, Allen soon realized football was going to be his best option midway through his junior season when he received scholarship offers from Iowa, Iowa State, Nebraska, UCF and UCLA. Growing up a Cornhuskers fan, he committed to Nebraska (his first football offer) after his junior year. His father (Andrew) was a walk-on at Nebraska in 1981 before transferring to NAIA Doane, where he played basketball and football. Allen graduated with his degree in mechanized systems management (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

PRO DAY	6072	252	32 7/8	9 1/2	81 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	8 (bench press only)

STRENGTHS: Long-framed athlete and towers over cover defenders ... goes and gets the football with his tracking skills and hand strength ... his ability to finish through contact might be what he does best ... high first down/touchdown rate (71.1%) as a senior ... showed more big-play ability as a senior with five catches of 30-plus yards (only three catches of 30-plus yards over his first three seasons) ... capable pass blocker and creates movement as a latch-and-drive blocker in the run game ... four-year Academic All-Big Ten ... pushed himself to add 40-plus pounds to his frame since high school ... he says his best memory from college was when his teammates voted him a senior captain ... holds multiple Nebraska receiving records.

WEAKNESSES: Lean torso and lower body ... has trouble adjusting to some low targets (height will work against him) ... needs to use better hip snap out of his route breaks ... wasn't a consistent tackle-breaker after the catch ... below average touchdown production in college (only one red zone reception in 2021) ... his upright blocking style and narrow base allow defenders to wriggle off the hook ... want to see more shock in his hands ... his second-level blocking appears aimless at times ... suffered a meniscus tear in his right knee (June 2016) during a pick-up basketball game and missed his senior season in high school.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Nebraska, Allen lined up inline and detached in head coach Scott Frost's multiple offense. He enjoyed a career year as a senior (named the Big Ten's top tight end) and set several program records at the tight end position, including single-season catches (38) and receiving yards (602). With his height, catch radius and strong hands, Allen was a consistent chain-mover on tape and his athletic profile suggests upside as a route-runner. He uses sound angles to get into position as a blocker, although his taller stature and narrow base hinder his sustain and finish skills. Overall, Allen doesn't have dynamic route skills to easily uncover, but he is a contested catch monster with the traits that suggest there is more meat on that bone. He has intriguing development potential on Day 3.

18. ARMANI ROGERS | Ohio 6053 | 233 lbs. | rSR. Los Angeles, Calif. (Hamilton) 12/4/1997 (age 24.40) #18

BACKGROUND: Armani Rogers, who is the second-youngest of six children, was born in Buffalo while his father was playing for the NFL's Bills. His family moved to the Los Angeles area in 2001 when his father signed with the Chargers. Rogers started playing baseball and football at age 8 as a quarterback and linebacker in the "Snoop" leagues. He enrolled at Crespi High where he played as a freshman before transferring to Culver City High for his sophomore season. Rogers transferred to Hamilton High (where his older brothers played) for his final two seasons. As a junior, he was responsible for 35 touchdowns and led the team to an 11-3 record and the 2014 division title, which earned him League Player of the Year honors. As a senior, Rogers posted 64.5% completions, 1,433 passing yards and 18 touchdowns, adding 431 rushing yards and six touchdowns on the ground to earn 2015 offensive MVP honors.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Rogers was the No. 16 dual-threat quarterback in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 67 recruit in the state of California. His recruitment took off during his standout junior season and he originally committed to Cal. However, Rogers reopened his recruitment as a senior because of a coaching change. Despite offers from several Pac-12 programs (UCLA, Utah, Washington), he liked the coaching staff and chances of early playing time at UNLV. After four seasons, Rogers graduated and entered the transfer portal and transferred to Ohio. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and returned for a sixth season in 2021. His father (Sam) played linebacker at Colorado and was drafted in the second-round of the 1994 NFL Draft (No. 64 overall) by the Buffalo Bills, collecting 400 tackles over 10 seasons in the NFL. Armani's older brother (Aaron) played defensive back at Humboldt State (2015). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl and played tight end during the week.

STRENGTHS: Large-framed athlete with above average speed ... caught the ball well during East-West Shrine Bowl practices, finishing catches to the ground ... showed flexibility and balanced footwork as a route-runner ... his experience at quarterback helps his timing and depth of patterns ... instinctive with the ball in his hands to complicate pursuit angles ... powerful strider to pick up steam as a ball carrier ... physical runner and a load to bring down, finishing with leg drive through contact ... his coaches say his football character is top-notch ... accounted for 5,080 yards of total offense and 46 touchdowns in 36 games in college.

WEAKNESSES: Has never lined up as a pass-catcher in a game in his life ... very unseasoned as a route-runner and reveals his intentions too early ... might struggle to escape the jam ... unproven focus and finishing skills in traffic ... his blocking technique is at the basement level and he will need to learn to love this part ... his timing and accuracy as a passer are inconsistent ... his time at UNLV was marred by injuries: Missed three games due to concussion symptoms (October 2017); missed six games as a sophomore because of a torn plantar plate to his right big toe (September 2018); missed seven games as a junior because of a sprained right knee (October 2019).

SUMMARY: A part-time starter at Ohio, Rogers shared the quarterback responsibilities in head coach Tim Albin's offense. After bursting on the scene with his productive freshman season at UNLV, he was in and out of the starting lineup for the Rebels because of injuries before he transferred to Ohio where he flashed big-play potential (set the FBS record for longest quarterback run with a 99-yard touchdown scamper in 2021). A lifelong dual-threat quarterback, Rogers started the transition to tight end during the pre-draft process, showing promise in receiving and blocking drills during East-West Shrine Bowl practices. The details are still new for him, but he shows promise as a pass-catcher and is willing as a blocker. Overall, Rogers will obviously require time to become more acclimated at his new position, but teams are intrigued by his size, athleticism and upside as a pass-catcher. He is a practice squad candidate as he develops into a hybrid tight end.

19. JALEN WYDERMYER | Texas A&M 6037 | 255 lbs. | JR. Dickinson, Texas (Dickinson) 12/20/2000 (age 21.36) #85

BACKGROUND: Jalen Wydermyer (WHY-der-meyer), who is one of eight children, was born and raised in Dickinson, which is in southeast Texas between Houston and Galveston. He started playing football at the youth level for the Hitchcock Heat and was a two-sport star at Dickinson High (same alma mater as Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Andre Ware). Wydermyer started on varsity as a sophomore and posted 11 catches for 201 yards and five touchdowns. As a junior, he recorded 27 receptions for 460 yards and eight touchdowns. Wydermyer earned 2018 All-Region honors and had his most productive season as a senior with 42 catches for 875 yards and 10 touchdowns. He was also an All-Conference center on the Dickinson basketball team.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Wydermyer was the No. 15 tight end in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 45 recruit in the state of Texas. He received scholarship offers from national programs like Alabama, Miami (Fla.), and Ohio State, but the Jimbo Fisher hire and desire to stay close to home led him to sign with Texas A&M. His junior year in high school, the Wydermyer family lost all of their belongings in Hurricane Harvey (August 2017). His father (Vincent Sr.) was a star running back at Dickinson and was on scholarship at Texas Tech (1983-85) as a cornerback before he joined the Army. Wydermyer decided to skip his senior season and the Aggies' bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Owns a long-armed frame with room to add mass ... loose body type for the position and smoothly adjusts to make clean catches ... quick snatch skills to put the ball away ... runs accessible routes ... releases quickly to get a head start ... shows the stride acceleration and vision to surprise pursuit angles and be a YAC threat ... does enough on wham blocks to occupy edge defenders ... was consistently productive in college, catching a pass in all 35 games the past three seasons ... passed Martellus Bennett for the school record for receiving yards by a tight end ... his 16 career touchdowns ranks eighth-most in school history (and tops among tight ends).

WEAKNESSES: Poor athletic testing numbers ... his routes lose steam and become predictable and rounded ... missed tackles are very infrequent on film ... wasn't a big-play creator in college (of his 118 receptions in college, only four resulted in a 30-plus yard play) ... want to see him bring in the difficult catches ... feels approaching contact, which disrupts his catch point focus ... will run before securing the grab, leading to drops (eight in 2021) ... play strength is average as a blocker ... has the tendency to catch block in pass protection and his hand placement needs to improve ... heavily penalized player with 14 career penalties, including four false starts in 2021 ... seemed to run out of gas late in games on 2021 tape, leading to more mistakes (drops, penalties) than plays made (five catches, zero touchdowns) in the fourth quarter ... missed 2021 spring practices because of surgery on his tendon after a "freak" off-field incident.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter, Wydermyer was the starting tight end in head coach Jimbo Fisher's balanced offensive attack, evenly splitting his snaps between inline and detached. He made an immediate impact in College Station and needed only three years to become the school's all-time leader in receptions, receiving yards, and receiving touchdowns among tight ends. Wydermyer shows steady body control in his routes and at the catch point, but his plodding feet will stand out vs. NFL talent. While he has a projectable frame, he needs to be more physical and technically focused as a blocker. Overall, Wydermyer has the catch radius to be a capable target and potential red zone weapon, but he doesn't have top-tier athleticism and must mature as a blocker.

20. TEAGAN QUITORIANO | Oregon State 6056 | 256 lbs. | SR. Salem, Ore. (Sprague) 3/15/2000 (age 22.12) #84

BACKGROUND: Teagan Quitoriano (Kwi-tore-ee-on-o), who is one of three children, grew up in Salem and attended Sprague High. A four-year letterman, he was called up to varsity during the playoffs as a freshman tight end. After playing both ways as a sophomore, Quitoriano earned First Team All-State and Conference Defensive Player of the Year as a junior with 19.0 tackles for loss and 8.0 sacks. He also earned Second Team All-State honors on offense with four touchdown grabs. As a senior, he helped Sprague to a nine-win season and again earned All-Conference in 2017. However, Quitoriano was even more accomplished as a four-year letterman in basketball. He was named the Greater Valley Conference Player of the Year as a junior and earned All-State honors with 29 points and 13 rebounds per game, also converting 43% from behind the arc.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Quitoriano was the No. 78 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 10 recruit in the state of Oregon. He narrowed down his final choice to Oregon and Oregon State and committed to the Ducks the summer prior to his senior year. Quitoriano stayed committed to Oregon after Willie Taggart left for Florida State but didn't sign with any school on signing day. Two months later in April 2018, he officially flipped to Oregon State. Quitoriano accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Game.

STRENGTHS: Big-bodied target and plays like a power forward in the post ... above average hand strength (zero drops as a senior) ... crowded catch points don't bother his concentration, routinely extending and finishing in a crowd ... doesn't move with stiffness in his routes and flashes a little something after the catch ... experienced run blocker with grappling strength and long-levers at the point of attack ... looks to roll into contact, which helps him create thump and movement ... his competitive temperament shows in a variety of ways on film ... played almost 600 snaps on special teams coverages in college.

WEAKNESSES: Sluggish off the line with speed that is more build-up than immediate ... will have a tough time uncovering vs. man in the NFL ... reaches his depth, but lacks instincts or set-up as a route-runner ... can get crazed when attempting to finish as a zone blocker ... his feet and hips need to keep up with his hands once he slams into contact ... inconsistent edge-setter ... wasn't asked to pass block a ton and his below average technique reflects that ... penalized five times as a senior, including three false starts ... lackluster receiving production with 40 career catches (only three career catches of 30-plus yards).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oregon State, Quitoriano was the Y tight end in head coach Jonathan Smith's balanced offense, lining up primarily inline. Underutilized as a pass-catcher, he had his most productive season as a senior, which ranked him seventh on the team in receiving yards in 2021. A highly decorated basketball player in high school (led the state of Oregon in points and rebounds in 2017), Quitoriano plays football in a similar way as a power forward, relying on his size, strength and ball skills to be productive. While he is a coordinated athlete, his average play speed creates little separation and his blocking tends to get out of control. Overall, Quitoriano shows the promise of an NFL combination tight end because of his size and toughness as a pass-catcher and blocker, but he struggled to show playmaking skills in either area on tape. He will have the chance to earn a backup Y role with a club.

21. CHASE ALLEN | Iowa State 6060 | 251 lbs. | rSR. Nixa, Mo. (Nixa) 7/9/1997 (age 24.80) #11

BACKGROUND: Chase Allen, who is the middle child of three kids, spent the first few years of his life in Lawrence, Kan., where his father served as the Jayhawks head football coach. The family moved to Ames for four years (2002-05), which is where Allen learned how to play football. The family moved to Nixa when his dad was named head coach at Missouri State and Allen attended Nixa High. He was a wide receiver/tight end on offense and a linebacker on defense, finishing his junior season with 13 catches for 189 yards and two touchdowns. As a senior, Allen led Nixa to eight wins and a deep playoff run, earning All-State honors with 33 receptions for 654 yards and seven touchdowns. On defense, he posted 92 tackles and 11.0 tackles for loss. Allen was also a standout basketball player and thrower on the track team. He was named the Conference Player of the Year as a senior as he led Nixa to 28 wins in 2015-16, averaging 15.7 points and 8.5 rebounds per game. He was a state champion javelin thrower as a senior and set the state record (171'11") while also running the 110-meter hurdles (15.34).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Allen was the No. 26 tight end in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Missouri. He received almost two dozen offers from programs like Florida State, Michigan and Nebraska. But Allen's love for football started in Ames and he connected with the coaching staff, becoming the second-highest ranked recruit in Matt Campbell's first recruiting class with the Cyclones. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility due to COVID and returned to Ames for his sixth season in 2021. His father (Terry) was a quarterback at Northern Iowa (1975-78) and became the head coach at UNI (1989-96). After seven consecutive first place finishes, he became the head coach at Kansas (1997-2001) followed by four seasons in Ames as an Iowa State assistant and then nine seasons as the head coach at FCS Missouri State (2006-14). Chase's older sister (Angie) was a member of the Kansas rowing team (2014-18). His younger brother (Alex) is a rising redshirt senior tight end at Northern Iowa. His grandfather (Robert) was the head men's swimming and diving coach at Iowa (1959-75). Allen graduated with his degree in mechanical engineering (May 2020) and is in the industrial and manufacturing graduate program. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl, but was unable to play in the game.

STRENGTHS: Light-footed athlete with outstanding length ... skillfully mixes gears and adjusts his routes to the coverage ... decent fluidity and doesn't get hung up by his stem mechanics ... quick hands and reflexes to snag throws outside his frame ... registered only two drops over his final 90 targets in college ... has the balance to efficiently go from pass-catcher to runner ... rides blocks with the expected level of grit and toughness ... uses his length to extend into contact and create an initial surge ... high intelligent and a five-time Academic All-Big 12 recipient ... played through most of the 2018 season with a torn groin, which required offseason surgery.

WEAKNESSES: Narrowly-built and lacks desired bulk, especially in his lowers ... unimpressive play strength across the board ... can get bogged down by physical defenders in man coverage ... runs too upright in his routes and needs to show better sink ... missed tackles were scarce on his film and YAC opportunities will be tougher vs. NFL defenses ... not going to create consistent movement in the run game ... doesn't have the stout base to put down roots vs. bull rushers ... older prospect and will turn 25 before his first NFL training camp ... below average career receiving production.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Iowa State, Allen shared the Y tight end duties with Charlie Kolar in offensive coordinator Tom Manning's scheme, lining up inline and detached. He wasn't a highly targeted part of the offense (never finished a season better than fifth on the team in catches), but he played a lot of football at ISU (more than 2,000 offensive snaps) and was productive when given opportunities. Allen is a coordinated athlete with decent speed to work his way to open zones or make grabs down the seam over linebackers. Although he lacks the play strength or body control as a blocker to stay connected, he can set the edge and consistently works to reestablish his body leverage. Overall, Allen doesn't have a distinguishing trait that helps him pop on film, but his game shows equal parts toughness and intelligence with the ball skills to gain the trust of an offensive play caller. If he gets an opportunity in the NFL, he has a chance to stick as a rotational player.

SUMMARY: Clint Ratkovich grew up outside of Chicago and led Crete-Monee to a 2015 conference title as a do-everything offensive back and linebacker. A no-star recruit, he landed at Western Illinois, where he dabbled at safety before becoming a productive pass-catching fullback. He transferred to Northern Illinois for his final season and played a hybrid fullback role (“superback”) and accounted for 15 total touchdowns. Ratkovich has the thick, muscular body of a fullback, the instincts of a running back and the reliable ball skills of a receiver. He isn’t much of a creator and didn’t break many tackles on tape, but he runs with a head of steam and a nose for the end zone/first down. As a blocker, he has a solid batting average, but needs to rely more on technique over physicality to execute at the next level. Overall, Ratkovich isn’t on the same level as 49ers’ Kyle Juszczyk, but he has the versatility to play a similar role and make an immediate impact on special teams.

SUMMARY: Derrick Deese Jr. attended John F. Kennedy High in La Palma where he was a two-time All-League wide receiver. He spent two years at Golden West College before transferring to San Jose State, where he moved to tight end. His production improved each season and led the team in receiving as a senior while also grading well as a blocker. His father (Derrick) played 14 seasons in the NFL and started at right guard for the San Francisco 49ers' victory in Super Bowl 29. Deese is a physical pass-catcher who can work the middle of the field and attack the football outside his frame. However, his routes and separating ability are lacking, leading to a ton of contested windows. As a blocker, his technique needs work, but his body control and grit help him stay connected. Overall, Deese's mediocre athleticism might leave him undrafted, but his coordination and length show as both a blocker and pass-catcher, which will help him compete for an NFL roster spot.

SUMMARY: Lucas Krull played quarterback growing up, but he was a baseball-first athlete most of his life. He returned to football as an H-Back at Mill Valley High and helped win the 2015 state title as a senior. A left-handed pitcher, he had stops at Arkansas and in JUCO, but stopped throwing strikes and decided to switch sports. He signed with Florida where he spent two seasons before transferring to Pitt, missing the 2019 season (knee injury) and setting career bests in 2020. Krull looks the part with his large frame and linear explosion to give his quarterback a downfield target. However, he lacks hip snap at the stem and isn't much of a route salesman as he struggles to unglue from coverage. He put too many drops on his 2021 film and offers very little impact after the catch. Overall, Krull needs to be a more detail-oriented pass-catcher and blocker to mask his shortcomings, but he is an intriguing size/speed athlete with Y tight end traits worth developing.

SUMMARY: Andrew Ogletree lettered in basketball and football at Northridge High and earned all-state in both sports as a senior (also named the 2015-16 Division-III player of the year in basketball, averaging 14.5 points per game). He signed with Division-II Findlay as a receiver and set career-bests as a junior in 2018. After sitting out the 2019 season with a knee injury, he transferred to FCS-level Youngstown State for his final two seasons, starting every game at tight end in 2021. Ogletree plays with the agility and control of a smaller athlete and uses his long, galloping strides to work to open space. He has the catch radius to pull in difficult throws over defenders, but will also drop too many easy ones. He didn't find the end zone at YSU. As a blocker, he is willing, but needs to improve his knee bend and aiming points to leverage his man. Overall, Ogletree's stats don't jump off the page, but his tape shows an agile-footed big man who is still discovering how good he can be.

SUMMARY: Jeremiah Hall played on the offensive line in youth football in Charlotte before shifting to tight end and more of an H-back role at Zebulon B. Vance High, posting 1,005 yards of total offense and 22 touchdowns as a senior. A three-star recruit, he filled the Dimitri Flowers role in Lincoln Riley's offense for the Sooners, lining up in the slot, inline and backfield. He tied for third on the team in receptions as a senior captain, averaging double-digit yards per catch each of the last four years. Hall is a sure-handed receiver (good luck finding drops on his film) and runs like a jackhammer with the ball in his hands. He isn't the most instinctive blocker, but there are no doubts about his competitive toughness as a lead back and alert pass protector with his wide base and eager hands. Overall, Hall isn't a dynamic athlete and there are only so many NFL roster spots for his skill set, but he is a sturdy blocker and dependable pass catcher with the makeup for special teams.

SUMMARY: Peyton Hendershot grew up outside of Indianapolis and attended Tri-West High where he lettered in basketball and football (defensive end and tight end). He earned All-State honors as a senior with 67 catches for 896 yards and nine touchdowns. A three-star recruit, he flipped from Ball State to Indiana, where he became the program's all-time leader in catches and receiving yards by a tight end. Although he lacks explosive traits and is a limited blocker, Hendershot has solid size and speed for the position with excellent hand-eye coordination as a pass-catcher (one drop on 62 targets in 2021). He was arrested (February 2020) after his ex-girlfriend said he grabbed her by the neck and shoved her against the wall. He pled guilty in June 2020 as part of a plea deal that required he enter into a batterer's treatment program. Overall, Hendershot has draftable pass-catching talent, but his off-field character warrants close inspection following his domestic incident.

SUMMARY: Curtis Hodges Jr. was a late bloomer at Mountain View High and switched his focus from basketball to football as a senior, posting 50 catches for 733 yards and seven touchdowns as a 190-pound receiver. A three-star recruit, he committed to Arizona State over Iowa State, but struggled to see consistent playing time because of injuries and lack of development. He had a breakout senior year and led ASU in yards per catch (18.7) in 2021 with eight catches of 25-plus yards. Hodges wasn't asked to make plays in traffic on tape, but he can work the seam with his stride acceleration (before and after the catch) and fluid adjustment skills. His impressive body control also translates to his blocking, but his hands are wild and grabby (three holding calls in 2021). Overall, Hodges is undeveloped as a route-runner and lacks the power to sustain inline blocks, but he is a long, flexible athlete with enough pass-catching traits to warrant practice squad consideration.

SUMMARY: George "Trae" Barry was born and raised on the Alabama Gulf Coast and was a three-sport standout at Spanish Fort High, playing quarterback and receiver. A two-star recruit, he committed to FCS Jacksonville State where he was an immediate contributor as a pass-catcher. After four seasons, he entered the transfer portal and landed at Boston College (over Ole Miss) for his final season. Despite missing time with a knee injury, he finished second on the team in receiving in 2021. Barry has a long and lean frame and looks like a basketball small forward with the way he expands his catch radius and out-muscles defenders to catch the ball cleanly. He has stride speed to create downfield plays, but needs to be more efficient at the top of his routes. He is raw, but promising as a blocker. Overall, Barry's medicals (knee) will be important, but he is a supersized wide receiver with stride athleticism, ball skills and blocking upside to stand out in camp.

SUMMARY: Nicholas “Nick” Muse, who is the younger brother of NFL LB/S Tanner Muse, grew up in Belmont and attended South Point High. He was a four-sport athlete and led the team to the 2016 3A state title as a linebacker and tight end. A no star recruit, he committed to FCS William & Mary where he played two seasons. He transferred to South Carolina and was ruled eligible early in the 2019 season. He tore his ACL late in 2019, but finished top three on the team in receiving the last two years. Lined up inline and on the wing, Muse is a good-sized, presentable target with plus foot-speed, but needs a runway to create separation as a route-runner. While he is a rugged blocker at the line of scrimmage and second level, his lack of length will leave him out-leveraged, especially on the edge. Overall, Muse is up and down as a blocker and needs to cut down on the drops, but he is a “make it” competitor with enough athleticism to compete for a backup role in the NFL.

1. IKEM EKWONU | NC State 6040 | 310 lbs. | JR. Charlotte, N.C. (Providence Day) 10/31/2000 (age 21.49) #79

BACKGROUND: Ikemefuna "Ikem" (ee-KEHM) Ekwonu (eck-WAHN-ew) grew up in the Charlotte area and started playing football in elementary school as a running back. He was involved with the theater growing up, starring as the lead in "101 Dalmatians" in fifth grade. He initially attended Weddington High as a freshman before transferring to Charlotte's Providence Day. While his fraternal twin brother, Osita, played varsity football all four years of high school, Ikem spent his first two years on junior varsity. He made varsity as a junior and started on both the offensive and defensive lines. As a senior, Ekwonu finished with 29 tackles and four sacks on the defensive line and lined up at left tackle and left guard to be named First Team All-State and All-Conference on offense. He won a state championship in wrestling as a senior and finished 12th in the nation in his weight class (285 pounds). Ekwonu lettered in track and set personal bests in the shot put (49'9) and discus (153'0). He ran the 100 meters (13.24) as a junior and the anchor leg of the 4x100 at 285 pounds as a senior. He was also a three-year member of the chorus (bass and tenor) and was selected for honors chorus as a senior.

A three-star offensive guard recruit out of high school, Ekwonu was the No. 35 offensive guard in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 26 recruit in the state of North Carolina. Osita was considered the higher recruit and heard from Alabama, Ohio State and other top programs as a sophomore. Charlotte became the first offer for Ikem after he became a starter as a junior, followed by Appalachian State and several Ivy League programs. After his junior season, NC State offered him in February 2018 and he committed to NC State over Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Tennessee. His main recruiter at NC State was Dwayne Ledford, who is now the offensive line coach for the Atlanta Falcons. Ikem goes by the nickname "Ickey" and his given first name, Ikemefuna, is from the Igbo language and means "my strength will not be in vain." Osita is a rising junior linebacker at Notre Dame. His sister (Adaora) is enrolled in the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine. His father (Tagbo), who immigrated to the United States from Nigeria, is a doctor and former college basketball player. His mother (Amaka) was a track star in high school. Ekwonu elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	-	328	34 1/2	10	85 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no height or workout – choice)

STRENGTHS: Executes outside zone with rare movement skills for his size ... high-level feet and balance on the move ... long arms and explosive hands ... has the grip strength to turn, torque or toss his man ... caves in the line on down blocks ... his violent knockdowns would be felonies anywhere other than the football field ... mauling latch-and-drive skills to escort bodies away from the play ... creates a firm base to anchor his pass sets ... flips his hips with fluid body adjustments to answer twists/loops ... wide, engulfing frame to absorb contact and quickly recover after a misfired punch ... easily pulls cross-formation or downfield ... looks to snatch souls and competes with the same nasty streak for all four quarters ... loves football and carries himself with an uplifting attitude ... his coaches say his love for football is genuine and he started showing leadership traits as a true freshman (NFL scout: "He kept praising his teammates when all I wanted to do was talk about him.") ... officially credited with 154 pancakes (67 in 2021) and 47 knockdowns in his career ... durable college career (31 consecutive starts) and played interchangeably at left tackle and left guard.

WEAKNESSES: Habitual over-setter and surrenders inside leverage ... allows his fundamentals to lax and break down too often ... his inefficient pass sets and eagerness to connect with defenders leads to lunges and misfires with his initial punch ... his hands are powerful, but not always disciplined ... responsible for 10 penalties over his three years in college, including multiple flags for playing beyond the whistle (his amped up play personality can get away from him at times).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at NC State, Ekwonu lined up primarily at left tackle in offensive coordinator Tim Beck's zone-blocking scheme. He was a late bloomer in high school and showed impressive development from his freshman to sophomore to junior seasons in Raleigh (he dropped his sacks allowed number from seven in 2020 to three in 2021). A mauling blocker in gap or zone, Ekwonu generates extraordinary explosion at contact and uses controlled violence to displace or drive defenders, creating more pancakes than IHOP. Although he is guilty of overaggression and oversetting, he showed tremendous improvement as a junior with his balance and handwork in pass protection, proving he can stay outside at tackle. Overall, Ekwonu isn't a refined blocker and must improve his landmarks, but he is nimble, powerful and should continue to get better and better as his technique and awareness mature at tackle. He has the traits to become an elite run blocker in the NFL and should be a rookie starter at tackle or guard.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 2 overall)

2. EVAN NEAL | Alabama 6074 | 337 lbs. | JR. Okeechobee, Fla. (IMG Academy) 9/19/2000 (age 21.61) #73

BACKGROUND: Evan Neal, who has seven siblings, was born and raised in Okeechobee, Fla. (about halfway between Miami and Orlando), the same hometown as his parents. He grew up in a sports family and played football and basketball throughout his childhood. Neal attended Okeechobee High as a freshman and played right guard and right tackle on varsity (at 330 pounds) while also seeing snaps at defensive tackle. After his freshman year, he transferred to IMG Academy in Bradenton (about two hours west), where he started at right guard as a sophomore. With Daniel Faalele playing primarily at left tackle for IMG in 2017, Neal saw action at tackle and guard as a junior, helping IMG to a 9-0 record. He kicked out to left tackle as a senior in 2018 and was named an Under Armour All-American.

A five-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Neal was the No. 1 offensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class, the No. 7 recruit overall and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Florida. Although he grew up in a family of Miami Hurricanes fans, he rooted for Alabama and gave a soft verbal to the Crimson Tide as a high school freshman (Mario Cristobal was his main recruiter). However, Neal kept his recruitment open and narrowed his final choices to Alabama, Florida, Florida State, Georgia and Miami, committing to the Crimson Tide after his senior season. His father (Eddie) played linebacker at Tulane (his parents now own and operate Douglas Park Grocery in Okeechobee). His uncle (Cleveland Gary) played running back at Georgia and Miami before becoming a first-round pick (No. 26 overall) in the 1989 draft, playing six seasons in the NFL for the Los Angeles Rams and Miami Dolphins. His uncle (Jimmie Jones) was a defensive lineman at Miami and a third-round pick in the 1990 NFL Draft, playing eight seasons with the Dallas Cowboys, St. Louis Rams and Philadelphia Eagles. Neal skipped his senior year and entered the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6074	345	33 5/8	10 1/8	83 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only – choice)

STRENGTHS: Massive frame with wide hips to comfortably carry his weight ... fluid out of his stance with the lower-body coordination to quickly cut off pass-rush angles (allowed only five sacks during his college career) ... moves with unique flexibility for his size (No. 1 on Bruce Feldman's Freaks List) ... his punch is tight, heavy and consistently on time ... uses his long arms to steer rushers wide of the pocket ... there is very little give in his reach, and he won't allow his arms to be chopped down ... casts a wide net in the run game to scoop and drive defenders ... his hands are physical and unforgiving at contact ... able to cave in the line with his natural power ... has the mobility to pull and trap, swinging his hips to seal lanes ... plays with adequate awareness to break down stunts ... not a highly penalized player, drawing only one flag (holding penalty) in 2021 ... rugged play personality and he looks to finish every play with his competitive nature ... named a team captain as a junior ... durable, starting 40 games over the last three seasons and missing only one (due to COVID-19) ... logged double-digit starts at three different positions (left tackle, right tackle, left guard) in college and should continue to improve once he has continuity at one spot.

WEAKNESSES: Tends to fall off blocks and needs to fortify his balance at contact ... can be tossed when he allows his upper half to overextend ... inconsistent sustain and finish in the run game, especially in space ... doesn't have elite lateral range in pass protection and can be beaten to the corner ... occasionally shows cracks in his fundamentals, leaving him on the ground too much ... needs to continue to develop his play strength ... maintained a consistent weight at Alabama (around 350 pounds), but he reached 390 pounds in high school, and the conditioning staff will need to keep a close eye on his weight.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 3 overall)

3. CHARLES CROSS | Mississippi State 6046 | 307 lbs. | rSO. Laurel, Miss. (Laurel) 11/25/2000 (age 21.43) #67

BACKGROUND: Charles Cross, who is the youngest of three children, grew up in Laurel in southeast Mississippi (about 30 miles from the Alabama border). He attended Laurel High and played both ways at offensive tackle and defensive tackle. Cross started at both left tackle and right tackle as a sophomore before moving to left tackle full time as a junior. As a senior, he earned First Team All-State and All-Region honors at left tackle and helped the offense average over 30 points per game. He led Laurel to a 10-win season and a regional championship, earning U.S. Army All-American honors. Cross also lettered in basketball as a sophomore.

A five-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Cross was the No. 5 offensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 27 overall) and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Mississippi (behind only LB Nakobe Dean). He originally committed to Willie Taggart and Florida State the summer before his senior year but decommitted in November. He narrowed his final choice down to Mississippi State, Ole Miss and USC, committing to Joe Moorehead and the Bulldogs (Starkville is 150 miles north of Laurel). Cross elected to skip his senior season and Mississippi State's 2021 bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6043	311	34	10 5/8	83 1/4	-	-	-	30 1/2	-	-	-	20 (vertical and bench press only)

STRENGTHS: Athletic and fluid with the shuffle quickness to mirror rushers laterally ... stays patient in pass protection and his countermeasures get better with each game ... does an outstanding job framing rushers, relying on his timing and precision with his hands ... able to use his length as a recovery device to steer shifty rushers away from the pocket ... doesn't have the anchor to stone bull rushers, but has the lower-body flexibility and play strength to wear them down ... good feel for body position as a zone blocker in the run game ... displays strong hands to seal and leverage run lanes ... rolls his hips into contact and catches himself when he overextends ... impressive vision and block awareness for a player his age ... was a sub-270-pound player when he arrived at Mississippi State and worked hard to add functional playing weight ... started 22 of 23 games the last two seasons and held up well versus SEC competition.

WEAKNESSES: Average-sized frame and must continue to add mass ... not a power-based blocker, which especially shows in the run game ... against bull rushers, his shoulder will soften and anchor can break down ... lacks the twitch to recover after a late start in pass protection ... needs to better understand when to release defenders and avoid holding penalties (flagged eight times in 2021, including seven holding calls) ... played in a pass-happy college scheme ... only played left tackle in his two seasons as a starter and has questionable position flexibility.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Mississippi State, Cross lined up exclusively at left tackle in head coach Mike Leach's Air Raid offense. He fast-tracked his development and comfort level on an island versus SEC competition, winning the Kent Hull Trophy in 2021 as the top lineman in the state of Mississippi. Cross has above-average foot quickness, body control and functional length to attack, reset and get the job done versus edge rushers. His run blocking is a work in progress (78.9 percent of his college snaps were pass-blocking plays), but he flashes the hand strength and angles to out-leverage defenders. Overall, Cross lacks ideal bulk and power, especially in the run game, but he processes things quickly and shows outstanding hand exchange and movement patterns in pass protection. He projects as an NFL starter with Pro Bowl-level talent thanks to his pass blocking.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 7 overall)

4. TREVOR PENNING | Northern Iowa 6071 | 325 lbs. | rSR. Clear Lake, Iowa (Newman Catholic) 5/15/1999 (age 22.95) #70

BACKGROUND: Trevor Penning, who is one of three children, grew up in Clear Lake in northern Iowa (about 30 miles south of the Minnesota border). He attended Newman Catholic High in Mason City, which is the lowest classification of 11-man football in Iowa (his graduating class included fewer than 40 students). He was only 5-foot-10 and 170 pounds as a freshman and played tight end and defensive end on varsity as a sophomore and junior. With college football becoming a possibility for the rising senior, the Newman coaches moved Penning to the offensive line as a pulling guard in their run-heavy attack to showcase his size and movement skills. He earned First Team All-District honors in 2016. Penning also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 47'2.5 in the shot put and 137'9 in the discus. He also lettered in baseball and wrestling during his sophomore season.

A no-star offensive line recruit out of high school, Penning didn't receive any recruiting interest until after his junior season, when he started to receive messages from Division II and Division III programs. During his senior year, a few FCS schools started to show interest, and he received two offers after the season, committing to nearby Northern Iowa (a 90-minute drive) over South Dakota. Penning didn't receive any communication from Iowa or Iowa State. His younger brother (Jared) is a rising redshirt junior at Northern Iowa and started next to Trevor at left guard in 2021. Penning accepted an invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6071	333	34 3/4	10 3/8	83 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	28 (stood on combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Owns ideal measurements with his tall, well-proportioned body along with his long arms and big hands ... moves with athletic footwork in his setup and slide steps ... plays wide in his pass sets with enough lower-body quickness to hold up on an island ... uses his length to steer rushers and maintain pocket integrity ... able to sink and reestablish his anchor versus bull rushers ... powerful at contact in the run game and creates torque from his hips to his hands to bury defenders ... competes with a nasty demeanor and doesn't apologize for it ... he prides himself on his intense personality while playing ("When I'm on the field, I'm looking to embarrass who I'm going against. No mercy.") ... was only 210 pounds as a high school junior before moving to the offensive line and worked his tail off to gain weight and develop in the weight room (broke the school's squat record by doing 625 pounds) ... didn't miss a game due to injury the last three years and logged starts at three different positions (left tackle, right tackle, right guard).

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent knee bend and can be knocked backward when he plays upright ... must adjust his pass-set depth to stay square to rushers ... must better protect versus inside rush lanes ... his hands are often high and late, giving up his chest ... gets too eager at times with his punch, and savvy rushers use it against him ... finds himself out of control and off balance at the second level ... tends to dawdle on his first block and can be late adjusting on combinations or stunts ... prematurely goes for the kill shot and loses his bearings or tosses his man into the pocket ... played against lower level of competition in the FCS.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Northern Iowa, Penning was the left tackle in offensive coordinator Ryan Clanton's scheme. With only one season of high school experience on the offensive line, he dedicated himself to the weight room when he arrived at UNI and took his development seriously, growing into one of the best offensive linemen in college football, regardless of level. Penning is an athletic mover (fastest 10-yard and 20-yard splits among linemen at the combine) with the long arms and nasty attitude that consistently bail him out of trouble. His pass-set angles are inconsistent and he must do a better job with his lower-body bend and handwork to win the leverage game. Overall, Penning's fundamentals and on-field discipline need to be coached up, but he has an impressive blend of size, length, fluidity and power along with the physical presence to dominate the man in front of him. With his traits, he can be a rookie NFL starter as he works out the kinks.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 16 overall)

5. BERNHARD RAIMANN | Central Michigan 6061 | 303 lbs. | SR. Vienna, Austria (Delton-Kellogg) 9/23/1997 (age 24.60) #76

BACKGROUND: Bernhard (Ber-nard) Raimann (Ray-man) was born and raised in Vienna, Austria, and grew up playing soccer and winter sports. He was introduced to American football at the age of 14 and joined a youth club team (Vienna Vikings) as a wide receiver, which is where he fell in love with the sport. Raimann had always planned to do a foreign-exchange year in high school, and football led him to the United States. At age 17, he was placed with the Ferris family in Delton, Mich., and spent his junior year at Delton Kellogg High, a small Division 7 program. Raimann was underutilized as a wide receiver in a Wing-T offense, but he was productive as a blocker and helped the team to its first playoff appearance since 2001. He also lettered in wrestling and track in high school.

A two-star tight end recruit out of high school, Raimann was the 122nd-ranked tight end in the country and the No. 58 recruit in the state of Michigan. He only played one season of high school football in the U.S. before returning to Austria for his senior year. But Raimann was noticed at local recruiting camps and by playing 7-on-7 with Michigan Elite in the Detroit area. He received offers from Eastern Michigan and Central Michigan and committed to CMU as a tight end. His host father (Rollie Ferris) played offensive line at Central Michigan (1995-97) and Rollie's son (Tyden Ferris) just completed his redshirt junior season as a starting guard for the Chippewas. Upon his high school graduation, Raimann had to fulfill his six-month military service obligation in Austria and officially grayshirted during the 2017 season. He enrolled at Central Michigan in January 2018 and spent two seasons at tight end. During spring ball in March 2020, the coaches asked the 245-pound Raimann to practice with the offensive line and he loved it. However, after only two full practices at his new position, the pandemic shut down the program and he was forced to make the transition largely on his own time. When the 2020 season was reinstated, Raimann was 290 pounds and was the Chippewas' new starting left tackle. He graduated with a double major in actuarial science and statistics and 3.80 GPA (May 2021). Raimann opted out of Central Michigan's bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6061	307	32 7/8	10 3/8	81	-	-	-	-	-	4.32	7.34	- (stood on combine runs, jumps, bench)

STRENGTHS: Excellent mirroring skills in pass protection with the athleticism of a former tight end ... has the body flexibility to sink, redirect and make sudden counters (rarely loses to inside moves) ... his natural balance helps him stay wide and recover versus different types of rush moves ... strikes with proper hand placement ... efficient on traps and combinations ... establishes his base to absorb and slow down bull rushers ... relies on his choppy, controlled steps and strong grip to stay square and attached in the run game ... impressive processing skills, especially considering his limited experience (CMU OL coach Mike Cummings: "He is such a quick learner ... he only needs to see something once and it's another tool in his tool box.") ... his play doesn't fatigue over four quarters (averaged 74.6 snaps per game in 2021) ... coaches praise his character, work ethic and commitment (former NFL OL coach Paul Alexander: "He is an unbelievably dedicated guy ... he is always asking questions.") ... added 60 pounds since March 2020 ... durable and started 18 consecutive games at left tackle the last two seasons ... most of his experience has come versus MAC competition, but he earned high grades against two SEC opponents (Missouri and LSU) in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have ideal arm length or wingspan by NFL standards ... doesn't have elite lateral burst and will occasionally lose races to the corner ... needs to continue developing his strength, especially in his lower body ... his hands aren't explosive or heavy at contact ... can be tossed when he loses leverage ... creates plenty of stalemates, but doesn't plow bodies or establish leverage as a drive blocker ... his technique and recognition are impressive considering his experience, but he is still developing in both areas ... climbs cleanly, but his connect rate at the second level is inconsistent ... inexperienced at tackle, but will turn 25 during his rookie season in the NFL.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Central Michigan, Raimann lined up at left tackle in head coach Jim McElwain's zone-blocking scheme, making the transition from tight end to tackle in the midst of the pandemic. Despite never before playing on the offensive line, he showed the desire and ability to be a quick study and started 18 consecutive games at left tackle for the Chippewas the last two seasons, allowing only one career sack (at Missouri). An efficient pass protector, Raimann plays with the athletic reflexes and natural center of gravity to mirror/counter rush moves with his stubborn hands. He needs to get stronger through his roots/legs and he would benefit from more explosive hands, especially in the run game, but he has a crafty understanding of his body posture and hand placement to establish his base and absorb power. Overall, Raimann is still developing his strength and technique, but he is a fluid, balanced athlete with the reactionary skills and awareness to match up against NFL speed. He is older than ideal for a rookie, but he should compete for starting reps in year one.

6. TYLER SMITH | Tulsa 6045 | 324 lbs. | rSO. Fort Worth, Texas (North Crowley) 4/3/2001 (age 21.07) #56

BACKGROUND: Tyler Smith grew up in the Fort Worth, Texas area and played on the defensive line at the pee-wee level and middle school. He attended North Crowley High, where he was a three-year letterman and played on varsity as a sophomore defensive lineman. Due to the lack of depth, the coaches moved him to the offensive line as a junior (a position he never played before), starting at left tackle while also seeing snaps at guard and earning First Team All-District and Third Team All-State honors in 2017. As a senior, he again split time between left tackle and left guard, earning All-District honors. Smith also lettered in track and was the 6A Regional shot-put champion as a senior (with a throw of 53'9.75), finishing in the top 10 in the state. His personal best in the discus was 167'7.

A three-star offensive guard recruit out of high school, Smith was the No. 133 offensive guard in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 335 recruit in the state of Texas. A smaller high school, North Crowley combined for only seven wins over his three years on varsity, and he went under-recruited by the major Texas programs, including his hometown TCU. Smith picked up offers from Houston, Navy and Tulsa, and he eventually signed with the Golden Hurricanes. He elected to skip his final two seasons of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6047	327	34 1/4	10 5/8	83 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	25 (bench press only)

STRENGTHS: His frame, length and athleticism are attractive starting points ... carries his 325 pounds well ... agile footwork with the movement skills to cut off difficult rush angles ... bends well with the lower-body flexibility to quickly redirect, reset or recover ... able to anchor at shallow depth ... generates easy power with his upper body to torque or throw rushers out of the club ... flashes violence in his hands with outstanding grip/sustain strength ... excellent leg drive in the run game to displace defenders ... displays the inline power to wash defenders and create running room ... embraces the bully role and finishes with an aggressive attitude to put his man on the ground ... was near 350 pounds when he got to college and started to get more serious about his nutrition.

WEAKNESSES: His fundamentals need to be rebuilt from the ground up ... undisciplined hands, exchange and posture, making him a flag magnet (committed 16 penalties in 2021, including 12 holding calls) ... his hands start at his waist, don't strike the same place twice and create wasted motion ... his punch timing runs hot-cold and he has become too reliant on his forearms and body to shield ... routinely oversets and puts himself in a hole from the jump ... needs to shore up his pass-set angles and be more concise with his steps and depth ... late mentally and must quicken his vision to stay on schedule with what rushers throw at him ... sacrifices his balance for the kill shot ... a move inside to guard should help mask some of his issues, but he was a left tackle only in college and has unproven positional versatility.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Tulsa, Smith lined up at left tackle in head coach Philip Montgomery's up-tempo smashmouth spread. One of the youngest players in the draft (and has only been playing on the offensive line for five years), he earned the starting left tackle job in 2020 and earned All-AAC honors each of the last two seasons. With his size, movement skills and physical brand of football, Smith is the type of young talent ideal for drafting and developing at the right price. However, he relies too much on his aggression, and his chaotic timing and technique lead to balance issues. Overall, Smith is incredibly raw, but he has the play strength and physical traits to get significantly better with technical and mental development. There is a sizable gap between where he is now and his ceiling as a potential NFL starter and will require a patient coaching staff ready for a project.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 50 overall)

7. DANIEL FAALELE | Minnesota 6080 | 384 lbs. | SR. Melbourne, Australia (IMG Academy) 11/9/1999 (age 22.47) #78

BACKGROUND: Daniel Faalele (Fah-ah-LAY-lay), who is the oldest of two boys, is of Tongan (mother) and Samoan (father) descent and was born and raised in Melbourne, Australia, with his single mother (Ruth). He was a standout in basketball and rugby growing up thanks to his size and enjoyed lifting weights. In 2015, at the age of 16, Faalele was working out at Conquest Athletic Performance in Melbourne when he was noticed by Hawaii offensive line coach (and 13-year NFL veteran) Chris Naeole, who offered him a football scholarship on the spot. Despite no football experience, he participated at a Jim Harbaugh satellite camp in Australia and created a buzz among several major programs. In August 2016, Faalele moved halfway around the world to attend IMG Academy in Bradenton, Fla., where he sat out his junior season to practice and learn the game. As a senior, he saw his first game action and helped lead IMG to a 9-0 season, playing primarily at left tackle.

A four-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Faalele was the No. 19 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 52 recruit in the state of Florida. Before he ever played a football game, he had scholarship offers from major college programs like LSU, Miami and Michigan. His dance card continued to fill up and he strongly considered offers from Alabama and Georgia before a second visit to Minnesota sold him on the Gophers. Faalele graduated high school early and enrolled at Minnesota in the spring of 2018. His younger brother (Taylor) is currently a sophomore offensive lineman at IMG Academy. Faalele opted out of the 2020 season because of the COVID-19 pandemic. After an excellent 2021 season, he elected to forgo his remaining eligibility to enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Faalele accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Humongous natural frame with rare build thickness and measurements (9 1/2-inch wrists, the largest at the combine) ... uses his upper-body power and massive hands to knock back defenders at the point of attack ... generates steady movement in the run game ... displays the reach and grip strength to latch, snatch or put his target on lockdown before they can get to him ... naturally stout and shows very little give versus bull rushers ... moves with surprising balance and footwork for a player his size ... excellent initial quickness to set up and stay well timed through the rep ... naturally wide; it takes a $20 Uber ride to get around him ... throws plates around in the weight room and worked hard to reshape his body, shedding bad weight and adding muscle mass ... a soft-spoken individual, but his coaches say he's always smiling and has the mental aptitude required for the NFL game ... durable, starting 31 games over his three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Wide rush speed will stress his lateral range ... has a soft inside shoulder and is susceptible to rushers crossing his face ... needs to tidy up his landmarks and pass-set depth ... needs to better incorporate angles into his point-of-attack blocks to seal lanes ... coordinated at contact, but will overextend and his sustain skills require maturing ... penalized 16 times over his three seasons, including three holding flags as a senior ... his mobility in the run game is only average ... struggles to roll his hips as a drive blocker because of his taller stature ... still a novice in his ability to sort through blitzers, stunts and late pressures ... his conditioning is important to his continued development (weighed 426 pounds when he enrolled at Minnesota and was north of 400 pounds prior to the 2021 season) ... avoided major injury in college, but some scouts have mentioned potential injury risks because of his size ... lacks experience at guard or left tackle (his only career offensive snap not at right tackle was his goal-line touchdown in his final game).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Minnesota, Faalele lined up at right tackle in the Gophers offense and had the same offensive line coach (Brian Callahan) since he stepped foot onto campus. An Australian rugby player who didn't play a football game until his senior year at IMG Academy, he worked his way into the starting lineup as a true freshman and showed incremental improvements during his three on-field seasons in college. Faalele engulfs edge rushers with his wide frame and uses his anvil hands and natural power to overwhelm his man at the point of attack. He moves with balanced footwork and body control but can be caught leaning/falling off blocks in the run game and his body angles require refinement. Overall, Faalele has range/mirror limitations and is still learning the position, but he has a unique package of size, play strength and fluid movements. He should compete for an NFL starting right tackle job during his rookie season.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 66 overall)

8. ABRAHAM LUCAS | Washington State 6063 | 315 lbs. | rSR. Everett, Wash. (Murphy) 10/25/1998 (age 23.51) #72

BACKGROUND: Abraham "Abe" Lucas, who is the second-oldest of seven children, grew up in northwest Washington, just north of Seattle. He started playing sports in kindergarten, and basketball was his first love. Lucas enrolled at Archbishop Murphy, a private Catholic high school in Everett, where he shifted from basketball to football as his go-to sport. He was a two-way player as a tight end and defensive end, finishing his junior season with 36 tackles and 15 tackles for loss. With colleges recruiting him as a tackle because of his projectable size, Lucas got a head start on the transition and moved to left tackle as a senior. That year, he led Archbishop Murphy to a 13-0 record and 2016 2A state championship (five wins came by forfeit because teams were afraid to play them). In eight games as a senior, Lucas finished with 31 tackles and 15 sacks to earn Second Team All-State honors. He also lettered all four seasons in basketball and was a two-time All-Conference honoree, averaging 16.8 points per game and 10.3 rebounds per game as a senior.

A three-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Lucas was the No. 50 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Washington. He received an early offer from Washington State as a junior, which was followed by offers from Oregon State, Wyoming and California. Lucas wanted to stay in Washington and committed to the Cougars prior to his senior year. His grandfather (Bill Collier) played college baseball at Seattle University in the early 1950s. Lucas accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6063	316	34	10 5/8	82 3/8	-	-	-	29	9'5"	-	-	- (stood on Combine runs, shuttles, bench)

STRENGTHS: Wide, massive frame with adequate length and mass ... smooth and balanced in his lateral slide ... displays above-average body control and lower-body quickness for a player his size ... absorbs contact well to anchor at contact ... patient and relaxed prior to his punch ... strong hands and runs his feet at contact as a run blocker ... also shows his mobility out in space in the screen game ... smart; deciphers things quickly ... soft spoken, but well respected by teammates and coaches; was a team captain ... was a skinny 260 pounds as a high school senior and worked hard to pack on the bulk in college ... durable and avoided major injury over his career, playing over 3,000 offensive snaps over 42 consecutive starts.

WEAKNESSES: Played in pass-happy schemes at WSU with limited run-blocking reps on his film ... not explosive or rangy when executing pulls or climbs ... late with his hands and adjustments in the run game, especially on the move ... gets top-heavy in his movements, leading to over-setting versus speed ... lack of lower-body flexibility leaves his pads high and allows rushers to get underneath him ... needs to better anticipate rush tracks and adjust his depth accordingly ... inconsistent hand exchange versus diverse rushers ... flashes finishing toughness, but it's not a strength of his game right now ... penalized five times as a senior (four false starts) ... only played right tackle in college.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Washington State, Lucas was a mainstay at right tackle, initially in Mike Leach's Air Raid scheme then in Nick Rolovich's run-and-shoot pass offense. After transitioning from tight end to tackle as a senior in high school, he added almost 70 pounds during his redshirt year and became the first offensive lineman in school history to earn All-Conference honors four different seasons. An efficient blocker, Lucas is a smooth athlete for his size and does a great job of staying patient in his pass sets and quickly regaining his balance to counter rush moves. While he flashes power with inside/outside zone concepts in the run game, he is inconsistent with his point-of-attack skills and needs more experience as a run blocker (only 27 percent of his offensive snaps in college were run-blocking snaps). Overall, Lucas is not an explosive mover and his hand exchange must improve versus NFL-level competition, but he has a massive frame and the balanced athleticism to keep his man blocked. He projects as a low-ceiling starting right tackle in the NFL.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 79 overall)

9. NICHOLAS PETIT-FRERE | Ohio State 6051 | 316 lbs. | rJR. Tampa, Fla. (Berkeley Prep) 9/15/1999 (age 22.62) #78

BACKGROUND: Nicholas Petit-Frere (puh-TEE-frare), who is an only child, was born and raised in the Tampa area by his single mother (Loris), who is of Haitian descent. She gave birth to him when she was a senior in high school, and he lived with his parents while she earned her degree from South Florida. After playing basketball in elementary school, his size led him to try football in the sixth grade, initially playing on the defensive line. Petit-Frere moved to the offensive line in eighth grade and saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman offensive tackle at Berkeley Preparatory School in Tampa. He switched between left and right tackle during his sophomore, junior and senior seasons while also rushing off the edge as a defensive end. As a senior, Petit-Frere logged 93 pancakes in nine games and was honored as a First Team All-American. He also lettered as a center in basketball.

A five-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Petit-Frere was the No. 1-ranked offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 7 recruit overall) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Florida (behind DE Xavier Thomas and CB Patrick Surtain II). He received offers from every major program in the country and narrowed down his final five to Alabama, Florida, Michigan, Notre Dame and Ohio State. Petit-Frere went back and forth before committing to the Buckeyes on signing day, becoming the highest-ranked recruit in Ohio State's 2018 class. He graduated with his degree in marketing (December 2021). Petit-Frere opted out of the Rose Bowl and skipped his senior season to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Prototypical NFL frame and length ... spry athlete and fluid out of his stance ... displays the nimble feet and efficient lateral movements to cut off rush angles ... executes reach blocks on both play side and back side ... highly efficient on combinations as a zone blocker, passing off linemen and climbing to the second level ... breaks down in space to engage and control linebackers ... adequate drive strength in the run game because of his explosive movements ... his former coaches describe him as "intelligent" and a player who picks things up quickly ... added over 40 pounds since high school and worked hard to develop his body ... has functional starting experience at both left and right tackle.

WEAKNESSES: His light anchor and lack of core strength are concerns ... can be jarred off balance or walked backward, struggling to reset versus power ... moves well laterally, but needs to keep his weight better centered in his shuffle ... still developing his muscle memory and body angles ... late reacting and adjusting to inside moves ... inconsistent with his aiming points and timing, leaving his chest vulnerable versus length ... gets to where he needs to be in the run game, but lacks the bulky strength in his hands/punch to be a people mover ... must improve his pad level and hand technique in the run game ... turned in dreadful performances versus two of the better teams (Michigan, Penn State) on Ohio State's 2021 schedule.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Ohio State, Petit-Frere lined up at left tackle in head coach Ryan Day's zone/RPO-based offense. The prize of 2018 signing day for Urban Meyer and the Buckeyes, he arrived in Columbus at only 268 pounds and spent time developing his body before starting at right tackle in 2020 and left tackle in 2021. Petit-Frere has excellent foot quickness and bend through his lower half, especially in pass protection and as a zone blocker. However, his anchor/play strength issues are concerning and he must do a better job staying centered on the move and establishing his base once he's engaged (something Aidan Hutchinson exposed). Overall, Petit-Frere is a projection because of the development still required in his game, but he has the size, quickness and big-man twitch that NFL coaches covet. He has the talent to grow into an NFL starter for a patient coaching staff.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round (No. 99 overall)

10. RASHEED WALKER | Penn State 6055 | 313 lbs. | rJR. Waldorf, Md. (North Point) 2/13/2000 (age 22.21) #53

BACKGROUND: Rasheed Walker was born and raised in Washington, D.C., where his father (Alfred) was a metropolitan police officer. He grew up playing baseball, basketball, boxing and football, although he was often sidelined at the Pop Warner level because he surpassed the playing weight requirements. At the age of 11, Walker and his family moved to Waldorf, Md., and he later enrolled at North Point High, where he made varsity as a freshman. A three-year starter at right tackle and on the defensive line (and a three-time captain), he earned All-Conference honors as a sophomore on both offense and defense (30 tackles and five sacks). As a junior, Walker earned Consensus All-State honors on both sides of the ball, finishing with 35 tackles and four sacks. He helped North Point to a 12-1 record as a senior and was named a 2017 U.S. Army All-American and First Team All-State honoree by USA Today.

A four-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Walker was the No. 6 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 65 recruit overall) and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Maryland. He picked up his first offer from Maryland as a sophomore, and several other programs soon followed, including SEC programs Georgia and LSU. Walker narrowed his focus to Ohio State, Penn State and Virginia Tech, committing to the Nittany Lions on signing day. He elected to skip his senior season in college and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6060	324	33 1/4	10 1/4	80 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – choice)

STRENGTHS: NFL-made frame with evenly distributed weight ... quick out of his stance to cut off speed and run rushers wide of the pocket ... able to sink, open his hips and redirect ... credits his agile footwork to his boxing background ... can bend without losing his balance ... shows the mobility to get out in space and pick off defenders in the screen game ... flashes impressive upper-body power ... can lock out and reset versus bull rushers ... drives his feet in the run game and creates movement on down blocks ... competes with an edge and is not shy getting combative at times ... his coaches say he is strong willed and moves on quickly from mistakes ... voted a team captain in 2021 (head coach James Franklin: "From last year to this year, his improvement physically and mentally and as a leader is probably as dramatic as any guy I've ever been a part of.") ... started three years at left tackle in college after starting three years at right tackle in high school.

WEAKNESSES: Predictable punch timing and needs to vary his attack to stay connected ... plays on his heels too often and can be worked backward ... hard outside setter and late to react to inside moves ... tardy counters lead to body-to-body blocks ... needs to be more efficient on combinations ... very inconsistent with his body angles, especially at the second level and in the run game ... needs to stay centered as a run blocker ... was responsible for 10 penalties over the last two seasons, including five false starts ... needs to keep his head on a swivel to spot delayed pressures ... medicals will be important after he tried to play through a torn meniscus and painful bone bruise in his right knee (October 2021), missing the final three games ... showed some immaturity during his four years in college, including a pair of misdemeanor charges after he stole a bicycle on campus because he didn't feel like walking (September 2018).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Penn State, Walker lined up at left tackle in offensive coordinator Mike Yurcich's offense. He was one of the prizes of signing day in 2018 and started 32 consecutive games at left tackle over the last three years before a knee injury sidelined him toward the end of the 2021 season. Walker has intriguing physical traits with a ready-made frame, quick feet and body flexibility. However, he doesn't consistently play under control and has a long list of bad habits (over-setting, poor angles, stopping his feet) and will require an influential offensive line coach in the NFL to develop his technique. Overall, Walker has the frame, raw power and body fluidity to be effective, but he too often sacrifices his balance and loses his bearings to stay connected. He has starting talent, but he must become more detail oriented to be a better-than-replaceable NFL starter.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

11. BRAXTON JONES | Southern Utah 6052 | 310 lbs. | rSR. Murray, Utah (Murray) 3/27/1999 (age 23.09) #77

BACKGROUND: Braxton Jones grew up in Murray, Utah (10 miles south of Salt Lake City), and played baseball and soccer when he was younger, but eventually focused on basketball and football. He attended Murray High, where he considered being a basketball-only athlete but decided to also play football. As a junior, Jones earned Offensive MVP and All-Region honors at left tackle while also playing on the defensive line, posting 25 tackles, four tackles for loss, and 2.5 sacks. As a senior in 2016, he again earned Offensive MVP and All-Region honors at left tackle, although the team struggled to a 3-7 record. Jones also lettered in basketball at Murray, averaging 6.3 points and 5.6 rebounds per game as a senior.

A two-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Jones was the No. 284 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 46 recruit in the state of Utah. He wasn't recruited heavily, though he received moderate interest from Division II programs like Dixie State and Colorado Mesa. His first offer didn't arrive until after his senior season when FCS Southern Utah reached out with a scholarship. Jones received a late offer from Utah to be a preferred walk-on, but he chose the scholarship and committed to Southern Utah. He graduated with his degree in marketing. Jones accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Projectable frame and growth potential with elite arm length ... excellent quickness at the snap to answer edge speed ... adjusts well in space and can redirect versus inside moves ... shows the same foot quickness in the run game, working well on the outside to reach or scoop block ... uses his upper-body strength to control defenders ... flashes the grip strength to connect with his hands and drive with his feet ... executes combinations and quickly climbs to the second level ... the mental part of his game has shown noticeable improvement each season (former OC Matt Wade: "He studies it ... and that bleeds through to that whole group and makes them all better.") ... competes with a fierce demeanor and consistently looks to finish ... durable, starting all but one game the last three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Plays with upright posture and a light anchor ... gets pushed on his heels when he doesn't sink and use knee-bend ... will forget his feet at times, giving rushers an opportunity to attack his shoulder ... inconsistent with his pass-set landmarks and needs to better utilize body angles ... plays with inconsistent urgency in his setup and hand exchange ... his placement and countermeasures aren't on an NFL level right now ... has room on his frame to continue to fill out and strengthen his core ... played at the FCS level with only one career game versus a Power 5 program (struggled against Arizona State on his 2021 tape).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Southern Utah, Jones lined up at left tackle in former offensive coordinator Matt Wade's balanced attack. A two-time All-American at the FCS level, he was one of the few bright spots in an otherwise struggling program as the Thunderbirds managed only six wins in 40 games over the last four seasons. With his balance and foot quickness, Jones is ascending as a pass protector and is currently a better run blocker, showing the drive strength to create movement at contact. His bad habits (stopping his feet, letting his pads rise, lowering his eyes) could be masked in the Big Sky, but they left him out-leveraged against Arizona State and will be magnified versus NFL competition. Overall, Jones needs improved timing, technique and anchor before he is ready for NFL reps, but his movement skills and length are outstanding foundational traits. Although he'll require an adjustment period, he has the tools to be a starter down the road.

GRADE: 4th Round

12. SPENCER BURFORD | UTSA 6041 | 304 lbs. | SR. San Antonio, Texas (Wagner) 7/19/2000 (age 21.78) #74

BACKGROUND: Spencer Burford (BUR-ferd) was born and raised in San Antonio and started playing football at age 4. He attended Wagner High in east San Antonio, and although he was primarily a defensive player, he seized the opportunity on the offensive line and saw starting varsity reps at left tackle as a sophomore. Seeing playing time at both tackle and guard as a junior in 2016, Burford earned First Team All-District honors on offense with 87 knockdowns and 12 pancakes. As a senior, he earned First Team All-Area and All-District honors and played on both sides of the ball.

A three-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Burford was the No. 76 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 132 recruit in the state of Texas. He received recruiting attention from bigger programs but always had his eye on nearby UTSA, a startup program that began playing FBS football in 2011. Burford, who became the highest-ranked recruit in school history, signed with the Roadrunners because he wanted to "put the city on the map." His father (John Watts) passed away in August 2019. His cousin (LaAdrian Waddle) played offensive tackle at Texas Tech and in the NFL for seven seasons (2013-19). His cousin (Sam Hurd) played wide receiver in the NFL for six seasons (2006-11). Burford accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Broad-shouldered frame with an outstanding wingspan ... explodes out of his stance to mirror, square and engage different types of pass rushers ... rarely beaten by edge speed to the corner ... recovers well in space ... physical hands and keeps them tight to frame rushers with his punch ... mobile in the run game with his ability to reach, pull and climb ... able to create knock-back when he rolls his hips into contact ... plays with a fierce demeanor and keeps busy ... has the body type to get stronger and add mass ... trusts his coaching and was awarded a single-digit jersey (though he couldn't wear it as an offensive lineman) ... started 20-plus games at both left tackle and left guard in college with a few starts at right tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Raw in the run game ... lean lower body with a noticeably unstable anchor ... can be overwhelmed by power with questionable strength as a base blocker ... inconsistent body angles and pad level leave him vulnerable versus leverage rushers ... can get grabby when he doesn't play under control ... only average length and allows rushers to attack his chest ... committed 11 penalties over the last two seasons and needs to clean up the mistakes ... has reps at right tackle, but didn't look nearly as comfortable and is more natural on the left side ... missed two games as a senior because of injury.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at UTSA, Burford played primarily left tackle in offensive coordinator Barry Lunney Jr.'s multiple run scheme. The San Antonio native was the highest-ranked recruit in school history and started 43 games between left guard, left tackle and right tackle over the last four years. Burford is a good-sized athlete with the nimble quickness to cover up edge speed and active hands to battle through the whistle. He does a nice job with his pass-set depth but is guilty of over-setting and needs to stay on schedule to mask some of his deficiencies, especially in the run game. Overall, Burford must continue to bolster his play strength and hone his technique, especially in the run game, but he is an agile-footed blocker with the body twitch and play personality worth developing. He projects as an NFL backup as a rookie, but the skills are there for him to earn a starting tackle job in year two or three.

13. KELLEN DIESCH | Arizona State 6071 | 303 lbs. | rSR. Trophy Club, Texas (Byron Nelson) 8/23/1997 (age 24.68) #74

BACKGROUND: Kellen Diesch (deesh), who is the oldest of three children, was born in Norman, Okla., before moving to Dallas with his family at four-years old. He started playing flag football in elementary school and also played baseball, basketball and wrestling through middle school. Diesch attended Byron Nelson High School where he was a football-only athlete and played all four seasons. He was primarily a defensive end and tight end, but started to see offensive line reps down the stretch of his senior year.

A four-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Diesch was the No. 11 offensive tackle in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 17 recruit in the state of Texas. He collected several notable scholarship offers, including Alabama, Florida, Michigan, Oklahoma, Texas and USC. He originally committed to Arkansas prior to his senior year, but the chance to stay in Texas and play in the SEC drew him to signing with Texas A&M. After four years as a back-up with the Aggies, Diesch graduated with his degree in business and entered the transfer portal. He landed at Arizona State where he started at left tackle the last two seasons. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6071	303	32 3/8	9 3/8	79 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	25 (stood on combine runs, jumps, shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Extremely light feet as a pass blocker ... above-average mirror and lateral footwork skills ... streamlines his kick-slide and punch to play from out in front ... stays balanced to quickly recover and regain his positioning ... climbs with bounce to handle space at the second level ... resets well during his hand exchange to counter various rush moves ... his hands aren't heavy, but they are stubborn ... very in tune to stunts and twists ... flashes just enough upper-body strength to control, turn or dump in the run game ... stays busy and will play with effort each down ... durable and started every game at left tackle the last two years.

WEAKNESSES: Narrow-shouldered frame with below-average arm length and wingspan ... his short arms are obvious on tape and make it easier for rushers to attack his chest or knock away his hands ... tends to misjudge edge speed, creating extra work for himself ... lacks sand in his lower body and can be rocked backward by bully power ... chops his feet at contact in the run game, but his sustain skills are subpar ... his grabby hands will attract holding calls ... doesn't have the drive power or leverage to uproot defenders ... highly penalized blocker (10 penalties the last two seasons) ... overaged; will turn 25 before his first NFL game ... required a scope to fix a right meniscus injury (December 2016) ... didn't crack the starting lineup in four years in College Station.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Arizona State, Diesch was entrenched as the left tackle in former offensive coordinator Zak Hill's multiple run scheme. After he struggled to find the field in his four seasons with the Aggies, he transferred to Tempe and rejuvenated his career at left tackle for the Sun Devils, earning All-Pac 12 honors each of the last two seasons. Diesch is quick out of his stance with above-average body control and balance on the move. He shows precision and timing with his hand technique, but he plays narrow and can be too easily jolted at contact, disrupting his timing and sustain skills. Overall, Diesch plays light and short-armed, which will be tough to overcome versus NFL rushers, but he does a great job of framing his quick feet to stay connected in pass protection. He projects as a potential NFL backup.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

14. MAX MITCHELL | Louisiana 6062 | 307 lbs. | SR. Monroe, La. (Neville) 10/12/1999 (age 22.54) #74

BACKGROUND: Max Mitchell grew up in Monroe in northern Louisiana and attended Neville High. He was undersized as a freshman (6-2, 165 pounds) and played primarily on junior varsity as a sophomore and junior offensive lineman. Mitchell continued to grow and develop, moving up to varsity as a senior (6-5, 270 pounds), where he started at right tackle and right guard, leading Neville to an 8-4 record and earning a spot in the 2017 Louisiana I-20 Bowl East-West All Star Game.

A two-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Mitchell was the No. 244 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 124 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He went overlooked by FBS programs, including his hometown UL-Monroe, and received scholarship offers from lower-level programs like Northwestern State (FCS), Arkansas-Monticello (Division II) and Ouachita Baptist (Division II). But with newly hired head coach Billy Napier patching together his first recruiting class at Louisiana, he and offensive line coach Rob Sale liked what they saw with Mitchell and gave him his only FBS scholarship offer. After his senior season, he opted out of the Ragin' Cajuns' bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Light mover and keeps his feet underneath him in his pass sets ... has the body control to adjust to moving targets ... keeps his hands quiet, tight and on time ... mixes up his hand tactics to keep rushers from getting a read on him ... does a great job knocking away the wrists of rushers ... continues to drive his feet at contact in the run game to generate movement ... has the mobility to pull, trap or stalk and stun at the second level (played in a zone-blocking scheme all four seasons) ... tough-minded competitor whose confidence grows each season ... was weight deficient for a lineman throughout high school and worked hard with his nutrition and strength training in college ... willingly switched positions when asked ... durable and didn't miss a game due to injury in college.

WEAKNESSES: Needs to continue adding mass and developing his play strength ... inconsistent anchor and will have trouble versus power ... gets himself in trouble when he stops his lateral slide and tries to simply push rushers wide of the pocket ... needs to deliver more of a thump on the move ... struggles to sustain versus power in the run game ... his base narrows as a drive blocker and he tends to lose balance when attempting to overcompensate ... needs to show better consistency at the second level ... has some experience at left tackle but appears much more comfortable at right tackle.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Louisiana, Mitchell lined up primarily at right tackle in former head coach Billy Napier's zone-heavy offense. With only one season of starting experience on varsity in high school, he could have used a redshirt in college but was thrown into the fire and learned from eventual NFL draft picks Robert Hunt and Kevin Dotson. Mitchell moves well and has steadily gotten better with his technique the last three seasons, specifically with his landmarks and hand exchange. Somewhat of a late bloomer physically, he can be jostled at contact and his lack of base/core strength shows on tape. Overall, Mitchell was a below- average tester and needs to continue developing his strength, but his play quickness is an asset in pass protection and as a zone run blocker. He does a great job reestablishing his hands mid-block. He isn't ready made for the NFL, but he the potential is there for him to grow into a swing tackle role.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

15. DARE ROSENTHAL | Kentucky 6066 | 290 lbs. | rJR. Ferriday, La. (Ferriday) 12/10/1999 (age 22.38) #51

BACKGROUND: Zadarius "Dare" (rhymes with "care") Rosenthal, who has five siblings, was born and raised in Ferriday in east Louisiana (10 miles from the Mississippi border). He attended Ferriday High, where he put himself on the recruiting radar as a standout two-way freshman on varsity. After initially deciding to transfer to IMG Academy in Bradenton, Fla., Rosenthal had a change of heart and returned to his hometown and high school. As a senior left tackle, he earned First Team All-State honors in leading Ferriday to an 11-win season and the 2A state playoffs. He finished his senior year with 60 tackles, 30 tackles for loss, six sacks, two fumble returns for touchdown, a blocked field goal and an interception. Rosenthal also lettered in basketball.

A four-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Rosenthal was the No. 24 defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He initially committed to Alabama as a freshman before decommitting the following season. Rosenthal received scholarship offers from Florida, Georgia, Michigan, Ohio State, Texas and others before deciding to stay close to home and sign with LSU. He arrived in Baton Rouge in 2018 as a defensive lineman before transitioning to the offensive line during his redshirt year. After a tumultuous three years with the Tigers, Rosenthal decided to enter the transfer portal and ended up at Kentucky. After one season in Lexington, he decided to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6067	306	33 1/8	9	79 1/2	-	-	-	29	8'9"	5.00	7.97	(stood on Combine runs; no bench – elbow)

STRENGTHS: Big, strong and long ... shows just enough foot quickness and flexibility to react to edge speed ... flashes hip sink and punch snap in his redirect ... doesn't look uncoordinated when asked to hold up on an island ... can climb to the second level and get out in space ... uses grip strength to create push and sustain his blocks in the run game ... showed improved lower-body bend later in the year, which helped create drive power on wash downs ... despite unruly hands, he didn't attract any holding penalties in 2021 and gave up only one sack.

WEAKNESSES: Narrow through his waist and hips ... displays tendencies of listlessness with his lateral mirroring skills ... inconsistent contact balance and lacks the base strength to reposition himself versus counters ... can be tossed by power when his posture isn't right ... his pads rise and hands wander in his pass sets ... his hand placement is stuck on beginner level and must mature before he is ready to face NFL competition ... struggled to stay on the field at LSU because he routinely found himself in the coach's doghouse for violating team rules, resulting in multiple suspensions ... was a left tackle only in college and has played only 24 games in his four years at the college level.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Kentucky, Rosenthal manned the left tackle position in former offensive coordinator Liam Coen's zone-based scheme. After a tumultuous three years in Baton Rouge because of disciplinary issues, he started 12 consecutive games for the Wildcats in 2021, which put him back on the NFL radar. Although his aimless hands will let him down, Rosenthal is able to adjust his feet and hips as a positional blocker, which allows him to latch and lose slowly. His inconsistent discipline and balance in both his pass sets and as a run blocker are correctable, but it won't be easy. Overall, Rosenthal's maturity questions (on and off the field) will be scrutinized by NFL teams, but he has the athletic potential and length that NFL teams covet in a developmental blocker.

16. VEDERIAN LOWE | Illinois 6045 | 314 lbs. | rSR. Rockford, Ill. (Auburn) 4/17/1999 (age 23.03) #79

BACKGROUND: Vederian (vuh-DARE-ee-an) Lowe grew up in northern Illinois (about 90 miles west of Chicago) and started playing football at the youth level. He attended Auburn High, where he was a four-year letterman on the offensive line, starting at guard as a freshman. Lowe moved out to tackle as a sophomore, lining up primarily at right tackle the next three seasons. As a senior, he led Auburn to a 10-2 record and the 2016 playoff quarterfinals, earning All-Conference honors for the third consecutive season.

A three-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Lowe was the No. 111 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 29 recruit in the state of Illinois. After his freshman year of high school, he picked up an offer from Illinois, and his recruitment looked like it was about to take off. But the Illini were the only Power 5 team to offer him, and he committed prior to his senior year. Lowe took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID-19 and returned to Illinois for a fifth season in 2021. He is married to his college sweetheart (Haylee), and they have two boys: Kingston was born in June 2019 and Trey followed in May 2021. Lowe adopted his younger brother (Vydalis) in 2021 after his mother (Vendeka) passed away. He graduated with his degree in communication (December 2021). Lowe accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6043	310	34 5/8	10 1/4	85 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	22 (stood on combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Looks the part with outstanding arm length ... uses footwork to widen his base and stay centered ... adjusts his slide quickness to answer the counters of pass rushers ... flashes the strength in his hands to strike and stay connected ... keeps his feet firing to create movement in the run game ... his penalties declined each season, attracting just two flags as a super-senior (one false start, one holding) ... married and mature family man with dependable character ... durable; set the school record for career starts at Illinois (52), including 46 consecutively ... was a three-year starter at right tackle in high school and has functional experience at both tackle spots.

WEAKNESSES: His pads start high and remain high ... needs to improve his lower-body bend to sink his hips and anchor at the point of attack ... his range as a pass blocker is average and NFL wide speed will be a challenge ... too much of a catch blocker and his hands lack precision and placement ... doesn't stay controlled when working up a level ... can be caught off guard by twists and delays ... his upper half gets overextended in the run game, sacrificing his balance ... didn't play a snap on the interior of the offensive line in college.

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Illinois, Lowe has been a fixture at left tackle for the Illini in former offensive coordinator Tony Petersen's zone-based scheme. Despite cycling through three different offensive coordinators and three different offensive line coaches over the last five years, he got better each season and proved his durability with the most starts in school history. Lowe is a mature, developed player with the footwork to adjust to targets in space and allow his long arms to work for him. His pad level can get away from him and he needs to be a more consistent leverage blocker. Overall, Lowe is an average athlete and tends to be over-reliant on his upper half, but he stays under control to square up defenders as a pass blocker or drive them in the run game. He is prepared to compete for an NFL backup job as a rookie.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

17. RYAN VAN DEMARK | Connecticut 6064 | 307 lbs. | SR. Wayne, N.J. (The Hun School) 3/22/1998 (age 24.10) #74

BACKGROUND: Ryan "Vandy" Van Demark grew up outside of Newark, N.J., and started playing football in second grade. He attended Wayne Valley High and didn't play as a junior but hit a five-inch growth spurt prior to his senior year. Van Demark worked himself into the starting rotation in 2015, seeing most of his time at right tackle. Requiring more development time, he reclassified for the 2016-17 school year and transferred to The Hun School in Princeton, N.J., for a postgraduate season. Van Demark was named First Team All-State and All-Conference in 2016 while seeing most of his playing time at right tackle. He also lettered in volleyball in high school, where he earned All-County honors.

A two-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Van Demark was the No. 262 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 60 recruit in the state of New Jersey. He received mostly FCS interest with offers from Fordham, New Hampshire and Richmond until Connecticut entered the picture. He verbally committed to the Huskies and stayed committed a few weeks later when there was a coaching change and Randy Edsall was brought back as head coach. Van Demark was the lowest-ranked recruit in Connecticut's 2017 class. His father (Jeff) played basketball at Lehigh. Van Demark accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Owns a tall, long frame and has worked hard to add mass ... takes wide, quick steps in his kick-slide ... has long arms and isn't shy using them to strike the breastplate of defenders before they can reach him ... has the coordinated hands to fend off and counter rush moves while in motion ... his contact balance and upper-body strength help him stay connected in the run game ... excellent on-field communicator with the football IQ and mindset for NFL work ... voted a senior captain, and NFL scouts say he vibes well with everyone in the offensive line room ... added almost 50 pounds since he enrolled at UConn ... didn't miss a game because of injury in college, starting 43 games and seeing time at left and right tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal lower-body thickness ... high hipped and needs to improve his lower-body flexibility and base ... bull rushers know they can attack his anchor and work through his body ... needs to continue developing his core strength to combat counter moves ... has the bad habit of opening early and creating a shallow corner for edge speed ... prefers to slam and control with his upper half as a run blocker and needs to generate more power from his legs and hip roll ... more penalties than ideal for a player with his experience (three false starts in 2021) ... struggled versus the best competition (Clemson) on his 2021 tape.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Connecticut, Van Demark manned left tackle in former offensive coordinator Frank Guifre's scheme. He was the lowest-ranked recruit in UConn's 2017 class and was only 260 pounds as a freshman, but he grew each season, even as the program struggled with a 7-41 record (four of those wins came against FCS teams) in his four seasons. Van Demark doesn't labor in his pass slides and uses tight, independent hands to answer pass-rush moves and reset on the move. While he achieves proper depth in his pass sets, his lower-body bend needs work to better anchor as a pass blocker or roll into contact in the run game. Overall, Van Demark must continue to develop his core strength and pad level concerns, but he has the quickness, handwork and intelligence to earn an NFL roster spot as a swing tackle.

GRADE: 6th Round

18. JA'TYRE CARTER | Southern 6033 | 311 lbs. | rSR. White Castle, La. (White Castle) 1/15/1999 (age 23.29) #58

BACKGROUND: Ja'Tyre Carter grew up south of Baton Rouge, La., and prepped at White Castle High, where he was a four-year standout in basketball. Midway through his tenure, he was coaxed onto the football field and joined the varsity team as a junior, lining up as a defensive lineman and tight end. As a senior, Carter earned First Team All-District honors at tight end and Second Team All-District honors as a defensive tackle. On the basketball court, he led White Castle to the 2016-17 1A state championship as a senior, taking home MVP honors in the title game with 19 points and 17 rebounds. He took home First Team All-District, All-Metro and All-State honors, averaging 17 points and 10 rebounds per game.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Carter wasn't ranked by the online recruiting services and was widely under-recruited for football. A basketball-focused athlete most of his life, he received offers from Xavier University (La.), St. Peter's and LSU Alexandria for basketball, but he decided that football was his best route to a professional career. Carter committed to Southern for football and was moved to the offensive line despite having no previous experience there. After his senior season, he accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	312	-	-	-	5.02	2.93	1.72	34 1/2	9'3"	-	-	-

STRENGTHS: Long-armed frame and carries his mass well, especially in his thighs and bubble ... smooth out of his stance and in his setup ... stays balanced in his pass sets, playing both relaxed and urgent (it's tough to find pressures allowed on his 2021 tape) ... has a patient punch, but it lands heavy when he connects ... showed improved technique as a senior, including his ability to refit with his hands ... flexible lower half to stay low and drive defenders in the run game ... relies on his hand strength to latch and control the point of attack ... flashes a mean streak to finish through the whistle.

WEAKNESSES: Might struggle to cover up NFL-level edge speed ... lacks burst in his vertical sets ... guilty of becoming straight-legged or oversetting, opening inside lanes ... his recovery tactics are undeveloped, especially because he wasn't consistently tested in college ... lackluster fluidity and pad level versus moving targets and when working up a level ... doesn't blow defenders off the ball ... strong hands to stay connected in the run game, but holds excessively at times (four total holding penalties in games studied) ... was a left tackle only in college and lacks experience at other positions.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Southern, Carter lined up at left tackle in Southern's multiple run scheme. A basketball player most of his life, he transitioned to the offensive line in college and developed into a dominant left tackle (zero sacks allowed in 2021) and legitimate NFL prospect. Carter relies on his grip strength to strain and steer his man, maintaining footwork and leverage to be a finisher. He needs to clean up some movement pattern flaws and improve his recovery skills in pass protection, but his quickness and punch are assets. Overall, Carter might have a tough time matching up against outside speed in the NFL, but he uses his core strength and length to execute as both a pass and run blocker. He is a candidate to move inside to guard in the NFL, similar in ways to Dakota Dozier when he was coming out of Furman.

19. OBINNA EZE | TCU 6064 | 321 lbs. | rSR. Nashville, Tenn. (Davidson Academy) 6/12/1998 (age 23.88) #55

BACKGROUND: Obinna (oh-BEAN-uh) Eze (EZZ-ay), who is one of five children, was born in Nigeria and grew up playing basketball. By the age of 16, he had attended several basketball camps and drew interest from AAU teams based in the United States. Eze moved to Nashville in 2015 to play basketball and lived with his host family, Maurice and Jennifer Fitzgerald. He grew up speaking British English and had to learn American English. Eze enrolled at Davidson Academy, a private Christian school, to play basketball, but Maurice suggested he try out football. Eze spent his junior season on the junior varsity team learning a sport he had never played before. As a senior, he moved up to varsity, where he started at left tackle and earned All-State honors, helping Davidson to the 2016 playoffs.

A four-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Eze was the No. 21 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Tennessee. Before he played a snap on varsity, his offer sheet had already started to fill up with offers from Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, Michigan, Ole Miss, Texas A&M and others. However, Eze didn't have any preconceived notions about which schools were national powers, and he committed to Memphis after connecting with the coaching staff. After four seasons at Memphis, he entered the transfer portal ("I wanted to challenge myself and go to a Power 5 conference," he said.) and ended up at TCU for the 2021 season. Eze married his high school sweetheart (Yasmeen) in May 2021. He hasn't seen his biological family or been back to Nigeria since 2015. Eze accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Remarkable length that helps compensate for missteps ... plays with a wide base and elongated shuffle to cover ground laterally ... uses his knee bend to adjust to moving targets in pass protection ... throws his punch with violence ... physical hands to keep rushers at bay when his timing is right ... showed mental improvements as a senior to understand where the heat is coming from ... adequate mobility and doesn't play stiff in space ... better range than expected, allowing him to pick off linebackers away from the line of scrimmage ... durable; started every game the last three seasons, including some time at right tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Looks tall and plays tall, creating immediate leverage issues ... below-average technique and timing ... upper and lower halves get tied up, especially when he throws his hands before settling his feet and creating a base ... needs to keep his shoulders square to rushers and quickly abandons his lateral slide ... tight hips hinder his mirroring skills ... bad habit of hooking when he is outflanked ... inconsistent confidence and force as a run blocker ... lacks the lower-body power to roll into defenders and drive them from their spot ... double-digit penalties over the last two seasons ... past college coaches have questioned if he has the maturity for the NFL game.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at TCU, Eze lined up at left tackle in former offensive coordinator Doug Meacham's scheme. After not playing football until his junior year in high school, he was the highest-ranked recruit in Memphis' 2017 class and started two years for the Tigers before transferring to TCU, where he had his most consistent season in 2021. Eze has a basketball background and boasts the long arms to dominate opponents as both a pass blocker and run blocker, especially when he locks out and keeps his punch on schedule. However, his feet are often late matching his hand movements, and he has a tough time reacting to moving targets.

Overall, Eze has rare length and adequate movement skills to escort defenders around the arc, but he struggles with elusive rushers and his feet quickly get unsettled in space. While his timing and technique are a mess, he is worthy of a draft pick as a developmental swing tackle.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

20. MATT WALETZKO | North Dakota 6075 | 312 lbs. | SR. Cold Spring, Minn. (Rocori) 12/15/1999 (age 22.37) #76

BACKGROUND: Matthew "Matt" Waletzko (WOLL-et-z-go) grew up in central Minnesota in the small community of Cold Spring. His first loves were baseball and basketball, but he gravitated toward football as his go-to sport in middle school because of his size. Waletzko attended Rocori High, where he was a three-sport letterman and played three years on the varsity football team. After becoming a starter as a sophomore, he started at left tackle as a junior and led Rocori to the Class 4A semifinals. As a senior, Waletzko helped lead the program to the 2016 conference title with its only loss of the season coming deep in the playoffs. He also lettered in baseball and basketball, averaging a double-double before suffering a foot injury his junior season.

A two-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Waletzko was the No. 297 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 29 recruit in the state of Minnesota. He received offers from several Division II programs like Minnesota-Duluth and St. Cloud State and preferred walk-on opportunities at other schools. But his only Division I offer came from FCS North Dakota, and he committed to the school prior to his senior year in August 2017. After his final college season, Waletzko accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6071	315	36	10 3/8	86	-	-	-	-	-	4.59	7.26	28 (stood on combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Long-framed body with exceptional arm length ... adequate lateral movements to mirror and protect the corner ... bendy joints, which help offset his taller stature ... rangy athlete who can easily advance up a level or get out in space to execute on the perimeter ... his hands react quickly to counters and his shuffle isn't too far behind ... his punch is still and he won't play passively ... his coaches always bring up his intelligence when discussing the strengths of his game ... didn't have the benefit of a redshirt season, and his body development has been an ongoing process since he arrived (weight has fluctuated between 290 and 330) ... voted a senior captain and carries himself with a coachable attitude.

WEAKNESSES: Needs continued strength development ... questionable core strength and balance, especially when his base narrows and pads rise ... his anchor is currently lighter than ideal, especially with his tendency to get his upper half overextended ... needs to keep his eyes, hands and feet tied to the same string ... stays focused on his main objective but also needs to widen his vision to sense delays and stunts ... has only played left tackle and doesn't have functional experience on the right side ... faces a sizeable jump in competition versus NFL power and speed ... missed the second half of his sophomore season with a knee injury (October 2019); also missed the final game of his senior season with a left shoulder injury (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at North Dakota, Waletzko was entrenched at left tackle in offensive coordinator Danny Freund's multiple scheme. Instead of redshirting as a freshman, he started right away for the Fighting Hawks and earned All-American honors as a senior captain, anchoring an offensive line that allowed the third-fewest sacks in the FCS in 2021. Waletzko moves well at the snap and in space with physical, quick-to-counter hands. However, he finds himself overextended too often and there is a massive gap between the power and skill of rushers he faced in the Missouri Valley Conference and what he will see in the NFL.

Overall, Waletzko has length that cannot be coached along with functional foot/body quickness, but he must continue developing his strength and stature before he is ready for live NFL reps. He has legitimate NFL upside but will require patience.

21. AUSTIN DECULUS | LSU6050 | 321 lbs. | rSR.*Mamou, La. (Cy-Fair)3/12/1999 (age 23.13)#76

BACKGROUND: Austin Deculus was born in Mamou, La. (his father's hometown deep in Cajun country), but grew up in Cypress, Texas, a northwest suburb of Houston. He attended Cy-Fair High School where he earned the starting left tackle job on varsity as a 235-pound sophomore and earned First Team All-District honors. After being named All-District again as a junior, Deculus led Cy-Fair to an 8-3 record and a playoff appearance as a senior, taking home Honorable Mention All-State and Under Armour All-American honors.

A four-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Deculus was the No. 10 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Texas (the No. 2 offensive lineman behind Walker Little). With over 30 scholarship offers, he entertained the possibility of attending Alabama, Georgia, Michigan, Notre Dame and other powerhouse programs. But in the end, Deculus wanted to return to his Louisiana roots and signed with Ed Orgeron and the Tigers. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Baton Rouge for his fifth season in 2021. His older brother (Ryan) played linebacker at Division III Howard Payne University (2013-14). Deculus graduated with his degree in sports administration (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Owns a workable frame with functional length ... plays with adequate core strength to match physical defenders ... his initial punch is stiff, efficient and purposeful ... resets his hands for multiple bites of the apple ... uses his length to slow down and ride speed rushers outside the pocket ... his base width stays consistent throughout the rep ... adds some hot sauce to his down blocks ... routinely proves his toughness via his willingness to play through injuries ... set the LSU record for games played (61) and started 47 games over the last four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Plays too upright and struggles to bend ... average shuffle quickness when attempting to gain depth in his slide ... hip tightness leaves him off balance in space ... moving targets give him trouble, and he can be too easily crossed up by inside counters ... grabby hands as he tries to work his lower body into position ... his strike placement is too erratic for a player with his experience ... doesn't have the play strength to respond if his posture isn't on point ... aside from one start at left tackle as a sophomore against an FCS program, 100 percent of his snaps in his other 60 games came at right tackle ... NFL scouts say he was beat up physically over his college career.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at LSU, Deculus was a constant at right tackle in former offensive coordinator Jake Peetz's spread scheme (zone and gap). After starting three years at left tackle in high school, he kicked over to right tackle where he logged over 3,300 offensive snaps, becoming the first player in LSU history to play in 60 career games. Deculus checks boxes for his size and arm length, and his technique showed important maturation as a super-senior as his sacks allowed went from four in 2020 to zero in 2021. However, his stiff knees and lack of lower-body flexibility create pad level and balance issues as he lacks the lateral quickness to match speed. Overall, Deculus has played a lot of football and has functional length and handwork, but his ceiling is likely capped by average athleticism, which will be tough to mask versus NFL pass rushers. He is a potential NFL backup at right tackle.

22. LUKE TENUTA | Virginia Tech6080 | 319 lbs. | rJR.*Crozet, Va. (Western Albemarle)9/1/1999 (age 22.66)#69

BACKGROUND: Luke Tenuta was born in Columbus, Ohio, while his father (Jon) was a defensive backs coach at Ohio State. The family was constantly on the move as they followed Jon's coaching career, which has covered over a dozen schools. Luke started his high school career at Apex High in North Carolina before the family moved to Crozet, Va., in 2015 and Luke enrolled at Western Albemarle High as a sophomore. He lined up at defensive end as a sophomore and junior, earning Class 3A All-State honors both seasons. As a senior, he added offensive tackle responsibilities and earned All-Region honors on offense while again earning All-State honors at defensive end, finishing with 52.5 tackles and 11 tackles for loss. Tenuta also lettered in baseball at Western Albemarle.

A three-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Tenuta was the No. 68 offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 19 recruit in the state of Virginia. He received three offers from Power 5 programs and committed to Virginia Tech over North Carolina and West Virginia. His father (Jon) played defensive back at Virginia (1978-80) and has been a college coach the last 40 years, including the defensive coordinator at Marshall (1987), Kansas State (1988), SMU (1990-94), Ohio State (2000), North Carolina (2001), Georgia Tech (2002-07), Notre Dame (2009) and Virginia (2013-15). Luke's mother (Dori) played basketball at Virginia. His older brother (Zach) played tight end at Marshall (2008-10) and Akron (2011), and he is currently the defensive coordinator at FCS Norfolk State. His older brother (Matt) committed to play baseball at NC State before he was selected in the 25th round (No. 763 overall) of the 2012 MLB Draft by the Kansas City Royals. Luke graduated with his degree. He decided to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Tenuta accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Imposing frame with large hands ... well timed and efficient out of his stance to cover up edge speed ... adequate body control and movement skills in space ... absorbs contact well to reposition himself and stay connected ... excellent awareness to locate extra pressure and do something about it ... enough foot quickness to pull and take efficient angles to the second level ... works hard to stay low as a run blocker to leverage his man ... grew up around the game with a well-respected college coach for a father ... logged double-digits starts at both left and right tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Shorter arms that are disproportionate to his height ... plays high and his pad level gets away from him ... tends to open his hips prematurely with inconsistent depth versus edge speed ... mistimes his punch, especially on the move, and needs to load more ammo into his hands at contact ... his anchor shows too many cracks versus average power rushers ... lacks explosiveness as a run blocker ... doesn't have the powerful latch skills to turn or drive NFL defenders ... three holding penalties on 2021 tapes studied ... doesn't offer the upside that NFL teams covet.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Virginia Tech, Tenuta was the starting left tackle in former offensive coordinator Brad Cornelsen's zone-based offense. The son of longtime college defensive coordinator Jon Tenuta, he started opposite Christian Darrisaw for two seasons before taking over his left tackle duties in 2021, earning All-ACC honors. Tenuta is a heady, efficient blocker and relies on his instincts to aid his body control when pass blocking versus rushers in space. However, his leverage issues and limited range create soft corners and he struggles to sustain as a run blocker. Overall, Tenuta has relatively clean college tape, but his traits leave question marks about his pro transition because of his lack of length, explosiveness and power. He is a potential backup at right tackle.

SUMMARY: Andrew "Devin" Cochran was born in Atlanta and was a two-year starter at Greater Atlanta Christian High, earning first team all-state honors as a senior. A three-star recruit, he committed to Vanderbilt over several Florida, Georgia and other SEC schools. After starting three seasons, he entered the transfer portal with the intention of landing at Georgia Tech, but he first sat out the 2020 season. He joined the Yellow Jackets for the 2021 season and started all 12 games at left tackle. Cochran has vines for arms and decent flexibility to unleash his punch and widen edge defenders (zero sacks allowed in 2021). However, his upper and lower halves need to show better cohesiveness to answer the skill of NFL rushers. In the run game, he creates pop at contact but will fall off blocks with his narrow power base. Overall, Cochran is built for NFL work with his frame and athletic traits, but his technical growth will be the key to him unlocking a pro future as a swing tackle.

SUMMARY: Andrew Rupcich (Rup-sitch) was a two-way player at McHenry High (one hour north of Chicago) and was an all-conference right tackle as a senior. He was late to qualify out of high school and signed with NAIA-level Culver Stockton in northeast Missouri instead of going the juco or walk-on route. He earned the starting left tackle job as a true freshman and started every game the last five years (48 consecutive starts), earning all-conference honors all five seasons. Rupcich is a solid athlete for his size and relies on his physical hands to control or drive blockers. NFL scouts praise his toughness and willingness to fight through injuries. His pads are much too high, his arms are too short and his technique needs an overhaul, especially with a move to the interior (played left guard at NFLPA Collegiate Bowl). Overall, Rupcich is one of the best offensive linemen to ever come from the NAIA level, but he must improve his contact balance and recovery skills for the NFL.

SUMMARY: Myron Cunningham Jr. was a two-year letterman at Warren G. Harding High, earning all-county honors at right tackle in 2015. He originally signed with FCS Western Illinois but didn't see the field and spent the 2018 season at the junior college level. A three-star juco recruit, he committed to Arkansas over Oklahoma, Texas and others. He started at right guard initially before kicking out to left tackle, where he started 30 consecutive games to finish his career. Cunningham knows his opponents and adjusts his pass-set landmarks accordingly. He has long arms to lock out and stay centered, but his methodical feet will get him beaten versus wide speed. In the run game, he finds his weight leaning too far outside and needs to weaponize his hands to pin/jar defenders at contact. Overall, Cunningham doesn't have top-level mirroring quickness for the NFL, but his hands stay on time and give his lower body a chance to catch up, which could land him on a practice squad.

SUMMARY: Tyler Vrabel, the son of former NFL linebacker and current Tennessee Titans head coach Mike Vrabel, grew up around football as he joined his father at his various stops. He transferred to St. Pius X High in Houston prior to his junior year and transitioned from defensive line to offensive line. Despite no previous experience, he developed into an all-state and all-district left tackle as a senior. A three-star recruit, he committed to Boston College (his only offer from a Power 5 program) and started at both left and right tackle. Vrabel is a solid run blocker with strong hands and enough leg drive to generate push at contact. He reaches his landmarks as a pass blocker to steer defenders from the pocket, but he will struggle with wide speed and shifty rushers because of marginal flexibility and balance. Overall, Vrabel is tough-minded with functional strength and play recognition, but his athletic limitations and struggles to recover will follow him to the pro game.

SUMMARY: Jalen McKenzie, the son of former NFL player and general manager Reggie McKenzie, missed his junior season at Clayton Valley High with a torn ACL. He returned healthy as a senior and played both ways, earning all-state honors. A three-star recruit, he committed to USC's 2017 class that included Austin Jackson and Alijah Vera-Tucker. He split his playing time between right tackle and right guard over the last three seasons. McKenzie has the lower-body agility for quick jump-sets or run-game engagement to aggressively attack defenders. He is a stubborn finisher and uses his aggressive hands to snatch or toss once he gains leverage. However, his handwork tends to be mistimed and erratic, which leads to sustain issues and penalties. His balance quickly wanes versus moving targets. Overall, McKenzie offers athletic footwork and tackle-guard position versatility, but he must improve his pad level, aiming points and frenzied play to justify an NFL roster spot.

SUMMARY: Alec Anderson, who has three older siblings who played college sports, played both ways at Etiwanda High, setting the school record for pancake blocks. A three-star recruit, he initially committed to Washington State prior to his senior year but flipped to UCLA before signing day (his uncle, Cory Harkey, is a former UCLA and NFL tight end and currently an assistant coach for the Buffalo Bills). After redshirting in 2018, he filled in at left guard in 2019 before starting at right tackle in 17 games the past two seasons. Anderson sports adequate size and length with the initial movements to obstruct pass rush angles before defenders can get going downhill. However, his average strength and balance issues make it tough for him to reset/recover (received a holding flag on each of the five 2021 tapes studied). Overall, Anderson plays with a wide base and tight hands to win quickly, but his inconsistent base, body control and power are roadblocks for his NFL career.

SUMMARY: Bamidele (bam-ih-deli) Olaseni (oh-lah-senny) grew up playing basketball and soccer in North London and discovered football in 2014. After learning to play with the London Blitz, he moved to the United States and enrolled at Garden City College for two seasons. A four-star junior college recruit, he committed to Utah over Ohio State, Texas and others. He combined for only 19 offensive snaps in his first two seasons with the Utes and became the starting left tackle as a senior. Olaseni is a massive blocker with broad shoulders and the wingspan of a Boeing 747. He has functional movement skills, but his reactive athleticism and lower body flexibility aren't currently on an NFL level. His mental skills and timing need just as much development to maximize his natural gifts. Overall, Olaseni is over-aged and underdeveloped, which is why he will likely go undrafted, but his raw size, length and feet are worth bringing to camp to see if he can earn a practice squad spot.

1. ZION JOHNSON | Boston College 6025 | 312 lbs. | rSR. Bowie, Md. (Riverdale Baptist) 11/18/1999 (age 22.44) #77

BACKGROUND: Zion Johnson grew up just outside Washington, D.C., and started playing golf in seventh grade. He attended Riverdale Baptist School in Upper Marlboro where he continued playing golf through his junior year (was the top player on the golf team). Johnson decided to try out for football and played sparingly as a junior offensive lineman in 2015. He made varsity as a senior and started at right tackle at 220 pounds with Christian Darrisaw starting at left tackle (Tariq Castro-Fields was also on that team as a wide receiver and cornerback). Johnson helped Riverdale Baptist to a 6-5 record in 2016.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Johnson wasn't ranked by recruiting services with only one season of full-time playing experience to his name. Davidson (a non-scholarship FCS program) was the only school to recruit him and he committed to Wildcats' offensive line coach Matt Applebaum and assistant coach Phil Trautwein. Johnson arrived at Davidson as 240 pounds and earned his way into the starting lineup as a freshman in 2017 instead of redshirting. Davidson switched from a pro-style to a triple-option offense in 2018 and he started all 11 games. Due to financial reasons, Johnson entered the transfer portal after the 2018 season with the hopes of landing a football scholarship. Trautwein was hired as the new offensive line coach at Boston College in 2018 and he offered Johnson a scholarship. Johnson received a waiver from the NCAA to play right away and became eligible in August 2019. After Trautwein took a job at Penn State after the 2019 season, Applebaum was hired as the new offensive line coach, reuniting with Johnson. After a rocky 2020 season at left tackle, Johnson took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Boston College for a fifth season and returned to left guard. He graduated with his degree in computer science (May 2021) and is working toward his master's degree in cybersecurity policy and governance. Johnson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Has excellent size with long arms, large hands, and a strong trunk ... well-developed body and has added almost 100 pounds since his high school senior year ... quick-footed and stays controlled in his movements ... shows above average lower body bend and reaction skills ... excellent functional strength and able to plant, anchor, and recover vs. power ... uses his hands to reach, run, and sustain in the run game ... can drive defenders off the ball in tight zone or duo ... picks off defenders on the move or at the second level ... flagged only once in 2021 ... coachable and studious and it shows on game day with his understanding of how to attack defenders (NFL scout: “This guy is razor sharp ... one of the more impressive interviews I did this year.”) ... two-time team captain with a smart, focused personality ... durable and didn’t miss a game the last five years, playing in 58 straight games ... logged double-digit starts at three different offensive line positions (left guard, left tackle, right tackle) and took reps at center during Senior Bowl practices.

WEAKNESSES: Forward leans lead to occasional balance issues ... jarred off his base when he narrows and doesn’t rely on his lower body bend ... needs to keep his feet moving at contact as he resets ... his long arms can create a windmill motion as he coils or fends off rushers ... wide elbows/hands in his pass sets ... looked lost at times at left tackle on the 2020 tape and much more comfortable at guard.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Boston College, Johnson lined up at left guard in former offensive coordinator Frank Cignetti’s zone-based (inside/outside) scheme. A golf-focused athlete in high school, he bet on himself going from the FCS level to an FBS program known for producing NFL offensive linemen and he developed into one of the top offensive linemen in the 2022 NFL Draft. Johnson has a stout, developed body type with the patience and placement to plant and re-leverage himself to stay centered as a pass blocker. In the run game, he shows off his body control and drive strength to execute from various angles. Overall, Johnson will occasionally lose his balance, but his combination of play strength, muscle twitch, and reaction skills help him sustain as both a pass and run blocker. He has the talent to carve out a decade-long career as an interior NFL blocker.

KENYON GREEN | Texas A&M

6037 | 323 lbs. | JR.

Humble, Texas (Atascocita)

3/15/2001 (age 21.12)

#55

BACKGROUND: Kenyon (ken-yen) Green, who has a younger sister, grew up in Humble, Texas (20 miles north of Houston) and played pee-wee football for his dad on the Outlaws select team. He attended Atascocita High and played for head coach Craig Stump, who played quarterback at Texas A&M (1984-87). Green saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman defensive lineman before moving to the offensive line. He started at left tackle as a sophomore, helping Atascocita to a 12-2 record and 456.3 yards per game. Green moved to right tackle for his final two seasons, earning All-American and All-State honors as a junior and senior. He also played center on the basketball team and threw shot put (personal-best 49’2.5) in track at Atascocita.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Green was the No. 3 ranked offensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 15 recruit overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Texas (ahead of his Aggies’ teammate DL DeMarvin Leal and Ohio State WR Garrett Wilson). He found himself at the top of the recruiting rankings as a high school sophomore and initially committed to LSU after the 2016 season. Green still went on visits and considered Texas, Oklahoma and others before flipping to Texas A&M after Jimbo Fisher was hired as head coach (and offensive line coach Jim Turner was retained). His father (Henry) played offensive guard at Grambling State. His mother (Shalonda) played volleyball at UCLA. Green elected to skip his senior season of eligibility and the Aggies’ bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Wide, balanced mover with plus body control ... owns heavy, physical hands to stun his target and control the chest of defenders ... able to engage and lock out with NFL-quality functional strength ... picks up pressures from depth and sinks at contact to stop rushers cold ... explosive out of his stance with the mobility to effectively pull, trap, reach and execute combinations ... allowed only one sack over the last two seasons ... competes with the right mentality — he’s mean and doesn’t apologize for it ... both of his parents were collegiate athletes ... aside from skipping the 2021 bowl game, he played in every game the last three seasons and spread his 35 starts across four positions (left guard, right guard, left tackle, right tackle).

WEAKNESSES: His hands tend to play ahead of his feet, resulting in excessive leaning ... shows several bad habits in the run game like ducking his head and letting his hands get wide, leaving him off-balanced and sometimes on the ground ... tends to open his inside hip when countering, which gives rushers an open lane ... needs to settle his feet while resetting his vision/hands vs. rangy pass rushers ... was a flag magnet throughout his career, including seven penalties in 2021 (six holding calls, one false start).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Green played the majority of his snaps at left guard in head coach Jimbo Fisher’s balanced offensive attack. After starting at right guard as a freshman and left guard as a sophomore, he was the only returning starter on the offensive line as a junior and was asked to fill in across the line, becoming the only NCAA player with 80-plus snaps at four different offensive line positions in 2021. A wide-based blocker, Green flashes explosive traits and physical hands to create movement in the run game or anchor in pass protection. Although he can catch himself thanks to his center of gravity, he will make things more difficult for himself with lunging tendencies. Overall, Green must fix the bad habits and penalties at the next level, but he does a great job staying balanced before and after contact with the mobility and brawling mentality to win his matchups. He should establish himself as a dependable starting guard early in his NFL career.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 27 overall)

DARIAN KINNARD | Kentucky

6053 | 322 lbs. | SR.

Knoxville, Tenn. (St. Ignatius)

#70

BACKGROUND: Darian “D.K.” Kinnard was born in Youngstown, Ohio, before moving to East Tennessee as a toddler to be closer to family. He grew up in Knoxville and spent his freshman year at Dobyns-Bennett High in Kingsport, Tenn. Prior to his sophomore year, Kinnard and his mother (Mandy Headrick) were on the move again and he suggested Ohio because of the football recruiting opportunities. In the summer of 2015, Kinnard transferred to Cleveland’s St. Ignatius High, a private Catholic school with a rich football tradition. A guard in Tennessee, he moved to right tackle as a sophomore with Liam Eichenberg entrenched at left tackle. With Eichenberg off to Notre Dame, Kinnard transitioned to left tackle for his junior and senior seasons. He earned All-State honors in 2017 and was selected to play in the U.S. Army All-American game.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Kinnard was the No. 22 ranked offensive tackle in the country and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Ohio (the No. 2 offensive lineman in Ohio behind Jackson Carman). His move to Cleveland to boost his recruitment paid off as he received at least one offer from each of the Power 5 conferences (16 FBS scholarship offers). He had a final four of Kentucky, Penn State, Tennessee and UCLA, committing to the Wildcats. His aunt is the first cousin of musical superstar Dolly Parton. Kinnard accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6052	328	35 1/4	11 1/4	83 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	20 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Comfortably carries his weight on his long, flexible frame ... does a great job settling his feet to maintain his wide base ... impressive raw power and isn't shy showing it off ... generates force through his hips and upper half to torque defenders from his path ... displays the grip strength to snatch, lock out and control with his hands ... able to flip his hips to seal run lanes ... anchors down and won't allow rushers to go through him ... comfortable jabbing with both hands in pass protection ... flashes a nasty temperament to pancake/bury ... durable and started 39 straight games over the last four seasons (2,513 career snaps on offense) ... also has functional experience at left tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Top-heavy and finds his momentum too far out in front as both a run blocker and in pass protection ... lacks discipline in his kickslide and shuffle footwork ... only average range and can be stressed laterally ... inconsistent punch timing ... his wide hands often land outside the defender's chest ... spends too much time hugging and feeling out his target ... too much body-to-body blocking on his tape for a player with his length ... can do a better job centering on zone blocks ... three false start penalties in 2021 — three more than expected for a senior with his experience ... will let go of blocks early at times and needs to finish through the whistle ... his weight surpassed 370 pounds as an underclassmen and needs to keep his weight in check ... doesn't have college playing experience at center or guard ... suffered a "small fray" in his meniscus during draft training that may require a scope down the road.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Kentucky, Kinnard lined up at right tackle in former offensive coordinator Liam Coen's zone-based scheme. After starting a pair of games at left tackle as a freshman, he started all 37 games at right tackle the last three seasons for the Wildcats, becoming the 12th Consensus All-American in school history as a senior. Kinnard looks to impose his will early and manhandle everything in his path to create movement at the point of attack. He has the quickness to square half-man rushers, but he relies more on his upper body than lower body to get the job done, which leads to balance issues. Overall, Kinnard's NFL ceiling will hinge on his ability to refine his sloppy tendencies, but he has the physical tools and bully mentality to be a dominant, scheme-diverse run blocker. Teams are split between guard and right tackle as his best NFL position.

4. JAMAREE SALYER | Georgia 6030 | 321 lbs. | SR. Atlanta, Ga. (Pace Academy) 7/13/2000 (age 21.79) #69

BACKGROUND: Jamaree (juh-MAHR-ee) Salyer grew up in the Atlanta area and started playing sports at age 3 (baseball was his first love). He played basketball at the AAU level growing up, but his focus switched to football around 12 years old. Starting in middle school, Salyer became close friends with future high school and Georgia teammate Andrew Thomas. He attended Pace Academy, a private school in Northern Atlanta, where he saw immediate reps as a freshman guard on varsity. Salyer played on both sides of the ball over his career and saw snaps at both tackle and guard on offense. With Thomas at left tackle and Salyer at left guard in 2015, they helped lead Pace to a 13-2 record and the Class 2A state championship. As a senior, Salyer earned First Team All-State honors for the third straight year and was a U.S. Army All-American and one of three finalists for the 2017 Jonah Williams Award, which is given to the best offensive lineman nationally. He also lettered in wrestling (qualified for regionals and sectionals) and track (discus and shot put).

A five-star recruit out of high school, Salyer was the No. 1 ranked offensive guard in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 10 recruit overall) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Georgia (behind only Trevor Lawrence and Justin Fields). He started picking up big-time offers after his freshman year of high school and finished with over 30 offers from some of the top programs in the country like Alabama, LSU, Michigan, Ohio State and Texas. But in the end, Salyer chose to stay home and committed to Georgia (over Clemson and Florida), rejoining Thomas on the offensive line. He graduated with his degree in sport management (Fall 2021). Salyer accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Wide-bodied and carries his weight well ... natural foot quickness and stays controlled in his slide movements ... has the lateral agility and mobility to pull outside ... tough guy to move and stout at contact, even when long rushers get into his frame ... able to tilt his hips and seal inside/outside run lanes with crafty angles ... physical, active hands in his pass sets and the run game ... long levers help him quickly reset ... named a 2021 team captain and has above average intangibles and leadership skills ... versatile starting experience across his 23 starts with time at both tackle spots — also took snaps at center as an underclassman and during Senior Bowl practices.

WEAKNESSES: Shorter and has a guard body ... takes narrow steps, which hinders his base and overall range in space, especially at tackle ... plays with wide hands and pass rushers too easily reach his chest ... resets well, but his initial sustain doesn't last as long as you want ... bad habit of lunging with his eyes down ... penalized five times as a senior, including two false starts ... weight fluctuated between 310 and 345 during his time at Georgia ... missed four games as a senior because of a left foot injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, Salyer played predominantly at left tackle in offensive coordinator Todd Monken's scheme, while also logging snaps at each of the five offensive line positions over his career. Despite being the No. 1 ranked guard out of high school, he was the anchor of the Bulldogs' 2021 National Title winning team at left tackle and gave up only one sack in his career at tackle (to Alabama's Will Anderson). Salyer is very efficient in his setup and plays with outstanding body control, balance and core strength to stay centered through contact. Although he tends to get narrow with his steps and has some bad habits, he understands depth, angles and how to effectively respond with his hands. Overall, Salyer had 22 of his 23 career starts in college at offensive tackle, but his stout frame, quick reactions and overall skill set are ideally suited on the interior. He projects as a plug-and-play NFL guard, while offering position versatility in a pinch.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 54 overall)

5. LUKE GOEDEKE | Central Michigan 6050 | 312 lbs. | rSR. Whitelaw, Wis. (Valders) 11/21/1998 (age 23.44) #67

BACKGROUND: Luke Goedeke (Ged-e-key), who has an older brother, grew up in Whitelaw (40 miles south of Green Bay) in eastern Wisconsin and attended Valders High. He was a three-year letterwinner and played both ways at tight end and defensive line. Despite playing through a shoulder injury as a senior, Goedeke earned 2016 First Team All-Conference honors on offense and Second Team All-Conference honors on defense. He played basketball all four years and averaged 20.2 points and 7.7 rebounds per game as a senior, earning unanimous First Team All-Conference honors. Goedeke also lettered in track as a senior and set personal bests in the 100 meters (12.57), shot put (48'8.75) and discus (150'2).

A no-star recruit out of high school, Goedeke received a few tryouts, but didn't receive serious attention from Division I programs and he distanced himself from football for several months. He enrolled at Division III UW-Stevens Point as a student, but got the itch and walked on to the football team in August 2017. Goedeke became the starting tight end over the final month of the 2017 season and finished with 12 receptions for 132 yards. After the season, he sent his film to Wisconsin (his dream school) and Central Michigan (a program that showed moderate interest in him in high school). Wisconsin offered a preferred walk-on opportunity, but Central Michigan gave him a full scholarship as a tight end with the possibility of moving to offensive line. A few weeks after he enrolled at CMU in 2018, Goedeke was moved to the offensive line where he started three seasons for the Chippewas. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but left during the first practice with a hamstring issue (was in tears that he couldn't participate). He was also sidelined for the Combine after tweaking his hamstring injury.

PRO DAY	6047	313	32 1/4	9 5/8	80 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	27 (bench press only – left hamstring)

STRENGTHS: Displays excellent play strength, especially in the run game ... stubborn hands to latch and control the chest of blockers ... generates power from his lower body and hips to drive or redirect ... his elbows are usually rubbing his ribs, allowing him to keep his hands inside ... blocks with efficient punch timing to respond to different rushers ... has the lower body athleticism to keep up with his upper half, staying balanced through contact ... does an adequate job stalking at the second level and staying attached ... never concedes, often finishing defenders to the ground ... works well in tandem on doubles ... self-made player who added almost 100 pounds since high school and put himself on the NFL's doorstep thanks to hard work and determination ... his personality and football passion are both genuine traits.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal length, which will be tough to mask outside at tackle ... struggles vs. long levered rushers who can get into his body or attack his outside shoulder ... needs to grow roots quicker to establish his anchor vs. bull rushers ... still developing his muscle memory and technique on the offensive line ... grabby mitts (three holding penalties on tapes studied) ... his over-sets can create inside rush opportunities ... his reaction time and vision vs. stunts is a work in progress ... missed the 2020 season after suffering a knee injury on the final play of fall camp (August 2020); Sidelined for the Senior Bowl and Combine because of a left hamstring injury ... was a right tackle only in college and faces a learning curve moving inside to guard or center in the NFL.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Central Michigan, Goedeke held down the right tackle position in head coach Jim McElwain's zone-blocking scheme. With very few options out of high school, he bet on himself by playing tight end at the Division III level before transferring up to the MAC and transitioning to the offensive line. Goedeke is a finisher in the run game and does a great job staying connected to blocks with his strong hands and balance through contact. In pass protection, he needs to work on his anchor and reset, but he has an active punch and usually keeps his upper and lower halves on the same page. Overall, Goedeke has only two years of playing experience on the offensive line and it shows at times, but he has outstanding play strength with enough lower body fluidity to stay centered in his blocks. He fits best inside where he has NFL starting potential at guard.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 76 overall)

6. MARQUIS HAYES | Oklahoma 6047 | 318 lbs. | rSR. St. Louis, Mo. (Pattonville) 2/14/1999 (age 23.21) #54

BACKGROUND: Marquis (mar-KEESE) Hayes Jr. was born and raised in the St. Louis area and started playing football at 7 years old, primarily on the offensive and defensive lines. Hayes attended Pattonville High in Maryland Heights (northeast of St. Louis) and played football primarily on junior varsity as a freshman and sophomore. He moved up to varsity starter as a junior right tackle and earned Conference Newcomer of the Year protecting quarterback Kaleb Eleby, who went on to play at Western Michigan and is also a prospect in the 2022 NFL Draft. Hayes moved to left tackle as a senior and earned Second Team All-State and Conference Offensive Lineman of the Year in 2016. He also lettered in basketball and credits his work on the basketball court for him blossoming on the football field.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hayes was the No. 19 ranked offensive guard in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Missouri. After his first year on varsity as a junior, he became flooded with offers, starting with Iowa State and then followed by Miami (Fla.) and Missouri. However, once Oklahoma entered the picture, Hayes was hooked and signed with the Sooners. He graduated with his degree in human relations (December 2020). Hayes accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Wide-framed blocker with natural thickness and outstanding arm length ... anchors down to absorb contact ... uses his powerful reach to control the man in front of him ... physical hands in everything he does ... efficient on short and long pulls with excellent body control and lateral quickness ... moves with enough fluidity to swing his hips and create blocking angles ... plays alert with the vision to locate moving targets as a puller and stunts/twists in pass protection ... plays pissed off and doesn't have a passive bone in his body, often finishing his man to the ground ... the OU coaches say he worked hard to trim excess weight and stay in shape ... played a ton of snaps the last three seasons with 37 career starts (36 consecutive).

WEAKNESSES: His foot quickness is best described as average ... more likely to pop upright than sink with excessively tall pad level ... lacks twitch in his reaction steps to easily recover vs. counters ... forgets his feet at times and relies on his upper half, leaving him hunched at the waist ... his grip strength can be a negative when he doesn't maintain body positioning – penalized nine times in 2021, including six holding calls ... started a lot of games in Norman, but only played left guard with questionable position versatility.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oklahoma, Hayes was a mainstay at left guard in former head coach Lincoln Riley's balanced scheme. With only two years of varsity experience in high school, he showed steady improvement each season in Norman and produced his best tape in 2021 as arguably the best offensive lineman in the Big 12. While some blockers rely on power and others rely on angles, Hayes relies on both and I was impressed by his ability to make split-second adjustments. He will rely too much on his length at times, but plays violent and stout and does a great job with the balancing act of staying composed while also unleashing hell on defenders when the opportunity is there. Overall, Hayes needs continued development with his technique and pad level, but he has the mauling strength, smooth movements and blocking instincts to be equally efficient as a run blocker and pass protector. He should compete for an NFL starting role as a rookie.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 90 overall)

7. SEAN RHYAN | UCLA 6045 | 321 lbs. | JR. Ladera Ranch, Calif. (San Juan Hills) 9/20/1998 (age 23.61) #74

BACKGROUND: Sean Rhyan grew up in Southern California and was boogie boarding and surfing before most kids were riding bikes. He focused on two organized sports throughout his childhood and middle school: baseball and rugby. He played for the rugby club team San Clemente Gators and then earned a silver medal with the Triton Rugby Club in 2016, qualifying for the feeder team for the USA Olympic Rugby Team (but didn't pursue it). Rhyan enrolled at Capistrano Valley Christian School, a small private school, where he was introduced to football, a sport he showed no interest in growing up. After enjoying his freshman season on the football field, he transferred to San Juan Hills High for more opportunities in his new sport. Rhyan sat out most of his sophomore year because of transfer rules before joining the varsity late in the 2016 season as an offensive lineman, earning Honorable Mention All-League honors. As a junior, he earned All-State, All-County, and All-League honors at left tackle. As a senior, Rhyan led San Juan Hills to the 2018 league title and was earned a number of accolades, including U.S. Army All-American, USA Today First Team All-State and League MVP honors. He joined the track team as a sophomore (another sport he never played before) and started throwing the shot put and discus. Rhyan was a three-time league shot put champion and set school records for the shot put (63'3.5) and discus (155'8). He finished third in the shot put at the 2019 state championships.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ryan was the No. 2 ranked offensive guard in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 74 overall) and the No. 15 recruit in the state of California. He received his first offer (South Carolina) after his sophomore season and later collected offers from Alabama, Notre Dame, Oregon, Stanford and USC. But Rhyan was drawn to Chip Kelly's offense and signed with the Bruins, becoming UCLA's only four-star recruit in the 2019 class. He also joined the Bruins' track team, but didn't participate in the 2020 season. His father (Steve) is a former professional motocross racer and helps train Sean with his master's degree in exercise physiology. Rhyan decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Compact build with thick thighs and massive hands ... excellent short-area coordination as a run blocker and pass blocker ... patient in his pass sets with strong, tight hands to latch and work his feet into position when on-schedule ... works hard to achieve leverage ... excellent job in his vertical climb to attack the linebacker level ... finds the hip of the defender and caves in the line ... flashes a clamp grip at contact to move bodies ... showed mental growth each season at UCLA, not allowing mistakes to linger ... credits rugby for developing his toughness and body development ... durable and started all 31 games the last three seasons, allowing only two sacks in his career.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal width and arm length ... below average range and recovery skills ... not a fluid mover in space and slow to redirect vs. twitchy pass rushers ... gets his momentum wide and allows rushers to cross his face ... tardy hands and must improve his counter timing ... heavy leaner and will get his head over his skis in pass protection, struggling to recover ... has the mobility to be a factor at the second level, but will struggle to break down on the move ... would benefit from more competitive finish on a snap-to-snap basis ... flagged six times in 2021 (four false starts, two holding penalties) ... was a left tackle only in college with questionable position flex.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at UCLA, Rhyan anchored the left tackle position in head coach Chip Kelly's zone read scheme. A rugby player growing up, he started playing football in high school and continued to blossom for the Bruins, showing steady improvement each season and growing into one of the best left tackles on the West Coast. Rhyan is a powerful blocker who understands blocking leverage and how to anchor. However, he looked like a guard playing tackle on tape because of his lack of range, fluidity and recovery skills in space. Overall, Rhyan is strong and balanced in both the run game and passing game, but he must play with quicker hands/feet and more efficient weight distribution for him to make it. He does his best work in short areas, projecting as a guard with NFL starting potential in either a power or zone scheme.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 90 overall)

8. JOSHUA EZEUDU | North Carolina 6042 | 308 lbs. | rJR. Lawrenceville, Ga. (Archer) 9/19/1999 (age 22.61) #75

BACKGROUND: Jamuiké-Tomisin "Joshua" Ezeudu (eh-ZOO-doo) grew up outside of Atlanta after his mother (Fehintola) moved to the United States from Nigeria in 1999 when she was pregnant with him. He developed an early love for basketball and soccer and didn't play football until high school. Ezeudu attended Archer High (teammates with CB Andrew Booth) where he joined the football team as a freshman, initially on the defensive line before moving to the offensive line as a sophomore. He became a starter on varsity as a junior right tackle before moving to left tackle as a senior, earning All-County honors and leading Archer to a 12-1 record and conference title in 2017.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Ezeudu was the No. 80 ranked offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 87 recruit in the state of Georgia. After he became a starter as a junior, his recruitment took off with offers from the ACC (Louisville, North Carolina, Virginia), Big Ten (Minnesota, Nebraska, Purdue), and several Ivy League programs. Ezeudu committed to North Carolina in January 2018 shortly before signing day. He graduated with his undergraduate degree (December 2021). Ezeudu elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6042	313	34 1/8	9 3/8	82 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	20 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Looks and moves the part with his frame and athleticism ... above average flexibility and agility for his size ... able to reach and lock out defenders on zone blocks, swinging his hips to shield the run lane ... strong hands to create stalemates, which is a win for the offense ... seemingly always in a ready position with his hands and feet tied together pre-contact ... works his hands inside defenders to get them leaning ... efficient on pulls and immediately lines up his target ... very alert to stunting threats ... competes with tenacity and will consistently finish his blocks ... voted a team captain as a redshirt junior ... started multiple games at three different positions in college.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't overpower defenders at contact, often overextending himself to gain extra momentum ... needs to rely more on his anchor as a recovery tool when forced to catch rushers ... adequate punch and coil and doesn't always use his long arms to their fullest potential ... average sustain skills and needs to reposition himself once engaged ... penalized seven times in 2021, including three holding calls ... still relatively new to guard and developing the tricks of the trade ... offers offensive tackle experience, but doesn't have ideal lateral range for outside work.

9. ED INGRAM | LSU 6032 | 307 lbs. | rSR. DeSoto, Texas (DeSoto) 2/11/1999 (age 23.21) #70

BACKGROUND: Edward “Ed” Ingram grew up outside of Dallas and started playing football in the seventh grade as a running back and defensive back. He quickly outgrew those positions and moved to the offensive line. Ingram attended DeSoto High where he was teammates with future FBS players like WR Laviska Shenault, CB A.J. Green and WR KD Nixon. As a junior, he lined up at left guard and put his name on the recruiting radar as DeSoto finished with 7-6 record. Ingram led DeSoto to a 16-0 record as a senior, including the 2016 6A Division II state championship. He again lined up at left guard as a senior and was named an Under Armour All-American.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ingram was the No. 13 ranked offensive guard in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 33 recruit in the state of Texas. He started receiving scholarship offers after his standout junior season at DeSoto, including Alabama, Georgia, LSU, Oklahoma and Texas. Ingram visited Baton Rouge after his junior year and committed on the spot. He was arrested over accusations of sexual assault (August 2018) and missed the 2018 season for the Tigers. Ingram was reinstated to the program prior to the 2019 season. He graduated with his degree in sports administration (May 2021). Ingram accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl. He won the practice award as the top offensive lineman for the American Team at the Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6035	312	33 7/8	10	83 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (no bench press – choice)

STRENGTHS: NFL-ready frame, mass and length ... heavy, heavy hands with the upper body explosion to knock rushers off balance ... owns the core power to hold his ground vs. bull rushers or supplant defenders in the run game ... works to keep his shoulders square to his target with his eyes and feet tied together ... stays balanced as a puller and redirects well to wash away rush counters ... violent block-finisher and is always looking for work ... enough mobility to pull or beat up linebackers at the second level ... his ID skills have gotten better and better ... did not have an accepted penalty over the last two seasons ... grew into a leadership role as a senior, especially with a late switch at offensive line coach for the 2021 season ... offers starting experience at both guard spots.

WEAKNESSES: Excessive leaning opens the door for savvy defenders to eliminate his hands and open his shoulder ... his strike timing and placement needs continued maturation ... inconsistent latch mechanics on gap plays ... tends to sacrifice his balance when going for the kill shot ... his pre-snap recognition is improved, but still a work in progress ... he was arrested (August 2018) and charged with two counts of aggravated sexual assault, involving a minor; the charges were dismissed over a year later and he was reinstated to the football team.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at LSU, Ingram lined up at left guard in former offensive coordinator Jake Peetz’s spread scheme (zone and gap). After missing the 2018 season due to suspension, he returned to the team during LSU’s National Title-winning season in 2019 and was one of the few bright spots on an otherwise erratic offense the past two seasons. Ingram displays patient movements and steady pad level in his pass sets and keeps his eyes and feet on the same page to react with rushers. He has the stun strength to turn 330-pound defenders into folding chairs, but his aggressive blocking demeanor will leave him off-kilter at times.

Overall, Ingram needs to clean up his leaning and hand mechanics, but he has the explosive upper body, strong base and competitive temperament to match up with defensive interior linemen at the next level. He is scheme-versatile and looks like a future NFL starter.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

10. LECITUS SMITH | Virginia Tech 6032 | 314 lbs. | rSR. Fitzgerald, Ga. (Fitzgerald) 7/13/1998 (age 23.79) #54

BACKGROUND: Lecitus (leh-SEE-tis) Smith grew up in Fitzgerald in southern Georgia (about 90 miles from the Florida-Georgia line). He attended Fitzgerald High and started out on the junior varsity team as a freshman tight end. Due to an injury, Smith was called up to varsity midway through his sophomore season where he became starter (and didn’t give the job back). Used primarily as a blocking tight end in Fitzgerald’s run-first offense, he finished his senior season with seven catches for 132 yards and a pair of touchdowns as he helped the team to a 13-2 record and the 2016 Class 2A state championship game. Smith earned All-Region honors each of his final three seasons and picked up Second Team All-State honors as a senior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Smith was the No. 43 ranked tight end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 94 recruit in the state of Georgia. He started to receive offers from lower-level programs before schools like Arkansas, Louisville and Oklahoma State also threw their hat in the ring. Smith committed to Virginia Tech as a 260-pound tight end. He graduated with his degree in consumer studies (May 2021). Smith accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Owns a functional body type with well-distributed thickness ... quick out of his stance with coordinated feet to stay square to rushers ... moves with excellent bend in his knees to sit in his stance and create a base as a pass protector ... has the body control of a former tight end, working outside as a zone blocker or pulling in space ... active hands in his pass sets to deliver a sharp punch ... aggressive in the run game and gets after his man ... creates movement when he connects with his stone hands ... weighed just 260 pounds as a high school senior and added 60 pounds since arriving in Blacksburg ... started four seasons at left guard, but also served as the Hokies' backup at left tackle (his offensive line coach believes he can play any tackle or guard spot).

WEAKNESSES: Shorter arms and doesn't have ideal measurables ... will punch wide at times and must improve his placement for better point-of-attack control ... his recovery and redirect are inconsistent vs. cross-face or shifty rushers ... his awareness runs hot-cold, leaving him off scheduled at times vs. stunts ... had more penalties as a senior (five) than his previous three seasons combined (three) ... missed one game and played through others with a sprained ankle (November 2021); also missed part of Senior Bowl week with a tweaked ankle (February 2022).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Virginia Tech, Smith was entrenched as the Hokies' left guard in former offensive coordinator Brad Cornelsen's zone-based offense. He was initially recruited as an "on-the-line" tight end for Justin Fuentes' offense, but outgrew that position and made the transition to the offensive line during his redshirt year. Smith is quick off the ball and rolls his hips into contact to generate power in the run game. In pass protection, he sits in his stance and peppers with his punch, although he will be late to react and recover when not on time. Overall, Smith's lack of length impedes his sustain skills, but he has the lower body flexibility and fierce hands to frustrate defensive linemen. He might not be a fit for every scheme, but has starting guard potential in a power zone scheme.

GRADE: 4th Round

11. JUSTIN SHAFFER | Georgia 6037 | 314 lbs. | rSR. Ellenwood, Ga. (Cedar Grove) 6/20/1998 (age 23.86) #54

BACKGROUND: Justin Shaffer grew up just outside of Atlanta and started playing football at 9 years old (his father was a coach) as an offensive and defensive lineman due to his size. He played through middle school and into high school where he was a four-year letterman at Cedar Grove High. Shaffer saw varsity action as early as his freshman year and steadily improved as he matured. As a senior left tackle and defensive tackle, Shaffer helped lead Cedar Grove to the team's fourth consecutive regional title and the 2016 Class 3A state championship over Greater Atlanta Christian, which was led by quarterback Davis Mills. He earned First Team All-State honors in his final season.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Shaffer was the No. 23 ranked offensive guard in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 39 recruit in the state of Georgia. He wasn't the highest-ranked offensive lineman on his own team as Netori Johnson, who committed to Georgia, was a four-star recruit. Shaffer initially committed to Louisville following his junior season, but the Georgia offer arrived a few weeks later from newly hired offensive line coach Sam Pittman. Shaffer flipped to his home state Bulldogs where he was the fifth-lowest recruit in the class of 25 signees. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility due to the pandemic and returned for Georgia's National Title winning season in 2021. Shaffer graduated with his degree in sociology (Fall 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6040	319	32 3/8	10 1/4	81	-	-	-	-	-	4.85	8.09	23 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Wide-hipped and comfortably carries his mass ... physical into engagement with the functional power to overwhelm defenders ... aggressive hands in the run game to drive his man from his spot ... stays patient in his pass blocking stance and avoids over-setting ... adequate length, punch and slide quickness to match rushers and establish himself in the gap ... has a sense for blitzing concepts and can react in a timely fashion ... hyper-competitive on-field personality and only knows one way to play ... played almost exclusively at LG (90% of his career snaps), but does have some experience at RG.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't play explosive and lacks ideal lateral quickness ... not rangy enough to execute outside pulls ... relies more on power than composed pad level and leverage ... inconsistent initial movements and often late out of his stance or too early (four false starts in 2021) ... his hands are wild, wide and lack precision ... clearly more comfortable in a confined space and struggles at the second level ... medicals will be imperative to his final draft grade with NFL teams: suffered a sprained neck (October 2019) and missed the second half of the 2019 season (wore a neck brace for three months) ... will be a 24-year old NFL rookie.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Georgia, Shaffer lined up at left guard in offensive coordinator Todd Monken's scheme. He took a jump on his senior tape and was an instrumental part of Georgia's National Title team in 2021, going from borderline draft pick to solid draft pick. A big-bodied blocker, Shaffer is a physical drive blocker with above average thickness, play strength and competitiveness to eat up defenders. However, his below average athleticism puts him in vulnerable position in pass protection, struggling vs. rushers in the SEC Championship Game and both playoff games. Overall, Shaffer will be limited because of his lack of quickness and hand placement/control, but he has the inline power to displace defenders and anchor in a phone booth. He needs a power-scheme (and a clean bill of health) to see steady playing time in the NFL.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

12. LOGAN BRUSS | Wisconsin 6050 | 309 lbs. | rSR. Kimberly, Wis. (Kimberly) 10/7/1999 (age 22.56) #60

BACKGROUND: Logan Bruss, who played high school football with his fraternal twin (Tyler), grew up in eastern Wisconsin (outside of Green Bay). He attended Kimberly High where he was a four-year letterman and part of football teams that won 56 straight games, including four consecutive state championships. After earning All-Conference at guard as a sophomore, Bruss announced himself as one of the better offensive linemen in the state as a junior right tackle, earning First Team All-State and Conference Offensive Lineman of the Year honors in 2015. As a senior, he was named unanimous First Team All-State and showed off his toughness in the state title game when he broke his left foot in the first half, but played through it and helped his team win the championship. Bruss also played on the defensive line and lettered in basketball and track. He earned All-Conference honors in the discus, setting a personal-best 171'6".

A three-star recruit out of high school, Bruss was the No. 28 ranked offensive guard in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Wisconsin. He collected offers from several Big Ten schools like Illinois, Michigan and Nebraska, but he unsurprisingly decided to stay close to home once Wisconsin offered him. Still recovering from his foot injury, Bruss redshirted in 2017. He graduated with his degree in industrial engineering (December 2021). Bruss accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

YEAR (GP/GS)	POSITION	NOTES

PRO DAY	6050	308	33 1/8	11	76 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Wide-based blocker with sturdy anchor strength ... violent player with large, strong hands, which helps him win early ... strikes with repeatable placement ... his grip strength boosts his block strain without attracting holding calls (zero holding penalties in his college career) ... smooth as a pass blocker with the body control to maintain his position post-contact ... comfortable on the move to hit his second level and outside marks ... his head stays on a swivel to slide with twists and stunts ... his competitive demeanor is consistent from snap-to-snap ... offers starting experience at both tackle and guard.

WEAKNESSES: Mediocre athleticism, length and upper body strength ... struggles to recover when he doesn't win early ... guilty of over-setting and allowing his pads to rise, especially in space ... shifty rushers stress his pass blocking technique ... not a consistent people-mover in the run game, struggling to steer defenders where he wants ... his consistency as a finisher needs to be better ... battled numerous minor injuries over his career and was hampered by issues as a senior, including a left leg injury during camp (August 2021), shoulder stinger (October 2021), and a foot injury that bothered him over the final month of the season (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Wisconsin, Bruss lined up at right tackle as a senior in head coach Paul Chryst's offense. He bounced between right tackle and right guard over his career and showed steady improvement each season, taking himself from free agent status to future draft pick. Bruss, who didn't allow a sack the last two seasons, stays controlled and centered in his movements. He plays with a workman-like attitude with his hands, but his upper body strength is average and he doesn't have the athletic traits to easily recover when he misfires. Overall, Bruss lacks explosiveness and will likely move inside to protect his edge vs. NFL speed, but he has the body control and striking skills to execute his blocks. He projects as a backup guard in the NFL who can kick out and play tackle in an emergency.

13. THAYER MUNFORD | Ohio State 6056 | 328 lbs. | rSR. Cincinnati, Ohio (Washington) 9/18/1999 (age 22.61) #75

BACKGROUND: Thayer Munford Jr. grew up in the Lincoln Heights neighborhood of Cincinnati and attended La Salle, an all-male Catholic high school. After seeing varsity reps as a freshman, he helped lead La Salle to the 2014 state championship (first in school history), earning Third Team All-State and First Team All-Conference as a sophomore left tackle. La Salle head coach (Nate Moore), who was an important role model for Munford, left for the head coaching position at Massillon Washington after the 2014 season. As a junior, Munford helped La Salle to the school's second straight state title, but he struggled, especially academically, without Moore's guidance. His mother (Melisa Thompson) sent him to Massillon (four hours north of Cincinnati) in the spring of 2016 to live with the Moore family, who became his legal guardians and gave him a better living situation (Munford's biological father was in and out of jail and died in August 2016). Munford enrolled at Washington High where he finished his junior year, but was ruled ineligible as a senior by the state's athletic association because they deemed his transfer as a recruiting violation. After several appeals, he was ruled eligible (if he kept his GPA above a 2.0) for the final four games of the 2016 season. He also lettered in basketball.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Munford was the No. 28 ranked offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 14 recruit in the state of Ohio. He collected scholarship offers and interest from programs like Alabama, Kentucky and Pitt, but several backed off because of the academic and weight issues, including Ohio State (Munford's preferred destination). He visited Columbus a few weeks before signing day and finally received the offer to become a Buckeye. Munford graduated with his degree in human development and family sciences (August 2021), becoming the first in his immediate family to graduate from college. He took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season in Columbus. Munford declined his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Wide-framed blocker with long arms and proportionate body thickness ... nice job swinging his hips to stay square to rushers ... throws his hands to tie up defenders and keep his blocks centered ... creates thud at contact when he lands his punch ... adequate core strength and plays stout ... flashes power in his hands to latch and drive defenders in the run game ... after 10 penalties in his first two years as a starter, he committed only two penalties over his final two seasons ...

senior captain and was awarded the Block “O” jersey in 2021 ... understands his pain tolerance and routinely played through injuries in college (Munford: “I can’t let my teammates down.”) ... finished his career with 54 games played and double digit starts at both left tackle and left guard.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent feet in his pass sets, struggling to mirror laterally ... blocks with stiffness in his legs and struggles to redirect vs. inside moves ... his footwork isn’t fast enough, allowing his base to narrow and leaving him hunched at the waist ... tends to play high and expose his chest ... he makes it too easy for defenders to get underneath him ... needs to recognize things quicker to give himself a head start ... inconsistent strike placement and consistency in all areas of his game ... battled numerous injuries over his career: suffered a back injury in 2018 that required offseason surgery (January 2019); missed one game as a senior because of a right ankle injury (September 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Ohio State, Munford lined up at left guard in head coach Ryan Day’s zone-based offense. He anchored the left tackle position for three seasons before moving inside to guard as a senior captain, playing over 3,100 offensive snaps in his career and earning All-Big Ten honors four straight years. A wide-bodied player, Munford keeps his feet beneath him and works hard to stay between the ball and defenders. However, he is a heavy-legged waist-bender with inconsistent hand placement in the run game and as a pass blocker. Overall, Munford wins with size and length and has played a lot of football, but he struggles to stay balanced and his inconsistencies create opportunities for pass rushers. His experience at tackle and guard boost his chances of making the NFL as a backup.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

14. ANDREW STUEBER | Michigan

6065 | 325 lbs. | rSR.

Darien, Conn. (Darien)

#71

BACKGROUND: Andrew Stueber (STOO-bur) was born and raised in Darien (a small coastal town on the Long Island Sound) and attended Darien High. After starting at right tackle as a sophomore, he moved to left tackle as a junior and blocked for an offense that totaled 4,873 yards of total offense and finished 12-0 in 2015, including the school’s first state championship in almost two decades. Stueber earned All-Conference and All-State honors and also made an impact on defense with 17 tackles, 4.0 tackles for loss, and 2.0 sacks. As a senior left tackle, he led Darien to another state championship and earned First Team All-State honors on offense, adding 63 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss, and 2.0 sacks. Stueber also lettered in basketball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Stueber was the No. 35 ranked offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Connecticut. He started to pick up FBS offers after his junior season from programs like Boston College, Penn State and Tennessee. Stueber also received scholarship offers from Ivy League programs Harvard and Yale. He attended a Michigan satellite camp, which earned him an invitation to another camp in Ann Arbor where he received his offer from Jim Harbaugh. Stueber, who grew up rooting for Michigan, committed the summer before his senior year and shut down his recruitment. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6062	323	34 1/8	9 7/8	82 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	18 (no runs – choice)

STRENGTHS: Large, barrel-chested blocker and checks boxes for length and hand size ... physical hands to snatch and dictate the action with his grip strength ... his punch is stiff and direct ... adequate body control in pass protection to stay square and work himself into position ... good head on his shoulders and rarely fooled by stunts/twists ... understands angles in the run game ... drives with his legs to create a surge and get defenders moving ... his coaches call him “one of the smartest football guys” in the program ... grew into a leadership role and filled whatever role the coaches asked of him ... played both tackle and guard in college and also took snaps at center during Senior Bowl practices.

WEAKNESSES: Below average agility and his range can be exposed vs. edge speed or quick-twitch penetrators ... will try to get a head start and mistime the snap (four false start penalties in 2021) ... lacks the fluidity to easily recover when his feet are late matching his upper body ... inconsistent at the second level ... bad habit of allowing his hands to get wide, leaving him hugging and falling off blocks ... inconsistent pad level in the run game, negating his ability to leverage and sustain the point of attack ... suffered a torn ACL during preseason practices (August 2019) and missed the 2019 season.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Michigan, Stueber played primarily at right tackle in former offensive coordinator Josh Gattis’ power-spread scheme. After sitting out the 2019 season with an ACL tear, he broke into the starting lineup and started all 20 games for the Wolverines the last two seasons, playing his best football as a senior. Stueber is assignment sound in pass protection with the hands and response time to combat what rushers throw at him. He is a functional run blocker and creates movement on down blocks, but he has some stiffness in his lower body and must improve his pad level to create movement. Overall, Stueber has NFL size, length and smarts, but he doesn’t have the athleticism to hold up at tackle and needs to improve his balance and sustain skills to earn a living at guard. He has the potential to be a dependable backup who can step in and hold his own if asked to pinch-hit as a starting guard.

15. CHASEN HINES | LSU

6026 | 327 lbs. | SR.

Marshall, Texas (Marshall)

#57

BACKGROUND: Chasen Hines grew up in East Texas (near the Louisiana border) and focused on baseball throughout his childhood. He started to gravitate more toward football after he enrolled at Marshall High. Hines played primarily on the offensive line, starting primarily at guard and center as a junior before moving to right tackle as a senior. He started to see snaps at defensive tackle as a junior, including a 65-yard fumble return for a touchdown, and was a two-way lineman full time as a senior. Hines also participated in track, including a personal-best 137’8 in the discus.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hines was the No. 21 ranked defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 31 recruit in the state of Texas. He considered offers from Florida, Oklahoma, Texas, Texas A&M and others, but he grew up dreaming of playing at LSU and committed to Ed Orgeron. Hines signed as a defensive tackle, but switched back to offensive line prior to the 2018 season. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and was a late call-up to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6025	331	34	10	83	-	-	-	29 1/2	-	5.00	8.44	20 (stood on Combine runs, broad jump)

STRENGTHS: Wide-bodied with long arms and extraordinary mass ... explosive puller to step laterally, locate moving targets and get rolling downhill ... effective on short and long pulls thanks to his natural balance ... creates movement at contact in the run game ... rarely searching thanks to his ability to quickly process various angles and speeds ... solid base as a pass blocker to slide with physical hands and a firm anchor ... works his hips into proper position to seal lanes ... committed only one penalty as a senior (ineligible downfield) ... spent time at all three interior line positions over his four years in Baton Rouge.

WEAKNESSES: Battled constant weight fluctuation over his LSU career, which affected his on-field consistency ... messy footwork in his movements, creating stalls or wasted steps ... throws his hands at anything that moves, but the timing and placement of his connection is inconsistent ... struggles vs. shifty rushers outside of a phone booth ... will struggle to redirect vs. counters ... lackluster contact balance when he doesn't control the block ... missed a combined 11 games over the past two seasons because of various injuries; underwent offseason right knee surgery after the 2019 season.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at LSU, Hines lined up at right guard in former offensive coordinator Jake Peetz's spread scheme (zone and gap). After moving to offense as a freshman and serving as Lloyd Cushenberry's backup at center in 2019, he started as a junior and senior with up-and-down results, but showed clear flashes of NFL talent. Hines is a naturally wide blocker with the mobility to pull and trap and the brute force to create movement at contact. He has initial quickness to play from out in front, but his mirroring skills (both his hands and feet) must improve vs. NFL competition. Overall, Hines has sloppy tendencies and must maintain his conditioning for peak performance, but his explosive movements and length are traits worth drafting and developing. He projects best in a power scheme in the NFL due to his frame and pulling skills.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

16. CHRIS PAUL | Tulsa 6037 | 323 lbs. | rSR. Houston, Texas (Jersey Village) 11/19/1998 (age 23.44) #71

BACKGROUND: Christopher "Chris" Paul, who is the middle child of three boys, was born and raised in Houston except for a three-year period (ages 7 through 9) when his family moved to Nigeria. His parents, who were born in Nigeria and met in the United States, wanted to introduce their three sons to the Nigerian culture. Back in Houston, Paul picked up football at 13 years old and started taking the sport seriously as a junior at Jersey Village High (northeast Houston). He was a two-way player and started at right tackle as junior in 2015. As a senior captain, Paul, who was also the president of his high school senior class, earned First Team All-District honors at left tackle. He also lettered in track and threw the shot put and discus.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Paul was the No. 252 ranked offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 431 recruit in the state of Texas. He was lightly recruited and Tulsa didn't enter the picture until right before signing day. Paul jumped at the opportunity and picked Tulsa over North Texas and several FCS offers. His older brother (Nick) was an offensive lineman at Prairie View A&M (2015-17), Kilgore Junior College (2018), and Northeastern State (2019-20). His younger brother (Patrick) is a rising sophomore left tackle at Houston. Paul is a musical artist who has released two singles under the stage name "The Seventh" and made his live debut in November 2021. Paul, who had a day (April 28th) named in his honor at Jersey Village, is very involved off the field and was named to the NCAA's Football Oversight Committee in 2021. He graduated with his degree in computer information systems (May 2021) and is currently working on his MBA. Paul accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6037	328	34	9 1/2	82	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	26 (bench press only)

STRENGTHS: Wide-hipped with decent length and thick legs/bubble ... balanced footwork to attack edge speed and stay attached ... keeps his weight centered in his lateral shuffle to match the movements of rushers inside and out ... exchanges well with his hands and disposes the wrists of rushers ... able to lock out and escort his man where he wants ... sees the field well to sort through things quickly ... served as the senior class president in high school and put together a high-achieving college résumé, including being named to the 2021 NCAA's Football Oversight Committee (one of only two student-athletes) ... offers starting experience at four of the five offensive line positions (everywhere except center).

WEAKNESSES: Will lose races to the corner and wide speed will give him trouble ... lackluster recovery skills ... his hands are too soft and inconsistent in pass protection, either hugging or catching rushers ... oversets more than you want to see ... average-at-best core strength ... struggles to reset his anchor vs. power or long-armed rushers ... needs to be better with his balance at the second level ... struggled vs. Ohio State, the best opponent on Tulsa's 2021 schedule ... medicals will need reviewed after several minor knee injuries, including a setback during 2019 spring practices with his right knee; missed a total of four games the last two seasons.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Tulsa, Paul bounced around before settling in at right tackle in head coach Philip Montgomery's up-tempo smashmouth spread. He arrived at Tulsa as an offensive tackle, but he started at a new offensive line position each of the last four seasons and his coaches speak highly of his intelligence and dedication to make those transitions. Paul uses his physical hands and length to create spacing in the run game and is quick to react in his pass sets. However, he doesn't have ideal movement skills in space to handle wide speed and his hands turn soft at contact when protecting the edge. Overall, Paul doesn't have great core strength or recovery skills, but he has the size, balance and hand exchange to give defenders all they can handle. He offers position versatility (clearly most comfortable at right guard), projecting as a backup who can grow into a valuable sixth lineman role.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

17. CADE MAYS | Tennessee 6046 | 311 lbs. | SR. Knoxville, Tenn. (Catholic) 4/26/1999 (age 23.01) #68

BACKGROUND: Cade Mays, who has two younger brothers, grew up on his family's 120-acre farm in Kingston in East Tennessee (30 miles west of Knoxville). He was coached by his father at the youth football level and attended Knoxville Catholic High (his father's alma mater). Mays was a four-year varsity starter and played both ways at left tackle and defensive end. As a junior, he was named the Class 4A Lineman of the Year and earned First Team All-State honors. Mays led Knoxville Catholic to a 12-3 record and the 2017 Class 5A state championship as a senior (third state championship in school history). He earned U.S. Army All-American and USA Today First Team All-USA honors, finishing the 2017 season with 75 pancake blocks and a pair of rushing touchdowns.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Mays was the No. 3 ranked offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 22 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Tennessee. As a Tennessee legacy, he received a scholarship offer from the Volunteers before he started high school. Mays committed to Butch Jones the summer before his sophomore year (July 2015) and stayed committed to Tennessee for over two years, but decommitted midway through his senior season because of upheaval in the program. His narrowed his new final three to Clemson, Georgia and Ohio State, committing to the Bulldogs. After two seasons in Athens, Mays looked to transfer to Tennessee and hired a lawyer to become immediately eligible. His younger brother (Cooper) is a rising junior center for the Volunteers. His father (Kevin) was an All-SEC offensive guard and team captain for Phil Fulmer at Tennessee (1991-94) and sustained a career-ending knee injury during his NFL Draft prep. Kevin sued Georgia after his right pinkie finger was severed during a recruiting trip in 2017. The finger couldn't be reattached and he underwent multiple surgeries, including a skin graft, to help the issue. Cade's mother (Melinda) also graduated from Tennessee. His maternal uncle (Michael Frogg) played center at Tennessee (2004-07). Mays accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6045	316	34	9 7/8	83	-	-	-	-	-	4.63	-	21 (stood on Combine runs, jumps, 3-cone)

STRENGTHS: Owns a filled-out frame with functional length ... has the slide quickness out of his stance to get on top of speed rushers ... accurate, powerful hands to meet rushers and keep them at bay ... flashes the grip strength to snatch inside the frame of opponents ... has the play strength in his upper half to wash defenders down the line ... effective on the move to execute blocks in space ... competes with edge and keeps busy from snap to whistle ... alert player and not often fooled (can tell he grew up in a football family and has been playing the position a long time) ... showed impressive versatility in college: logged multiple starts at four different offensive line positions over his career and took snaps at all five positions.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks above average body control to quickly adjust vs. sudden rushers ... stiff ankles ... doesn't consistently replace his hands and struggles vs. refined counters ... has a bad habit of dropping his eyes and leaning on defenders ... his anchor strength shows cracks vs. power rushers who take away his leverage ... stiffness through his core and high pad level hinder him in the run game ... would benefit from more controlled, choppy steps when drive blocking ... missed several games over his career because of various injuries, including a left ankle issue (November 2021) as a senior.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Tennessee, Mays played exclusively at right tackle as a senior in head coach Josh Heupel's up-tempo spread offense. Starting his career at Georgia, he was expected to replace Andrew Thomas at left tackle in 2020 before an abrupt (and controversial according to some) transfer landed him back home at Tennessee where he started the last two seasons. Mays is one of the few linemen in this draft with functional playing experience at all five offensive line positions, which speaks to his competitive toughness and smarts. He is quick out of his stance to cut off speed, but struggles to recover and has a low margin for error if he doesn't properly frame up rushers. Overall, Mays can get tied up as a pass blocker due to tall pads and mediocre body control, but he is physical in the run game with NFL-level play strength. He projects best inside at guard in the NFL, likely as a backup while he competes for a starting spot.

18. CORDELL VOLSON | North Dakota State 6061 | 315 lbs. | rSR. Balfour, N.D. (Drake) 7/20/1998 (age 23.77) #67

BACKGROUND: Cordell Volson, who is the second of four boys, grew up in the tiny town of Balfour (population less than 30 people) in central North Dakota. He attended Drake-Anamoose High (enrollment under 100 students) where he played nine-man football. Volson was a four-year letterman and started on both the offensive and defensive lines while also playing tight end, fullback, linebacker, punter and kicker. He earned First Team All-Region and All-State honors as a senior and finished his prep career with 239 tackles, 28.0 sacks, five forced fumbles, one interception and 14 blocked punts on special teams. Volson also lettered in basketball where he earned All-District honors and averaged 21 points and 15 rebounds per game. He also set the school records for points in a game (33) and blocked shots in a season (35).

A two-star recruit out of high school, Volson was the No. 233 ranked offensive tackle in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of North Dakota. He passed on an offer from FBS level Wyoming to stay close to home and join his brother at FCS-level North Dakota State. His older brother (Tanner) was an All-American center for the Bison (2014-18) and spent time with the Los Angeles Chargers and New York Giants. Volson graduated with his degree in general agriculture (December 2020). He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Fargo for his sixth season in 2021. Volson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Displays adequate mass and length for NFL work ... quick off the snap to cross-face and cut off wide defenders ... highly aggressive in the run game, running his feet at contact and driving through down blocks ... generates force at contact with his hands and works hard to stay connected ... efficient on pulls (both short and long) and looks comfortable working up a level ... adequate anchor in pass protection ... processes quickly to make sudden adjustments ... very smart and his coaches say he can take concepts from the board to the field ... enrolled at 250 pounds and worked hard to develop his frame ... played in a school-record 65 games, including 41 consecutive starts the last three seasons ... functional experience at both tackle spots and inside at guard.

WEAKNESSES: Taller blocker and leverage is a constant battle for him ... unexceptional athleticism with plodding feet ... undisciplined technician and needs to be quicker replacing his hands ... struggles vs. wide speed and also late to recover vs. inside counters ... eager punch as a pass blocker, but his timing is sporadic, leaving him off-balanced ... can be tossed when his pad level rises and base narrows ... efficient on the move, but needs to use better body control at the NFL level ... penalized 18 times over the last three years ... of his 65 career games played, none came vs. FBS competition.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at North Dakota State, Volson was the starter in offensive coordinator Tyler Roehl's run-heavy scheme. A three-time All-American, he started all 41 games the last three seasons for the Bison where he lined up primarily at right tackle but often moved inside during games where he saw extensive action at guard. Volson is at his best as a run blocker thanks to his strike power and ability to hit his landmarks and out-angle defenders. In pass protection, he works hard to sustain and anchor, but opens prematurely and finds himself too upright and off-balanced. Overall, Volson is a nondescript athlete, and his technique often breaks down vs. inside/outside speed, but he is smart, tough and finds ways to lose slowly once engaged. A permanent move to guard will help his chances of landing on an NFL roster.

GRADE: 6th Round

19. ZACH THOMAS | San Diego State 6047 | 308 lbs. | rSR. Carlsbad, Calif. (Carlsbad) 5/26/1998 (age 23.92) #76

BACKGROUND: Zachary "Zach" Thomas, who is the oldest of three children, was born and raised in Carlsbad, a beach city 35 miles north of San Diego (his parents are both from the Detroit area and moved to Southern California in the late '90s). He started playing football at the youth level and continued playing at Carlsbad High. He made varsity as a junior and played both ways as a left tackle and defensive tackle. As a senior, Thomas helped Carlsbad win the conference and earned All-District honors, finishing with 47 tackles, 11.0 tackles for loss and 3.0 sacks on defense.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Thomas was the No. 201 ranked offensive tackle in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 285 recruit in the state of California. He received offers from Colorado State, Nevada, New Mexico, San Diego State and UNLV, electing to stay close to home and commit to the Aztecs' run-oriented offense. Thomas decided to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility and return to San Diego State for a sixth season in 2021. He played with his younger brother (Cameron) at Carlsbad and San Diego State and both are now in the 2022 NFL Draft class. Thomas accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6046	305	33 7/8	10 1/4	82 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Owns a broad waist, long arms and large hands ... generates force in the run game with his hand timing and leg drive ... his lock-on strength is persistent, keeping defenders from re-leveraging once he connects ... comfortable as a climber and stays dialed in at the second level ... uses short, controlled steps in pass protection with the body control to cut off pass rush angles ... redirects well vs. inside moves ... lower body bend to maintain low pad level at contact ... peppers defenders with his reach to jolt at contact ... versatile experience with double-digit starts at both tackle spots and functional time inside at guard.

WEAKNESSES: Undeveloped core strength ... looks to make first contact, which often leaves him overextended and hunched at the waist ... doesn't have ideal range in pass protection because of lackluster lateral quickness ... blocks with an inconsistent anchor and too easily surrenders ground to power rushers ... resorts to mauling instead of trusting his hand technique ... committed three penalties as a super senior (two false starts, one holding) ... older prospect and will turn 24 years old shortly after the NFL Draft ... suffered a torn ACL in his right knee (September 2018) and required season-ending surgery.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at San Diego State, Thomas was the left tackle in offensive coordinator Jeff Hecklinski's run-heavy scheme. He began his career at right guard before moving to right tackle and eventually graduating to left tackle where he played his best season in 2021 and graded as one of the best run blockers in the country. Thomas is quick out of his stance as both a run and pass blocker and plays with the stubborn strength to displace defenders when in proper position. Despite having the length for outside work, he is better suited inside at guard because of his lack of lateral range and tendency to lose his balance. Overall, Thomas is a nimble mover with drive blocking skills, but he is a non-explosive player who lacks the recovery skills to salvage the play after a misstep. He is a potential reserve in a zone-based scheme.

20. NICK ZAKELJ | Fordham 6061 | 316 lbs. | rSR. Broadview Hts., Ohio (Brecksville-Broadview) 6/22/1999 (age 22.85) #75

BACKGROUND: Nicholas "Nick" Zakelj (Zah-KELL), who is the youngest of three children, grew up in Broadview Heights, just outside of Cleveland. He was a four-year letterman at Brecksville-Broadview Heights High where he was teammates with Mike Rose (Iowa State). Zakelj played tight end and linebacker over his first three years of high school before outgrowing those positions and moving to left tackle and defensive end as a senior captain in 2016. He finished his prep career with 270 tackles on defense and earned First Team All-Suburban honors and Cleveland.com Honorable Mention All-Star as a senior. Zakelj also lettered in track and set personal-bests in the discus (157'5) and shot put (28'9.5).

A no-star recruit out of high school, Zakelj had only one year of offensive line experience, and college interest was sporadic. FCS-level Fordham was the first college program to offer him a scholarship (as an offensive lineman) followed by Butler and Columbia. Zakelj committed to Fordham prior to his senior year and signed with the Rams as part of the 2017 recruiting class. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6064	311	32 7/8	9 7/8	78 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only)

STRENGTHS: Excellent quickness off the ball ... his movement patterns are controlled and efficient to handle space ... keeps his hips accessible to reach from the backside or redirect inside ... eager with his hands to create pop as a pass blocker or latch in the run game ... understands angles as a run blocker and his eyes are usually in the right place ... blocks through the echo of the whistle with outstanding compete skills, consistently driving and burying on tape (set the tone on the first play of the 2021 Nebraska tape) ... has experience at both tackle positions and played guard during Senior Bowl week ... durable and started every game the last four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Short-armed and doesn't play wide ... his leaning can be a death sentence as he struggles to recover vs. savvy defensive linemen ... his technical flaws leave him vulnerable ... often misfires (late or wide) with his punch as a pass blocker ... too much waist-bending through contact, leaving him off balanced as he tries to sustain and stay connected vs. pass rushers ... will be bowled over by bull rushers when he doesn't show urgency with his base ... lacks the power to regain the advantage once defenders leverage him ... doesn't have an ideal body of work vs. top competition.

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Fordham, Zakelj was a mainstay at left tackle in offensive coordinator Kevin Decker's zone-based scheme. With minimal offensive line experience before college, he developed into one of the better blockers at the FCS level, becoming just the 24th player in Patriot League history to earn All-Conference honors four different seasons. Zakelj grabbed the attention of NFL teams after his dominant performance vs. Nebraska in the 2021 season opener, although the rest of his senior year tape was very up and down. While he plays with quickness, he struggles to ride the bull and stay connected because of his leaning and inability to keep blocks centered post-contact. Overall, Zakelj moves well and competes with excellent awareness and finish, but he must become more consistent fundamentally to match up vs. NFL competition. He is a college tackle who will move inside to guard in the NFL.

21. JASON POE | Mercer 6005 | 300 lbs. | rSR. Fitzgerald, Ga. (Fitzgerald) 7/27/1998 (age 23.75) #51

BACKGROUND: Jason Poe grew up in Fitzgerald, a small city in central Georgia, and didn't play football until Fitzgerald High. He tried out for the football team as a sophomore and made varsity as a junior where he was a 225-pound pulling guard, earning All-Region and All-State honors in 2015 as a first-year starter. As a senior, Poe helped Fitzgerald to a 13-win season and the 2016 conference title, again earning All-State recognition. He blocked on the same offensive line as Lecitus Smith (Virginia Tech and fellow 2022 NFL Draft prospect). Poe also lettered in weightlifting (Fitzgerald school-record 390-pound max bench press) and track, setting personal-bests in the shot put (48'6) and discus (141'2).

A no star recruit out of high school, Mercer wasn't ranked by the online recruiting services and didn't have any Division I scholarship offers. He heard from several JUCO programs and received six offers, committing to Hutchinson Community College (Kan.) as a fullback. Despite zero backfield experience, Poe started in four games and rushed for 18 yards in 2017. After the season, he jumped at his first opportunity and signed with Division II Lenoir-Rhyne, returning to the offensive line. After Lenoir-Rhyne's fall 2020 season was postponed, he graduated and elected to transfer for his final season. He signed with Mercer and rejoined head coach Drew Cronic, his former head coach at Lenoir-Rhyne who left to take the head job at Mercer in 2020. Poe accepted his invitation to the 2022 College Gridiron Showcase.

STRENGTHS: Explodes out of his stance with rare pulling quickness for his size ... accelerates with strong strides to race downfield and take out defenders at the second and third levels ... displays twinkle toes and lower body fluidity to position and seal ... shows off his mobility on combinations and when climbing ... has natural leverage thanks to his shorter stature to block from a low position ... uses hop back to reposition himself, throw hands and slow power rushers ... plays with edge and looks to thump anything in his path ... puts in the time in the weight room and practice field ... avoided major injury and started 37 games over three seasons ... was named a team captain quickly after he arrived at Mercer.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized, squatty frame with weight that is close to maxed out ... stubby arm length, which leads to a lot of body-to-body blocks ... long-armed defenders will easily get into his frame for push-pull action ... not a technically refined or patient run blocker and is more interested in mauling ... arrives hot and quickly finds himself out of control ... grabby hands at contact and needs to keep his blocks centered to improve his sustain ... has upper body strength, but can be jostled by powerful nose tackles due to his lack of bulk ... doesn't have much experience anywhere except right guard ... spent the bulk of his college career at the Division II level and didn't face top competition each week.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Mercer, Poe was an ideal fit at right guard in head coach Drew Cronic's wishbone-style offense, which spread out the defense laterally (motions, reverses, sweeps, etc.). A 235-pound lineman in high school and 250-pound fullback in junior college, he was an All-American blocker at the Division II level and played at a high level in his one season in the FCS, grading particularly well on his 2021 Alabama tape. An alum of Bruce Feldman's Freak List, Poe is a loose, explosive mover with remarkable range for a 300-pounder. While his college highlights are exciting, his below average length and impatient, disjointed play style will make it tough for him to find regular work in the NFL. Overall, Poe is more of an undersized and frenetic battering ram than controlled blocker, but he is twitched up with the pulling athleticism and raw strength that will be enticing for certain schemes. Some scouts believe his best NFL position could be at center or even fullback.

GRADE: 7th Round

22. BILL DUNKLE | San Diego State 6047 | 328 lbs. | rJR. Chula Vista, Calif. (Eastlake) 12/30/1999 (age 22.33) #73

BACKGROUND: William "Bill" Dunkle was born in San Ysidro and raised by Jess Gonzalez in the San Diego area (he doesn't have a relationship with his birth parents). He attended Eastlake High where he was a three-year letterman, playing on both the offensive and defensive lines. He started at left tackle and defensive tackle as a sophomore, junior and senior and earned All-League honors all three seasons. Dunkle was a team captain his final two seasons and helped lead Eastlake to a 10-win season and playoff berth as a senior after back-to-back losing seasons.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Dunkle was the No. 131 ranked offensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 160 recruit in the state of California. He received an offer from Illinois, which was his only Power 5 offer, but he looked to stay closer to home and committed to San Diego State over Utah State. His uncle (Freddy) was a linebacker at San Diego State (2004-06) and is now the head football coach at Montgomery High. Dunkle elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6050	347	32 7/8	10 1/4	81 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Broad-shouldered frame with essential body girth and arm length ... forceful run blocker with thunder in his hands to wash/drive defenders off their spot ... excellent play strength and inline power, running his feet to finish ... flashes a strong grip once locked on, allowing him to turn defenders from the hole ... grows roots in his base to halt power rushers in pass protection ... heavy punch and sustains while maintaining his pass-set balance ... competes with a consistent edge and won't get bored ... has just enough range to pick off linebackers when climbing ... started every game in 2021 and finished his career with 30 starts.

WEAKNESSES: Below average athleticism ... his feet get stuck in the mud as a pass blocker and he can be too easily crossed up ... sloppy posture and struggles to stay centered, hurting his ability to mirror ... his hands are physical, but he lacks consistent timing or placement ... needs to adopt a more workman-like approach with his fundamentals ... flagged eight times in 2021, including three holding calls ... his blitz recognition and anticipation remain a work in progress ... was a right guard only in college with zero snaps at the other four offensive line positions ... doesn't offer any scheme versatility.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at San Diego State, Dunkle was the right guard in offensive coordinator Jeff Hecklinski's run-heavy scheme. A high school left tackle, he moved to right guard for the Aztecs and was a mainstay the last three seasons (zero career sacks allowed), earning All-American recognition in 2021. Dunkle has a massive body and powerful base and uses his grip strength to move defenders as a run blocker. However, he lacks reactive athleticism and relies more on force than a technical, well-timed approach, which leaves him top-heavy and falling off blocks. Overall, Dunkle has NFL-level inline power, but his feet, feel, and fundamentals all fall short and will be tough to mask vs. NFL-level competition. He is scheme-specific and a guard-only prospect who will need the right fit to survive roster cuts.

SUMMARY: Marcus McKethan (muh-KEE-thuhn) was a three-sport star at Barnwell High, lettering in basketball and winning the discus state title as a junior (151'6). He was a three-year starter at offensive tackle and didn't allow a sack as a senior. A three-star recruit, he committed to North Carolina prior to his senior year and started 37 of the past 38 games at right guard for the Tar Heels (he was a right guard only at UNC). McKethan is a wide, burly blocker with bear claw hands and the strength at contact to be a people-mover in the run game, but he will fall off blocks and lose connection because of below-average contact balance. He jars rushers at contact when he properly times his initial punch, but he is heavy in his shuffle, and his recovery quickness will be challenged by NFL athletes. Overall, McKethan looks straight out of central casting with his frame, length and power, but the key to him locking down an NFL roster spot will be developing his reactive athleticism.

SUMMARY: Tyrese Robinson grew up playing football in McKinney and was a four-year letterman at Boyd High (north of Dallas), primarily at right tackle. A four-star recruit, he was considered one of the top-10 guard recruits in the country and committed to Oklahoma over Georgia, Michigan, Texas and others. Over his final three seasons in Norman, he started every game and split his snaps between right tackle and right guard. Robinson has durable mass on his frame with the physicality and placement with his hands to slow down or redirect defenders at contact. He is efficient out of his stance and relies on his angles, but his upper half overextends past his toes and his inconsistent body control leads to sloppy tendencies. His played right tackle as a senior, but is likely a guard only in the NFL. Overall, Robinson has the play strength to wall off defenders and put defenders in reverse with desire to finish, but his balance issues will be exacerbated against NFL competition.

SUMMARY: Blaise (BLAYZ) Andries (AN-dreez) grew up in Marshall (same hometown as Trey Lance) and was a three-sport letterman at Marshall High. He earned first team All-State honors as a senior left tackle and was the No. 1 ranked recruit in the state. He was courted by national programs like Florida, Oklahoma and others, but the chance to play in front of his family led him to Minnesota. He was an iron man for the Gophers and started every game over the last four seasons, starting at multiple positions each year (played every position except center in college). Predictably for a math major, he understands angles and gets his hands involved to tie up defenders. However, his lower body lacks controlled movements and he isn't a people-mover or physical finisher at the point of attack, leading to fit concerns. Overall, Andries is a smart, experienced veteran who works hard to position his run-blocking fits, but his below average contact balance lowers his NFL ceiling.

SUMMARY: Josh Sills grew up in rural southeast Ohio and started playing football in third grade. He was a two-year starting left tackle at Meadowbrook High and also handled the kicking/punting duties. A three-star recruit, he committed to West Virginia over Michigan and spent four years in Morgantown. After a season-ending shoulder injury in 2019, he entered the transfer portal and landed at Oklahoma State and started 24 games over the last two seasons. Sills competes with a touch of wildness and is the type of guy you want on your side in bar fight. His bully attitude on the field makes him a great run finisher, but sometimes at the expense of his balance, falling off blocks. He has solid athleticism for a big man with a forceful punch as a pass blocker, but his timing needs refinement. Overall, Sills is one of the few players in this draft class with college starting experience at all five offensive line spots, but he must play with better control to counterbalance his aggression.

1. TYLER LINDERBAUM | Iowa 6021 | 296 lbs. | rJR. Solon, Iowa (Solon) 4/7/2000 (age 22.06) #65

BACKGROUND: Tyler Linderbaum, who has an older brother, was born and raised in Solon (15 miles north of the Iowa campus). He grew up playing multiple sports and played quarterback in junior high. He attended Solon High, where he was a three-year letterman on the varsity football team and played both the offensive and defensive lines. He earned First Team All-District as a sophomore with 27.5 tackles, 6.0 tackles for loss, and 4.0 sacks. As a junior, Linderbaum was named District MVP with 44 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss and 3.0 sacks and earned First Team All-State honors as a center. He was named a U.S. Army All-American as a senior captain and again earned First Team All-State as a center. On defense, Linderbaum finished with 37 tackles, 3.0 tackles for loss, and 2.0 sacks in 2017 to earn District defensive MVP honors. He earned four letters in baseball and had a .346 batting average as a junior. Linderbaum earned three letters in wrestling and posted a 53-10 record with 41 pins as a junior, finishing fifth in the state tournament in the 285-pound heavyweight division. He had several bouts with Tristan Wirfs and defeated his future Iowa teammate at the 2017 Class 2A regionals. Linderbaum earned three letters in track and placed second in the shot put (59'1) and third in the discus (166'1.75) at the 2018 Class 3A state meet. He also lettered in basketball and golf as a freshman.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Linderbaum was the No. 28 defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Iowa. He received his first offer from Iowa State after his junior season, followed by offers Iowa and Minnesota. However, Linderbaum grew up a diehard Hawkeyes fan and committed to Iowa as a defensive tackle. After playing in two games on the defensive line in 2018, he redshirted, and head coach Kirk Ferentz requested he moved to the offensive line prior to the 2019 season. His father (Todd) played college athletics at Upper Iowa University (1990-93). Tyler's older brother (Logan) wrestled for four years at Minnesota State (2015-20). Linderbaum graduated with his degree in enterprise leadership (December 2021). He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Linderbaum planned to accept his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to participate due to his foot injury.

STRENGTHS: Quick off the ball, and flies out of his stance to reach the three-technique ... excellent on-the-move run blocker with his ability to gain leverage, seal and create lanes ... flexible hips and lower body to smoothly redirect and explode into defenders ... displays impeccable timing on combination blocks ... consistently climbs to the second level and removes linebackers from the play ... has physical hands and is a brawler at contact ... displays tight hands in pass protection, with elbows that rub his ribs ... drops his hips and keeps his feet underneath him to anchor at shallow depth ... consistently blocks past the whistle with the bulldog mentality to finish every play ... innately motivated, but also humble and was named a team captain in 2021 (head coach Kirk Ferentz: "I don't know if it gets any better than Tyler.") ... plays hurt and doesn't allow injuries to greatly affect his play ... started every game at center the past three seasons (35 consecutive starts).

WEAKNESSES: Undersized with a squatty frame ... his lack of length and girth can be exposed vs. long-armed rushers ... grappler at the point of attack, but not an overpowering blocker ... will struggle in pass protection when he misfires with his punch, leaving him overextended and controlled ... his inconsistent habits in pass protection leave him on the ground too much ... will occasionally drop his eyes in space, allowing rushers to elude him ... will fall off second-level blocks when he sacrifices his balance ... didn't play tackle or guard in college, and doesn't offer position versatility ... suffered a left foot sprain in the bowl game (January 2022) that sidelined him for the Senior Bowl and Combine.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Iowa, Linderbaum was the starting center in offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz's outside zone-based scheme. After James Daniels left early for the NFL following the 2018 season, the Hawkeyes' coaches asked Linderbaum to move from defensive tackle to center, where he started all 35 games the past three seasons. He took home the Rimington Award in 2021 as the nation's top center (first in Iowa history to win the award). A six-sport athlete in high school, Linderbaum is very quick in his snap and step and shows athletic range, body control and refinement as an on-the-move or reach blocker. Although he doesn't have an ideal body type, his wrestling background is clear with his handwork, leverage and killer instinct to win early or reset mid-rep. Overall, Linderbaum is a center-only prospect and will struggle at times in pass protection due to his lack of length, but he is an elite-level run blocker due to his athleticism and grip strength to latch-and-drive. He projects as a longtime NFL starter in a zone-based scheme.

CAM JURGENS | Nebraska

6027 | 303 lbs. | rJR.

Beatrice, Neb. (Beatrice)

#51

BACKGROUND: Cameron “Cam” Jurgens, who is the youngest of three children, grew up on his family’s farm (beans, cattle, corn) in Pickrell, just north of Beatrice (35 miles south of Lincoln). He was a three-sport standout at Beatrice High and four-year letterman in football, playing linebacker, tight end and punter. After earning Second Team All-State honors as a sophomore, Jurgens was a First-Team All-State honoree as a junior with 98 tackles on defense and 23 receptions for 286 yards on offense. Before missing the second half of his senior year with an injury, he posted 57 tackles and one interception in 2017, adding 318 rushing yards, 277 receiving yards and eight touchdowns to again earn All-State honors. He lettered in basketball and averaged 12.5 points and 3.5 rebounds per game as a junior to earn Honorable Mention All-State (didn’t play as a senior because of his football injury). Jurgens was also one of the most accomplished track athletes in the state and led Beatrice to the state title in 2018. He was a four-time state champion in the discus and three-time champion in the shot put, setting personal bests in the shot put (63’3) and discus (196’8).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Jurgens was the No. 7 tight end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit in the state (highest-ranked recruit in Nebraska since 2010). Growing up a Cornhuskers fan, he originally committed to Nebraska in August 2015 prior to his sophomore year. He considered flipping to LSU after Mike Riley was fired as head coach, but he bought into the vision of Scott Frost and his staff, signing with Nebraska to play football. He joined the Nebraska track team after the 2019 football season and had a personal best 56’3 in the shot put during the 2020 indoor season. Despite no experience, Jurgens made the position switch from tight end to center during 2019 spring practices. His mother (Beth) set the Nebraska high school record in the shot put (47’7) and was a 12-time NAIA All-American at Nebraska-Kearney (1983-87). She earned seven national titles and set the indoor shot put record (50’8) and the NAIA national championship discus record (161’2), earning a spot in the school’s Hall of Fame. Cam’s older brother (Colby) threw for the track team at Nebraska-Kearney (2011-15). Cam elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

YEAR (GP/GS)	POSITION	NOTES
2018: (1/0)		Played both OC and TE; Redshirted after suffering a season-ending foot injury
2019: (12/12)	OC	Made full-time transition to OC during 2019 spring practice; First freshman in school history to start at center
2020: (7/7)	OC	Missed one game because of injury
2021: (12/12)	OC	Third Team All-Big Ten
Total: (32/31)	OC

STRENGTHS: Former tight end who moves like it ... outstanding space athlete with the range to pull, climb and pick off defenders 30 yards downfield in the screen game ... efficient and timely with his combinations ... his lateral quickness and lower body fluidity help him mirror and stay connected vs. interior rushers ... has long arms and works hard to stay balanced through contact ... able to anchor when he uses proper fundamentals and knee bend ... his hand strength jolts and surprises defenders at contact ... blocks with some edge to him, and his energy level doesn’t fall off late in games ... has worked hard to pack weight onto his frame ... consistently played through pain during his career ... started 31 of 32 games the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: His frame appears near maxed out ... doesn’t have the upper body power to latch and overwhelm the man across from him ... has the bad habit of head-ducking and over-setting his target ... struggles to recover once stacked and his chest is exposed ... penalized six times in 2021, including multiple holding calls ... often overaggressive and needs to stay under control at the second level to break down and avoid being shaken by linebackers ... doesn’t have guard experience ... his medical history needs to be fully vetted: missed the second half of his senior year of high school after breaking his fibula and dislocating his left ankle (October 2017); suffered a broken metatarsal in his right foot (October 2018) and redshirted; reagravated his foot injury and missed one game (November 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Nebraska, Jurgens was the starting center in head coach Scott Frost’s multiple-based offense. A 245-pound high school tight end, Jurgens transitioned to center when he arrived in Lincoln (never had taken a snap at the position) and grew into a 31-game starter who showed key improvements each season. Jurgens has above-average movements skills with explosiveness in his upper half and rare range to reach and cut off pursuit angles. Though he shows core strength when engaged, his overaggressive and undisciplined tendencies lead to negative reps. Overall, Jurgens lacks the brute power to easily control defenders, but he is a twitched-up athlete with play quickness and competitive toughness that will translate to the NFL. He is the round two version of Iowa’s Tyler Linderbaum and will grow into a starter for a zone-based offense.

DYLAN PARHAM | Memphis

Carrollton, Ga. (Carrollton)

#56

BACKGROUND: Dylan Parham grew up west of Atlanta (near the Alabama border) and started playing football at age 7 (along with basketball, track, and wrestling). After playing primarily at running back throughout his childhood, he moved to defense at Carrollton High as a linebacker and defensive end. He posted 48 tackles and 4.0 tackles for loss as a junior, leading Carrollton to the playoffs. As a senior, Parham moved to tight end, where he caught nine passes for 96 yards and one touchdown, but he was primarily used as a blocker and extension of the offensive line. He earned First Team All-Area honors at tight end in 2017 and helped Carrollton surpass 4,200 yards of total offense. Parham also lettered in basketball and track (sprints and jumps) at Carrollton. As a sophomore, he participated at the 2014 USATF National Junior Olympic Championships (Houston, Texas) in the triple jump.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Parham was the No. 144 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 351 recruit in the state of Georgia. After his junior season, he received offers from Memphis, Middle Tennessee State and West Virginia but went widely under-recruited. At only 230 pounds, Parham signed with Memphis as a tight end and athlete. After redshirting in 2017, he moved from tight end to the defensive line, but it didn’t click, and the offensive line coaches offered to take him. Parham graduated with his degree in health studies (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6026	313	33	10	80 1/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	25 (bench and position drills only)

STRENGTHS: Fires from a low position to establish leverage ... shows natural knee bend, core strength and balance in his pass sets ... coordinated hand exchange to reset and answer different types of rushers ... has the patience and timing to handle blitzers from depth or find late pressures ... rolls his hips into contact and runs his feet to control his man ... agile, efficient puller who operates well in space to execute blocks 10 yards downfield ... finds work at the second level and on combinations ... his coaches say he developed more of a mean streak as a senior ... added almost 85 pounds since enrolling at Memphis ... versatile experience with double-digit starts at three different positions (left guard, right guard, right tackle) ... durable and started all 51 games the past four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Will be deemed undersized by several NFL teams ... his length is average ... light in the pants and can get knocked off his feet by angle blocks ... his ability to anchor is founded more on leverage than base strength ... plays on overdrive at times, losing control ... shows the bad habit of leaning hard on blocks and finding himself hunched and off-balanced ... tends to arrive too early on zone blocks and needs to be more precise with his angles and timing ... looks to get a head start, and he had multiple false starts on the tapes studied ... doesn't have any in-game playing experience at center.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Memphis, Parham was the starting right guard in head coach Ryan Silverfield's RPO-based, multiple offense. A tight end and linebacker in high school, he moved to the offensive line in 2018 and started all 51 games (split between left guard, right guard and right tackle) the past four years, blocking for future NFL backs like Darrell Henderson, Tony Pollard and Kenneth Gainwell. Parham is extremely quick off the ball with the mobility to get out in space and the core strength to latch and drive opponents at the line of scrimmage. He lacks ideal length and can be overpowered at times, but he strikes with a flexible coil and developed nasty streak. Overall, Parham can play too fast at times and loses his bearings, but he has excellent movement skills and understands how to out-leverage defenders and sustain the point of attack. He has the talent level to provide immediate interior depth for an NFL team and compete for a starting job, projecting best at center.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 72 overall)

4. COLE STRANGE | Chattanooga 6047 | 307 lbs. | rSR. Knoxville, Tenn. (Farragut) 7/31/1998 (age 23.74) #69

BACKGROUND: Devin Cole Strange, who is the middle child of three, grew up in the Knoxville area and attended Farragut High School. He was a four-year letterman and played linebacker as a freshman and sophomore. As a junior captain, Strange led the team with 100 tackles and 1.5 tackles for loss at middle linebacker to earn All-District honors. He moved to defensive end as a senior and was named the 2015 Conference Defensive Player of the Year with 103 tackles, 18.0 tackles for loss, 7.5 sacks and five passes defended. Strange, who also played tight end as a senior, earned All-State honors and led Farragut to a 10-2 record in 2015.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Strange was the No. 193 weakside defensive end in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 94 recruit in the state of Tennessee. He was recruited by several FCS programs such as East Tennessee and Western Carolina and verbally committed to Chattanooga the summer before his senior season. Air Force entered the picture, and Strange flipped his commitment on signing day for the chance to play at the FBS level. However, during the summer after high school graduation, he had a change of heart and realized he wanted to be closer to his family and transferred to Chattanooga. Strange also made a position change and transitioned to the offensive line, initially at tackle before moving to left guard as a freshman because of team need. He took advantage of the extra year of NCAA eligibility from the pandemic and returned for his sixth season in 2021. Strange graduated with his degree in psychology (December 2020) and is pursuing his master's degree in engineering management. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl (eighth player in school history to receive an invite).

PRO DAY	6051	305	32 3/4	10	80 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (position drills only)

STRENGTHS: Excellent quickness and pad level from snap to set-up ... flexible lower body and does an excellent job repositioning his feet at contact to stand up defenders ... has adequate length and active hands with a flexible coil ... his punch placement is sharp and consistent ... at his most confident in the run game ... naturally aggressive in everything he does on the football field ... embraces his rugged, mean blocking demeanor and prides himself on his quest to finish every play ... has zero bad weight on his frame ... his intelligence is clear on and off the field (3.71 GPA in college and was named Academic All-Conference all six years) ... named a senior captain with outstanding football character — football matters to him ... collected 44 total starts in three positions in college.

WEAKNESSES: Has a lean-musclcd frame and lacks ideal mass or thickness for the trenches ... reliant on his fundamentals and can get bullied or jostled when his technique gets off schedule ... is a challenge for him to anchor (or re-anchor) vs. power ... his reset quickness lags a bit because of his tendency to lean into blocks ... feet can get overexcited at times in his pass sets, and he must develop more disciplined footwork ... can do a better job establishing and trusting his body angles ...

didn't have any functional experience on the offensive line before college ... will be a 24-year-old NFL rookie ... competed at the FCS level and didn't face top-tier talent on a weekly basis (of his 44 career starts, three came vs. Power 5 opponents).

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Chattanooga, Strange lined up primarily at left guard in offensive coordinator Joe Pizzo's zone-based spread scheme. A 250-pound defensive end out of high school, he had no offensive line experience when he enrolled, but he dedicated himself to the transition and plays like a throwback with his bare hands (no gloves), single-bar lineman facemask and nasty attitude. Strange, who is attempting to become the first Chattanooga player to be drafted in the top five rounds since Terrell Owens in 1996, commanded the NFL's attention with his 2021 performance vs. Kentucky, and he again rose to the occasion at the Senior Bowl, showing his versatility at both center and guard. His hands and feet need to be on time or defenders will take advantage, which will drastically lower his margin for error vs. NFL power. Overall, Strange struggles to recover once defenders gain the upper hand, but he works hard to stay balanced with his quick feet, strong hands and competitive toughness. He will be ready to compete for an NFL starting job (guard or center) in year one.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 73 overall)

5. LUKE FORTNER | Kentucky 6041 | 307 lbs. | rSR. Sylvania, Ohio (Northview) 5/15/1998 (age 23.95) #79

BACKGROUND: Luke Fortner, who is one of three children, was born in Cleveland and grew up in Sylvania (just outside of Toledo and close to the Michigan border). He attended Sylvania Northview High, where he was a four-year letterman and four-year starter, playing on both sides of the line of scrimmage. Fortner saw action at tackle, guard and center over his prep career. As a junior, he earned First Team All-League and Second Team All-District honors, splitting his playing time between tackle (left and right) and center. As a senior captain, Fortner was named District Lineman of the Year, Third Team All-State and Second Team All-Northwest Ohio for the second consecutive year. He also lettered in basketball at Northview.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Fortner was the No. 115 offensive tackle in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 68 recruit in the state of Ohio. He received offers from Akron, Cincinnati, Marshall, Maryland and Toledo. But Fortner committed to Kentucky during his junior year and was part of the same signing class as Benny Snell and Landon Young. His uncle (Don Svec) was an offensive lineman at Youngstown State (1987-90). Fortner started a podcast ("Social Distancing with Max and Luke") with his former roommate and teammate punter Max Duffy for patients at the Kentucky Children's Hospital. He graduated with his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering, his master's degree in mechanical engineering, and will graduate in May with a master's of business administration. Fortner took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned for a sixth season in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl before getting his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6037	304	33	9 7/8	80 3/4	-	-	-	29	-	-	-	31 (stood on Combine runs, broad, shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Wide-based blocker with a well-proportioned frame and adequate length ... quick to shoot his hands inside defenders ... keeps his elbows/hands tight, and his feet active to stay engaged ... flexible body movements to recover or seal on zone blocks ... flashes the upper body torque to remove defenders from their feet ... controlled at the second level to pick off moving targets ... no need to squint to see his toughness and smarts on tape ... Second Team CoSIDA All-American in 2021 and is on pace to earn his third degree (one bachelor's, two master's) from Kentucky this May ... coachable attitude and was named a team captain in 2021 ... started all 36 games the past three seasons across three different positions.

WEAKNESSES: His pads will rise, and he surrenders leverage early ... can get bullied at times, especially when his hands aren't on time ... adequate range with a small margin of error with his lateral steps to reach block ... lacks the twitch to cleanly respond and anchor to defenders on his shoulder ... needs to tweak a few bad habits like dropping his eyes at contact or allowing his hands to land wide (two holding penalties in 2021) ... struggles to consistently drive and get underneath defenders in the run game ... ejected for punching a Louisville player on a PAT try (November 2018) ... over-aged and will be a 24-year-old rookie.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Kentucky, Fortner was the center in former offensive coordinator Liam Coen's zone-based scheme. After starting 23 games at guard during his junior and senior years, he returned for a sixth season in Lexington and moved to center where he produced the tape of a draftable, future NFL player. Fortner has guard-center versatility with his wide base and contact balance to anchor and keep his strong hands engaged. He is an alert player with enough lateral quickness to react with sudden defenders, but he has very little room for error, or defenders will gain leverage. Overall, Fortner can get overpowered at times, but he rides out the storm and is an assignment-sound, high-intangible player. He projects as a starting center in an NFL zone-blocking scheme, offering depth at guard.

6. ZACH TOM | Wake Forest 6042 | 304 lbs. | rSR. Prairieville, La. (Catholic) 3/26/1999 (age 23.09) #50

BACKGROUND: Zachary "Zach" Tom, who has an older brother, was born and raised in Baton Rouge, where he started playing football at the youth level and then at St. George Middle School. He attended Baton Rouge Catholic High, where he was a four-year letterman on the offensive line. Tom earned All-Area honors as a junior left tackle in 2015. As a senior, he helped lead Baton Rouge Catholic to a 10-0 regular season in 2016 before falling in the playoffs. Tom earned First Team All-State, All-District, and All-Metro honors as a senior. He also lettered in track and was the state champion shot putter as a senior with a personal-best 56'6". Tom finished second at states in the indoor shot put (56'9").

A three-star recruit out of high school, Tom was the No. 150 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 56 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He received offers from Louisiana and Louisiana Monroe and initially committed to Southern Miss (where his brother played) prior to his senior year. Wake Forest entered the picture late, and Tom flipped to the Demon Deacons after his senior season. His older brother (Cameron) was a four-year starter at Southern Miss (2013-16) and went undrafted in the 2017 NFL Draft, but has spent the past five years in the NFL, mostly on practice squads with the New Orleans Saints (2017-20) and Miami Dolphins (2021). His father (Michael), who was born in Nigeria, is a professor at LSU. His mother (Vanessa) is also an educator at LSU. Tom graduated cum laude with his degree in business and enterprise management (May 2021) and is enrolled in Wake Forest's MBA program. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6042	307	33 1/4	10 1/4	80 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	24 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Moves with the athletic footwork and lateral quicks to cut off rush angles ... his patience and coordination in his pass sets really stand out ... shoots his hands into the frame of rushers and stubbornly keeps them there ... athletic puller with the body control to execute at the second level ... trusts his technique to reset and get out of jams ... plays with the instincts of a veteran blocker, making sound adjustments ... determined and dogged ... the son of educators, his intelligence is clear on and off the field (three-year All-ACC Academic team) ... durable and started every game the past three seasons ... has functional starting experience at both left tackle and center.

WEAKNESSES: Barrel-chested in his upper half, but lean in his lowers ... questionable anchor and core strength will make it tough for quality recovery vs. NFL power ... lacks elite arm length, and falls off too many blocks ... can be jostled when his punch misfires, and savvy rushers will catch him leaning ... average leg drive in the run game and will struggle to redirect NFL nose tackles ... needs to better feel stunts and delayed blitzes ... penalties popped up frequently on his 2021 film (four false starts, three holding calls) ... some teams view him as a center-only prospect.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Wake Forest, Tom started at left tackle in head coach Dave Clawson's RPO-based offense. He started every game the past three seasons, initially at center before kicking out to left tackle the past two seasons, where he established himself as one of the top blockers in the ACC. Tom displays coordinated movement skills and trusted technique as a pass blocker. He uses strong, independent hands, but his average core strength leaves him trailing and falling off blocks. Overall, Tom's lack of ideal mass and length will lead to him losing block connections, but his body control and intelligence are terrific foundation traits for the center position. He projects as an NFL backup who can become a starter.

7. BEN BROWN | Ole Miss 6051 | 312 lbs. | rSR. Vicksburg, Miss. (St. Aloysius) 5/19/1998 (age 23.94) #55

BACKGROUND: Timothy Benjamin "Ben" Brown grew up in Vicksburg and started playing pee-wee football at age 6. He attended St. Aloysius High, where he was a multi-sport standout and started on the offensive line from the first game of his freshman season. After receiving All-County and All-Region honors as a junior, Brown played both ways as a senior left tackle and defensive tackle, finishing with 37 tackles and 1.0 sack. On offense, he was named First Team All-State as he led an unit that ran for 2,596 yards and averaged 7.2 yards per carry. He also lettered in basketball, track (27'6.5 shot put) and powerlifting (placed fourth in the state in 2014).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Brown was the No. 81 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 17 recruit in the state of Mississippi. He received interest from other SEC programs, but he grew up dreaming of playing for Ole Miss and committed almost immediately after he was offered. Brown became the seventh member of his family to sign with the Rebels, including his father (Tim), who played on the offensive line (1988-89), and both of his grandfathers. His paternal grandfather (Allen) was a First Team All-American (1964) and won two Super Bowls as a tight end with the Green Bay Packers (1966, 1967). His maternal grandfather (Bobby Robinson), uncle (Burkes), great uncle (Jerry) and his father's cousin (Alton) also suited up for the Rebels. Ben proposed to his fiancée (Juliana Adams) in February 2021. He graduated cum laude with his degree in exercise science (December 2020) and is pursuing his master's in health promotion.

STRENGTHS: Prototypical size, build and length ... wide-based blocker who keeps his shoulders and feet aligned ... his body strength is evident at contact, showing both efficiency and grip strength with his hands ... anchors well and doesn't allow nose tackles to uproot and move him ... coordinated shuffle in short spaces, and works well as a tandem blocker ... powerful run blocker and looks to be a battering ram (see 2021 Tennessee tape) ... highly decorated in the classroom with the required intelligence for the NFL ... started 40 consecutive games before his midseason injury as a senior ... has double-digit starts in college at both guard and center.

WEAKNESSES: Gets himself in trouble when he overextends and bends at the waist ... will struggle to last on an island to his average athletic traits ... moving targets will give him trouble ... needs to improve his lower body flexibility to quickly recover and re-leverage his base ... he would benefit from better consistency with his punch timing and placement ... has stiff knees as a run blocker and must improve his control and technique in his fits ... his pads will rise as the play progresses ... medicals need to be checked out after he missed the final seven games and most of the pre-draft process because of a torn distal biceps tendon that required surgery (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Ole Miss, Brown was the starting right guard in head coach Lane Kiffin's zone-based scheme. A high school left tackle, he moved between guard and center during his time with the Rebels, starting 40 consecutive games before his biceps injury as a senior. Brown has vise grips for hands, and he works hard to stay connected both in pass protection and in the run game. However, his lower body will be late reacting to twitchy defensive linemen, leaving him off-balance in his attempts to recover. Overall, Brown isn't a top-tier athlete and must play with better technical consistency, but he has the play strength and position flexibility to secure a backup role on the interior in the NFL.

8. DOHNOVAN WEST | Arizona State 6032 | 296 lbs. | JR. Mission Hills, Calif. (Bishop Alemany) 5/19/2001 (age 20.94) #61

BACKGROUND: Dohnovan West grew up in Palmdale (about an hour north of Los Angeles) and started playing pee-wee football at age 8. He enrolled at Bishop Alemany High, a Catholic school in the San Fernando Valley, and played on both the offensive and defensive lines as a freshman on junior varsity. West moved up to varsity as a sophomore and started at right tackle. He moved over to left tackle for his final two prep seasons and had his best year as a senior, leading Bishop Alemany to seven wins and a postseason appearance. West earned First Team All-Conference and League Co-Offensive Lineman MVP honors in 2018, not allowing a sack. West also lettered in wrestling at Bishop Alemany.

A three-star recruit out of high school, West was the No. 11 center in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 78 recruit in the state of California. He took official visits to Boise State, Nebraska and Utah, but he was drawn to Arizona State and signed with the Sun Devils, enrolling early in January 2019. West elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6033	309	33 1/8	9 1/4	78 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	4.81	7.82	21 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Wide-based, workable frame with room to get stronger ... efficient lateral quickness as a pass blocker ... shoots his hands, locks out and doesn't budge, halting the momentum of rushers ... aggressive run blocker with strong grip/hands ... works his feet and hips into position after he connects with his upper half (zero holding penalties in his career) ... has the mobility to get out in front on zone runs and cut off defender angles ... stays controlled in space with an accurate connect rate ... was 275 pounds when he enrolled and has steadily improved his body ... his coaches say he treats every day like an opportunity to get better ... durable and started 29 consecutive games in his career ... started multiple games at each of the three interior offensive line positions.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal mass and arm length to combat NFL defenders ... average anchor strength, and cracks start to form in his foundation vs. bull rushers ... needs to rely more on his lower body bend to leverage the point of attack ... has trouble uprooting linemen when he allows his pads to rise ... will linger, and his timing becomes off vs. reach blocks and when pulling outside ... occasionally late to diagnose stunting action ... played through a thumb injury since his freshman season (West: "I was really blocking with four fingers ... ") and finally had surgery to fix the issue after the 2021 regular season (December 2021), missing the bowl game (only game he missed at ASU).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Arizona State, West was the starting center in former offensive coordinator Zak Hill's multiple run scheme. He expected to redshirt in 2019 but was thrust into immediate action at center (a position he had never played) and started the 2019 season opener. Despite bouncing between the three interior line positions during his three seasons in Tempe, West played at a high level thanks to his quickness, control (penalties were rare on film) and ability to balance being both patient and aggressive. He has a sharp, forceful punch but only average strength and will have trouble sustaining blocks vs. long-limbed NFL defenders. Overall, West will have trouble leveraging or neutralizing point-of-attack power in the NFL, but he displays efficient movement skills and handwork as a pass blocker and in the run game. Similar in ways to Isaac Seumalo, he has low-end starting potential as a center with guard versatility.

9. ALEC LINDSTROM | Boston College 6033 | 296 lbs. | rSR. Dudley, Mass. (Shepherd Hill) 7/7/1998 (age 23.81) #72

BACKGROUND: Alec Lindstrom, who is one of six children, grew up in southern Massachusetts and didn't play organized football until high school, but learned the sport growing up with his offensive lineman father. He enrolled at Shepherd Hill Regional High, where his father served as the head coach for 16 years (2001-16). Lindstrom spent his freshman and sophomore years as a backup guard behind his older brother. A two-year starter, he played on both the offensive and defensive lines and earned First Team All-State honors as a senior (tackle and guard), leading an offensive line that helped the offense rush for more than 3,300 yards in 2016. On defense, Lindstrom finished his final season with 66 tackles, 7.5 sacks and two forced fumbles.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Lindstrom was the No. 33 center in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Massachusetts. He received only two FBS offers and committed to Boston College over UMass, following in his brother's footsteps. His older brother (Chris Jr.) played on the offensive line at Boston College (2015-18) and was a first-round pick in the 2019 NFL Draft by the Atlanta Falcons. His father (Chris Sr.) was a Hall of Fame defensive lineman at Boston University (1978-81) and eighth-round pick in the 1982 NFL Draft by the St. Louis Cardinals. His uncle (Dave) was an All-American defensive end at Boston University and a sixth-round pick in the 1977 NFL Draft by the Kansas City Chiefs (1978-85). His mother (Dawn) passed away in December 2021 after battling cancer. Lindstrom graduated with his degree in management and leadership (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Highly intelligent player who puts himself in position to succeed ... frames his blocks and shoots his hands to make sound connections in pass protection ... has the lower body muscle memory to reset and battle vs. bull rushers ... smooth out of his stance to pull, reach or climb ... physical demeanor and looks to finish each rep ... his weight went from 170 pounds as a high school freshman to 230 pounds when he enrolled at Boston College to 295 pounds as a senior ... excellent communicator to get the offense on the same page (teammate Zion Johnson: "He knows what play needs to be called and how it needs to be ID'd.") ... started all 36 games the past three seasons at center.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks elite size, length and hand size (and likely maxed out) ... not going to generate consistent movement in the run game ... lacks the pop in his hands to create knockback or scoop anchored defenders ... too easily rocked backward on his heels when his posture, pad level and leverage aren't precise ... lacks lateral explosiveness ... rigid in his redirect and will be late to counter twists ... not as rangy as expected for a mobile blocker ... guilty of 14 combined penalties during his three seasons as a starter, including three holding calls as a senior ... didn't log a snap at a position besides center in college and doesn't offer position flexibility.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Boston College, Lindstrom was a mainstay at center in former offensive coordinator Frank Cignetti's zone-based (inside/outside) scheme. A 230-pound center when he enrolled, he made his first college start in 2018 next to his brother (Chris Lindstrom) and grew into a First Team All-ACC performer the past two seasons. Lindstrom is most comfortable in pass protection, where he can use his balanced movements and reset to shield the pocket. In the run game, he does a nice job on the move to reach/scoop defenders and strain through contact, but he doesn't have the play strength to create vertical displacement. Overall, Lindstrom is an average athlete and lacks ideal power or leg drive, but he is a cerebral blocker with the pedigree and processing skills to execute his assignments. He projects as a potential NFL backup.

10. DAWSON DEATON | Texas Tech

Frisco, Texas (Frisco)

5/6/1999 (age 22.98)

#50

BACKGROUND: Dawson Deaton, who is one of three children, grew up in Frisco and attended Frisco High, where he was a four-year letterman. After seeing time at offensive tackle as a freshman, he moved to a tight end role in 2014 as a sophomore. Deaton moved to center as a junior and earned Second Team All-District honors. As a senior in 2016, he saw action at both center and guard and helped Frisco to an 8-3 record and playoff appearance for an offense that rushed for 2,861 yards and 31 touchdowns. He earned First Team All-District honors as a senior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Deaton was the No. 6 center in the 2017 recruiting class (three spots behind Creed Humphrey) and the No. 86 recruit in the state of Texas. He received 20 scholarship offers and narrowed that to a top five of Army, Houston, Kansas, Mississippi State and Texas Tech. As the son of a pair of Texas Tech grads, Deaton grew up rooting for the Red Raiders, which led him to signing with them along with his high school teammate Jack Anderson, who was picked in the seventh round of the 2021 NFL Draft by the Buffalo Bills. Deaton's daughter (Parker) was born in October 2019. His older brother (Jaxon) played on the offensive line at Army (2016-19). Deaton graduated with his degree in marketing (December 2020) and is enrolled in the graduate program. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Athletic blocker who can efficiently unlock his lower body flexibility ... functional lateral footwork in his pass sets with the body control for sudden adjustments ... processes things quickly and patiently and doesn't play panicked ... developed recognition skills vs. stunts and delayed pressures ... quick with his hands for early connection ... continues to rework his hands post-contact to adjust his positioning ... voted a two-time team captain ... earned Academic First Team All-Big 12 honors each of the past four seasons ... experienced with double-digit starts at center each of the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Top-heavy body type with lean lowers ... inconsistent leverage in the run game, and lacks the leg power to drive defenders off their spot ... only average length, and leaves his chest vulnerable to power ... his hand placement often lands wide, sacrificing his pad level as he attempts to recover ... has the hand strength to snatch, but the sustain is inconsistent (two holding penalties on the 2021 tapes studied) ... finds himself off balance at times in space when working up a level ... has a history of minor shoulder injuries that need to be checked out ... scouts say he cross-trained at guard and tackle in practice, but is likely a center-only in the NFL.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas Tech, Deaton was a staple at center in former offensive coordinator Sonny Cumbie's version of the Air Raid offense. He was a two-time team captain for the Red Raiders and earned All-Big 12 honors three consecutive years at center. In the run game, Deaton tends to rely more on athleticism than power and will need to play with improved leverage and balance through contact to hold up vs. NFL defensive linemen. As a pass blocker, he moves well laterally and keeps his head on a swivel (pressures allowed were hard to find on his 2021 tape). Overall, Deaton isn't a drive blocker, and he battles anchor issues, but he is a solid blocker in the run game and in pass protection thanks to his movements, smarts and patience. He can be an NFL backup center in the right situation.

SUMMARY: Doug Kramer Jr. started playing tackle football in fifth grade and continued as a three-year starter at Hinsdale Central High, where he earned conference offensive lineman of the year honors as a senior. A three-star recruit, he grew up in an Illinois family (his parents' alma mater) and was ready to walk on until he received his dream offer weeks before 2016 signing day. Aside from a few missed games because of injury, he started every game the past five years with more than 3,000 career snaps on offense (100% of those at center). Kramer is quick with his snap and step and uses his lower body bend and natural leverage to stay under his blocks. He is technically sound and recovers well, but his short arms will keep him at a disadvantage vs. rushers across his face and long defenders in the run game. Overall, Kramer is undersized and doesn't offer position flex, but he is quick, smart and the type of grinder capable of carving out a multi-contract NFL career.

SUMMARY: Nicolas "Nick" Ford, the son of a former wide receiver at Cal (Michael), gained 120 pounds while at San Pedro High and developed into an offensive and defensive lineman, posting 56 tackles and 10.0 sacks as a senior. A three-star recruit, he committed to Utah over Washington and moved to offense full time during his redshirt year. He proved to be a versatile blocker over his Utes career, logging at least one start at each of the five offensive line positions the past four years. Ford is able to tap into his power in the run game when he plays with consistent pad level and control, but things quickly fall apart when his timing and technique are disjointed. As a pass blocker, he establishes his base and plays with violent hands, but needs to speed up his feet to mirror his hands and eyes. Overall, Ford must eliminate the sloppy habits, but he is nimble in short areas with the flashes of power, long arms and interior position flexibility to compete for a backup role.

SUMMARY: Luke Wattenberg was a three-sport standout at JSerra Catholic High, including a four-year letterman on the varsity football team. He earned first team all-state and league lineman of the year honors as a senior (played left and right tackle). A four-star recruit, he committed to Washington over Stanford and worked himself into the starting lineup as a redshirt freshman. He started a school-record 48 consecutive games during the past five seasons, initially at left tackle then left guard and then center the last two seasons. With his footwork and hips, Wattenberg is a smooth mover and trusts the timing and placement of his hands, but he routinely gives ground vs. bull rushers because of his tall pads and faulty anchor. Although he can leverage lanes as a run blocker, his average play strength isn't ideal. Overall, Wattenberg will struggle vs. point-of-attack power, but he plays quick and rugged with the guard-center experience that could help land him on a roster.

SUMMARY: James Empey was a three-year starter at American Fork High and earned first team all-state honors as a senior tackle and guard, adding 62 tackles on defense. A three-star recruit, he committed to Utah, but after serving his two-year religious mission in Lisbon, Portugal, he flipped to BYU, where his father (Mike) was the offensive line coach. James started every game as a freshman and sophomore and 41 career games in total, but he battled ankle issues his final two seasons, missing 10 games. Empey displays controlled steps post-snap and is quick to achieve a balanced, low position to engage defenders. He is efficient as a zone blocker with stout hands to keep his man occupied, but he shows core strength issues and struggles to create torque as a finisher. He is likely a center only at the NFL level. Overall, Empey is a balanced mover with superb mental processing, but his lack of length, base strength and explosive traits will be tough to overcome in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Brock Hoffman was a first team all-state center as a senior at Statesville High with 92 pancakes in 2016. A two-star recruit, he committed to Coastal Carolina where he started every game as a freshman and sophomore. He transferred to Virginia Tech prior to the 2019 season, and his hardship waiver to play right away was denied (his mother underwent surgery to have a brain tumor removed in 2017). He played in 23 games for the Hokies the past two seasons, earning All-ACC honors both years. Hoffman plays with decent length and heavy hands to jar defenders at contact and create movement in the run game. However, he plays too much on his heels because of his narrow stance and light anchor. His range is limited, and he struggles to redirect or recover vs. quickness, leaving him off balanced. Overall, Hoffman has veteran awareness and handwork and competes with a nasty streak, but his below-average athleticism and body control will hamstring him.

1. AIDAN HUTCHINSON | Michigan 6065 | 260 lbs. | SR. Plymouth, Mich. (Divine Child) 8/9/2000 (age 21.72) #97

BACKGROUND: Aidan Hutchinson, who is the youngest of three children, was born and raised in southeast Michigan and grew up playing soccer and flag football, but didn't play tackle football until the seventh grade (his father wanted him to wait until he felt he was ready). He attended Divine Child High, a Catholic school in Dearborn, Mich., and played on the junior varsity as a 160-pound freshman. Hutchinson was a three-year varsity starter at defensive end, while also playing offensive line and tight end on offense and long snapper on special teams. Over his junior and senior seasons, he led Divine Child to back-to-back Catholic League Titles. After posting 11.0 sacks as a junior, Hutchinson finished his senior year with 65 tackles, 27.0 tackles for loss, 4.0 sacks, one forced fumble and one blocked kick, adding 38 catches for 419 yards and eight touchdowns at tight end. He was named to the 2017 All-Catholic team and received an invitation to the 2018 U.S. Army All-American Game (four tackles, two sacks in that game). Hutchinson also lettered in lacrosse at Divine Child and was a two-time team captain and earned Second Team All-State honors as a junior.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hutchinson was the No. 6 strongside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Michigan. His first scholarship offer came from LSU during his sophomore year in high school. Hutchinson also considered offers from Michigan State, Wisconsin and others, but he grew up a diehard Michigan fan and officially committed prior to his senior season. His father (Chris) was a defensive lineman and captain at Michigan (1989-92), earning All-American and team MVP honors in 1992 (he is now an emergency room physician in Royal Oak, Mich.). His mother (Melissa) and both of his older sisters (Mia and Aria) also attended Michigan. He is not related to Pro Football Hall of Famer and former Michigan guard Steve Hutchinson. Hutchinson chose not to play in the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6062	268	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	28 (height, weight, bench only)

STRENGTHS: Balanced, flexible athlete ... rushes downhill to consistently convert his speed to power ... attacks with energetic hands to stun/swat blocks and create leverage points ... posted the quickest "swim rush right" time at the Combine (1.69 seconds) ... skillfully strings together his rush, including aggressive secondary moves (swipe, swim, etc.) to win one-on-one ... agile lower body to slide and create rush lanes ... hyper-alert play style with the ability to see through blocks and quickly pursue the ball ... stout vs. the run with the physical hands to stack and shed ... ball carriers go lifeless when he strikes as a tackler, and missed tackles are rare ... intangibles are off the charts and voted a team captain as a junior and senior ... intelligence shows on and off the field: First Team Academic All-American and finalist for the William V. Campbell Trophy (Academic Heisman) ... football lifer with elite preparation and practice habits (Hutchinson: "I'm willing to die for this, I swear. I want it more than anyone, I promise you that.") ... plays with maniacal effort and chase skills ... inherited his father's "mental strength and motor," according to his mother ... has experience lining up inside the B-gaps ... finished second in the voting for the 2021 Heisman Trophy (just the fourth defensive player to finish first or second in Heisman Trophy history) ... outstanding backfield production over his two healthy seasons as a starter, combining for 120 pressures and 18.5 sacks over his 27 starts in 2019 and 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average arm length, especially for a player with his height ... arc acceleration and cornering speed are average by NFL standards ... his move-to-move transitions can be slowed at contact if his pad-level is high and he doesn't hit those important leverage points ... there are times he relies on hustle instead of technique in his rush setup ... improved timing with his counters will help his overall rush plan ... had his 2020 season cut short because of a fracture in his right ankle that required surgery (November 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Michigan, Hutchinson lined up primarily as an edge rusher in former defensive coordinator Mike Macdonald's multiple front, standing up and rushing from the left and right side. Considered a mid-first rounder entering the 2021 season, he surpassed expectations with his All-American senior year, finishing third in the FBS with a single-season Michigan record 14.0 sacks. Hutchinson wins in multiple ways, with the power in his upper half to overwhelm blockers but also the agile feet and hand technique to quickly disengage. He is wired the right way with the competitive play personality that raises the level of his teammates (Michigan head coach Jim Harbaugh: "He is one of my absolute favorite guys that I've coached and for all the right reasons."). Overall, Hutchinson doesn't have the same bend or arc skills as the Bosa brothers, but he wins with similar quickness, power and skilled hand play to be productive as both a pass rusher and run defender. He projects as a disruptive, scheme-proof NFL starter.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 1 overall)

2. TRAVON WALKER | Georgia 6050 | 272 lbs. | JR. Thomaston, Ga. (Upson-Lee) 12/18/2000 (age 21.36) #44

BACKGROUND: Yuri "Travon" Walker, who has two sisters, was born and raised in Thomaston (where his parents grew up), which is about 70 miles south of Atlanta. He started playing sports, mainly basketball and football, at the youth level and into middle school (also played the trombone in band). Walker attended Upson-Lee High, where he was a three-sport letterman. Playing all over the front seven on defense (also saw snaps at running back and tight end), he earned Honorable Mention All-State honors as a sophomore and junior, finishing with 37 tackles, 3.0 sacks, and two forced fumbles in 2017. As a senior, Walker earned U.S. Army All-American honors on the defensive line and added six touchdowns (three rushing, three receiving) on offense. He was a four-year starter on the basketball team and led Upson-Lee to 75 consecutive wins, including back-to-back Class 4A state championships his sophomore and junior years. As a senior power forward, Walker averaged 16.0 points and 12.0 rebounds per game, finishing his career with 1,109 points and 1,023 rebounds. He also lettered in track (discus and shot put).

A five-star recruit out of high school, Walker was the No. 3 defensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 22 overall) and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Georgia. He cut down his lengthy offer list to Alabama, Clemson, Georgia and South Carolina before committing to his home-state Bulldogs the summer before his senior year. His father (Stead) served in the Marines and raised Travon with that same sense of discipline. Walker's real first name is Yuri (same as his father) but has always gone by Travon. He decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6047	270	35 1/8	10 3/4	84 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Built like a brick house with his dense, muscular frame ... remarkable fluidity, initial burst and overall athleticism for his size ... has outstanding speed and routinely chases down his prey from behind ... doesn't look awkward dropping in space or quickly changing directions ... long and powerful, extending into blockers to snatch/shock with his hands ... sets a hard edge and out-flanks blockers to contain outside run lanes ... has the power in his rush to bully and walk back blockers into the pocket ... able to use the blocker's weight against him with his engage-and-toss technique ... violent tackler, and ball carriers remember his hits ... the son of a Marine, developed a sense of discipline and routine throughout his upbringing ... was a regular on kickoff coverage thanks to his rare speed, logging 261 career special teams snaps ... has the frame to comfortably carry 300 pounds if desired ... versatile experience, playing all over the Georgia defensive line and dropping into space ... grew into a leader as a junior (head coach Kirby Smart: "I am really proud of what he is doing in terms of leadership for our team.") ... was part of a loaded Georgia defense, but his defensive snaps steadily increased each season: freshman (16.2), sophomore (22.2), junior (39.7).

WEAKNESSES: Raw with his setup and execution of pass rush moves ... needs to be more efficient and strategic at the top of his rush ... rangy run defender, but has a bad habit of over-pursuing his angles and losing field leverage ... still developing his recognition skills vs. the run and should be able to play even faster ... needs to better protect his lower body vs. cut blocks ... missed time as a freshman because of left wrist surgery (October 2019) and played with a club on the same hand early in the 2020 season ... part of a deep rotation most of his Georgia career ... mediocre career sack production.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Georgia, Walker lined up primarily as the field defensive end in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme but logged snaps everywhere up and down the line from nose tackle to a "Leo" role. Although he was part of a heavy rotation his first two years and doesn't have the career production expected of a top pick, he impacts the game in a number of ways and was an important part of Georgia's 2021 national championship. Walker has rare movement skills for a 275-pounder, including an explosive first step to shoot through gaps, cross the face of blockers or chase down plays. He wasn't asked to be a consistent outside rusher in the Bulldogs' scheme, but that helped him develop into a strong run defender, disengaging and leveraging blocks. Overall, Walker is still developing his sequencing plan as a pass rusher, but he has freaky athletic traits for his size and offers the natural power and length to consistently win his match-ups. He projects as a scheme-diverse front-seven player with the potential to be one of the best NFL defenders from this draft class.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 4 overall)

3. KAYVON THIBODEAUX | Oregon 6040 | 254 lbs. | JR. Los Angeles, Calif. (Oaks Christian) 12/15/2000 (age 21.37) #5

BACKGROUND: Kayvon Thibodeaux (TIB-uh-dough) was raised with his mother (Loice) in South Central Los Angeles and started playing football at age 8. Because of his size, he initially played on the offensive line before moving to fullback and linebacker and then defensive end in the seventh grade. Thibodeaux originally enrolled at Junipero Serra High, a private program, as a freshman. But because of the lack of varsity playing time, he transferred toward the end of the season to Susan Miller Dorsey High, a public school in the Crenshaw District, and joined the varsity football team for the 2015 playoffs. As a sophomore, he led Dorsey to an 11-3 record with 27.0 tackles for loss and 17.0 sacks and was named his section's Defensive Lineman of the Year. Toward the end of his sophomore year, Thibodeaux and his mother moved to Woodland Hills in the San Fernando Valley, and he transferred again, this time to Oaks Christian, a private school in Westlake Village (his mother felt he wasn't being challenged academically at Dorsey). He played for head coach Charles Collins (former NFL assistant coach) and defensive line coach Greg Townsend (13-year NFL defensive end and two-time Pro Bowler) at Oaks Christian. As a junior, Thibodeaux posted 99 tackles, 28.0 tackles for loss and 20.0 sacks to earn multiple Defensive Player of the Year honors, adding nine catches for 134 yards and three touchdowns as a tight end on offense. As a senior, he was named the 2018 USA Today High School Defensive Player of the Year and earned multiple First Team All-American honors. Thibodeaux finished his final season with 54 tackles, 18.0 sacks and five forced fumbles. He registered 54.0 sacks in his four seasons of high school. He also lettered in basketball and track as a freshman at Dorsey.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Thibodeaux was the No. 2 weakside defensive end and No. 2 recruit overall in the 2019 recruiting class behind only Nolan Smith (Georgia). He received his first scholarship offer (Utah) the summer after his freshman year and had his choice of any college program in the country. Thibodeaux had a final five of Alabama, Florida State, LSU, Oregon and USC and committed to Mario Cristobal and the Ducks because of his desire to stay at defensive end and the school's understanding of his "interests outside of football." He elected to skip his senior season and Oregon's bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Springy, instinctive athlete with long arms ... speed rush and forward lean softens the outside shoulder of blockers ... excellent flexibility and cornering skills ... relies on a quick jab step to gain leverage and set up his stab/swipe/rip moves ... able to convert his speed to power ... shows improved timing and nuance mid-rush, taking away his stab once he sells power to get blockers leaning in space ... rarely locked up thanks to his agile feet, allowing him to miss blockers or explode on inside moves ... physical vs. the run to hold his ground on the edges and contain ... arrives full-speed at the ball carrier, creating violent collisions ... has a strategic mind both on and off the field (avid chess player and created his own cryptocurrency, titled $JREAM) ... charismatic individual and a vocal leader with his teammates ... coaches call him mature and describe him as an "educated information seeker" (head coach Mario Cristobal: "I think he's a hungry, driven guy.") ... highly decorated career and led the Ducks in tackles for loss and sacks each of the past three seasons ... his 35.5 tackles for loss ranked fourth-most in the FBS over that span (2019-21).

WEAKNESSES: Narrow torso, lean legs and doesn't have an ideal build by NFL standards ... needs to add more bulk to his body ... still developing his rhythm and plan at the top of his rush ... needs to improve his finishing skills as a tackler, especially in the pocket ... flows with the action and can be late to dissect play design ... allowed running backs to separate from him when dropping in space ... plays strong, but stack-and-shed mechanics are just average ... gets himself in trouble with after-the-whistle plays and needs to play smarter overall (flagged 12 times over his career, including seven times in 2021) ... didn't face many high-level offensive tackles in 2021 ... missed two games because of a left ankle sprain (September 2021) ... will rub some the wrong way (NFL scout: "He's a confident player, but the arrogance gets old quickly. It's not an endearing trait.").

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oregon, Thibodeaux lined up as a boundary pass rush linebacker in former defensive coordinator Tim DeRuyter's 3-4 base scheme. The highest-ranked recruit in Oregon history, he helped the Ducks to three consecutive Pac-12 championship games (two wins) and led the team in tackles for loss and sacks all three seasons, becoming the fourth unanimous All-American in school history as a junior. Although he needs to continue filling out his frame, Thibodeaux is physical vs. the run and rushes with upfield urgency and cornering skills to skirt blockers. His go-to move is a powerful jab step that helps open up his options, but he is still learning how to efficiently patch together his rush moves. Overall, Thibodeaux isn't a fluid mover, and his impact runs hot-and-cold, but he understands how to create leverage as a pass rusher with his length, flexibility and hand strength. He draws comparisons to Jadeveon Clowney with NFL teams and has the talent to develop into a high-end starter if he stays committed.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 8 overall)

4. JERMAINE JOHNSON | Florida State 6045 | 254 lbs. | rSR. Eden Prairie, Minn. (Eden Prairie) 1/8/1999 (age 23.31) #11

BACKGROUND: Jermaine Johnson II grew up in the Minneapolis suburbs and attended Eden Prairie High. He played three years of varsity football as a defensive lineman and wide receiver while also lettering in basketball and track. As a senior, Johnson recorded 267 receiving yards and six touchdown catches on offense and 82 tackles, 15.0 tackles for loss and 10.0 sacks in 2016.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Johnson was the No. 105 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 11 recruit in the state of Minnesota. He received interest from Louisville and nearby Minnesota, but his poor academics (1.9 GPA) prevented Division I programs from offering him a scholarship (Johnson: "I didn't handle what I was supposed to. It was just bad grades and making bad decisions."). In 2017, Johnson enrolled at Independence Community College in southeastern Kansas, where he was featured on the Netflix series 'Last Chance U,' and produced 12.5 sacks over two seasons. A four-star JUCO recruit, Johnson was the No. 1 JUCO recruit in the 2019 recruiting class and received offers from Oregon, Texas and USC before committing to Georgia. Looking for more playing time, he entered the transfer portal after two seasons in Athens and signed with Florida State, where he took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility rule because of the pandemic. His older brother (Vadell) played wide receiver at Independence Community College. Johnson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6043	260	33 3/4	9 5/8	83 1/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	21 (stood on Combine runs; no shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Prototypical frame and length ... uses his lateral agility and strong hands in chorus to sidestep blockers and capture the corner ... his go-to moves are a powerful swipe/rip and timely long-arm stab ... plays behind his strong punch and lets his long arms work for him as a pass rusher ... stride length keeps blockers on their toes ... alert and physical in the run game ... takes accurate pursuit angles with an open-field burst to close ... able to retrace and find the football ... hit, lift, drive tackler and uses his length to lasso ball carriers in space ... plays with outstanding effort, and the added snaps as a senior weren't too much for him (defensive snaps jumped from 27.0 per game in 2020 to 61.3 in 2021) ... teammates call him a "first in, last out" and "right attitude" type of guy ... highly productive senior season with Florida State, leading the ACC in tackles for loss and sacks (also led all Power 5 defensive linemen in tackles).

WEAKNESSES: Upright, high-cut athlete ... tall center of gravity disrupts his balance and change of direction skills ... average burst to start and average fluidity to finish ... needs to introduce more trickery in his rush plan ... eagerness to get his hands involved leads to wasted, inefficient movements ... piled up the sacks in 2021, but his pass rush win rate (14.1 percent) was mediocre ... can get caught playing high in the run game ... must improve shed tactics once locked up ... only one season as a full-time starter at the FBS level.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Florida State, Johnson lined up as the field defensive end in defensive coordinator Adam Fuller's four-man front. Considered a key member of Georgia's front-seven (third on the team in sacks in 2020), he bet on himself by transferring to Tallahassee to be a full-time starter, and he responded with a career year in 2021, including an ACC-best 18.0 tackles for loss and 12.0 sacks. Johnson is a long, athletic edge defender with the quick feet and natural instincts to win as a pass rusher and make stops vs. the run. Although he can be too segmented and upright in his rush attack, his motor runs hot, and his swipe/rip/stab moves are angry. Overall, Johnson has average get-off, but his length, agility and active hands lead to disruption as both a pass rusher and run defender. He projects as an every-down NFL starter.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 11 overall)

5. GEORGE KARLAFTIS | Purdue 6036 | 266 lbs. | JR. West Lafayette, Ind. (West Lafayette) 4/3/2001 (age 21.07) #5

BACKGROUND: George Karlaftis (CAR-loft-tis), who is the oldest of four children, was born and raised in Athens, Greece, where he was a standout goalkeeper on Greece's 16-and-under national water polo team. In June 2014, his father (Matt), who was a native of Greece and an accomplished professor at the National Technical University of Athens, died unexpectedly from a heart attack at 44. His mother (Amy) moved the family halfway across the globe to her hometown West Lafayette, Ind., to be closer to her family (after meeting and falling in love while studying at Purdue, Matt and Amy moved to Greece, married, and started a family). Karlaftis, who spoke primarily Greek growing up, was 13 and in eighth grade when they moved to the United States and he tried football for the first time. He attended West Lafayette High and spent his freshman year on the bench, where he learned the game. As a sophomore, Karlaftis saw his hard work pay off with 113 tackles and 13.0 sacks. As a senior, he led West Lafayette to a 15-0 record and the 2018 Class 3A state championship. Karlaftis finished his senior year with 106 tackles, 56.0 tackles for loss and 17.5 sacks to earn Indiana Class 3A Player of the Year honors and an invite to the U.S. Army All-American Bowl, where he received the national Defensive Player of the Year honor. He finished his prep career with 84.0 tackles for loss and 41.0 sacks. Karlaftis also lettered in basketball and track at West Lafayette, where he was the back-to-back state champion in the shot put (59 feet 5 1/2 inches as a sophomore, 60 feet 1/2 inch as a junior). He didn't have a chance to make it three consecutive state championships because he enrolled early at Purdue.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Karlaftis was the No. 4 strongside defensive end in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit from the state of Indiana. He received offers from almost every major program, including Alabama, Michigan, Notre Dame, Ohio State and USC. However, Karlaftis lived a mile away from the Purdue campus, and the family connections to the university helped lead him to the Boilermakers (he attended Purdue games since he was a toddler when they would visit family in the states). His father was an accomplished collegiate athlete at Miami (1990-94), throwing the javelin on the track and field team and walking on to the football team (a head injury that required surgery ended his football career). His younger brother (Yanni) just finished his freshman year as a linebacker at Purdue. Karlaftis elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He also skipped Purdue's 2021 bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Rushes with a quick first step and relentless energy ... not only shows physical, booming hands, but knows what to do with them ... shows bull-rushing instincts and slams his brass knuckles into the chest of blockers to drive them backward ... displays various power rush techniques, including a stab, two-hand swipe and long-arm ... has a knack for knocking away the hands/wrist of blockers ... balanced through contact and forces his way through the blocker's shoulder ... strike power is impressive ... plays with a reliable GPS for the football and rarely takes himself out of plays ... owns a sculpted frame with a yoked upper body and thick thighs/hips ... his body is his temple, and he is religious about his training and nutrition to keep himself at peak condition (played 55.6 snaps per game in 2021) ... coaches rave about his commitment level and desire to improve each day (head coach Jeff Brohm: "He lives in the building trying to improve and get better ... he takes everything extremely seriously and puts in the effort each and every day, well beyond what most guys do.") ... impressive production in his three seasons in college, leading the team in tackles for loss and sacks both years he was healthy.

WEAKNESSES: Shorter-than-ideal arms, allowing long-armed blockers to control his frame (see Ohio State tape vs. RT Dawand Jones) ... short-stepping rusher and appears tight in his cornering and flattening (didn't perform the 3-cone drill pre-draft for a reason) ... average closing burst and redirection skills to the ball ... inconsistent finisher with a surprisingly high percentage of missed tackles ... needs to convert more of his pressures into sacks ... struggles vs. double-teams ... hyper-focused on the ball and can be late to read receiver motions or angled blocks ... better pass-rushing instincts than run-defending instincts ... inconsistent gap integrity vs. the run and needs to take his contain responsibilities more seriously.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Purdue, Karlaftis played primarily as a stand-up field rusher in co-defensive coordinator Brad Lambert's scheme, also seeing snaps as a three-technique on the interior to take advantage of his quickness and strength. A Greece native who moved to the U.S. in 2014, he developed a love for football and shows an unmatched work ethic, which helped him log 30.5 TFL and 14.5 sacks over his 27 games in a Purdue uniform. Karlaftis' hands are not only physical and violent, but they're well-timed and strategic to get the offense off schedule. For a player with his play speed, strength and physicality, he misses too many tackles and needs to become a more controlled finisher. Overall, Karlaftis doesn't have elite length or athletic twitch, but he has NFL power, effort and hand work to break down the rhythm of blockers and be disruptive. He is a starting NFL defensive end in a traditional four-man front.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 18 overall)

6. ARNOLD EBIKETIE | Penn State 6023 | 250 lbs. | rSR. Silver Spring, Md. (Albert Einstein) 1/23/1999 (age 23.26) #17

BACKGROUND: Arnold Ebiketie (ebb-uh-KAY-tee), who is one of four children, was born in Yaoundé, Cameroon (same hometown as NBA All-Star Joel Embiid) before moving to the Washington, D.C., area at age 12 because of his father's job (Cameroon embassy). He grew up playing soccer in Cameroon and gravitated toward basketball, track and soccer (his first love) in the United States. After spending his freshman year at Richard Montgomery High, Ebiketie transferred to Albert Einstein High (Kensington, Md.) and tried football for the first time as a sophomore. After posting 14.0 tackles for loss and 9.5 sacks as a junior linebacker, he finished with 36 tackles and 21.5 sacks as a senior to earn Honorable Mention All-Metro honors. As a slot receiver on offense, Ebiketie recorded 298 receiving yards and three touchdowns in 2016. He also lettered in track and basketball, averaging 6.5 points and 9.7 rebounds as a power forward in his career.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Ebiketie was the No. 138 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 33 recruit in the state of Maryland. His recruitment got a late start as he learned the game and put on weight (just under 200 pounds as a senior). Ebiketie initially received several FCS offers and committed to Towson. But several FBS programs showed interest in the month before signing day, and he flipped to Temple. After his first season as a starter in 2020, Ebiketie graduated with his degree in advertising and brand strategy (December 2020) and entered the transfer portal (Ebiketie: "I needed to challenge myself a bit more."). He received interest from Boston College, Florida State, Texas, Washington and other schools and initially decided on Miami (Fla.) before choosing Penn State and enrolling in January 2021. Ebiketie opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Terrific get-off quickness and acceleration to the pocket ... plays long and flexible ... bursts to close when he has the ball carrier in his sights (basketball and soccer background is evident) ... leverages his long arms mid-rush to create movement at contact and force blockers off-balance ... active hands and doesn't stay locked up for long ... has a knack for the strip sack (five forced fumbles the past two seasons) ... improved backfield vision to work down the line and hunt run lanes ... his motor never quits revving, and he frequently makes plays away from the line of scrimmage — it was common for him to make tackles 30 yards downfield on tape ... highly conditioned and rarely comes off the field (61.8 defensive snaps per game in 2021) ... lone recipient of the team's 2021 "Iron Lion" award for his strength and conditioning work ... blocked a pair of kicks as a senior ... dedicated worker and added 50-plus pounds of quality mass since 2017 ... his coaches call him a "good learner" and praised the way he immediately assimilated at Penn State (head coach James Franklin: "He's always got a huge smile on his face, and he's a mature young man.") ... finished second in the Big Ten in tackles for loss (18.0) and third in sacks (9.5) in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Scouts are unsure how much more weight he can add ... all-gas pass rusher and needs to introduce more tempo to his attack ... doesn't always replace his hands on his get-off and can be predictable ... rush attack is based more on energy than refinement ... occasionally loses balance at contact or dipping the edge ... inconsistent edge-setter and take-on player in the run game ... must improve his fits vs. downhill rushing attacks ... eagerness to make plays leads to wasted movements ... only one pass breakup in his career ... only 18 career starts in college.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Penn State, Ebiketie lined up at right defensive end in former defensive coordinator Brent Pry's multiple scheme. The Cameroon native has a soccer and basketball background and was late to football, but produced when he became a starter in college, leading the team in tackles for loss and sacks as a junior (at Temple) and senior (at Penn State). Ebiketie explodes off the edge and stresses blockers with his arc acceleration, active hands and relentless play personality (registered at least one tackle for loss in 11 of 12 games in 2021). While he uses his length well as a pass rusher, he struggles to consistently anchor, lock out and free himself to contain the run. Overall, Ebiketie needs to improve his refinement as a rusher and reliability vs. the run, but he is a long, twitched-up athlete with the motor and mentality to develop into a starting NFL pass rusher.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 28 overall)

7. LOGAN HALL | Houston 6061 | 283 lbs. | SR. Belton, Texas (Belton) 4/22/2000 (age 22.02) #92

BACKGROUND: Logan Hall grew up in a military family (both of his parents are retired) and relocated several times throughout his childhood. He started playing football at age 9 at the pee-wee level before moving to Oklahoma prior to middle school. He spent six years there before relocating to Belton, Texas (about an hour north of Austin), after his freshman year of high school. Hall enrolled at Belton High and played defensive end as a sophomore, splitting his time between varsity and junior varsity in 2015. He moved up to varsity full-time as a junior and started on the defensive line, posting 36 tackles, 4.0 tackles for loss and 2.5 sacks to earn All-District honors. As a senior, Hall finished with 54 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and 2.0 sacks. He also ran track at Belton and set personal bests in the of 15.88 in the 110-meter hurdles), 43.94 in the 300-meter hurdles, 19'1.5 in the long jump and 37'9 in the triple jump as a sophomore. As a senior, Hall set a personal best in the discus of 156'0.75.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Hall was the No. 109 weakside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 290 recruit in the state of Texas. His Belton teammate Garrison Vaughn committed to Houston, and Hall decided to do the same, committing the summer before his senior year. Hall heard from Texas shortly before signing day, but his mind was made up on Houston (over Bowling Green, Colorado State, Toledo and Tulsa). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6061	285	33	9 3/4	79 1/4	-	-	-	-	8'9"	-	-	25 (stood on Combine runs, vertical, shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Long, twitchy athlete with a "wow" body type ... starts low and strikes upward to power his way through blockers ... excellent lateral quickness and flexibility to knife gaps with his swim, arm-over moves ... looks to introduce his length with long-arm or swipe/slap moves ... absorbs contact with his core strength while staying locked on the ball ... improved block recognition to split doubles and establish leverage ... quick to read screens or adjust to motions ... motor is always revving and will track down ball carriers at the numbers ... two career blocked field goals ... quiet off the field but highly aggressive nature on the field ... his coaches say he routinely outworks his peers (was 235 pounds when he enrolled at Houston) ... his versatility allowed him to play every position on the Houston defensive line ... got better each season and led the team in tackles for loss as a senior (NFL scout: "The coaches say no other player on the roster made a bigger jump since when they arrived.").

WEAKNESSES: Tall and lean and his pads get too high, too quickly ... his anchor will fade, and blockers are able to widen him from the hole ... needs to be more timely with his shed technique vs. the run (runners will access his gap without paying a toll) ... can be more efficient when looping and working laterally on stunts ... inconsistent hand exchange, and must learn how to unlock and rely on counter techniques ... medicals need review after recent elbow surgery (December 2021) ... the career production doesn't match the talent level.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Houston, Hall played primarily at three-technique in defensive coordinator Doug Belk's multiple fronts, also lining up at five-technique, nose tackle and as an edge rusher. Arriving in Houston as a spindly, 220-pound project, he showed significant physical and mental maturation the past four seasons and took a significant jump between his junior and senior seasons (head coach Dana Holgorsen: "He's one of the best defensive tackles I've ever coached."). Although he played primarily inside in college, Hall has the long levers and foot quickness to be an impactful pass rusher when given a runway off the edge. He has the body flexibility to bend, dip and attack from different angles but must continue to develop his anchor and shed strength, especially when his pad level rises. Overall, Hall has some tweener traits and lacks consistency, but with additional coaching, he can be a matchup weapon thanks to his athletic versatility, body length and disruptive nature. He projects as an NFL starting edge rusher who can slide inside in subpackages.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 37 overall)

8. DAVID OJABO | Michigan 6040 | 250 lbs. | rSO. Aberdeen, Scotland (Blair) 5/17/2000 (age 21.95) #55

BACKGROUND: David Ojabo (oh-JAH-boh), who is the middle child of three, was born and raised in Port Harcourt, Nigeria, in West Africa until the age of 7 when his family moved to Scotland for his father's job. He grew up playing basketball, soccer and volleyball in Aberdeen and wanted to maximize his opportunities in those sports, so he left his family and moved to the United States at age 15. Ojabo enrolled at Blair Academy, a private boarding school in New Jersey, and lettered his sophomore year in basketball and soccer. He saw his Blair basketball teammate Odafe "Jayson" Oweh, who was a year older, make the transition from basketball to football and went to the football coaches to also make the switch. Ojabo played football for the first time as a junior (repeated his junior year for football reasons) and earned a starting job in 2017, posting 35 tackles, 6.0 sacks and two forced fumbles. As a senior, he finished with 33 tackles, 8.5 sacks and one forced fumble. Ojabo also ran track at Blair and placed first in the 100 meters (10.93) in the prelims at the 2018 New Jersey state championships.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Ojabo was the No. 19 strongside defensive end in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 7 recruit in the state of New Jersey (one spot behind WR John Metchie). With his rare athletic ability, he started to earn attention from colleges before he ever played a game, including an offer from Rutgers. He collected almost three dozen total offers, including Ohio State, Clemson and Ivy League programs like Columbia and Yale. In the end, Ojabo picked Michigan over Notre Dame because of the mix of both academics and athletics. After redshirting in 2019, he returned to Scotland in March 2020 for a week-long visit with his family but found himself stuck there for three months because of the coronavirus and international travel ban. His mother (Ngor) and father (Victor Sr.) traveled to the United States for the 2021 Big Ten Championship Game, which was the first and only time they have seen their son play football live. After his breakout 2021 season, Ojabo elected to skip his final two seasons of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Twitchy get-off and athleticism ... impressive bend and body fluidity for his size ... his closing speed is different than most 250-plus pounders, and he doesn't lose momentum when cornering/flattening to the quarterback ... terrific ankle flexion to make sharp pass rush angles ... uses a long, lateral slide to access inside gaps ... skilled spin move ... physical through the outside shoulder of offensive tackles ... uses his length to lock out and keep blockers from his frame ... gets wide in the run game to funnel the ball carrier inside ... ran sub-11 seconds in the 100 meters and can shadow tight ends one-on-one downfield ... his coaches are quick to point out his learning habits, and his smarts are evident on and off the field (Academic All-American in 2021 and two-time Academic All-Big Ten) ... had a productive 2021 season and became only the eighth player in school history to reach 11.0 sacks in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Moldable frame, but his body needs continued development ... only average play strength and can be engulfed by long blockers in the run game ... must improve his body position as an edge-setter ... struggles to efficiently handle extra attention ... still learning how to set up his pass rush moves ... has immature counter moves and must reset his leverage points to avoid stalls in his pass rush ... will miss tackles playing too hot ... minimal special teams experience ... saw favorable matchups with all the attention Aidan Hutchinson received on the other side ... was on the ground level when he signed up for football in 2017 ... played only two seasons of high school football and combined for only 26 defensive snaps in his first two years at Michigan ... suffered a torn left achilles while performing drills at his pro day (March 2022) and faces a rehab process that will cut into his NFL rookie season.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Michigan, Ojabo was a stand-up edge rusher in former defensive coordinator Mike Macdonald's multiple scheme that he brought from the Baltimore Ravens. After moving to the U.S. and discovering football in 2017, he followed in the footsteps of his high school teammate Odafe Oweh and blossomed on the football field, including his breakout season at Michigan in 2021 with 11.0 sacks (second in the Big Ten behind Aidan Hutchinson) and five forced fumbles (Michigan record and first in the Big Ten). An athletic rusher with a long, nimble frame, Ojabo has the balanced feet and hip flexibility, which were developed from years of basketball and soccer training, to work tight spaces and grease the edge as a pass rusher. His defensive role shouldn't be restricted to only rushing the passer, but he needs to improve his functional strength and body positioning to make plays in the run game. Overall, Ojabo is admittedly "still learning" various aspects of football, but he is naturally explosive with the upfield burst and stride length to overwhelm tackles with arc speed. He will be a subpackage rusher when he returns from his achilles injury and offers down-the-road Pro Bowl upside as a hybrid linebacker.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 43 overall)

9. BOYE MAFE | Minnesota 6036 | 261 lbs. | rSR. Golden Valley, Minn. (Hopkins) 11/30/1998 (age 23.41) #34

BACKGROUND: Adeboye "Boye" (BOY-ay) Mafe (MAH-fay), who is the youngest of six children, was born and raised in Golden Valley, which is a western suburb of Minneapolis. He was started playing football at the youth level and spent time at every position on the field. At age 13 Mafe spent his eighth grade year at a boarding school in Nigeria for a cultural education in his parent's native country (all of his siblings did the same). He returned to the U.S. (about five inches taller) and enrolled at Hopkins High, where he was a three-sport athlete. As a junior, Mafe recorded 40 tackles, 3.0 tackles for loss and 1.0 sack as a defensive end. He earned 2016 Second Team All-State honors as a senior with 78 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss, and 4.0 sacks. Mafe also lettered in basketball and track and set persona bests of 11.48 in the 100 meters, 23.32 in the 200 meters, 49'6.5 in the shot put, 6'7 in the high jump and 42'10.75 in the triple jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Mafe was the No. 78 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Minnesota. He received three FCS offers (North Dakota, Northern Iowa, South Dakota State) and three FBS offers (Minnesota, Rutgers, Wyoming). Mafe committed to his hometown Gophers over Rutgers and became part of P.J. Fleck's inaugural recruiting class at Minnesota. His mother (Bola) passed away from pancreatic cancer on Mother's Day (May 2018). His father (Wale) and Bola were born and raised in Yorubaland in southwest Nigeria and moved to the U.S. in the late 1970s. His older brother (Dami) was a running back at Division II Minnesota State Mankato (2011-12). His older sister (Tayo) was a standout rugby player and competed for the U19 Women's National Team. His cousin (Ayo Idowu) was a defensive end at Division III St. Thomas (2009-12) and had a tryout with the Seattle Seahawks. His cousin (Dayo Idowu) was a linebacker at FCS North Dakota (2011-15). Mafe graduated with his degree in Marketing Education and is working toward his MBA in Sport and Fitness Administration. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Good-looking frame with long arms and sculpted muscle ... pounces out of his stance with big-time explosiveness in his lower body (member of Bruce Feldman's Freaks List) ... strong arc acceleration ... loose-jointed body with fluid footwork and hips ... can knock away the blocker's arm and treat it like a turnstile ... his go-to move is a long-arm slap, walking back the blocker and taking away his outside arm ... has the physical hands to shock and separate from blocks ... looks comfortable dropping into space thanks to his agile feet and movements ... plays with physical hands in the run game ... tracks down scrambling quarterbacks with his motor and chase skills ... his coaches describe him as "goofy" off the field, but a "determined assassin" on the field.

WEAKNESSES: Not a consistent edge-setter or point-of-attack technician ... eager hands, but needs to keep them tight and on-time ... can be out-flanked or bullied by powerful offensive tackles ... inconsistent reaction time at the snap and backfield vision ... needs continued development with his rush planning and counters to respond when his initial momentum is stalled ... doesn't play with the recognition skills to sniff out screens or misdirection before they happen ... doesn't have experience covering backfield routes ... minimal special teams experience ... only 13 career starts and averaged only 36.9 defensive snaps per game as a senior.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Minnesota, Mafe played the boundary defensive end position in defensive coordinator Joe Rossi's 4-3 base scheme. Despite not being asked to play high-volume snaps, he led the Gophers in tackles for loss and sacks as both a junior and senior. Mafe bursts out of his stance with the muscle twitch, arc acceleration and active hands to capture the corner. Despite his unique athletic gifts, his on-field instincts and impact don't consistently mirror his traits, especially in the run game (averaged only 2.6 tackles per game in 2021). Overall, Mafe isn't yet the sum of his parts and requires further schooling as a run defender, but he can get after the passer with natural explosion in his lower body, hips and hands. He projects as a subpackage NFL rusher with starting potential as he continues to be coached up.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 48 overall)

10. DRAKE JACKSON | USC 6030 | 273 lbs. | JR. Corona, Calif. (Centennial) 4/12/2001 (age 21.04) #99

BACKGROUND: Drake Jackson, who has four siblings, was born and raised in Harbor City between Torrance and Long Beach, Calif. He was groomed for football at a young age and was coached by his father at the Pop Warner level all the way through middle school. Jackson attended Centennial High, where he got his first taste of varsity action as a late season call-up as a freshman. After posting 29 tackles as a sophomore pass rusher, he finished his junior year with 28 tackles, 6.0 sacks, one forced fumble and an interception to earn League Defensive Lineman of the Year honors. As a senior, Jackson led Centennial to a 12-1 record and 2018 league title with their only loss coming to the eventual state champions Mater Dei (led by QB Bryce Young). He was named a 2018 U.S. Army All-American and earned First Team All-State, All-County, and All-Conference honors with 27 tackles, 5.0 tackles for loss, 3.5 sacks and a fumble recovery for a touchdown.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Jackson was the No. 3 strongside defensive end in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 56 overall) and the No. 10 recruit in the state of California. He was raised a USC fan by his father and always dreamed of playing for the Trojans. Jackson was considered a strong USC lean, but he had second thoughts when defensive line coach Kenenchi Udeze was fired after the 2018 season. His choice came down to the final minute on signing day, sticking with USC over Arizona State, Oregon and Washington. His father (Dennis), who grew up in Compton, played junior college football at Compton College and owns a training facility and coaches high school football. Jackson elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Loose-jointed, twitchy athlete ... varies his rush speeds to get blockers leaning, including a secondary burst to close ... fluid ankle flexion to run the hoop or burst off his plant foot ... his lateral steps are long and sudden to win inside after widening the tackle outside ... has long arms to extend into blockers and keep blockers from latching on ... anticipates quarterback set points and processes movement well ... comfortable spot-dropping and disrupting routes ... has outstanding play range, flashing the speed to chase down from the backside ... his effort level and compete skills are both assets to his game ... showed the willingness to add/shed weight and change positions based on the coaching schemes at USC.

WEAKNESSES: Played light on his junior tape ... needs to develop his play strength and add bulk to his arms and body ... can be controlled in the run game and lacks the power to easily disengage single or double blocks ... his hands aren't heavy ... doesn't have enough force behind his long arms, struggling to create push back or go through blocks ... relies more on speed angles than a complex rush arsenal ... doesn't look comfortable countering with his hands once engaged ... his arc acceleration is better than his average first step ... often arrives too hot and must play under control to improve his finishing rate ... missed two games as a freshman because of a high-ankle sprain (October 2019) and battled through a lower leg injury (November 2021) over the final three games of his junior year.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at USC, Jackson played the stand-up "B Backer" edge rush position in former defensive coordinator Todd Orlando's hybrid 4-2-5 scheme. His most productive season came as a freshman at 275 pounds, but he shed 35 pounds during quarantine prior to the 2020 season, losing bad weight and transitioning to an outside linebacker role at 240 pounds in the new scheme (weighed 254 at the Combine). Although his initial step can be better, Jackson rushes with outstanding flexibility, length, and arc acceleration along with the instincts to capture the corner or fire back inside. He had average production for a player with his athletic tools, but he tends to be speed-reliant and needs to add more ammo and urgency into his hands. Overall, Jackson is a twitched-up speed rusher with the upside to be disruptive in the NFL if he can develop his play strength and hand/power moves without sacrificing athleticism. He has the upside of an impactful NFL starter but has work to do if he wants to reach that level.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 63 overall)

11. NIK BONITTO | Oklahoma 6030 | 248 lbs. | rJR. Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (St. Thomas Aquinas) 9/26/1999 (age 22.59) #11

BACKGROUND: Nikolas “Nik” Bonitto (bo-NEE-toe) grew up in southern Florida and originally attended University School, where he saw varsity action as a freshman in 2014. As a sophomore, he transferred to St. Thomas Aquinas, a private Catholic school and football powerhouse. Bonitto played on both sides of the ball, including some time at quarterback, but thrived as a defensive end and linebacker. As a senior, he finished with 73 tackles, 11.0 tackles for loss, 9.0 sacks and two interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) and was named the Sun Sentinel’s 2017 All-County Defensive Player of the Year. Bonitto helped lead St. Thomas Aquinas to back-to-back 7A state championships in 2015 and 2016. He was also a standout guard on the basketball court.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Bonitto was the No. 17 outside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 40 recruit in the state of Florida. His first offer was from Miami (Fla.) after his freshman year. Bonitto collected almost 30 offers and ultimately decided on Oklahoma over Alabama, Louisville and Texas, becoming the first football recruit from St. Thomas Aquinas to sign with the Sooners. He also received scholarship offers to play college basketball at Minnesota, Wake Forest and St. Louis, and several other programs discussed him playing both sports. Bonitto elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He also opted out of the bowl game.

PRO DAY	6031	248	32 1/2	9 1/8	78 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	7.04	22 (drill work, 3-cone, bench only)

STRENGTHS: Agile athlete ... eludes blockers with nimble feet and sharp pass rush angles ... uses a dip-and-rip or long-arm ghost move to soften the edge ... forward lean and balance are effective tools that help him stay detached from blockers ... hand/arm moves have shown improvement each season ... spin move is silky ... able to drop in space and chase down plays ... 70-yard fumble return was the team’s second-longest play (offense or defense) in 2021 ... OU coaches have commended his maturation over the past few years after he found himself in the doghouse as a freshman ... lived in enemy territory (35.9 percent of his tackles the past two seasons came in the opponent’s backfield) ... experienced as a stand-up edge rusher and spying linebacker.

WEAKNESSES: Thin legs, and he doesn’t have an ideal build by NFL standards ... marginal play strength at contact ... needs to weaponize his hands ... inconsistent in his speed-to-power transition ... rudimentary pass rush sequence ... non-threatening punch as an edge-setter ... finds himself lost in the crowd, taking himself out of plays ... faulty anchor and will end up where the blocker wants when they lock on ... late to read keys as a linebacker and attacks before processing ... doesn’t have experience dropping in man coverage ... low tackle numbers, averaging only 3.2 tackles per game over the past two seasons ... avoided major injury in college but missed time as a high school junior because of a tear in his left ankle (December 2016).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oklahoma, Bonitto played the stand-up “Rush” linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Alex Grinch’s 3-3-5 base scheme. Despite never leading the Sooners in sacks, he consistently finished among the FBS leaders in pressures, and his 28.9 percent pass rush win rate was No. 1 in 2021, according to PFF. Bonitto is an active athlete and shows a natural feel for shaking blockers thanks to his agility and instincts to attack the pocket from different angles. However, he can be engulfed by size on the edge and must weaponize his hands to consistently defeat NFL blockers. Overall, Bonitto is a hybrid player and must develop his play strength to find a full-time role, but he affects the quarterback and uses his quick feet and fluid body movement to keep blockers from centering him up. He projects best as a stand-up linebacker in a 3-4 scheme.

12. KINGSLEY ENAGBARE | South Carolina 6036 | 258 lbs. | SR. Atlanta, Ga. (Hapeville) 1/18/2000 (age 22.28) #1

BACKGROUND: Kingsley “JJ” Enagbare, (ee-NAG-bar-ee) who is one of three children, grew up outside of Atlanta and started playing football at the youth level as an offensive tackle and defensive end. He started his prep career at Peachtree Ridge High in Suwanee, where he was teammates with Connor Heyward. He played two seasons on the varsity as a sophomore and junior defensive lineman. Enagbare transferred to Hapeville Charter Academy in Atlanta for his senior season and helped lead the team to a 14-1 record and the 2017 Class AA state championship. He set a school record for sacks as a senior and earned Class AA Defensive Player of the Year and First Team All-State honors.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Enagbare was the No. 10 ranked strongside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 29 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received his first scholarship offer (Wake Forest) following his junior season and soon became one of the top recruits in the Atlanta area. Enagbare strongly considered Georgia (the school he grew up rooting for) and Georgia Tech, but he connected with Will Muschamp and the South Carolina coaches. He graduated early and signed with the Gamecocks. Enagbare changed his jersey number from No. 52 to No. 1 to follow in the footsteps of former Gamecocks like Jaycee Horn and Deebo Samuel, who did the same. He graduated with his degree in retail management (May 2021). Enagbare opted out of South Carolina’s bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Broad-framed athlete with solid build and excellent length ... improved play strength at the point of attack ... balanced through contact, using forward lean to create movement ... shows a powerful long-arm, angling his body into blockers to drive them backward ... great job catching and throwing the hands/wrists of blockers ... strategic rusher and efficiently patches together moves, keeping the wasted movements to a minimum ... has a knack for knocking the ball out (four forced fumbles the past two years) ... uses wide, flexible steps to avoid blockers and stay detached ... physical, drag-down tackler ... motor always runs hot ... played defensive tackle as a freshman and has versatility on the edge ... finished his career No. 9 on the school's all-time sack list.

WEAKNESSES: Not a sudden or super bendy athlete ... has some tightness at the top of his rush ... needs a moment when changing directions, and blockers can catch him off-balance ... his pass rush setup can be tweaked and improved ... inconsistent moments in the run game, and his pad level can give blockers a clean target ... the medicals are important after he underwent hip surgery in the offseason prior to his junior year (couldn't walk for almost two months in his recovery); also missed the final two games of his junior season ... average sack production with only 4.5 sacks as a senior.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at South Carolina, Enagbare played the "Buck" edge rusher position (mostly in the boundary) in defensive coordinator Clayton White's 4-2-5 hybrid scheme. After Javon Kinlaw left for the NFL, Enagbare grew into the alpha on the Gamecocks' defensive line, leading the team in sacks and tackles for loss as a junior and senior. Enagbare rushes with heavy, skilled hands and forward lean to convert his speed to power and does a nice job with his rush sequencing to set traps for blockers. He is rugged and alert but will need to become more consistent setting the edge in the run game and proving he can kick inside on passing downs. Overall, Enagbare has tightness in his movements and lacks suddenness, but he is efficient and powerful in his attack with the athletic movements to break down the rhythm of blockers. He projects as a rotational defensive end who has the talent to quickly earn NFL starter reps.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 69 overall)

13. DOMINIQUE ROBINSON | Miami (Ohio) 6047 | 253 lbs. | rSR. Canton, Ohio (McKinley) 7/2/1998 (age 23.82) #11

BACKGROUND: Dominique Robinson, who is one of four boys, was born and raised in Canton, Ohio, and grew up playing multiple sports. He originally attended Timken High and played varsity in basketball and football (at quarterback) as a sophomore in 2014. Prior to the 2015 season, Timken merged with Canton McKinley High, and Robinson considered giving up football to focus only on basketball. But he stayed with football as a junior and became the starting quarterback and captain, scoring the winning touchdown in the final seconds to defeat archrival Massillon in the final game at old Fawcett Stadium. As a senior, he earned team MVP and First Team All-County honors as a captain in 2016. Robinson tied the McKinley single-game passing yards record, sharing it with Ben McDaniels (currently an assistant coach with the Houston Texans), who is the younger brother of Las Vegas Raiders head coach Josh McDaniels. Robinson also lettered in basketball at McKinley in 2015-16.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Robinson was the No. 59 dual-threat quarterback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 88 recruit in the state of Ohio. He received interest from a few Power 5 programs like Boston College and Iowa State but committed to Miami (Ohio), which was his only FBS offer. An early enrollee, Robinson signed as a "quarterback/athlete" and started out at quarterback before moving to wide receiver during his freshman year in 2017. He transitioned to defense and pass rusher prior to the 2020 season. On January 21, 2022, he married his wife (Emma Granger), who was listed at 6-foot-4, was a five-year starter as a middle blocker in volleyball at Robert Morris. His father (Anthony Sr.) led Canton McKinley to its first basketball championship in 1983-84 and started four seasons at Bowling Green. Dominique's older brother (Caleb) played tight end at Division II Charleston. His older brother (Anthony Jr.) also played football at Canton McKinley. His younger brother (Jasper) played tight end and linebacker at Kent State (2020-21), but was forced to medically retire in 2021 after he was diagnosed with narrowing of the spine. Robinson took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned as a "super senior" in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6051	252	33	9 1/2	83	-	-	-	-	-	4.19	7.19	- (stood on Combine runs, jumps, bench)

STRENGTHS: Twisted-up athlete with natural joint flexibility ... rushes with the get-off burst and acceleration to challenge the corner ... flashes the body control to bend, dip or maneuver around blockers ... moves with bounce in his feet to cross the face of blockers on inside moves or work down the line ... smooth redirect skills to win on stunts and twists ... looks to get both of his hands involved to pry open doors to the pocket ... looks the part with his broad shoulders, long arms and moldable frame (has added 20 pounds of mass since making the move to defense in 2020) ... observant player and looks further along than a player with only 16 career games on defense ... NFL scouts say the Miami (Ohio) coaches talk up his "alert intelligence" and "positive attitude" ... played on every special teams coverage in 2021 and finished his college career with 221 special-teams snaps.

WEAKNESSES: Eagerly gets his hands involved, but needs to be more strategic and violent with his handwork ... finds himself too far upfield too often ... functional strength is a work in progress ... still learning how to generate sufficient torque as a bull rusher ... can get bounced as an edge-setter ... leaves his chest open for blockers to knock him back at contact ... will lose contain responsibilities when he doesn't recognize the proper field leverage ... needs to be quicker diagnosing blocking schemes ... only two seasons of experience on defense and has never started a game at defensive end ... mediocre production ... inexperienced for a 24-year old NFL rookie.

SUMMARY: A reserve player at Miami (Ohio), Robinson played left and right defensive end in defensive coordinator Spence Nowinsky's four-man front. After arriving in Oxford as a dual-threat quarterback, he moved to wide receiver for three years (27 catches, 452 yards, 4 touchdowns) before transitioning to defensive end in 2020, where he was a sub-package pass rush specialist for two seasons (11.0 tackles for loss, 6.5 sacks in 16 games). A player who hates to be blocked, Robinson is a good-sized athlete with the muscle twitch, body flexibility and hand-fighting attitude to create disruption. He has shown noticeable improvement getting his hips, hands and eyes on the same page when rushing the passer, but he relies more on agility and effort than a creative thought-out rush attack. Overall, Robinson needs to improve vs. the run and develop his countermeasures, but he has exciting pass rush potential thanks to his athletic traits. He may require time on the practice squad before earning a sub-package role in the NFL.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 78 overall)

14. DEANGELO MALONE | Western Kentucky 6032 | 243 lbs. | rSR. Atlanta, Ga. (Cedar Grove) 7/12/1999 (age 22.79) #10

BACKGROUND: DeAngelo Malone grew up in the Atlanta area and started playing football at age 4. He started at Martin Luther King High, where he was teammates with future NFL players like Arden Key and Terez Hall. Malone started out as a wide receiver and running back before moving to defensive end as a junior. He transferred to Cedar Grove High for his senior season and helped lead the team to a 13-2 record and the Georgia 3A state title. Malone finished the 2016 season with 49 tackles and 8.0 tackles for loss to earn First Team All-State honors. He also lettered in soccer.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Malone was the No. 134 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 339 recruit in the state of Georgia. After transferring to Cedar Grove as a senior, his recruitment picked up, but at only 198 pounds, he was overlooked by many schools. Malone received a handful of FCS offers but only two FBS offers, as he chose Western Kentucky over Buffalo ("I fell in love with the coaches ... and the chrome helmets."). He took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned for a fifth season in 2021. Malone accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl and was named game MVP of the American team.

STRENGTHS: Explosive athlete with cornering skills ... excellent foot quickness with the lateral agility to jump between gaps ... his go-to rush move is an effective euro step and rip ... has enough juice to soften the corner or extend into contact, converting his speed to spurts of power ... gets skinny through small creases and turns on the speed ... flexible mover in space, with the hip action to redirect, chase and close (averaged 6.4 tackles per game over the past four seasons) ... when timing and placement are right, can set the edge with long arms and wriggle free from blockers ... has a knack for knocking the ball out (nine career forced fumbles) ... dependable and finished his career with 42 consecutive starts ... notable backfield production, finishing his career No. 1 in school history in sacks (34.0) and No. 2 in tackles for loss (60.0).

WEAKNESSES: Average build with lean muscle tone, lacking the desired bulk for a pass rusher ... play strength must improve ... unpolished hand techniques and counter maneuvers mid-rush, relying on pure speed ... has length but doesn't consistently use it as a pass rusher ... long-armed blockers can steer him away from the pocket ... plays with faulty base strength and can be moved in the run game ... needs to be more violent with his hands to control the edge and press himself off blocks ... instincts are undeveloped in coverage ... has had trouble maintaining weight in the past (fluctuated between 200 and 240 pounds during college) ... minimal experience on kickoff/punt coverage on special teams.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Western Kentucky, Malone was a boundary edge rusher (mostly stand up) in defensive coordinator Maurice Crum's 4-2-5 base scheme. After leading the team in sacks four consecutive seasons, he has one of the most impressive pass rush résumés in this draft class as WKU's all-time leading sack artist (34.0) and a two-time conference Defensive Player of the Year. With his burst and speed, Malone runs the arc extremely well and shows the ability to win the corner, flatten and close. With his struggles to stay square at the point of attack in the run game, he is at his best in space, where he can show off his versatile athleticism. Overall, Malone is a speed-reliant rusher with questions about play strength and position fit, but he is a quarterback hunter with the athletic traits and God-given acceleration to make plays. He can be an effective role player as a stand-up edge rusher or linebacker who will play primarily on passing downs.

15. JOSH PASCHAL | Kentucky 6025 | 268 lbs. | rSR. Prince George's Co., Md. (Good Counsel) 12/17/1999 (age 22.36) #4

BACKGROUND: Josh "JP" Paschal, who is one of three children, was born in Washington, D.C., and developed a love for football at age 5. He attended Our Lady of Good Counsel High, a Catholic school in Olney, Md., where he was a multi-sport athlete. After a breakout sophomore season, Paschal earned All-Conference honors as a junior with 40 tackles and 4.0 sacks. As a senior, he earned First Team All-Metro and All-Sentinel honors and finished with 64 tackles, 9.0 tackles for loss and 5.5 sacks, adding six catches for 111 yards and one touchdown on offense.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Paschal was the No. 11 strongside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Maryland. He received his first scholarship offer as a sophomore from Ohio State, and several other top programs soon followed, including Alabama, Clemson and USC. Paschal had a final four of Kentucky, Notre Dame, Oklahoma and Penn State, committing to the Wildcats. In the spring of 2018, Paschal noticed a lesion on the ball of his right foot, which turned out to be early stage melanoma. In July 2018, he had the tumor removed, and it was revealed to be ALM (acral lentiginous melanoma), a deadly form of skin cancer. Paschal had several more operations which required aggressive treatments and skin grafts, and he began immunotherapy to help his immune system fight the cancer (finished the treatments in August 2019). His older brother (TraVaughn) played linebacker at Kentucky (2011-14). Paschal graduated with his degree in family science (May 2021) and is working on a second degree in communications. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was a late scratch because of injury.

PRO DAY	6024	270	33	9 5/8	78 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (no shuttles or bench press — choice)

STRENGTHS: Athletic, sculpted frame with thick legs and trunk ... quick off the ball to attack gaps and out-angle blocks ... frequent backfield visitor ... has the outside acceleration to keep tackles honest ... strong at the point of attack, greeting blockers with physicality ... technically sound with his hands to power through contact or quickly disengage ... quick to read block development and swiftly counter ... three blocks on special teams (two punts, one field goal) ... became the first player in school history to be voted captain three consecutive seasons ... encountered unthinkable adversity with his cancer diagnosis but maintained his positive outlook and gave all he had to the team (head coach Mark Stoops: "He empties his tank every day, one of the most special players if not the most, I've ever coached.") ... ranked second in the SEC in tackles for loss in 2021 (behind only Alabama's Will Anderson).

WEAKNESSES: Average explosion off the edge by NFL standards ... doesn't have the speed traits to capture the corner on a consistent basis ... disappointing speed-to-power conversions ... lacks ideal flexibility or agility because of tightness in his hips and lower body ... late with his redirect to recover vs. shifty ball carriers ... needs to be more sudden with his hands to match what NFL blockers will throw at him ... missed most of the 2018 season after he was diagnosed with malignant melanoma and underwent three surgeries and monthly immunotherapy treatments (had to learn how to walk again) ... missed the 2021 bowl game and the Senior Bowl after reaggravating a groin injury (December 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Kentucky, Paschal played defensive end in defensive coordinator Brad White's hybrid front, also seeing snaps as a linebacker and inside as a three-technique. After a 2018 cancer diagnosis, he overcame several operations and returned to the Wildcats a year later, finishing his career No. 3 in school history with 37.0 tackles for loss (tied with Bud Dupree). Paschal is a smart, technically sound defender with the body type and balanced athleticism to shut down the run. He has the physical hands and quickness to defeat blockers as a pass rusher, but he struggles to bend the corner or win at the top of his rush. Overall, Paschal isn't a dynamic or sophisticated pass rusher, but he is polished vs. the run with the point-of-attack instincts and football character that will be welcomed in an NFL building. He is a scheme-diverse end who can be part of an NFL rotation.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 83 overall)

16. CAMERON THOMAS | San Diego State 6041 | 267 lbs. | rJR. Carlsbad, Calif. (Carlsbad) 1/7/2000 (age 22.31) #99

BACKGROUND: Cameron Thomas, who is the middle child of three, was born and raised in Carlsbad, a beach city 35 miles north of San Diego (his parents are both from the Detroit area and moved to southern California in the late 1990s). He participated in several sports growing up, including hockey, and started playing organized football in the sixth grade, primarily offensive and defensive line. Thomas attended Carlsbad High, where he was a three-year starter on varsity as a tight end and defensive end. After recoding 6.5 sacks as a junior, he earned All-Conference honors as a senior with 39 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss and 3.0 sacks, adding 17 receptions for 210 yards and four touchdowns on offense.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Thomas was the No. 101 weakside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 205 recruit in the state of California. His first offer was from Navy, followed by Wyoming and San Diego State. With his older brother already an Aztec, Thomas was very familiar with the program and committed the summer prior to his senior season. Oregon State entered the picture and offered him closer to signing day, but he stayed loyal to his San Diego State commitment. His older brother (Zachary) was a four-year starting offensive lineman at San Diego State (2016-21) and is also a prospect in the 2022 NFL Draft class. Cameron Thomas graduated with his undergrad degree. He elected to skip his final season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Thomas accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to play because of a minor hamstring injury that flared up during training.

STRENGTHS: Prototypical size and build for edge work ... rushes downhill with natural momentum out of his stance ... shows the lateral quickness to cross the face of blockers and penetrate gaps ... varies his arm-over moves with strong hands to rip-swipe or double-swipe ... able to sink-and-lift at contact to jar blockers off their base ... very quick to find the football in the run game ... works down the line of scrimmage to make stops on the opposite side of where he started ... was 225 pounds in high school and filled out well ... durable and didn't miss a game the past three seasons ... his 21.0 career sacks rank No. 3 in school history ... joined Kabeer Gbaja-Biamila (1997-99) as the only players in school history to earn First Team All-Conference honors three times.

WEAKNESSES: Stiff through his hips and not a bendy rusher ... can be knocked off his rush path ... plays with outstanding effort but not a traditional speed rusher who will blow by blockers ... will mis-time his jump, going early (four offsides penalties in 2021) or starting late ... his hands are physical but sporadic in terms of timing and placement ... doesn't have an extensive rush attack to string together multiple moves ... mediocre length, and can be reached by quick-footed tackles ... can get out of control mid-pursuit, leaving him grabbing for air ... doesn't have the size for regular interior work at the next level ... after the 2018 season, he suffered a serious back injury (four fractured vertebrae) in a snowboarding accident but returned healthy for 2019 spring practices; sidelined for the Senior Bowl and NFL Combine because of a left hamstring injury.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at San Diego State, Thomas lined up inside, outside and over the offensive tackle in defensive coordinator Kurt Mattix's 3-3-5 base scheme. One of the most productive defenders in college football in 2021, his 20.5 tackles for loss ranked No. 3 in the FBS (behind only Will Anderson and Devin Lloyd), and his 71 tackles ranked No. 2 among all FBS defensive linemen. Thomas played a high volume of snaps on tape and showed the consistent effort to be disruptive in the backfield or routinely make tackles away from the line of scrimmage. Although he didn't stay blocked for long in college, he has only average length and burst, and his win rate will drop vs. NFL-level blockers. Overall, Thomas is a tight, face-up rusher with inconsistent pad level, but he is a hard-charger with the cranked motor and physical hands to wear down blockers and find the football. He projects as a 4-3 defensive end with three-down potential.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 88 overall)

17. SAM WILLIAMS | Ole Miss 6035 | 261 lbs. | rSR. Montgomery, Ala. (Lee) 3/31/1999 (age 23.08) #7

BACKGROUND: Samuel "Sam" Williams was born in Birmingham into a rough family situation. Along with his siblings, he was removed from his birth mother's custody at age 6 and relocated to Verbena, Ala., to live with his grandmother and later with his aunt (Latoya Kizito) and her family. Williams originally attended Marbury High in Deatsville, where he emerged as a star on the basketball court, making varsity as a freshman. As a junior, he averaged 15.1 points and 10.5 rebounds per game in 2015, earning All-State honors. After an off-campus incident involving a knife, Williams was expelled from Marbury the summer after his junior year. He transferred to Robert E. Lee High in Montgomery for his senior year and moved in with Tiffani Cain (the mother of one of his friends at Marbury), who eventually became Williams' legal guardian (he refers to her as "mom"). With very little football experience, he joined the football team at Lee where he was a 215-pound linebacker in 2016 and teammates with WR Henry Ruggs III.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Williams received attention from several high-profile college programs, but he had less than a year of football experience and didn't have the grades to qualify. He signed with Northeast Mississippi Community College in Booneville, where he continued learning the game as a freshman, posting 53 tackles, 11.0 tackles for loss, 3.5 sacks and two forced fumbles in 2017. Williams was named a junior college All-American as a sophomore with 75 tackles, 28.5 tackles for loss, 17.5 sacks, and four forced fumbles in 2018. A four-star recruit, he was the No. 3 defensive end and the No. 8 juco recruit overall. Williams considered offers from Alabama, Auburn, Florida State, LSU, Texas A&M and others before committing to Ole Miss. He was suspended from the program in July 2020 after he was arrested on felony charge of sexual battery. The chargers were later dropped, and Williams returned to the team in September 2020. He has a one-year old son (Sam Jr.). Williams graduated with his degree in multidisciplinary studies (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and was a late call-up to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6034	258	33 1/2	9 7/8	80	-	-	-	36	-	4.34	7.03	25 (stood on Combine runs, broad jump)

STRENGTHS: Well-built with adequate length and muscle tone ... explosive out of his stance ... hard-charger upfield with above-average rush acceleration to skim the corner ... uses forward flexibility and raw power to create knock-back with his violent hands and stab moves ... creates inside burst with his plant-and-go cuts ... works well laterally and is able to bounce off blocks while maintaining his play radar ... his revved-up motor expands his range to chase down plays outside the numbers ... has some experience dropping into space ... has gritty play personality and doesn't make thing easy on blockers ... had the productive senior year that NFL teams were hoping to see from him.

WEAKNESSES: Plays tall with inconsistent balance at contact and in space ... his poor block leverage leaves him controlled on the edges ... his run-defending instincts are still in the development phase ... shows hints of stiffness at the top of his rush ... needs to do a better job setting up his rush and formulating a plan ... tape is riddled with undisciplined mistakes, including nine penalties as a senior (illegal use of hands, offsides, facemask, multiple roughing the passers, etc.) ... inconsistent finisher who leaves tackle/sack production on the field ... his off-field will require extensive vetting after he was suspended from the Ole Miss program (July 2020) following an arrest on felony sexual battery (chargers were later dropped).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ole Miss, Williams was a hybrid boundary end (two and three point) in defensive coordinator Chris Partridge's 3-3-5 base scheme, lining primarily in the 4i-technique. He turned his flashes into more consistent production as a senior, breaking the single-season school record with 12.5 sacks, which ranked top-five in the FBS in 2021. Although he needs better setup and countering skills mid-rush, Williams creates a surge with his hard-charging athleticism and violent hands. In the run game, he has a reliable motor but struggles to control the point because of a faulty anchor and tall pads. Overall, Williams must improve his discipline to be a more consistent edge-setter and rusher, but he has the upfield acceleration and attacking mentality to affect the game as a quarterback hunter. He is an exciting pass rush prospect in subpackages with potential to be more.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 91 overall)

18. ALEX WRIGHT | UAB 6051 | 271 lbs. | JR. Elba, Ala. (Elba) 9/5/2000 (age 21.65) #16

BACKGROUND: Alexander “Alex” Wright grew up in the small town of Elba (population less than 4,000) in southeastern Alabama and started playing football in the second grade. His focus switched from sports to music in middle school, giving up football for band (woodwind instruments). Wright attended Elba High and started playing basketball as a freshman and then returned to football as a sophomore. Wright played both ways as a wide receiver on offense and edge rusher on defense. As a senior, he led Elba to an 8-3 season and earned All-District honors on defense with 63 tackles, 17.0 tackles for loss and 6.0 sacks on defense, adding 15 catches for 266 yards and three touchdowns on offense. Wright lettered in basketball through his junior year (averaged 11.2 points and 12.5 rebounds per game) and also played on the AAU circuit.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Wright was the No. 116 strongside defensive end in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 73 recruit in the state of Alabama. Playing in the lowest classification in Alabama, his recruitment was more gradual than instant, picking up steam after attending several recruiting camps. Florida Atlantic offered him at tight end, and several ACC programs (Duke, Louisville, Virginia and Wake Forest) offered him on defense. But he developed a close bond with UAB linebackers coach Nick Gentry and committed to the Blazers because it “felt like family.” Wright decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Long-limbed, rangy athlete and still growing into his body ... impressive movement skills for his size ... unleashes his impressive length in a variety of ways ... stabs the chest of blockers whenever he wants, creating space and opening rush opportunities ... will extend his long levers into contract to create movement, and his speed-to-power moves should get better and better ... uses a two-hand swipe to grease the corner, bend and flatten to the quarterback ... flashes a cross-chop move to create inside rush lanes ... his second and third steps put heat on the pocket ... uses his length and strong hands to lock out and contain vs. the run, seeing through blocks and tracking the football ... has a massive tackle radius thanks to his fluid lower body to calm his feet and spring in any direction to corral the ball carrier ... his coaches say he toughs out and plays through injuries ... his confidence appeared to grow with every game throughout the 2021 season.

WEAKNESSES: Needs to continue developing his body and play strength ... has bend as a pass rusher, but his taller pads/torso will hinder his ability to dip below blocks ... his first step is only adequate ... still developing his instinctive feel for counters and secondary moves ... still learning how to efficiently unlock his power ... can be crunched vs. double teams ... has inconsistent contact balance and spends too much time on the ground ... wasn’t asked to drop into coverage and was primarily an upfield player ... had knee surgery to repair his meniscus prior to his senior year in high school (spring 2018); strained his left pectoral muscle benching at the Combine (March 2022), which limited his pre-draft workouts.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at UAB, Wright played the “Jack” edge rusher role (stand up and hand on the ground) in defensive coordinator David Reeves’ hybrid 3-4 scheme, aligning outside, inside or over the offensive tackle. Despite being late to football in high school and undersized (6-4, 225) when he arrived at UAB, he made an immediate impact for the Blazers and grew into one of the more disruptive pass rushers in college football. A flexible, long-limbed pass rusher, Wright has the reactive athleticism and basic understanding of hand use to separate from blockers in different ways. His first step is average, but he has the long, explosive strides to eat up ground quickly and out-leverage road blocks. Overall, Wright is still a work in progress in several areas, but he has elite length and intriguing movement skills for his size to be disruptive vs. both the pass and run. Although health is a concern, he is an ascending edge player with high-ceiling traits.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 97 overall)

19. MYJAI SANDERS | Cincinnati 6052 | 228 lbs. | SR. Jacksonville, Fla. (Camden County) 7/12/1998 (age 23.79) #21

BACKGROUND: Myjai (my-jay) Sanders grew up in north Jacksonville and started his prep career at William Raines Senior High, where he was a three-year letterman. After helping Raines to a district title in 2015, he earned All-Conference honors as a junior and finished with 40 tackles, 5.0 tackles for loss and 3.0 sacks in nine games in 2016. Per Florida high school rules, Sanders was ineligible as a senior because he turned 19 prior to the season (he repeated the eighth grade). For his final prep season, Sanders transferred to Camden County High in Kingsland, Ga. (30 miles north of where he grew up). He finished his senior year with 39 tackles, 3.0 sacks, and one interception (returned for a touchdown), earning 2017 First Team All-Region honors as a hybrid pass rusher. Sanders also lettered in basketball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Sanders was the No. 56 weakside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 151 recruit in the state of Florida. He picked up several Power 5 level offers, including Kentucky, Mississippi State, Rutgers and Virginia Tech. However, several schools were unwilling to be patient with his academic status. Cincinnati (led by assistant coach Gino Guidugli) waited for confirmation that Sanders was academically eligible and signed him in the late signing period. His older sister (Armaletha Wesley) died after a motorcycle crash (September 2016). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6046	247	32 3/4	9 1/2	80	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	20 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Explosive get-off to capture the corner ... displays the lateral agility and body flexibility to euro-step and give blockers the slip ... quick hands/feet to stand up and shoot gaps from different angles ... flashes the ability to extend into blockers and convert his speed to power ... always in chase mode with the speed to close from the backside ... quick to read and see through blocks to find the ball in the run game ... plays low to leverage the point of attack as an edge-setter ... has the athleticism to drop and cover space ... does a great job finding passing lanes (13 passes defended over the past three years) ... has adequate length with room to add weight on his frame ... named a senior captain in 2021, and the coaches say positive things about his maturation ... durable and started every game the past three seasons (38 consecutive starts).

WEAKNESSES: Slender body type with lean torso and limbs ... NFL scouts have questions about his weight fluctuation between the offseason and football season ... his build and bulk match a linebacker, not a defensive end ... itchy trigger at the snap, and frequently mistimes his jump ... was penalized a staggering 24 times over the past three years, including nine offsides flags in 2021 ... needs to load more ammo into his hands when taking on blocks ... can be dominated by double teams on the edge ... plays in overdrive and must be a better finisher once he reaches the backfield ... finished his career with almost identical sacks and passes defended ... over-aged and will turn 24 before his first NFL training camp ... highly emotional player, but sometimes to a fault when he doesn't control it.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Cincinnati, Sanders played the field defensive end in defensive coordinator Mike Tressel's hybrid front. After leading the team in tackles for loss and sacks as a junior, his backfield production plummeted in 2021 as the coaches asked him to play a tight 5-technique or "4i" role and not be able to pin his ears back as a rusher (Sanders: "I was used as more of a decoy."). At pass rusher, you want first-step burst, and that is what Sanders offers. That unlocks the corner or the side-step, which is his go-to move. Though he can be overpowered by size and his hands aren't going to win many battles, he is a fighter and unafraid of contact. Overall, Sanders must improve his snap anticipation and the efficiency of his secondary moves, but he is explosive off the ball with a slithery body type to stay free and chase the football. He projects best in a scheme where he can line up wide or standing up off the edge.

20. AMARÉ BARNÓ | Virginia Tech 6045 | 246 lbs. | rSR. Blythewood, S.C. (Westwood) 4/26/1999 (age 23.01) #11

BACKGROUND: Amaré (uh-MAR-ay) Barnó grew up in the Columbia area in central South Carolina and attended Westwood High. Helped by a rapid growth spurt as a freshman, he was a three-year letterman on varsity, playing both linebacker and strong safety. After posting 22 tackles as a junior, Barnó had his best season as a senior with 71 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss, 2.0 sacks, two forced fumbles, and two interceptions.

A no-star linebacker recruit out of high school, Barnó wasn't ranked by the online recruiting services and was widely underrecruited, partly because of academic issues. He came close to signing with Liberty in the 2017 recruiting class but didn't qualify in time. Barnó attended Butler Community College in El Dorado, Kan., for two seasons, where he combined for 91 tackles, 5.5 sacks, three forced fumbles, and two interceptions. A three-star JUCO recruit, he was the No. 4 outside linebacker and narrowed his college choice to Nebraska and Virginia Tech, choosing the Hokies because of proximity to his family. His father (Willie) passed away from Stage 4 prostate cancer in 2007 when Amare was 10. His mother (Tonía) remarried (Keith Middleton), and he now has 11 siblings in his blended family. Barnó accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Owns a long, stretched-out frame with toned definition ... impressive athlete — balanced, flexible, and twitchy ... quick off the blocks to be a three-way pass rusher ... has untapped potential in the twist game ... flashes power as a rusher when he has a few steps of build-up momentum to burst and drive into contact ... uses a full-arm extension to keep himself detached from blockers ... can spin off contact to chase down and keep contain vs. escaping quarterbacks ... comfortable standing up and spying as a linebacker (played a hybrid safety role in high school) ... quiet and introverted by nature, but well-liked among his teammates ... experienced on special teams (256 snaps over the past three seasons), especially punt coverage (three tackles in 2021).

WEAKNESSES: Lean lower body and doesn't have the body type to add more bulk/mass ... lacks a powerful base and can be folded up like a cheap suit when he doesn't establish proper leverage ... too easily stood up and displaced in the run game when he stops his feet ... taller pad level can be a hindrance when rushing and setting the edge ... pass rush plan lacks focus or zing ... secondary moves are foreseeable and lack sustainable power ... relies more on motor than instincts and can be late to locate ... mixed results when asked to drop and cover space — coverage awareness is still a work-in-progress ... battled through a strained hip flexor during his junior season (September 2020) ... disappointing backfield production as a senior.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Virginia Tech, Barnó was the boundary defensive end (stand up and three-point stance) in former defensive coordinator Justin Hamilton's 4-3 base. After playing mostly linebacker in high school, JUCO and when he arrived in Blacksburg, he moved to defensive end prior to the 2020 season and put himself on the NFL radar with 16.0 tackles for loss (third-best in the FBS) as a junior. Although his pass rush lacks nuance, Barnó is shot out of a cannon with his get-off and bendy athleticism, occasionally flashing speed-to-power. In the run game, he has range and moves well in space, but his stack-and-shed skills are immature, and he lacks the lower body strength to anchor down and set a strong edge. Overall, Barnó is raw and underpowered, but he is long and twitched-up with rush skills that have yet to be unlocked once/if he learns how to get the most out of his athletic gifts. He is a developmental pass rusher who should play on special teams as an NFL rookie.

GRADE: 4th Round

21. CHRISTOPHER ALLEN | Alabama 6034 | 241 lbs. | rSR. Baton Rouge, La. (Southern Lab) 8/12/1998 (age 23.71) #4

BACKGROUND: Christopher “Chris” Allen grew up in Baton Rouge and attended Southern University Laboratory School on LSU’s campus for high school (teammates with LB Damone Clark, RB Tyrion Davis-Price and several other FBS recruits). He was a four-year letterman for the Kittens and established himself as one of the top linebacker recruits in the state as a sophomore while also seeing offensive snaps as a wide receiver. As a junior, Allen helped Southern Lab to a 10-3 record and the 2015 Division IV state championship, earning All-State and All-Metro honors with 112 tackles, 16.0 sacks and an interception. He led the program to a 14-1 record in 2016 and back-to-back titles as a senior. Allen again earned All-State and All-Metro honors and was named the state’s defensive MVP with 82 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss, and 6.0 sacks. He also lettered in track with personal bests of 48’8.5 in the shot put, 86’2 in the discus and 103’2 in the javelin.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Allen was the No. 4 inside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 5 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He had every SEC program clamoring for his pledge, but he narrowed down his choice to Alabama and LSU, calling it a 50-50 decision. Ultimately, Allen spurned his hometown school for Nick Saban and the Crimson Tide. He graduated with his degree (December 2020). Allen missed the 2021 season after injuring his foot in the opener and could have returned to Tuscaloosa for a sixth season in 2022 but decided to enter the 2022 NFL Draft instead.

PRO DAY	6033	238	32 3/8	9 3/4	81 1/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout — right foot)

STRENGTHS: Physically strapped together with a sculpted body type ... balanced feet with lower body twitch for each direction change ... adequate initial quickness out of his rush stance ... his knee and body flexibility help him bend the edge ... surprises blockers with his physicality at the point of attack, using club/swipe moves to force his way through blockers’ shoulders ... sets a hard edge with his stone hands to extend, shock and lock out ... leverages and contains as a run defender ... pounces as a tackler to slam the ball carrier to the ground ... shows a knack for ripping the football out with four career forced fumbles ... appears comfortable dropping into zones and playing traffic cop ... has worked his way back from two major injuries.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks elite measurements for NFL trench work ... his arc acceleration is solid but not special ... has an undeveloped pass rush arsenal, and his sequencing lacks creativity ... his range vs. the run is average ... can be late to feel and anticipate side-angled blocks on outside runs ... missed tackles were an issue for him on his 2020 tape ... his college résumé is incomplete with only five starts in five seasons ... wasn’t a special teamer in college ... suffered two major injuries in the past four years: tore his ACL (August 2018) and underwent surgery, sidelining him for the 2018 season; suffered a fractured right foot in the season opener (September 2021), requiring season-ending surgery.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Alabama, Allen played strongside linebacker in head coach Nick Saban’s hybrid 3-4 scheme, standing up on the edge and putting his hand on the ground on third downs. After leading the SEC in tackles for loss in 2020, he was poised for a breakout season in 2021 but played only 10 snaps in the opener before a foot injury sidelined him for the year (looked impressive in those 10 snaps vs. Miami (Fla.) with three tackles and a strip sack). Allen plays with excellent play strength and hand violence to stay detached from blockers in the run game and as a pass rusher. He needs to become better schooled with the art of pass rush, but he displays the natural twitch and upfield attack skills worth developing. Overall, Allen has some tweener traits, and the medicals are obviously a red flag, but he could wind up being a steal as the forgotten prospect in a loaded edge rusher class. He projects as a rotational NFL pass rusher with upside to be more.

GRADE: 4th Round

22. JESSE LUKETA | Penn State 6027 | 253 lbs. | SR. Ottawa, Ontario (Mercyhurst) 1/15/1999 (age 23.29) #40

BACKGROUND: Jesse Luketa (LU-ket-uh), who is the youngest of eight children, was born in Edmonton, Alberta and raised in South Ottawa, Ontario, in the Heron Gate neighborhood with his mother (Rose). He started playing football in the fifth grade at McMaster Catholic School and played running back for the South Ottawa Mustangs (grew up playing with Dallas Cowboys DL Neville Gallimore). He originally attended St. Patrick’s High School in Ottawa as a freshman. With hopes of pursuing his dreams of playing football, Luketa left his home and moved to the U.S. at the age of 15, transferring to Mercyhurst Preparatory School in Erie, Pa. He was a three-year letterman and originally played safety before moving to linebacker. As a junior, Luketa established himself as a top recruit with 88 tackles, 15.0 tackles for loss, 9.0 sacks and five interceptions (two returned for touchdowns). As a senior, he helped Mercyhurst to a 10-1 record and the 2017 District 10 Class AAA championship game. Luketa finished his senior year with 69 tackles and four interceptions. He also lettered in basketball as a junior.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Luketa was the No. 10 inside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Pennsylvania. He received more than 30 scholarship offers, including LSU, Ohio State and Stanford, but he was drawn to Penn State and joined an impressive recruiting class that included Micah Parsons, Jayson Owhe, Jahan Dotson and Pat Freiermuth. Luketa graduated with his degree in criminology and is working on a second degree in sociology. He opted out of the bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Thick, brawny body type with adequate length ... displays the twitched-up lower body to elude blockers with lateral quickness ... flashes an open-field burst to cover ground and close in pursuit ... extremely active and trusts his keys/reads ... adjusts his pursuit angles on the move and closes with a head of steam ... targets the midsection of the ball carrier and accelerates through contact as a tackler ... fills with physical hands and striking power to create knock-back at contact ... takes on blockers with a strong base ... scratches and crawls to the football with a relentless motor ... two-year team captain and a “really good worker” according to his coaches ... highly experienced on special teams coverages (627 snaps the last four seasons) ... cycled between inside linebacker, outside linebacker and defensive end at Penn State.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have ideal fluidity or change-of-direction skills ... his hands are heavy, but he doesn't consistently separate from blockers ... a beat late with his anticipation skills and needs to better see through traffic ... frenetic play style and takes too many wasted steps ... not a natural pass rusher ... doesn't have an extensive catalog of rush moves and his attack lacks set-up ... easily engulfed by size at the line of scrimmage ... too reactive and tight in coverage ... struggles to challenge seam or middle-of-the-field throws ... solid tackle production over his career, but logged only one interception and a half sack ... background requires vetting after he was named in a lawsuit that alleged he (and Micah Parsons and Yetur Gross-Matos) hazed and sexually harassed younger players.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Penn State, Luketa bounced between defensive end and linebacker in defensive coordinator Brent Pry's hybrid front-seven. The Canadian native put his name on the NFL radar as a junior and had his most complete season as a senior, showing off his versatility and finishing third on the team in tackles for loss (8.5). A charged-up athlete, Luketa has an aggressive field demeanor with chase speed and finishing instincts. Although he has some tweener traits and frenetic habits, he usually plays assignment sound to fill/spill and create knock-back at contact. Overall, Luketa doesn't have a great feel as a pass rusher and lacks consistency in coverage, but he is a good-sized athlete and covers ground with his active pursuit motor. He projects as a regular on special teams coverages and a hybrid rush linebacker in sub.

23. ISAIAH THOMAS | Oklahoma 6047 | 266 lbs. | rSR. Tulsa, Okla. (Memorial) 12/3/1998 (age 23.40) #95

BACKGROUND: Isaiah Thomas, who is one of four children, grew up in Tulsa with his mother (Leslie Sones). He fell in love with basketball at an early age (he is named after the NBA Hall of Famer) and started playing youth football at age 7. Thomas enrolled at Memorial High and earned immediate starting reps at defensive end as a freshman. As a senior, he posted 71 tackles and 11.0 sacks and was named a U.S. Army All-American. Thomas also played all four years on offense, initially at offensive tackle before moving to tight end as a senior (seven touchdown catches). Thomas played basketball all four seasons and, after losing in the state title game as a junior, he helped lead Memorial to the 2017 Class 5A state championship. He led the team with 11.2 points and 10.0 rebounds per game as a power forward/center.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Thomas was the No. 20 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Oklahoma. He considered offers from Alabama, Missouri and Tennessee, but in the end, he looked to stay in-state and committed to Oklahoma over Oklahoma State. Thomas earned his undergraduate degree (May 2021). He elected to skip Oklahoma's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6050	265	33 1/2	9 3/4	80	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	23 (position drills and bench only — choice)

STRENGTHS: Long, moldable frame and looks the part ... heavy-handed rusher who gets blockers moving in reverse ... go-to rush move is a forceful chop/swipe to knock down the reach of blockers ... long-arm and spin moves have improved with each game ... able to make himself skinny to barrel through gaps ... good pursuit from the backside ... holds ground vs. double-teams and not easily rerouted in the run game ... sees through blocks to contain the run on the edge ... four forced fumbles the past two years ... outgoing people-person with a positive attitude that helped make him a senior captain in 2021 ... led the team in sacks each of the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Average athlete ... tight-hipped and change-of-direction lags ... below-average tackler and leaves too much production on the field ... plays out of control, which puts a dent in his ability to finish ... doesn't have the technique or know-how to quickly shed blocks once engaged ... pass rush quickly loses life once his initial attack is stymied ... uninspired secondary moves ... inconsistent motor and may shut down before the whistle ... arrested and charged with misdemeanor DWI (June 2021) and didn't play the season opener vs. Tulane.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oklahoma, Thomas lined up at defensive end (usually the field side) in former defensive coordinator Alex Grinch's 3-3-5 base scheme. Although he doesn't have the same athleticism or rush skills as teammate Nik Bonitto, he led the Sooners in sacks each of the past two seasons. Thomas is a stout edge-setter and creates consistent movement at contact when he rushes with momentum, displaying inside/outside versatility. However, he is slow to collect his feet, redirect or break down in space, and the missed plays/tackles pile up on tape. Overall, Thomas has subpar get-off quickness and finishing skills, but he has NFL-level size, length and strength to be a rotational defensive end in a 4-3 base defense, kicking inside in sub packages.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

24. TYREKE SMITH | Ohio State 6033 | 254 lbs. | SR. Cleveland, Ohio (Cleveland Heights) 2/14/2000 (age 22.21) #11

BACKGROUND: Tyreke (tie-REEK) Smith, who is the youngest of four children, was born in Cleveland, but he grew up in Southern California with his family. He picked up football at age 6 and played Pop Warner through the fourth grade but gave up the sport after multiple concussions and decided to focus on basketball. When he was 13, Smith and his family relocated from Los Angeles to Cleveland Heights (his father's hometown) to care for his grandparents. He enrolled at Cleveland Heights High and earned a spot on the varsity basketball team as a freshman. Prior to his junior season, the football coaches coaxed him back to the sport, and he was so impressive in practices that he started receiving scholarship offers before his first game. After missing some time as a junior because of a broken fibula, Smith was Ohio's Division I Co-Defensive Player of the Year as a senior with 70 tackles, 23.0 tackles for loss and 11.0 sacks. He also had eight catches for 192 yards and four touchdowns as a tight end on offense. Smith continued to play varsity basketball and led the team in scoring and rebounding as a senior.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Smith was the No. 4 weakside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Ohio. He received a dozen scholarship offers before he played in a game. Smith collected almost 40 offers before narrowing his list to a final five of Alabama, Ohio State, Oregon, Penn State and USC. He initially committed to Penn State the summer before his senior year but flipped to Ohio State a month before signing day. His older brother (Malik) played basketball at UNC Asheville (2016-17) before transferring to Bryant (2017-18). His father (Randy) and mother (Michelle) met at Point Park University (Pa.), where they both played college basketball. Randy (1989-93) was inducted into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame. Tyreke graduated with his degree in sports industry (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6033	255	33 3/4	10	80 7/8	-	-	-	-	9'9"	4.26	7.06	-	(stood on Combine runs, vertical)

STRENGTHS: Explodes upfield with the arc speed to bend and dip the corner ... loose-jointed and has the lateral agility to ghost or euro step the tackle (his basketball background is obvious) ... quick cutting footwork to cross the face of blockers ... boasts a semi-productive rip-swipe move ... physically strapped together and an active hand-fighter to work his way off blockers ... adequate length to set the edge and hold his own at the point of attack ... excellent pursuit speed from the backside or when chasing to the sideline ... can turn and run with running backs out of the backfield ... had a strip sack (that led to a defensive touchdown) on the 2021 Penn State tape ... productive in the classroom as a 4.0 GPA high school student and two-time Academic All-Big Ten honoree.

WEAKNESSES: His pass rush plan lacks cohesion ... doesn't have the recovery balance to consistently get back on track ... bursts upfield but needs to be more technically sound with his hands at the top of his rush ... his snap anticipation runs hot/cold ... inconsistent flattening skills, and will fly past the quarterback ... sluggish eyes and reroute plan vs. blockers ... struggles to power through redirect blocks ... his change-of-direction stalls out when he plays high ... several pass rushers in this class had better single-season production than Smith's career stat line ... questionable football durability: played through a groin injury as a freshman that required offseason surgery (June 2019), which held him out of the first three games as a sophomore; missed three games as a senior because of injury; didn't play football most of his childhood because of multiple concussions.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ohio State, Smith lined up at left defensive end in former defensive coordinator Kerry Coombs' four-man front. He was considered one of the prizes of the 2018 recruiting class by Urban Meyer and led the Buckeyes in quarterback pressures in 2021, but injuries were a common theme all four of his seasons in Columbus. A physically gifted athlete, Smith has the get-off burst, arc quickness and active hands to challenge blockers. However, his inconsistent contact balance and slow recognition give an early advantage to blockers and disrupt his timing/counters. Overall, Smith has athletic developmental traits to be an NFL pass rusher, but he must improve his pass rush plan and learn how to string moves together to have more of an impact. He projects as a developmental role player with starting potential if he can stay healthy.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

25. MICHEAL CLEMONS | Texas A&M 6052 | 263 lbs. | rSR. Garland, Texas (Sachse) 8/21/1997 (age 24.69) #2

BACKGROUND: Micheal Clemons attended Sachse High in Garland, a northeast suburb of Dallas. Behind Devine Ozigbo and Devin Duvernay, Sachse went 11-1 his junior season in 2013, but Clemons, an undersized running back (160 pounds), didn't see significant playing time and spent time away from the team as he was trying to transfer to a school in Oklahoma. As a senior at Sachse, Clemons switched to defense and was a projected starting linebacker, but he tore his groin in the first game and missed most of the 2014 season.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Clemons didn't have much film, and colleges had no reason to pursue him as a serious prospect. Based on a recommendation, the coaches at Cisco Community College took a chance on the injured running back and linebacker. Clemons spent his redshirt season in 2015 rehabbing his injury, hitting the weights (added 40 pounds), and transitioning to defensive end. As a redshirt freshman in 2016, he posted 30 tackles, 8.5 tackles for loss and 2.5 sacks in six games and drew the attention of several Power 5 programs. A three-star junior college recruit, Clemons was the No. 3 strongside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class (behind Isaiah Buggs and Javon Kinlaw) and received scholarship offers from Auburn, Missouri, Ole Miss, Tennessee and others, but with Texas A&M sending Myles Garrett and Daeshon Hall to the NFL, he saw a great opportunity with the Aggies. Clemons graduated with his undergraduate degree (August 2019). He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility by the NCAA and returned for his fifth season at Texas A&M in 2021 (after two seasons at the juco level). Clemons accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: A fully-developed man with prototypical measurements and cut -vantage ... connects with strong, active hands and transitions well off his initial strike ... noticeable burst and bend to wrap the outside shoulder of the tackle ... stays home as a run defender and sets a physical edge ... no concerns about his motor on tape ... named a senior captain, and the Texas A&M coaches are quick to point out his leadership and the adversities he has overcome (head coach Jimbo Fisher: "He puts his heart and soul into everything he does.") ... had a productive senior season with 11.0 tackles for loss in 10 games.

WEAKNESSES: His hands are active and heavy but often out of control and mistimed ... lacks diversity in his rush setup and attack ... his lack of counter measures will stall his pass rush ... slow off the snap and must improve his first step anticipation ... will get tall in the run game and must improve his run game leverage to strengthen his anchor ... more missed tackles on tape than you want to see for a player with his length and power ... over-aged and will be 25 before his first NFL game ... his extensive injury history is a red flag, including a foot injury (August 2018) that led to him redshirting in 2018 and ankle surgery (November 2020) that sidelined him for the second half of the 2020 season ... his off-field decision-making deserves scrutiny after he was arrested twice in a three-month span in 2021: arrested and charged (August 2021) with unlawful carrying of a weapon, failure to identify/giving false information, less than two ounces of marijuana possession, and driving with an invalid license; he was previously arrested (May 2021) for driving with an invalid license.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Clemons lined up at defensive end in former defensive coordinator Mike Eklo's four-man front. He spent seven years at the college level (five in College Station, two at junior college) and battled several injuries. But he enjoyed a productive senior season (at 24 years old) with 11.0 tackles for loss in 10 games, including a 3.5-sack performance in the season finale vs. LSU. With his frame, length, and athleticism, Clemons is straight out of central casting and at his best using his forward lean and strike power to create leverage points and open his rush opportunities. A late bloomer, he didn't play defensive end until junior college, and he is still developing his hand use and discovering how to unlock all of his talent. Overall, Clemons has several red flags (age, injury history, off-field decision-making), but he owns NFL physical traits with the functional strength vs. the run and speed-to-power rush skills to handle edge responsibilities. He projects as a rotational NFL end who can play in either even or odd fronts (his flashes are reminiscent of Darrell Taylor at Tennessee).

GRADE: 5th Round

26. DAVID ANENIH | Houston 6020 | 245 lbs. | rSR. Arlington, Texas (Mansfield Timberview) 8/15/1999 (age 22.70) #12

BACKGROUND: David Anenih (uh-Ninny) grew up playing soccer before making the switch to football as his go-to sport. He attended Mansfield Timberview High in Arlington, where he was a multi-sport standout. Anenih became a starter as a junior and posted 40 tackles, 9.0 tackles for loss and a forced fumble. As a senior, he earned First Team All-District and Honorable Mention Class 5A All-State honors as a senior. Anenih also lettered in track and set a personal-best in the 100 meters (10.88) as a sophomore and finished first in districts in the 100 meters as a junior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Anenih was the No. 64 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 159 recruit in the state of Texas. He picked up a handful of Big 12 offers (Baylor, Iowa State, Kansas State, Oklahoma State, Texas Tech), but decided to sign with Houston. Anenih took advantage of the extra season of eligibility and returned to Houston for his fifth season in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Athletic rusher with a long, muscular body type ... flashes burst at the snap to spring into blockers and disrupt their rhythm ... uses his body control and dip to run the arc ... able to shoot his hands with forward lean and leg drive to get blockers moving in reverse ... his hands stay active and violent from start to finish ... has the pursuit speed to close ground in a blink ... uses his length to lock out as an edge-setter ... tracks the backfield action well to spy, mirror and make plays ... registered a forced fumble in each of the past four seasons ... played in 56 career games and showed steady improvements each year.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal bulk and looks more like a linebacker than hand-down rusher ... work in progress as a run defender ... can be out-angled and moved off his spot when his hands aren't on time ... his pass rush will stall quickly when he doesn't win with his first step ... his speed-to-power moves will meet more resistance vs. NFL-level anchors ... can be deterred by chip blocks ... his move-to-move transitions tend to be patchy vs. physical blockers ... unproven working in reverse as an off-ball player ... his motor overheats, leading to overpursuit and missed tackles ... never had more than five sacks in a season in college.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Houston, Anenih was a boundary edge rusher in defensive coordinator Doug Belk's scheme. A late bloomer, he returned to Houston for his extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and earned draftable grades with his improvements as a super senior in 2021. Anenih is a bendy rusher with the arc speed to capture the corner, but he is still crafting his counters when he doesn't win with his first step. Though he sets a firm edge and plays relentless in pursuit, he can be washed in the run game and lacks point-of-attack technique. Overall, Anenih has tweener traits and is still unpolished for an older prospect, but his get-off quickness, versatile athleticism and length are draftable ingredients. He isn't scheme-dependent but projects best as a rush linebacker in a 3-4 scheme.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

27. ZACHARY CARTER | Florida 6042 | 282 lbs. | rSR. Tampa, Fla. (Hillsborough) 4/7/1999 (age 23.06) #6

BACKGROUND: Zachary "Zach" Carter was born and raised in North Tampa, Fla., and started playing pee wee football for the Bay Area Raiders at age 7. At age 9, he stopped playing football to focus on baseball and basketball. After returning to football in the eighth grade, Carter enrolled at Hillsborough High, where he was a two-sport letterman. He saw varsity reps as a freshman, when he started the final five games at offensive tackle in 2013. Carter started on both the offensive and defensive lines as a sophomore and registered 73 tackles and 3.0 sacks. As a junior, he saw reps at tight end and tackle on offense and was unblockable at defensive end with 76 tackles and 5.5 sacks. Carter played more defensive tackle as a senior and led Hillsborough to an 8-2 finish with 56 tackles and 6.5 sacks to earn 2016 First Team All-County and Tampa Player of the Year honors. He also lettered in basketball and averaged better than 11.0 points and 9.0 rebounds per game over his final three seasons as a power forward on varsity.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Carter was the No. 3 strongside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 23 recruit in the state of Florida. His recruitment took off during his junior season, and he collected more than 40 offers, including national powers like Alabama, Georgia and Ohio State. However, Carter grew up dreaming of playing for the Gators and signed with Florida, becoming the school's top-ranked defensive recruit in the 2017 class. His older brother (Frank) played offensive guard at FCS-level Jackson State (2014-16). Carter skipped Florida's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Moldable frame with adequate length ... accelerates quickly and gets into the chest of blockers ... transfers the energy from his first two steps into contact and leverages his body to generate movement ... hands are a blur ... has an array of rush moves, including an efficient arm-over and swipe technique to slingshot past blockers ... quick to fire through gaps and reset his vision to find the ball carrier ... uses length to lock out, read, and contain the edge in the run game ... wins with extra effort, and his motor stays cranked ... versatile, with experience up and down the defensive line from the A-gap to outside the tackle.

WEAKNESSES: Narrow rusher and doesn't have the body flexibility to bend the edge ... average explosion and inconsistent snap anticipation, a bad combo for a defensive lineman ... doesn't have natural pass rush instincts ... flashes a variety of rush moves but struggles to efficiently patch them together ... physical hands can knock him off his rush track ... finds himself out-flanked in the run game ... late to unwind from blocks and must improve his shed skills ... lack of flexibility hurts his ability to break down in small spaces, leading to missed tackles ... below-average production and averaged less than three tackles per game as a college starter.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Florida, Carter was used up and down the defensive line in former defensive coordinator Todd Grantham's scheme, spending most of his time as either a three-technique or five-technique. His pass rush efficiency and backfield production improved each season in Gainesville, with 20.5 tackles for loss over his final 24 games. Carter is at his best with a runway, where he can rush head-up with physical hands to generate power, extending into blockers and putting them on skates. He has quick read-and-react ability in the run game, but powerful blockers can out-leverage him, leaving him late to shed. Overall, Carter is limited in the ways he wins as a pass rusher because of his stiffness and undeveloped counters, but he is a high-effort, quick-footed athlete who is well-versed with various defensive techniques. He projects as a rotational base end in the NFL.

GRADE: 6th Round

28. JEFFREY GUNTER | Coastal Carolina 6043 | 258 lbs. | rSR. Durham, N.C. (Riverside) 6/1/1999 (age 22.91) #94

BACKGROUND: Jeffrey Gunter grew up in Durham and started playing football at age 5. He enrolled at Riverside High, where he primarily lined up at safety and linebacker and finished his junior season with 28 tackles and 6.0 tackles for loss, earning All-Conference honors. At only 185 pounds, Gunter made the transition to defensive end as a senior and finished his 2016 season with 55 tackles, 12.0 tackles for loss, 8.0 sacks and an interception to earn All-Conference and All-Area honors. He also saw snaps on offense as a senior and had a touchdown reception.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Gunter was the No. 178 strongside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 105 recruit in the state of North Carolina. At only 185 pounds as a senior, he went overlooked as a recruit and received several FCS offers, but Coastal Carolina took a chance and gave him his only FBS offer. After two seasons, Gunter entered the transfer portal and signed with Syracuse in February 2019. However, he backed out of that commitment a few weeks later and flipped to NC State, which is located 15 minutes from where he grew up. Gunter made the late switch because his mother (Jennifer) was going through an "ugly" divorce and needed his support. After sitting out the 2019 season with the Wolfpack because of transfer rules, he didn't fit well with the coaching staff and decided to enter the transfer portal again, landing back at Coastal Carolina for his final two seasons. Gunter has been open about his long bouts of depression and the value of therapy to help mental health. He graduated with his degree in economics (December 2020). Gunter accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	256	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	30 (stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Owns a moldable frame with adequate length ... above-average initial quickness to threaten the corner ... finishes with closing speed that most quarterbacks can't escape ... rushes with aggression and spurts of power, flashing a forceful long-arm move ... expanded his pass rush arsenal as a senior, including effective cross-chop and club-rip moves ... has a knack for knocking the ball out (eight forced fumbles over the past two seasons) ... alert in the run game, and his hustle boosts his tackle production ... blocked a pair of kicks in college ... productive, durable and played in 48 of a possible 49 games in his four seasons at Coastal.

WEAKNESSES: Stiff-hipped with poor flexibility when attempting to bend the corner ... loses his balance with sudden direction change ... late to protect his chest, and can be stymied by the punch of blockers ... still learning how to cleverly use his hands as a rusher ... his power moves lack potency to consistently bully blockers at the point of attack ... inconsistent edge-setter who can be widened out by drive blockers ... his hyper-charged pursuit leaves him out of control as a tackler, sliding off or missing the ball carrier ... NFL coaches view his play demeanor as a positive, but he needs to show more control with his aggression ... missed the 2021 bowl game because of a nagging ankle injury (December 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Coastal Carolina, Gunter played the "Bandit" edge rusher position in defensive coordinator Chad Staggs' 3-4 base scheme. His four-year stint with the Chanticleers was sandwiched around one season at NC State, finishing his Coastal Carolina career No. 2 in tackles for loss (40.0) and sacks (18.0), behind his mentor Tarron Jackson (2021 sixth-rounder by the Philadelphia Eagles). Gunter bursts off the snap and flashes disruptive traits thanks to his closing speed and football radar. However, he relies more on aggression and effort than a strategic rush plan and lacks the fluidity to easily patch moves together. Overall, Gunter is tightly wound as a pass rusher, and his inconsistent power could limit his pro ceiling, but he has projectable linear athleticism with the competitive energy that is easy to appreciate. He projects as a subpackage rusher with the potential to be more with continued development.

GRADE: 6th Round

29. ESEZI OTOMEWO | Minnesota 6052 | 282 lbs. | rSR. Indianapolis, Ind. (Ben Davis) 3/9/1999 (age 23.14) #9

BACKGROUND: Ezezi (uh-SAY-zee) Otomewo (o-TOE-may-woh), who has Nigerian roots, grew up in Indianapolis and attended Ben Davis High, where he was a four-year letterman, seeing time on both sides of the ball. He was part of Ben Davis' 2014 state championship as a sophomore and worked himself into the starting rotation as a junior, finishing with 27 tackles and 2.0 sacks. Otomewo had his best season as a senior with 69 tackles, 16.0 tackles for loss, 8.0 sacks, one forced fumble and a blocked punt. He also lettered in basketball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Otomewo was the No. 82 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 20 recruit in the state of Indiana. After his junior season, he started to receive MAC offers (Miami of Ohio, Toledo) followed by a several Power 5 offers including Illinois, Iowa State and Syracuse. As a senior, Otomewo originally committed to Western Michigan but flipped to Minnesota when head coach P.J. Fleck jumped from WMU to the Gophers. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to participate because of injury.

PRO DAY	6053	284	34 7/8	9 3/8	81 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (no workout — knee)

STRENGTHS: Long and physical with a frame that can continue to be molded ... shows a base understanding of how to play the run ... flashes the ability to leverage the point, lock out and track the football ... anchors and maintains his vertical depth when he uses proper sink and pad level ... plays with the initial quickness that surprises blockers ... makes himself skinny to leak through gaps and into the backfield ... uses his long strides to chase from the backside ... keeps his foot down on the gas pedal and stays dogged in his pursuit ... keeps the mental mistakes to a minimum (zero penalties in 2021) ... played on punt return coverage the past four seasons ... added almost 70 pounds since high school and has shown steady progress each season.

WEAKNESSES: Raw as a pass rusher, both in his set-up and execution ... needs to continue adding bulk and developing in the weight room ... plays high and can be knocked backward by tight ends ... needs to better understand leverage points to take full advantage of his length at contact ... late to read and sort through the action, hindering his ability to play out in front ... wasn't a stat sheet filler in college, and that is unlikely to change in the NFL ... found himself limited throughout the draft process, missing the Senior Bowl and NFL Combine because of a knee injury.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Minnesota, Otomewo was the field defensive end in defensive coordinator Joe Rossi's 4-3 base, also lining up over the tackle or over the B gap. Along with his roommate Boye Mafe, he formed one half of the Gophers "Nigerian nightmares" at pass rusher, honoring the original "Nigerian Nightmare" (Christian Okoye). When he uses proper leverage and timing, Otomewo can stack and shed blocks to make tackles in his gap. However, offenses are not afraid to run at him because his hands, leverage points and recognition skills are wild, giving the advantage to blockers. Overall, Otomewo has disjointed rush moves and must maximize his power with more consistent biomechanics, but he is a tooly five-technique prospect who has yet to reach his football ceiling.

30. TYREE JOHNSON | Texas A&M 6024 | 248 lbs. | rSR. Washington, D.C. (St. John's) 5/19/1999 (age 22.94) #3

BACKGROUND: Tyree Johnson grew up in the Washington, D.C., area and originally attended Bowie High in Maryland. After a standout freshman season, he transferred to St. John's College High in D.C., where he joined a talent-laden team that included top recruits like Terrell Lewis (Alabama), Calvin Ashley (Auburn) and Aggies teammate Aaron Hansford. After he worked himself into the mix as a sophomore, Johnson had an outstanding junior year with 43 tackles, 21.0 tackles for loss, and 10.0 sacks, also playing on offense at running back. Johnson led St. John's to an eight-win season in 2016 and finished his senior season with 66 tackles, 32.0 tackles for loss, 11.0 sacks and two forced fumbles, earning All-Region honors.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Johnson was the No. 32 weakside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in Washington. St. John's practices were a regular stop for college recruiters, and he finished with more than 30 scholarship offers. Johnson whittled his final list to Maryland, Rutgers, Virginia Tech, Tennessee and Texas A&M, committing to the Aggies because he was looking to get away from where he grew up. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Slippery athlete with explosive spurts off the edge ... rushes with bend and forward lean to help wrap the corner ... uses his natural quickness to achieve leverage mid-rush ... showed improved timing and diversity with his rush sequencing, relying on rips and swims to give blockers trouble ... experienced eyes to adjust his rush depth based on the play flow, finishing with a closing burst to the pocket ... toughed out a foot injury in the second half of the 2021 season ... had excellent sack production over the past three seasons, and tied with DeMarvin Leal for the team-lead with 8.5 sacks as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average size and arm length are evident on tape ... must develop secondary moves vs. stout blockers ... shows marginal play strength with little hope of shedding once blockers lock him up ... has a tough time escaping the grasp of tight ends ... marginal instincts vs. the run, playing from behind and struggling to recover ... his redirect and chase speed are lackluster ... doesn't make enough chase down plays away from the line of scrimmage ... inexperienced reacting to targets as a dropper ... offers little special teams experience ... knee issue was flagged at the NFL Combine and requires further investigation.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Johnson lined up at defensive end in former defensive coordinator Mike Eklo's four-man front. After flashing his pass rush skills as an underclassman, he spent more time in the backfield as a senior, leading the Aggies and finishing third in the SEC in sacks per game (0.71). Johnson has explosive upfield quickness and flexibility to win at the top of his rush and flatten to the quarterback. However, his rush stalls quickly vs. power, and he doesn't make enough plays vs. the run, spending too much time attached to blockers. Overall, the NFL rarely sees pass rushers overcome below-average length and play strength, but his athletic rush skills will give him a chance to survive roster cuts. He projects as a subpackage pass rusher.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

31. CARSON WELLS | Colorado 6026 | 241 lbs. | rSR. Bushnell, Fla. (South Sumter) 2/20/1999 (age 23.19) #26

BACKGROUND: Jacob "Carson" Wells was born in Inverness, Fla., and grew up about an hour north of Tampa on his family's farm, where his father (Larry) raises cattle. He attended South Sumter High (alma mater of Keanu Neal), where he saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman linebacker. As a junior, Wells posted 111 tackles, 25.0 tackles for loss, 6.0 sacks and one forced fumble. Seeing action at defensive end, linebacker and tight end as a senior, he led South Sumter to a 10-win season and was named the defensive player of the year in central Florida, finishing with 96 tackles, 18.0 tackles for loss, 7.0 sacks and two interceptions. Wells also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 11.30 in the 100-meters, 42' in the shot put and 150' in the discus. He was also the valedictorian of his graduating class with a 4.6 weighted GPA.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Wells was the No. 111 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 234 recruit in the state of Florida. He went overlooked by most FBS programs and received only one offer from a Power 5 program: Colorado. Ultimately, Wells committed to the Buffs over nearby South Florida. Wells graduated with degrees in accounting and finance and is pursuing his master's degree in organizational leadership. His grandfather (Paul McCormick) ran track at Florida. Wells accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Experienced standing up or with his hand on the ground ... above-average initial burst to immediately challenge edge blockers with speed ... introduces his hands and reach very early in the rep ... rush moves work for him to win in different ways, including a swipe, rip or chop ... able to catch the wrists of blockers and shuck them away ... has a knack for finding passing lanes when he can't get home ... sets a physical edge vs. the run and has a natural feel for run angles to leverage his side of the field ... his chase motor stays active in pursuit ... comfortable dropping into zones and staying cover aware ... started 27 consecutive games to finish his career.

WEAKNESSES: Tweener size and skill set ... doesn't have elite length, and blockers are able to significantly slow him down once they make contact ... his sequencing and secondary moves are not on an NFL level right now ... needs to use better flexibility through his hips as a rusher ... has average play strength, and doesn't have the power to go through blockers when his leverage isn't right ... will arrive hot as a tackler, which leads to the occasional miss ... long-armed blockers are able to move him from run fits on the edge ... will struggle to be disruptive in coverage vs. NFL skills players ... played minimal special teams outside of his freshman season ... missed two games because of concussion symptoms (September 2019).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Colorado, Wells played a hybrid edge role in defensive coordinator Chris Wilson's 4-3 base, lining up in both a two- and three-point stance. He was a downhill force player for the Buffs with 29 tackles for loss in 18 games the past two seasons, including an FBS-best 2.7 tackles for loss per game in 2020. Wells needs to develop his counter game, but when his upper body timing is connected to his first-step quickness, he can put blockers in vulnerable positions. Although his motor runs hot vs. the run, his anchor is inconsistent, and his coverage duties should be limited vs. NFL speed. Overall, Wells is a productive force player off the edge with his initial quickness and understanding of how to weaponize his hands, but his tweener skills lower his next-level ceiling. He projects best as a situational pass rusher or rotational "Sam" linebacker in a 3-4 scheme.

BACKGROUND: Mika (MEE-kah) Tafua (tah-FOO-ah), who has two sisters, grew up in the coastal city of Laie, not far from Honolulu. He attended Kamehameha High in Honolulu, where he was a multi-sport standout. Tafua earned First Team All-State honors as a junior edge rusher with 86 tackles, 20.0 tackles for loss, 8.0 sacks, four forced fumbles and three pass break-ups, also taking home the state’s Co-Defensive Player of the Year award. He again earned All-State honors as a senior. Tafua also lettered in basketball and track where he finished seventh at the 2013 state championships in the discus (142’7). He also set personal bests of 47’2 in the shot put and 24.71 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Tafua was the No. 19 outside linebacker in the 2015 recruiting class and the No. 5 recruit in the state of Hawaii. He initially committed to BYU after his sophomore year in January 2013, but he reopened his recruitment once he heard from more schools. In the end, he recommitted to BYU, signing with the Cougars over offers from USC, Washington and others. After serving his two-year religious mission, Tafua returned in 2017 and attended the BYU-Utah game, where he reconnected with the Utes’ coaches and flipped to Utah. His father (Lausii) passed away unexpectedly at the age of 57 during Mika’s junior year of high school. His uncle (David Stant) played college football at Hawaii (1987-89) and is the head football coach at Keio University in Tokyo, Japan. Tafua accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Improved his pass rush maturation each season ... quick off the ball with the slant quickness to infiltrate gaps ... understands rush depth and skillfully anticipates blocking landmarks ... attacks with a variety of power moves, including a stab-rip to swipe away the reach of blockers ... stout edge-setter who knocks tight ends into tomorrow ... disciplined run-stopping defender, quickly reading and leveraging gaps ... his gas tank is always full, giving relentless effort, which directly leads to production ... voted a team captain as a senior, and toughs out injuries ... above-average backfield production as a senior in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn’t have ideal length ... plays quick but not twitchy or explosive ... shows hints of hip stiffness at times when attempting to bend the corner ... his snap timing has room for improvement (three offsides penalties in 2021) ... his countering skills can be better once he is locked up by blockers ... will leave some production on the field with his inability to make quick gear changes in the backfield ... doesn’t have the requisite foot speed to drop and be a playmaker in coverage ... older prospect because of his two-year church mission between high school and college ... stayed durable throughout college but played through a sports hernia over the final three games of his senior season (November 2021), requiring surgery.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Utah, Tafua lined up at defensive end in defensive coordinator Morgan Scalley’s four-man front, standing up or rushing with his hand on the ground. He put together a standout final season in Salt Lake City with a conference-best in pressures and sacks and was awarded the 2021 Morris Trophy as the top defensive lineman in the Pac-12 (as voted by conference offensive linemen). Tafua, who will turn 26 as an NFL rookie, is the Energizer bunny as a pass rusher with his quickness and efficient rush plan to create backfield disruption. He is a strong edge-setter and plays with discipline vs. the run, but he will struggle to quickly shed once engaged. Overall, Tafua falls short of what NFL teams ideally want on the edge in terms of length and explosiveness, but he wins with developed rush moves and relentless energy to challenge blockers. He projects as a potential NFL backup, ideally suited as a wide-nine defender.

33. MYRON TAGOVAILOA-AMOSA | Notre Dame 6022 | 270 lbs. | rSR. Ewa Beach, Hawaii (Kapolei) 5/9/1998 (age 23.97) #95

BACKGROUND: Myron Tagovailoa-Amosa, who is the third-oldest of six children, grew up outside of Honolulu and started playing flag football at age 4. He played youth football for his father on the Ewa Beach Sabres in a local league created by his grandfather. He started his prep career at James Campbell High as a freshman (his older brother was a senior) before transferring to Kapolei High, a football powerhouse in Hawaii. As a senior, Tagovailoa-Amosa led Kapolei to a 10-win season and the 2016 conference title. He finished his final season with 34.0 tackles for loss and 18.0 sacks to earn All-State and the conference Defensive Player of the Year honors.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Tagovailoa-Amosa was the No. 18 strongside defensive end in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Hawaii. He received scholarship offers from Oregon, Washington and others, but he his final four consisted of Navy, Notre Dame, USC and Vanderbilt. His family was hoping to see him join his brother at Navy, but his heart was with the Irish. His father (Tulileie Amosa), who was a pastor and football coach, passed away unexpectedly because of blood clots in his lungs in August 2021 at age 53. Myron's older brother (Adam Amosa-Tagovailoa) played offensive line at Navy (2015-18). His cousin (Tua), who is more like a brother, played quarterback at Alabama and was drafted in the first round (No. 5 overall) of the 2020 NFL Draft by the Miami Dolphins. His maternal grandfather (Seu Tagovailoa), who passed away in July 2014, was the High Chief of the Atu'u village in American Samoa. Tagovailoa-Amosa graduated with his degree in business administration (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Has the initial quickness to challenge immediately off the snap ... energetic rusher with an explosive upper body to create knock back with his reach ... looks to introduce diversity to his attack, using a variety of rip, spin and chop moves ... can put down roots and hold his ground vs. single blockers in the run game ... veteran player and it shows, sniffing out play-action or screens ... his effort doesn't wane, regardless of scoreboard or situation ... team captain and well-liked by both the coaches and his teammates ... blocked a field goal as a senior ... has experience adding and losing weight to fit scheme and responsibilities.

WEAKNESSES: Comes with position fit questions ... has untrained counters and struggles to unglue himself from blocks ... fires off the ball, but often aimlessly ... finds himself overextended and off-balanced as he attempts to compensate for his lack of ideal length ... shocking number of missed tackles on his tape because of his inability to break down in the backfield ... doesn't have many answers vs. double teams ... powerful hands will slow and redirect his rush ... missed at least one game each of the past four seasons, including almost all of the 2018 season after surgery to repair a broken foot (September 2018).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Notre Dame, Tagovailoa-Amosa was an outside pass rusher in former defensive coordinator (now head coach) Marcus Freeman's four-man front. A 290-pound defensive tackle as an underclassman, he dropped weight and moved outside the tackle as a defensive end as a senior, setting a career-best in quarterback pressures. Tagovailoa-Amosa is a high-motor player with the active hands and quickness at the snap to challenge blockers. However, he has a tweener body type, and NFL teams question if he has a true position fit at the next level. Overall, Tagovailoa-Amosa creates opportunities for himself with his energy and balance through contact, but he isn't enough of a playmaker rushing the passer or stopping the run. He will have a chance to secure an NFL backup role as a base end.

GRADE: Priority Free Agent

34. TRE WILLIAMS | Arkansas 6041 | 253 lbs. | rSR. Columbia, Mo. (Rock Bridge) #55

BACKGROUND: Tre Williams was raised in Columbia by his mother (Teresa Williams-Crews) and grew up focusing on basketball. He attended Moberly High for two seasons but didn't see much action on the football field. Williams moved and transferred to Columbia's Rock Bridge High where he started at defensive end and posted 18 tackles, 8.0 tackles for loss and 5.5 sacks in six games as a junior in 2014. He missed a chunk of his senior season because of a separated shoulder but still earned Second Team All-State honors. Williams also lettered in basketball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Williams was the No. 31 weakside defensive end in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Missouri. He put his name on the recruiting map as a junior and received offers from Arizona State, Arkansas, Kansas and Missouri. He had a "big brother" relationship with Tigers pass rusher Charles Harris (2017 first-round pick), and Williams signed with his hometown Missouri. After five seasons with the Tigers, he took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and entered the transfer portal. He initially transferred to Houston and spent three months with the program before entering the transfer portal again because it "wasn't a good fit." In April 2021 Williams transferred to Arkansas, where he joined defensive coordinator Barry Odom, his head coach at Missouri. After the 2021 regular season, he was facing a suspension because of a DWI arrest and instead opted to leave the program and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Williams accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Sturdy, well-strapped build ... extends his long arms and heavy hands into contact to slam-and-shed ... uses a physical stab move, and skillfully works off of that ... wears down blocks with his aggressive nature ... forceful through gaps to disrupt the backfield action ... not explosive as a pass rusher, but anticipates the snap well to surprise offensive tackles, forcing holds ... expanded his pass-rush tool box as a senior, including a variety of ghost and rip moves ... has a good sense for how tackles want to set him and uses that against them ... set personal bests as a senior, including earning SEC defensive lineman of the week honors after his matchup vs. Texas A&M.

WEAKNESSES: Undisciplined history both on and off the field ... accounted four 10 penalties as a senior, including four roughing the passer or personal foul calls ... doesn't have elite get-off to challenge the corner with quickness alone ... average speed player when in chase mode ... his radar vs. the run is spotty, with inconsistent gap integrity ... lack of fluidity in his lower body leads to missed tackles and poor change of direction ... his off-field decision-making deserves scrutiny: arrested (December 2018) on suspicion of second-degree assault (Class D Felony) after he got into a fight with his girlfriend where she felt "her life was in danger" (according to police, he hit his girlfriend and began choking her until she almost passed out); the charge was dropped after the victim said she made the marks on her neck worse, and he pled guilty to a misdemeanor charge in July 2019 (received two years' probation and 30 hours of community service) and was reinstated to the Missouri team; arrested (December 2021) for allegedly driving while intoxicated after he fell asleep in a McDonald's drive-thru ... will be a 25-year-old NFL rookie.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Arkansas, Williams played defensive end in defensive coordinator Barry Odom's hybrid front, lining up outside and on the inside shade of the tackle. He had a tumultuous college career because of several off-field incidents and inconsistent play, although he showed promising flashes, especially as a senior. Williams is able to disrupt the rhythm of blockers with his combination of length and effort, barreling through and off blockers with his heavy hands and countering skills. However, he doesn't play with the same instincts in the run game and his tackling range is below average. Overall, Williams will have plenty of questions to answer about his suspect discipline on and off the field, but he still has the attention of NFL teams because of his disruptive ability as a pass rusher.

SUMMARY: Adam Anderson helped lead Rome High to a 15-0 record and the 5A state title in 2017, finishing his senior year with 10.0 sacks. A five-star recruit, he was considered a top-20 recruit nationally and flipped from Georgia to LSU and back to Georgia. He logged only one start in his 46 games in Athens but was an impactful player thanks to his remarkable length and athleticism. Anderson is able to capture the corner with his speed, bend and dip while also showing the off-ball skills to cover backs or play on special teams. He was stamped with first-round grades around the NFL before he was arrested midway through his senior year on suspicion of felony rape (by two different women). He was allowed to hold a pro day for NFL scouts and is currently (as of April 1, 2022) waiting for the prosecution to decide how to proceed. Overall, Anderson is a long, toolsy athlete with starter-level talent, but a potential NFL career is on hold until his legal matters are resolved.

SUMMARY: James Houston IV played at talent-rich American Heritage High for Patrick Surtain Sr. and posted 37 tackles as a junior before missing his senior season (torn ACL). A three-star recruit, he committed to Florida and spent the 2017 season away from the team for his involvement with stolen credit cards. He spent the next three years as a backup before transferring to Jackson State as a senior. He was a dominant edge player in 2021, finishing top three in the FCS in both tackles for loss and sacks. Houston has a twitchy get-off with the balanced athleticism and low pads to open the door around the edge. His hands are physical and persistent, and with his length he can reach blockers before they reach him. He has a knack for forcing fumbles (10 in his career), but he is tightly bound, which leads to missed plays in space. Overall, Houston needs to mature his rush plan, but his length, heavy hands and explosive pursuit of the quarterback are traits worth betting on.

SUMMARY: LaBryan Ray, who is one of three boys, was raised by his father (Gary Sr.) in northern Alabama after his mother (Angela) passed away when he was 6. He attended James Clemens High, where he combined for 237 tackles, 45.0 tackles for loss and 25.0 sacks on the defensive line in his final two seasons. A five-star recruit, Ray was the No. 1 player in the state and a top-30 recruit nationally, committing to Alabama over several other SEC schools. However, an extensive injury history limited his impact in Tuscaloosa. Ray doesn't have the power, range or explosiveness to be disruptive, but he is stout at the point of attack with the hand strength and play recognition to control single-blocks and create gap congestion vs. the run. Overall, Ray has the build and quickness of a rotational 4i or five-technique lineman in the NFL, but strong durability concerns and his inability to stay on the field (only 850 defensive snaps in five seasons) are red flags.

SUMMARY: Joshua Onujiogu (oh-new-jah-WAY-go), who is one of six children, grew up playing football and was a multi-sport athlete at Wareham High (school-record 15.49 in 110-meter hurdles). Playing at a small school (only 22 players on his varsity team), he went underrecruited, and Division III Framingham State was his only offer. He started as a true freshman and posted impressive backfield production each season, finishing his career with 67.0 tackles for loss in 47 games. Onujiogu is undersized with questionable edge-setting strength, but he stays low and flexible in his pass rush with the burst to skim the corner. He stays active with his hands, either taking away his stab at the top of his rush or converting speed to power and barreling through blocks with his forward lean. Overall, Onujiogu has tweener traits and is inexperienced vs. high-level blocking, but he rushes with quick feet, hands and hips and displays the motor and upside worth bringing to an NFL camp.

SUMMARY: Luiji Vilain (vill-ANE) was born and raised in the Ottawa area before enrolling at Episcopal High (Va.) prior to his junior season. He finished his senior year with 45 tackles and 8.0 sacks and was an Under Armour All-American. A four-star recruit, he was a top-five defensive end in the class and committed to Michigan. He struggled to see playing time over his first four years in Ann Arbor and transferred to Wake Forest for his final season in 2021, leading the team in sacks. Vilain has excellent upfield burst, with flexibility and bend at the top of his rush. He looks the part with long arms and large hands to fight his way through the shoulder of blockers, but he must develop his pass-rush plan and counters to keep his rush alive. He tends to be a half-second late tracking the ball in the run game. Overall, Vilain doesn't have the established résumé of a draftable player, but his physical traits are NFL worthy, and scouts believe there is untapped talent there.

SUMMARY: Tariqious (TIE-ree-kuss) Tisdale lettered in basketball and football at Lexington High (halfway between Memphis and Nashville). A three-star recruit, he verbalized to Ole Miss, but didn't qualify academically. He went the junior college route while also taking classes at Jackson State. After two years, he re-committed to Ole Miss and enrolled in 2018. He was part of the defensive line rotation the past four years, playing everywhere from nose tackle to edge rusher. Tisdale boasts an NFL-ready frame with the arm length and heavy hands to rattle pads and put blockers on skates. His get-off has twitch when he correctly times up the snap, although his pad level and upright stature work against him. He must mature his GPS for the football because he lacks quick redirect skills to make up lost ground. Overall, Tisdale's on-field impact hasn't consistently matched his ability, but he is a long, hard-charging athlete with moldable traits to be part of a five-technique rotation.

He was a soccer player who tried and quit football as a junior at Lowell High before picking it back up as a senior. Because of grades and his inexperience on the football field, he spent three seasons at the junior college level. He transferred to Maryland (over Oregon), where he spent the past three seasons, posting career bests as a senior in 2021. Okuayinonu has a stout, muscular body type and flashes the violence in his hands to work through and off blockers to the quarterback. He is somewhat of a tweener, lacking ideal length and arc speed for the outside and struggling to find consistency as an interior defensive lineman. Overall, Okuayinonu plays with more effort than instinct, but his active hands and natural power wear down blockers and allow him to be disruptive from different alignments.

SUMMARY: Ryder Anderson, who is the younger brother of former Oklahoma running back Rodney Anderson, helped Katy High to a state championship as a junior, lining up at defensive end and tight end. A three-star recruit, he was courted by SEC and Ivy League programs, signing with Ole Miss. After four seasons of steadily improving production with the Rebels, he transferred for his final season, joining the Hoosiers. He posted career-best numbers and earned All-Big Ten honors as a senior. Anderson looks the part with his size, strength and length to lock out and control the point of attack. He has a powerful stab move, but his first step quickness is average with heavy legs that lack shifty movements. He offers inside-outside versatility, although his lack of twitch might limit his playmaking radius vs. the run.

Overall, Anderson doesn't have much in his bag of tricks as a pass rusher, but he is a bulldozer downhill with ammo in his hands to power through soft shoulders.

1. DEVONTE WYATT | Georgia 6027 | 304 lbs. | rSR. Decatur, Ga. (Towers) 3/31/1998 (age 24.08) #95

BACKGROUND: Devonte (di-VAHN-tay) Wyatt, who has two older brothers, was born and raised in the Atlanta suburbs and spent his childhood playing multiple sports. He enrolled at Towers High in Decatur and was a four-year letterman on the football team. As a freshman and sophomore, Wyatt bounced between tight end, running back and linebacker as the coaches tried to best utilize his size and speed. He moved to the defensive line as a junior and totaled 7.0 sacks, adding four touchdowns on offense as a tight end. As a senior, Wyatt earned Class 3A First Team All-State honors. Wyatt also lettered in wrestling and track at Towers, participating in the discus, shot put and 100-meter dash (at 280 pounds).

A four-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Wyatt was the No. 17 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 27 recruit in the state of Georgia. He put his name on the recruiting map as a junior, especially after a clip of him running a sub-11 second 100-meter dash went viral on the internet. The summer after his senior year, he attended a South Carolina camp and committed to the Gamecocks. However, Wyatt flipped to his home state Georgia after they offered him a few months later, becoming the first in his family to go to college and the second player from Towers to play football for the Bulldogs. Despite signing with Georgia, his test scores fell short of requirements and he was forced to enroll at Hutchinson Community College in Kansas. Wyatt posted 30 tackles and 3.0 sacks over 11 games in 2017. A four-star JUCO recruit, he didn't waver from his Georgia commitment and joined the football team in December 2017. Wyatt took advantage of the extra year of NCAA eligibility because of COVID and returned for his fifth season in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Quick off the ball with outstanding speed for his size ... rushes with bend and a variety of swim moves ... scrapes laterally to plug gaps and make plays up and down the line of scrimmage ... closes like a locomotive ready to come off the tracks ... strong run fits, attacking the blocker's shoulder and powering to the run lane ... solidly built and plays with adequate length and hand size ... holds his ground at the point of attack and doesn't get bullied ... has a knack for unwinding from blocks and locating the ball carrier ... competes through the whistle and several of his plays on tape were a result of his non-stop effort ... chases from the backside and is always in pursuit ... sound awareness to quickly locate screens or find passing lanes ... blocked a field goal as a senior ... his level of play consistently increased throughout his college career.

WEAKNESSES: Average play recognition ... can be caught off balance and spends too much time on the ground ... his hands are active, but they can be more efficient ... his bull rush can be met by steady resistance ... needs to stay under control as a finisher, often sliding off the ball carrier and missing the tackle ... needs to improve his counters when he receives extra attention ... arrested and charged (February 2020) with three misdemeanors (family violence, criminal trespass, damage to property) after an altercation with a woman at her apartment (the charges were ultimately dropped) ... didn't fill up the stat sheet with only 5.0 career sacks.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, Wyatt played mostly over the B gap as a three-technique in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme, also seeing snaps at nose tackle. He led all Georgia defensive linemen in tackles the last two seasons and took advantage of the extra year of eligibility, enjoying his most complete season in 2021. With his athletic traits, Wyatt can win in different ways off the ball, displaying initial quickness, lateral range and chase down speed. In the run game, he understands how to leverage gaps and find the ball carrier, although he would benefit from becoming a better finisher. Overall, Wyatt needs to play with better control and play recognition, but he fires off the ball and competes with the speed and effort to make an impact on all three downs. Wyatt has NFL starting skills and is the best three-technique tackle in this draft class.

JORDAN DAVIS | Georgia

6063 | 341 lbs. | SR.

Charlotte, N.C. (Mallard Creek)

1/12/2000 (age 22.29)

#99

BACKGROUND: Jordan Davis, who has two younger brothers, grew up in Charlotte with his single mother (Shay Allen). Throughout his childhood, his focus was on basketball and AAU tournaments and he played very little football. He originally attended Hopewell High (Huntersville, N.C.) as a freshman before his family moved and he transferred to Mallard Creek High in Charlotte prior to his sophomore year. Despite very little experience, Davis was pressured to give football a try and split his sophomore year between junior varsity and varsity, lining up mostly as an offensive lineman. He moved up to varsity full-time for his final two seasons and played on both sides of the ball, although it became clear that his future would be on defense. As a senior, Davis helped Mallard Creek to a 14-1 record and the 2017 4AA state championship game, earning First Team All-State honors as a defensive lineman. He also lettered in basketball.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Davis was the No. 29 defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 15 recruit in the state of North Carolina. Despite little varsity experience, his high school coaches pushed him to attend recruiting camps the summer before his junior year and his raw size and talent earned him offers from nearby programs like North Carolina and NC State. Davis added offers from Florida, Florida State and Michigan before committing to Georgia. He declined his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Big-boned, enormous frame with broad shoulders and natural girth ... stout at the point of attack to stand-up blockers and create 10-car pile-ups at the line of scrimmage ... flashes the upper body strength to stack, drive and discard blocks ... unique athletic ability for his size ... nimble footwork and body control to make controlled stops in the backfield (couldn't find any missed tackles on his junior or senior tape) ... outstanding block awareness and quickly finds the football ... shows the range to backdoor blocks and chase down the ball carrier ... makes hustle plays thanks to extra effort ... has experience in goal line situations (12 career snaps and one rushing touchdown) ... has one blocked field goal on his résumé ... humble, fun-loving personality and universally well-liked in the locker room ... turned in an All-American senior season and finished ninth in the 2021 Heisman Trophy voting (Alabama head coach Nick Saban: "He's about as good a player as I've seen for a long time as an inside player on any team.").

WEAKNESSES: Average lateral agility ... doesn't have the gap-shooting quickness or hand moves to be an impactful pass rusher ... his upper half is powerful, but not consistently explosive ... want to see more of an interior push from a player with his power ... his pad level rises almost immediately at contact, giving blockers the leverage advantage ... spends too much time leaning on blocks ... inconsistent backfield vision as a two-gapper ... arrived in Athens at 380 pounds and his weight will need to be monitored ... didn't miss a game as a senior but was sidelined for three games as a junior because of a right elbow injury (October 2020).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Georgia, Davis lined up at nose tackle in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme. After up-and-down play over his first three seasons, he was the anchor of the Bulldogs' 2021 National Championship team and recognized with the Chuck Bednarik Award, which goes to the best defensive player in college football. Despite high pad level, Davis is a hard-to-move space-eater with the point of attack strength to reestablish the line of scrimmage and overwhelm ball carriers as a tackler. He is a talented athlete for a player his size and his motor expands his tackling range, but he was also helped by fewer defensive snaps in 2021 (25.2 per game) compared to 2020 (32.9). Overall, Davis offers limited pass rush value, but he has the size, functional power and block recognition to be a dominant run defender. He projects as a starting NFL nose tackle in multiple fronts.

TRAVIS JONES | Connecticut

6043 | 325 lbs. | SR.

New Haven, Conn. (Wilbur Cross)

#57

BACKGROUND: Travis Jones, who is one of three children, grew up in New Haven (coastal city on the Long Island Sound). He enrolled at Wilbur Cross High, where he spent most of his freshman year on junior varsity before becoming a two-way starter on varsity as a sophomore. As a junior, Jones earned Second Team All-State and helped the team rush for more than 1,500 yards, primarily at center before moving to offensive tackle later in the season. On defense, he finished with 45 tackles and 1.0 sack. As a senior, Jones played left and right offensive tackle and earned multiple First Team All-State honors. On the defensive line, he posted 61 tackles, 7.0 sacks and two forced fumbles in 2017.

A three-star offensive guard recruit out of high school, Jones was the No. 92 offensive guard in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 10 recruit in the state of Connecticut. He originally committed to Rutgers, but decommitted the next day after discussing it with his family. Jones also considered offers from Boston College, Buffalo and Temple, but he bought into the vision at Connecticut. Several schools thought he should stay on offense, but UConn recruited him as a defensive tackle. Jones accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl. He was voted the top defensive tackle during Senior Bowl practices on the National team.

PRO DAY	6044	327	33 5/8	10 1/4	81 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no bench press – left pec)

STRENGTHS: Physically impressive with his broad, thick frame ... has worked hard to reshape his body and weight distribution (lost 30-plus pounds since he arrived at UConn) ... explosive out of his stance and resets the line of scrimmage with his get-off ... doesn't consistently create knock-back, but has the bully power to work blockers off balance and drive them backward ... comfortably forces his way through bodies with long-arm techniques ... will use various swat, rip and snatch moves to leverage gaps ... able to stack and shed at the point of attack using his strong, physical hands ... diagnoses quickly vs. the run and has a feel for where the play is headed ... consistently attracted double teams on tape ... has a quiet and positive attitude off the field, but competes with some mean to him on the field ... voted a senior captain in 2021 and I talked with several teammates who identified him as the "hardest worker" on the team ... posted consistent tackle production each season at UConn and led the team in sacks as a senior ... had dominant reps during Senior Bowl practices.

WEAKNESSES: Still maturing as a pass rusher ... his move-to-move transitions must become more seamless to take advantage of his initial quickness and power ... can be late off the snap and struggles to play from behind ... has some slight stiffness and his pad level must become more consistent ... needs a moment to rev back up after he gears down ... finds himself on the ground more than you want to see ... lost a full season in 2020 because of COVID and missed one game as a senior because of a right foot injury (September 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at UConn, Jones played three-technique and nose tackle in defensive coordinator Lou Spanos' four-man front. Recruited primarily as an offensive guard out of high school, he reshaped his body and developed into an impactful defensive tackle since joining the Huskies, despite a 21-month layoff between the 2019 and 2021 seasons and the program posting a 4-32 record (three of those wins vs. FCS teams) over his four years in college. A big-bodied athlete with strong legs and arms, Jones is quick off the ball and powerful through his hips to be disruptive vs. both the pass and the run. He uses quickness and forceful hand moves to get his nose in the gap, but he needs to harness his momentum and consistently use his secondary moves to shoot through. Overall, Jones' pass rush technique is still a work-in-progress, but he creates problems for interior blockers with his athletic movements and explosive upper body to stack, shed and toss. He projects as an early NFL starter with two-gap potential.

4. PERRION WINFREY | Oklahoma 6035 | 290 lbs. | SR. Maywood, Ill. (Lake Park) 8/15/2000 (age 21.70) #8

BACKGROUND: Perrion (PAIR-ee-ahn) Winfrey grew up in West Chicago before his mother (Chantel Walker) moved them to the suburbs. He started playing football in the fifth grade and attended Lake Park High, where he was a three-year letterman playing defensive end and defensive tackle on defense and tight end on offense. Winfrey earned All-Conference honors as a junior with 32 tackles and 7.0 sacks. As a senior, he finished with 43 tackles and 8.0 sacks, again earning All-Conference honors.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Winfrey was the No. 128 defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 49 recruit in the state of Illinois. He received an offer from Virginia Tech and interest from dozens of other Power 5 programs, but his academics made him a non-starter for most teams. After not qualifying for Division I, Winfrey attended Iowa Western Community College, where he posted 27 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and 4.0 sacks as a freshman. As a sophomore, he finished with 28 tackles, 13.0 tackles for loss and 5.5 sacks. A four-star JUCO recruit, Winfrey was the No. 1 defensive tackle and the No. 1 JUCO recruit overall in the 2020 recruiting class. He received scholarship offers from Alabama, LSU, Penn State, Texas and others before committing to Oklahoma. Winfrey opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, earning Game MVP honors.

STRENGTHS: Intimidating size with rare wingspan and length ... plays like a bull in a China shop ... heavy, powerful hands to beat up and displace blockers ... forces his way through bodies with rip/swipe moves to create his own rush lanes ... able to scrape laterally until he finds the weak spot on the line of scrimmage ... uses his length to lock out and control blockers ... outstanding effort to chase plays up and down the line ... forceful tackler with outstanding grip strength to finish once he gets his hands on the ball carrier ... blocked a FG in 2020 ... outstanding backfield production with 40.5% of his tackles occurring in the backfield ... dominant Senior Bowl performance during the week and earned game MVP honors.

WEAKNESSES: High cut with lower body stiffness ... below average change of direction skills ... struggles to break down in small spaces (like the backfield), leading to missed tackles and production left on the field ... too willing to sacrifice his balance for the bull rush, slamming into blockers and ending up on the ground ... plays with tall pads and allows blockers to get underneath him ... marginal instincts and flows with the action instead of tracking the football ... undisciplined and still maturing on and off the field (nine penalties in his 23 games at Oklahoma) ... most of his weight is in his upper half ... averaged only 1.9 tackles per game in 2021 and didn't have more than three tackles in any game as a senior.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oklahoma, Winfrey lined up at nose guard in former defensive coordinator Alex Grinch's 3-3-5 base scheme. It was tough to get an accurate read on him in the Sooners' slanting front, however, his skills were unleashed at the Senior Bowl and allowed him to show scouts his flashes of dominance. Winfrey has an imposing frame and length that no blocker wants to deal with, playing with the shock in his hands to jar blockers or toss bodies from his path. His tendency to play tall and inability to break down and be flexible leads to missed plays in the backfield. Overall, Winfrey needs to improve his pad level and play discipline, but his size, energy and the power in his hands help him to terrorize blockers. He has NFL starting-level traits.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 53 overall)

5. DEMARVIN LEAL | Texas A&M 6037 | 283 lbs. | JR. San Antonio, Texas (Judson) 7/1/2000 (age 21.83) #8

BACKGROUND: DeMarvin Leal (lee-al), who has one brother, grew up in the San Antonio area and attended Converse's Judson High (east of downtown), where he was teammates with future FBS players like RB Sincere McCormick (UTSA). He was a three-year letterman on the defensive line and had a breakout season as a junior with 66 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss, 2.0 sacks and two forced fumbles to earn Second Team All-State and District MVP honors. As a senior, Leal led Judson to a 12-1 record and the 2018 league title. He was named a U.S. Army All-American with 88 tackles, 16.0 tackles for loss, 7.0 sacks, four forced fumbles and a blocked punt. Leal also saw playing time at tight end and lettered in basketball, averaging 8.8 points and 6.4 rebounds per game as a junior.

A five-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Leal was the No. 2 defensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 16 overall) and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Texas (behind only future teammate Kenyon Green). He received offers from almost every major program in the country and narrowed his choice to Alabama, Clemson, Oklahoma State, Texas and Texas A&M. Towards the end of his junior year, Leal committed to the Aggies and stayed loyal to that pledge despite taking further visits to Alabama and other programs. He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Impressive bend and body control for a 285-pounder ... flashes the initial quickness to win gaps and work ahead of blocks ... moves with the lateral fluidity to work up and down the line of scrimmage ... has the ankle flexion to stunt and skim blockers ... uses a powerful long-arm or swim move to win as a pass rusher ... shows physical hands vs. the run ... sees through blocks with excellent recognition skills to track the football ... has thick thighs and an athletic build ... plays with a dependable motor and he feeds off the energy of the game ... won't play soft and toughs out injuries in practice and games ... was asked to lined up anywhere from nose tackle to the edge ... had his most productive season as a junior.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent anchor and pad level and can be moved in the run game ... inconsistent gap integrity will take himself out of plays ... doesn't have the savvy or violence in his hands to easily shed blocks ... looks to power through blockers, but his bull rush quickly loses steam because he struggles to gain the leverage advantage ... his tackling batting average should be better considering his length and athleticism ... too many undisciplined penalties on his 2021 tape ... arrested for possession of marijuana less than two ounces (December 2021) ... missed most of 2019 spring practices shortly after he enrolled because of a torn meniscus; suffered a broken right hand (August 2019) during fall camp as a freshman and played with a bulky cast.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Leal was a defensive tackle on the depth chart in former defensive coordinator Mike Elko's four-man front, but he played up and down the line of scrimmage. One of the prized recruits of the 2019 cycle, he was an instant contributor for the Aggies and had his best season in 2021, leading the team in tackles for loss and sacks. Leal moves with the burst and body control of a much smaller player and has shown the ability to win as a pass rusher via quickness or force. He has some similarities to Washington's Jonathan Allen, but doesn't currently play with the same power, pad level or hand technique.

Overall, Leal's tape has more flash than sustained high-level impact, but he is immensely gifted with the strength potential and athletic traits ready to be developed. He projects best inside as a three-technique tackle, where he has starter upside.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 67 overall)

6. PHIDARIAN MATHIS | Alabama 6042 | 310 lbs. | rSR. Wisner, La. (Neville) 4/26/1998 (age 24.01) #48

BACKGROUND: Phidarian (fuh-DARE-ee-un) "Phil" Mathis grew up in Wisner (two hours north of Baton Rouge) and started his prep career at Franklin Parish High. After his sophomore year, he transferred to Neville High, where he was a football-only athlete and two-year starter on the defensive line. As a junior, Mathis played on the defensive line with Rashard Lawrence (2020 fourth-round pick of the Arizona Cardinals) and helped Neville to an 14-0 record and the 2015 4A state championship over Edna Karr. He finished the 2015 season with 50 tackles and 7.0 sacks to earn First Team All-State honors. As a senior, Mathis led Neville to an undefeated regular season and return to the state title game, but fell to Edna Karr. He finished his final season with 41 tackles, 12.0 tackles for loss and 7.0 sacks to earn First-Team All-State and Under Armour All-American honors.

A four-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Mathis was the No. 7 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Louisiana (behind DT Tyler Shelvin, WR DeVonta Smith and S Todd Harris). His final college choice came down to Alabama, LSU and TCU and he made his pick next to the grave of his childhood friend (Tyrell Cameron) who died on the football field in 2015 (Cameron is why Mathis wears No. 48 jersey). His two-year-old daughter (Khylei Rae) was born in February 2020. He became the first in his family to graduate from college (December 2020) and is working on his master's degree. Mathis accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6041	311	34 1/2	10 1/4	84 7/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only – right hamstring)

STRENGTHS: Large-framed athlete with prototypical build and length ... powerful vs. the run ... flows well laterally and his foot speed and effort allow him to make plays outside his square ... massive bear claws for hands and can generate power on contact ... squeezes through gaps with built-up force, creating offensive holding penalties ... competes like a controlled maniac on the field and missed tackles were rare on film ... vocal leader and named a permanent team captain as a senior ... head coach Nick Saban says Mathis “sets a good example for the young guys” with his work ethic and motor ... versatile experience and logged a heavy workload over the A gap, B gap and across from the tackle ... played in 55 career games and gradually improved.

WEAKNESSES: Plays with inconsistent balance at contact ... his pads rise quickly post-snap, negating his flexibility and change-of-direction skills ... can be knocked from his spot and out-leveraged by low blockers ... unrefined pass rusher with only average first-step burst ... must develop his hand use ... raw counter moves and his rush stalls out quickly because of his bland move-to-move transitions ... his impact can be impressive, but it comes in spurts.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Alabama, Mathis played defensive end in head coach Nick Saban's 3-4 base scheme, but also rotated between the A gap and B gap. He showed steady improvement over his career and saved his best football for his senior season, finishing second on the team in sacks (and there is no shame in finishing second in anything behind Will Anderson Jr.). Mathis passes the eye test with his physical, revved up motor and ability to two-gap or hold his ground vs. doubles. He generates push at contact as a bull rusher, but his tape shows a lot of hand-fighting without consistently going anywhere. Overall, Mathis' inconsistent pass rush skills are notable, but he is a physically impressive big man with power and disruptive qualities. He should be part of a rotation as a rookie and grow into an NFL starter.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 68 overall)

7. JOHN RIDGEWAY | Arkansas 6051 | 321 lbs. | rSR. Bloomington, Ill. (Bloomington) 5/7/1999 (age 22.98) #99

BACKGROUND: John Ridgeway III, who has a younger sister, grew up in Bloomington in central Illinois and started to focus on football in middle school. He attended Bloomington High, where he was a multi-sport star and three-time varsity letterman in football. Playing on both sides of the line, Ridgeway earned All-Conference honors as a senior right tackle and All-State honors at defensive tackle with 23 tackles, 2.0 sacks and a forced fumble (and three blocked field goals). He was a four-year letterman in wrestling, posting a 3-23 record as a freshman and 8-17 record as a sophomore. After finishing fourth at the state championships as a junior, Ridgeway became the second state championship wrestler in school history as a senior when he won the 2017 Class 2A heavyweight title, pinning the No. 1 wrestler in 3:09. He was named Bloomington's Athlete of the Year honors in 2017. Ridgeway also lettered in Bass Fishing as a freshman and track as a sophomore and senior, earning 2017 All-Conference honors in the shot put and helping Bloomington win the league championship.

A two-star offensive tackle recruit out of high school, Ridgeway was the No. 202 offensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 70 recruit in the state of Illinois. He had plenty of interest from FBS programs, but his academic qualifications were a problem. Ridgeway admittedly slacked off and didn't pay attention or skipped classes over his first three years of high school. He worked hard academically as a senior and did just enough to qualify for FCS-level Illinois State, signing as a defensive tackle. After four years with the Redbirds, Ridgeway graduated with his undergraduate degree and entered the transfer portal looking for a chance to play at the FBS level. He considered offers from Michigan, Penn State, Texas, USC and several others before committing to Arkansas. Ridgeway accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall and long with a brawny, well-built frame ... stout at the point of attack and knows how to handle a double team ... torques his body to create a firm base and stay rooted in his spot ... has a wrestling background and strikes with powerful hands ... gap sound and won't play hero ball ... shows the ability to lock out, track and steer his man ... can work down the line of scrimmage with the recognition skills to find the football ... drives his lower body to force blockers on their heels as a pass rusher ... adjusted quickly to a new locker room, teammates and coaching staff in 2021 ... more than held his own vs. SEC competition ... durable and missed only one game the last four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: His pads get too high at times and his stature will work against him ... relies more on power than discipline with his strike timing ... gives blockers a large target ... his pass rush is limited beyond a basic bull rush ... average first step and doesn't have the burst to infiltrate gaps ... inconsistent counter maneuvers once blockers reach his chest ... slight tightness in his hips limits his change of direction and break down skills in a phone booth ... never had better than 4.0 tackles for loss in a season ... missed the 2021 season opener because of an appendectomy (August 2021).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Arkansas, Ridgeway lined up as a nose tackle in defensive coordinator Barry Odom's even and odd fronts. After an accomplished four years at FCS-level Illinois State, he arrived in Fayetteville in 2021 and didn't look out of place vs. better competition as the anchor of the Razorbacks' run defense. Ridgeway was a state champion wrestler in high school and plays with the knock-back power to displace and overwhelm blockers. He lacks the burst or balance to provide a steady pass rush, but he knows his role and looks to reset the line of scrimmage to give his linebackers freedom to run. Overall, Ridgeway will be limited to early downs in the NFL, but he is burly, long and strong with the base power to stand up double teams and two-gap. He has NFL starting potential as a nose tackle.

8.

NEIL FARRELL JR. | LSU

6041 | 330 lbs. | rSR.

Mobile, Ala. (Murphy)

#92

BACKGROUND: Neil Farrell Jr. grew up in Mobile and was drawn to basketball instead of football as his go-to sport throughout childhood. When he enrolled at Murphy High, he planned to play basketball, but the football coaches coaxed him to the football field despite zero experience on an organized team. A three-year varsity starter on the defensive line, Farrell earned First Team All-State and All-Conference honors with 86 tackles and 17.0 tackles for loss in 2015. He again earned First Team All-State and All-Conference honors as a senior with 101 tackles, 28.0 tackles for loss and 13.0 sacks. Farrell was also the starting center on the basketball team, averaging 14.0 points and 7.0 rebounds as a junior.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Farrell was the No. 25 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 17 recruit in the state of Alabama. Although basketball is his favorite sport, he realized that his future was in football when he received scholarship offers from Kentucky and South Carolina after his sophomore season. Farrell picked up offers from Alabama, Clemson, Michigan and USC before signing with LSU the summer prior to his senior year and despite last minute flirtations with Florida State, he became a Tiger on signing day. He graduated with his degree in interdisciplinary studies (August 2021). Farrell originally opted out of the 2020 season after his grandmother (Creola Morrisette) was hospitalized because of COVID and put on a ventilator, but he returned to the team after she improved. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Baton Rouge for a fifth season. Farrell skipped LSU's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, which was played in his hometown of Mobile. He was named the top defensive lineman of the week for the American Team.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding size and comfortably carries 340 pounds ... strong hands to snatch, dispose and find the football in the run game ... able to press blockers off him and disengage without overthinking ... has the first step quickness to penetrate gaps and play on the other side of the line of scrimmage ... physical upper body to rip and soften the shoulder of blockers ... able to push the pocket with his drive power from his hips and lower body ... tracks the football laterally with his backfield vision ... took on a leadership role as a senior and owns a “magnetic personality,” according to the LSU coaches ... saw his snaps increase as a senior (averaged 37.2 defensive snaps per game in 2021) and played his best football.

WEAKNESSES: Stiff ankles and labors with quick direction change ... has some bad weight that he could stand to lose with better conditioning ... his aggressive play style leaves him out of control ... struggles to break down and finish in short areas, like the pocket ... inconsistent gap discipline and plays with tall pads ... doesn't have great length and his rush quickly loses momentum when long-armed blockers reach his chest ... not a rangy player who will consistently chase down the ball carrier on the outside ... has a history of lower body injuries, including a right foot injury that required surgery (January 2019) and an ankle issue that required surgery (March 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at LSU, Farrell was the nose tackle in former defensive coordinator Daronte Jones' four-man front, splitting his time over both the A gap and B gap. After a nondescript first four years in the program, he appeared more motivated as a senior and his production (on the field and in the stat sheet) took a jump, finishing third on the team with 9.5 tackles for loss. Farrell has dominant flashes when his battery is charged, displaying hand techniques, backfield vision and force at the point of attack to defeat single blockers. He has penetration skills, but struggles to quickly redirect or break down in short spaces, which might be helped by weight loss. Overall, Farrell doesn't always play with balance or control, but he has surprising snap quickness along with his functional play strength that give blockers trouble. At worst, he should be a rotational nose tackle in the NFL with potential to be more.

MATTHEW BUTLER | Tennessee

Raleigh, N.C. (Garner)

#94

BACKGROUND: Matthew Butler, who is one of three children, was born in Fayetteville and grew up in Spring Lake, where he was initially home-schooled before attending a public middle school and developing his love for football. He played his freshman year at Pine Forest High, where he was teammates with Harold Landry in 2013. His family moved to the Raleigh area and Butler transferred to Garner Magnet High, where he was a three-year varsity letterman on the defensive line, also seeing snaps at tight end. As a sophomore, Butler (along with Nyheim Hines on offense) helped Garner to a 13-win season before falling one game shy of the state title game. He had his best season as a senior, leading Garner to a 12-2 record and 2016 conference title. Butler finished his final season with 96 tackles, 44.0 tackles for loss and 26.0 sacks to earn Class 4A All-State honors.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Butler was the No. 35 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 12 recruit in the state of North Carolina. He received scholarship offers from the ACC (Duke, North Carolina, NC State), Big Ten (Maryland, Penn State, Purdue) and SEC (Arkansas, South Carolina, Texas A&M), but he was drawn to Tennessee. Butler became a father to his daughter when he was 18. He decided to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and return for a fifth season in Knoxville. Butler graduated with his degree in political science (December 2020) with a 3.63 GPA. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Comes off the ball with quickness and pad level ... displays the body control to peel off contact and be a pain for blockers ... able to finagle his way through traffic, clawing to the pocket ... flashes a little extra juice to close when he has the ball in his crosshairs ... plays with developed block recognition and won't take himself out of the play (Tennessee DL coach Rodney Garner: "He's probably the smartest guy I've ever coach, by far.") ... rangy lineman capable of varying his stunts and lining up across the line ... consistent motor and competitive playing temperament ... team captain with leadership intangibles.

WEAKNESSES: Average thickness and length for interior work in the NFL ... relies more on effort than a detailed attack vs. the run and pass ... needs to unlock his counters more efficiently ... improved timing and technique should boost his mediocre stack-and-shed skills ... his play strength is average at best and there is room for improvements ... needs to show a better feel for down blocks ... his backfield visits were too sporadic in college, which is represented by his below average production in enemy territory ... failed to reach double-digit sacks in his career.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Tennessee, Butler lined up at three-technique over the B gap in defensive coordinator Tim Banks' multiple front. His career in Knoxville spanned three different head coaches and numerous defensive assistants, but he was one of the few constants for the Vols' defense because of his leadership and steady play. Butler shows the lateral movements and smarts to play ahead of blocks and leverage gaps in the run game. If the quarterback holds the ball, Butler will eventually find him, but he didn't produce many quick wins as a pass rusher on tape and his low sack total isn't deceiving. Overall, Butler has functional athleticism and a dependable play style, but the on-field results have been average and it is a stretch to think that will change vs. NFL competition. He can be a rotational three-technique and fit multiple schemes.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

10. KALIA DAVIS | UCF 6010 | 302 lbs. | rSR. Pensacola, Fla. (West Florida Tech) 10/2/1998 (age 23.57) #22

BACKGROUND: Kalia (kuh-LEE-uh) Davis grew up in Pensacola and attended West Florida High of Advanced Technology. He was a four-year letterman at linebacker, seeing varsity action as a freshman and sophomore. As a junior, he earned Honorable Mention All-State honors with 114 tackles and 3.0 sacks in 2015. Davis led West Florida Tech to a 9-3 record as a senior and the 2016 conference title. He earned First Team All-State honors as a senior with 107 tackles, 9.0 sacks and two interceptions. Davis also lettered in basketball at West Florida Tech.

A three-star linebacker recruit out of high school, Davis was the No. 66 inside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 241 recruit in the state of Florida. He received more than two dozen offers, mostly from FCS (Alcorn State, Florida A&M, Samford) and Group of Five (Cincinnati, Coastal Carolina, Louisiana) programs. Davis committed to head coach Scott Frost and UCF, where his sister (Ashleigh Rivera) attended. He played linebacker his first two years with the program before transitioning to the defensive line for the 2019 season. Davis graduated with his degree in criminal justice and is pursuing a second degree in interdisciplinary studies. He opted out of the 2020 season because of the pandemic and returned in 2021 before an injury cut his senior year short. Davis could have returned to UCF in 2022 for another season of eligibility, but he entered the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6015	302	33 3/4	9 5/8	80 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	30 (no workout – right knee)

STRENGTHS: Outstanding upfield quickness to knife through gaps ... uses his natural leverage to play low and balanced through redirect blocks ... coils his hips and barrels into blockers to put them in reverse, but you rarely see him go backward at contact ... quick hands and decent arm length to swim or rip ... keen eye for where the ball is going to stay ahead of blocks ... stays disciplined and active in the run game ... fluid redirect skills to make sharp cuts mid-pursuit ... outstanding motor to chase plays outside the numbers ... productive when he was on the field.

WEAKNESSES: Short, squatty frame and needs to work on his build ... carries some sloppy weight and needs to stay on top of his conditioning ... below average finishing skills, often playing out of control and sliding off the ball carrier ... his hands are active, but his pass rush moves aren't connected ... late with his hands, allowing blockers to reach his chest ... struggles to recover once blockers gain the upper hand ... has played in only five games since the 2019 season after opting out of the 2020 season and suffering a torn ACL in his right knee (October 2021), requiring surgery a month later.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at UCF, Davis was a three-technique in defensive coordinator Travis Williams' front, lining up inside, outside and over the guard. A 235-pound linebacker as a senior in high school, he transitioned to the defensive line in 2019, missed the 2020 season because of COVID and was in the midst of a breakout senior year before his ACL injury. Davis bursts upfield with his low center of gravity and football GPS to either find cracks at the line of scrimmage or create them. However, he tends to rely on his first step and effort as a rusher rather than a coordinated plan of attack, which also hurts his finishing ability. Overall, Davis' tape has more flash than consistency (only five games played the last two seasons), but he fires out of his stance with twitch and range to create backfield disruption vs. the run and as a pass rusher. He is a developmental three-technique prospect.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

11. EYIOMA UWAZURIKE | Iowa State 6061 | 316 lbs. | rSR. Detroit, Mich. (Southfield-Lathrup) 5/6/1998 (age 23.98) #58

BACKGROUND: Eyioma (E-oh-mah) "Enyi" Uwazurike (Ooh-WHA-zah-REE-kay), who has Nigerian roots, grew up in inner-city Detroit and started playing sports in the Detroit Police Athletic League. He attended Southfield-Lathrup High in north Detroit, where he was a defensive end and tight end. As a junior, he finished with 58 tackles, 18.0 tackles for loss and 12.0 sacks, earning team defensive MVP honors. Uwazurike helped lead Southfield-Lathrup to the 2015 playoffs as a senior and earned First Team All-City and All-Conference honors. He finished his final season with 50 tackles, 12.0 tackles for loss and 6.0 sacks.

A three-star defensive end recruit out of high school, Uwazurike was the No. 37 strongside defensive end in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 22 recruit in the state of Michigan. He struggled with academics in high school, which led to in-state schools like Michigan and Michigan State holding back an offer. Uwazurike received primarily MAC-level offers and committed to Toledo, the first program to offer him. When Matt Campbell left Toledo for Iowa State, Uwazurike switched his commitment as well. He was forced to redshirt in his first season on campus because he was academically ineligible. A Nigerian national, his father (Roland) was convicted in 2008 of smuggling high school books into Detroit with more than $150,000 worth of heroin. Roland, who Eyioma says was his best friend, passed away in December 2019 at the age of 48. Uwazurike decided to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and return to Ames for a sixth season in 2021. He became the first in his family to earn his college degree and is currently pursuing his master's degree. Uwazurike accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Giant-sized defender with above-average length ... active hands to swat and force his way through the shoulders of blockers ... has explosiveness in his lower body ... keeps his feet alive to work laterally and avoid reach blocks ... controls himself as a tackler to finish the ball carrier ... able to make tackles away from his square because of his hustle ... blocked a pair of field goals in college ... the coaches speak highly of his toughness and importance to the culture (Uwazurike: "Growing up in Detroit, it makes you the tough person you are.") ... has experience lining up everywhere from the nose to five-technique ... played in the second-most games in school history (60), including five bowl games ... only the second player in ISU history to reach 9.0 sacks in a season.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent pad level and needs to establish his base ... can get wild in his pursuit and tends to lose balance through contact ... needs to improve his snap anticipation to play out in front ... predictable with his rush attack and can do a better job mixing up move selection ... his hands keep going, but they can be more efficient ... bad habit of turning his pads and losing lane leverage ... doesn't consistently absorb down blocks and can be washed ... occasionally late to react to play action or misdirection.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Iowa State, Uwazurike played inside and outside in defensive coordinator Jon Heacock's multiple front, lining up at a handful of positions on the defensive line. While he was at his best as a three-technique, he also played comfortable as the shaded nose or out wide at 4i-technique, finishing his career third in school history with 34.5 tackles for loss. Uwazurike, who started every game the last three seasons, took sizeable jumps each year, playing his best as a senior because of his active hands and ability to find the football. However, his base strength can be inconsistent at engagement and he is more likely to bull rush with wild hands than use coordinated counters. Overall, Uwazurike needs to play with more consistent pad level and contact balance to secure run fits, but his blend of length and athleticism allow him to be disruptive from different alignments. He fits even and odd fronts and might be best as a five-technique.

GRADE: 5th Round

12. OTITO OGBONNIA | UCLA 6036 | 324 lbs. | SR. Houston, Texas (James E. Taylor) 8/25/2000 (age 21.68) #91

BACKGROUND: Otito (oh-TEE-toe) Ogbonnia (oh-BONE-yuh), who is one of four children, was born and raised in Houston with his Nigerian parents. He didn't start playing competitive tackle football until he arrived at James E. Taylor High in Katy (west of Houston), where he became a standout on the football field and in track. Ogbonnia became a varsity starter as a junior and posted 61 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and 4.0 sacks to earn All-District honors. Playing at different defensive line positions in Taylor's 3-4 base scheme, he had his most productive season as a senior with 68 tackles, 24.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks and two forced fumbles to earn

All-District and All-County honors. In track, Ogbonnia was a nationally ranked shot putter and won every shot put competition his senior season. He won titles at the 2018 6A state championships with a 66'1 shot put and 187'11 discus throw.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Ogbonnia was the No. 49 defensive tackle in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 89 recruit in the state of Texas. A late bloomer, his recruitment was delayed, but took off toward the end of his senior season. Ogbonnia narrowed his college choice to Nebraska, Notre Dame, Ole Miss, Tennessee, Texas Tech and UCLA, committing to the Bruins in both football and track. During his freshman year on the track team, he finished fourth with a 64'3.25 shot put at the Pac-12 championships and 10th with a 63'9.5 shot put at the NCAA Championships. Ogbonnia was the U20 shot put champion at the USA track and field championships (June 2019) with a UCLA-record (70'3.5). After two years, he decided to give up track and focus only on football. His parents are from Nigeria and his father (Dr. SKC Ogbonnia) is a Nigerian political activist. Otito graduated with his degree in geography/environmental studies and is enrolled in the Transformative Coaching and Leadership graduate program at UCLA. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Ready-made frame with proportionate thickness and long arms ... shows twitch in his lower body to explode into contact at the snap ... leads with his hands and works his legs to walk blockers backward ... maintains separation because of his length, helping timely disengagement ... comfortable taking on double teams and multiple blocks with his upper body strength ... flashes pass rush potential when his snap quickness and hands are on time ... rushes with power in his snatch and rip moves ... shows the wherewithal to quickly locate and chase plays away from him ... durable and played in every game the last four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Disappointing anchor in the run game considering his size ... struggles to bend or maintain pad level and gives blockers a big target ... inconsistent recovery skills once a blocker gets underneath him ... must improve his recognition and reset ability to combat quick-striker blockers ... limited lateral agility and has a tough time getting started if he doesn't correctly time up the snap ... struggles to break down in a phone booth, leaving him a step late when attempting to corral the ball carrier at the line of scrimmage ... below average backfield production with only 4.5 sacks in 43 career games.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at UCLA, Ogbonnia played over both interior gaps in defensive coordinator Jerry Azzinaro's hybrid front. A dual-sport athlete for the Bruins, he was a decorated shot-putter in high school and college before becoming football-only the last two seasons, setting career-bests as a senior with 30 tackles and 5.0 tackles for loss. Ogbonnia flashes explosive strike skills to walk back and bench press blockers off his frame, but his lateral movements and rush moves are non-threatening. In the run game, he needs to strengthen his anchor and improve his pad level to be more consistent leveraging gaps and making plays. Overall, Ogbonnia moves heavy and he is still raw as a two-gapper and pass rusher, but his package of traits (size, length, heavy hands) are a nice starter kit for a developmental nose tackle.

GRADE: 5th Round

13. ERIC JOHNSON | Missouri State 6043 | 299 lbs. | rSR. Plainfield, Ill. (South) 7/16/1998 (age 23.78) #93

BACKGROUND: Eric Johnson II, who is one of five children, grew up outside of Chicago and developed his love for football from his father. He attended Plainfield South High, where he was a three-sport standout and three-year varsity letterman. Despite playing for a 2-8 team as a senior, Johnson had his most productive season with 29.0 tackles for loss and 17.0 sacks, earning All-Conference honors for the second consecutive season. He also lettered in track and wrestling. As a senior, Johnson finished first at regionals and sectionals and third at the 2016 Class 3A state championships in the 220-pound division.

A no-star defensive end recruit out of high school, Johnson was underrecruited and unranked by the online recruiting services. After his productive senior season, Johnson received FCS interest and signed with Missouri State. He took advantage of the extra season of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned to Missouri State for his sixth season in 2021. His younger brother (Marcellus) is a rising redshirt senior offensive lineman at Eastern Michigan. His father (Eric Sr.) was an All-Conference defensive lineman at Illinois State in 1996 and went to training camp with the New York Jets in 1997. He spent the next 10 seasons playing professionally for the CFL, XFL and indoor leagues before retiring in 2007. Johnson graduated with his degree. He accepted his invitation to the NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and was also a late call-up to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Impressive linear and lateral movement skills ... owns an NFL frame with the long levers to extend and drive blockers backward ... his physical stab creates early and late knock-back ... hands stay active with the grip strength to push-pull and shed blockers ... stays square in his engagement up and down the line ... shows a semblance of a pass rush plan to attack gaps in different ways ... solid tackler in his gap with the control to take down running backs ... recorded four blocked kicks in his career (two field goals, two extra point attempts) ... went from a 235-pound freshman to a 300-pound senior and busted his butt in the weight room ... has experience at nose, three-technique and over the tackle ... durable and didn't miss a game the last five seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Plays with an elevated pad level and needs to rely more on his lower body bend ... his tight hips hinder his ability to wrap the edge of blockers on twists ... untrained counters and guilty of leaning on blocks when his initial move is halted ... needs to mature his backfield vision, often overcommitting too early or reacting too late ... has the bad habit of dropping his head into blockers, losing his line of sight to the football ... below average sack production in his career ... needs to do a better job finding passing lanes and using his length when he doesn't get home as a rusher ... will turn 24 before his first NFL training camp ... has minimal experience vs. top-level competition.

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Missouri State, Johnson played up and down the defensive line for defensive coordinator Ryan Beard. Despite playing in a school-record 55 consecutive games (every game the last five years), he was somewhat of a late bloomer and created buzz around the league with his performances at the NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and Senior Bowl during the pre-draft process. Johnson creates a vertical surge with his first step quickness and length, although he needs to use consistent sink for his bull rush to move blockers. His stiffness will show once engaged, but he shows promising handwork to gain leverage on blockers and peak into the backfield. Overall, Johnson needs to develop more consistent pad level and run recognition for the next level, but he flashes phonebooth explosiveness, functional hand use and play range. He should appeal to multiple schemes and is ideally suited as a five-technique or quick-penetrating three-technique.

GRADE: 5th Round

14. THOMAS BOOKER | Stanford 6033 | 301 lbs. | SR. Ellicott City, Md. (Gilman) 11/11/1999 (age 22.46) #4

BACKGROUND: Earl Thomas Booker IV, who has an older sister, grew up in the Baltimore suburbs and played basketball throughout his childhood. Due to youth league weight limits and his parent's insistence on waiting, he didn't start playing football until the sixth grade. He attended Gilman, an all-boys private school, for elementary, middle and high school (same school where his father graduated). Booker made varsity as a freshman and became a starting defensive lineman and tight end as a sophomore, leading Gilman to the 2015 state championship. As a junior, he posted 77 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss, 4.0 sacks and one interception to earn First Team All-State honors, adding 112 receiving yards and a touchdown catch on offense. As a senior, Booker earned All-Metro honors for the second consecutive year with 39 tackles, 9.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks and one forced fumble. He also lettered in basketball and track (team captain). He finished first with a 48'6.5 shot put at the indoor track championships, leading Gilman to the 2018 Maryland indoor championship.

A four-star defensive end recruit out of high school, Booker was the No. 11 strongside defensive end in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Maryland. Coming from an academically focused family, his recruiting was different than most athletes. Booker received offers from top national programs like Georgia, LSU and Ohio State, but his final list was Notre Dame, Stanford and several Ivy League schools like Harvard. Stanford had the inside track after Booker was accepted into the school's high school summer program and he aced two classes the summer prior to his junior year of high school. He was familiar with the campus and committed to Stanford, despite it being nearly 3,000 miles away from home. His father (Thomas) played linebacker at Wisconsin and started as a true freshman in 1980. His mother (Ava Lias-Booker) is a partner at a respected Baltimore law practice. His older sister (Sydney) played tennis and graduated from Princeton before graduating from Duke law school. His cousin (Corbin) played lacrosse at Brown (2012-15). Booker accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6035	302	33 1/4	10 5/8	80 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	31	(stood on Combine runs, broad, shuttles)

STRENGTHS: Looks the part with his dense, athletic frame and packed on muscle, especially in his legs and bubble ... athletic, loose mover with the initial quickness to penetrate gaps ... flashes an explosive, upward punch to jolt blockers off balance and reset the line of scrimmage ... his hands are active and persistent off the ball ... flashes a closing burst down the line in the run game ... three blocked extra-point attempts in his career ... two-time team captain and NFL coaches will appreciate his sharp attitude ... highly accomplished in the classroom as a double major (economics and communications) with a 3.88 GPA, twice earning CoSIDA Academic All-American honors.

WEAKNESSES: Average arm length and blockers can get into his frame ... inconsistent snap anticipation ... his hands are quick, but not always efficient, stalling his pass rush ... undeveloped secondary moves ... uneven anchor in the run game and can be turned or knocked off balance ... overwhelmed vs. double teams ... usually ends up where blockers want, struggling to shed or stay ahead of the action ... his backfield vision is below average and slow to sniff out screen passes ... leaves too much tackle production on the field.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Stanford, Booker was a versatile defensive tackle in defensive coordinator Lance Anderson's hybrid front, lining up everywhere from the five-technique to the nose. He finished his time at Stanford with an accomplished resumé both on the field (earned All-Pac 12 honors each of his last three seasons) and off the field (finalist for the 2021 William V. Campbell Trophy, a.k.a. the Academic Heisman). Booker has the initial quickness to threaten gaps and he is at his best when he springs into blockers with low pads to create movement. However, he spends too much time hand-fighting when his initial momentum doesn't work, lacking the point-of-attack technique or counters to detach. Overall, Booker is a unique prospect with his intelligence, physical traits and mature makeup, but he needs to get an early advantage or he struggles to be a factor. He has the tools to be a rotational three-technique with some teams curious about a transition to the offensive line.

15. JAYDEN PEEVY | Texas A&M 6053 | 308 lbs. | rSR. Bellaire, Texas (Bellaire) 9/3/1999 (age 22.65) #92

BACKGROUND: Jayden Peevy grew up in the Houston area and played primarily basketball as his go-to sport. He attended Houston's Bellaire High, where he played basketball as a freshman and sophomore. Going into his junior year, Peevy decided to join the football team and it didn't take long for him to become an impact player on the defensive line, earning Second Team All-District honors with 41 tackles, 18.0 tackles for loss and 9.0 sacks in 2015. As a senior, he was named a U.S. Army All-American and earned Second Team All-State honors with 77 tackles, 20.0 tackles for loss, 10.0 sacks and one forced fumble.

A four-star defensive tackle recruit, Peevy was the No. 15 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 44 recruit in the state of Texas. He had several offers from lower-level basketball programs, but his football recruitment was rapid once he picked up the sport as a junior. Peevy originally committed to Baylor before he reopened his recruitment following Art Briles' dismissal. Prior to his senior year, he committed to Texas A&M over offers from Ole Miss, Tennessee and Texas Tech. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and returned to College Station for his fifth season. Peevy accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

PRO DAY	6053	307	35 1/4	10 1/4	85	-	-	-	29 1/2	-	-	-	(stood on Combine runs and broad)

STRENGTHS: Massive frame with wide hips and the wingspan of a pterodactyl ... shows initial quicks off the snap to disrupt the setup of blockers ... uses his long arms to extend into contact and be the aggressor ... uses his backfield vision to track and shut down the run at the line of scrimmage ... not an easy player to move ... violent hands with the shed quickness to spin out of blocks ... can get downhill as a bull rusher ... his persistent motor expands his chase range ... blocked four kicks (two field goals, two extra-point attempts) in his career ... his size and skills suggest he can play in multiple schemes.

WEAKNESSES: Stands up quickly with tall pads that work against ... gets straight-legged at the point of attack and struggles to re-leverage himself ... inconsistent contact balance and gets surprised by down blocks ... shows hints of stiffness in his lower body with lackluster change of direction ... average play speed and will struggle to work laterally at times ... needs to be more efficient with his snatch skills ... frenetic play style leaves him off-kilter ... late to calm his feet and break down, leading to missed tackles ... hard to get excited about his career production ... NFL scouts mention long-term durability as a question mark.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, Peevy played primarily as the three-technique defensive tackle in former defensive coordinator Mike Elko's four-man front. A basketball athlete most of his life, he picked up football as a junior in high school and has showed steady improvements ever since, even if the totality of his impact in College Station was underwhelming. Peevy flashes power in his upper body and won't just sit on blocks, helping him track down plays in the run game. While his active play style and long arms are strengths to his game, he needs to better control the point of attack and consistently stay ahead of plays. Overall, Peevy isn't disciplined or fundamentally sound in his approach, but his blend of size, length and quickness don't walk through the door every day. He is scheme versatile and has the raw talent to make an NFL roster or practice squad.

GRADE: 6th Round

16. HASKELL GARRETT | Ohio State 6021 | 300 lbs. | rSR. Las Vegas, Nev. (Bishop Gorman) 5/4/1998 (age 23.98) #92

BACKGROUND: Haskell Garrett, the youngest of six children, was born and raised in Burlington, Vt. At 13, his father passed away from stomach cancer and his Samoan mother (Maria Key) moved the family to her native Hawaii to be near family. Looking for a high school program with a focus on both football and academics, Garrett moved to Las Vegas and transferred to Bishop Gorman High as a sophomore, where he was teammates with several future FBS players, including TE Brevin Jordan, FS Bubba Bolden and QB Dorian Thompson-Robinson. After collecting 16.0 tackles for loss and 6.0 sacks as a junior, he earned First Team All-State and U.S. Army All-American honors as a senior with 54 tackles, 20.0 tackles for loss, 7.5 sacks and an interception. Over his three seasons at Bishop Gorman, he helped the program to a 43-0 record and three consecutive state and national championships. Haskell finished his prep career with 56.5 tackles for loss and 25.0 sacks.

A four-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Garrett was the No. 6 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class (No. 68 overall) and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Nevada. His offer list quickly piled up with offers from Oklahoma, Oregon, Penn State, Texas A&M and USC. Garrett was considered a strong lean toward Notre Dame, but he surprised many when he committed to Ohio State in February 2016 shortly after receiving his offer. He was shot in the face (bullet went through both cheeks, teeth and tongue) as he was attempting to break up a bar fight in Columbus. Haskell required multiple surgeries, including a bone graft, but returned to the football field less than two months later. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Columbus for his fifth season in 2021. Garrett graduated with his degree in sociology (August 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6020	300	31 7/8	9 7/8	79	-	-	-	-	-	4.80	7.75	24 (stood on Combine runs)

STRENGTHS: Has the upfield quickness to win gaps or split tandem blocks ... effective arm-over move to win as a pass rusher ... looks to get his physical hands involved early and often to push, pull and toss ... uses his lower body bend to strengthen his anchor ... smooth hip action to redirect and chase in the run game ... solid upper and lower body thickness ... showed remarkable toughness pushing himself to return to football shape after his gunshot wound (returned to game action less than two months after he was shot in the face) ... scored a pair of touchdowns and blocked a PAT in his career ... named a senior captain and set career-bests in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal height, length and wingspan ... average punch and lacks the power behind his reach to beat up blockers ... doesn't have a diverse collection of pass rush moves ... doesn't play with the power to collapse the pocket ... average lower body strength and will struggle to hold the point ... can be displaced and pushed around when he allows blockers to reach his chest ... doesn't play with enough violence ... low tackle production is reflective of his instincts vs. the run ... inconsistent finisher as a tackler ... battled immature tendencies in the past and struggled to see much action his first three seasons in the program.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Ohio State, Garrett was the three-technique defensive tackle in former defensive coordinator Kerry Coombs four-man front. A former top recruit, his career was somewhat of a slow burn as he struggled to meet expectations before playing his best football as a fifth-year senior, leading the team in sacks. Although he is short-armed and his rush arsenal lacks variety, Garrett is quick out of the blocks to penetrate with initial burst and consistent effort. However, he is more of a hugger than striker at the point of attack and his inconsistent power will make it tough for him to anchor or defend the run vs. NFL talent. Overall, Garrett flashes the upfield quickness and flexibility to threaten gaps, but he needs to get stronger and expand his pass rush options to have more of an impact on the game. He has NFL rotational value as a three-technique tackle.

17. NOAH ELLISS | Idaho 6042 | 346 lbs. | rSR. Highlands Ranch, Colo. (Valor Christian) 3/31/1999 (age 23.08) #99

BACKGROUND: Noah Elliss was born in American Samoa and adopted on his father's side of the family by his cousin (Luther) when he was 1. He grew up in the Detroit area (while Luther was playing for the Lions) and started playing football at the youth level. In 2011 Elliss and his family moved to Salt Lake City, where he finished middle school and spent his freshman and sophomore years of high school. They moved to Highlands Ranch in 2015 and he enrolled at Valor Christian, helping the program to back-to-back 5A state championships as a junior and senior. Elliss lined up at guard on offense and nose tackle on defense, where he combined for 104 tackles, 27.0 tackles for loss and 11.5 sacks in his two seasons at Valor Christian. He also lettered in track and field (shot put and discus).

A three-star recruit, Elliss was the No. 22 defensive tackle in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Colorado. He put together an impressive offer sheet that included Alabama, Auburn, Notre Dame, USC and others. Elliss committed to Mississippi State but was ruled ineligible because of his SAT scores. He spent the next six months attempting to qualify but was unable to do so. With his father coaching at Idaho, Elliss enrolled at Idaho in 2018 as a student to make sure his academics were in proper standing. He joined the football team for the 2019 season. His father was a first-round defensive tackle out of Utah in the 1995 NFL Draft and played 10 seasons in the NFL, primarily with the Detroit Lions (1995-2003). Luther was the Denver Broncos' team chaplain (2015-16) and then the defensive line coach at Idaho (2017-22) before recently accepting the same position at Utah. Noah is the fourth of 12 children (four biological, eight adopted). His older brother (Kaden) played linebacker at Idaho and was drafted in the seventh round (No. 244 overall) of the 2019 NFL Draft by the New Orleans Saints. Noah elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (no workout – hamstring)

STRENGTHS: Owns a big-boned, thick frame and comfortably carries his mass ... bullies blockers into the backfield with his natural power and low pads out of his stance ... plays with unique bend and joint flexibility for a player his size ... overpowers zone blocks and reaches to make plays in the hole ... able to separate on time to make tackles in his gap ... when he reinforces his anchor, he doesn't go anywhere ... physical hands to ground ball carriers when he makes contact ... plays with effort and averaged more than 40 defensive snaps per game in 2021 ... grew up around professional football with a father and older brothers who played in the league.

WEAKNESSES: Relatively shorter arms for a player with his size ... his weight fluctuated earlier in his career and will need to be monitored ... needs to develop more of a pass rush plan off of his initial power ... his hands are heavy, but not consistently strategic or accurate (as a pass rusher and run defender) ... his pad level will rise as he fatigues, weakening his anchor ... undisciplined as a finisher (multiple facemask and roughing the passer penalties on his tape) ... suffered a torn ACL in his left knee (October 2019) and missed the second half of the 2019 season; suffered a torn hamstring while running the 40-yard dash at the Combine and missed the rest of the pre-draft process (didn't require surgery).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Idaho, Elliss lined up at nose tackle (tilted and head-up) in former defensive coordinator Mike Breske's multiple fronts. From not qualifying academically out of high school to tearing his ACL in his first season and then a shortened season in 2020, he faced plenty of adversity during his college career and still managed to put promising play on tape. Elliss is a big-bodied lineman with the play strength and force to stack the line vs. the run or push blockers backward as a pass rusher. Much of his game is based on his physical ability, and he must develop his fundamentals and play recognition to become a regular contributor in the NFL. Overall, Elliss is a work in progress with his technique and timing, but he has disruptive power and movement skills when his battery is charged. He projects as a rotational nose tackle in the NFL with clear upside.

18. MARQUAN MCCALL | Kentucky 6025 | 342 lbs. | SR. Detroit, Mich. (Oak Park) 3/26/1999 (age 23.09) #50

BACKGROUND: Marquan McCall, who is one of four children, was born and raised in Detroit and attended Oak Park High. He was a two-way player at Oak Park and saw immediate varsity action as a freshman in 2014. McCall started at left tackle on offense and defensive tackle as a sophomore, leading the team to the playoffs. He shifted inside to left guard as a junior, but he suffered a season-ending left knee injury that required surgery on his ACL and meniscus. McCall returned as a senior and earned First Team All-State honors.

A four-star offensive guard recruit out of high school, McCall was the No. 6 offensive guard in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Michigan. He started to receive scholarship offers after his freshman year in high school, initially from MAC schools (Akron and Miami Ohio) followed by in-state heavyweight Michigan. He also considered Iowa State, Michigan State and Penn State, but Kentucky was the program that showed the most loyalty through McCall's knee injury that cut short his junior season. He was recruited for the offensive line by some, but was a defensive player only for Kentucky. McCall accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Wide-framed nose tackle with heavy mass and giant hands ... lost weight as a senior and was sub-350 pounds for the first time since high school ... looked quicker and more efficient with his initial steps on the 2021 tape ... flashes an occasional burst to squeeze gaps ... maintains his body position vs. double-team blocks and clogs up interior lanes ... powerful upper half to shock and shed or control the point of attack ... his nickname in the Kentucky program was "bully" for a reason ... shows the ball awareness to find and track ... his coaches say that no player in the program showed more improved maturity the last four years.

WEAKNESSES: Managing his weight has been a constant battle because of inconsistent training and focus ... heavy-footed with marginal play range ... routinely locked out by blockers who reach him first and leverage the gap ... boasts basically zero pass rush unless the quarterback comes to him ... suspended one game as a junior and his pre-draft interviews are critical ... missed three games as a senior because of an ankle injury (October 2021); Had two major surgeries in high school: injured his shoulder and had offseason surgery (April 2016); suffered a torn ACL and meniscus in his left knee (October 2016) ... below average statistical output ... doesn't offer much scheme versatility.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Kentucky, McCall lined up at nose tackle in defensive coordinator Brad White's hybrid front. After an inconsistent first three years in Lexington, he replaced Quinton Bohanna as the Wildcats' nose tackle in 2021 and showed improved body composition and mindset as a senior, despite minimal production (literally averaged one tackle per game). McCall is very specific with his skill set and role as a space-eating nose who can take up room in the middle and occupy blockers. He doesn't offer any pass rush value and must have his snap count monitored to sustain his energy for quality play as a run defender. Overall, McCall doesn't offer scheme or positional flexibility and must adapt and maintain a more professional approach behind the scenes, but his massive frame and natural power could earn him a roster spot as a backup nose tackle. The medical reports will be important to his draft grade with teams.

19. CHRIS HINTON | Michigan 6035 | 305 lbs. | JR. Johns Creek, Ga. (Greater Atlanta) 9/14/2000 (age 21.62) #15

BACKGROUND: Christopher "Chris" Hinton Jr. grew up in the Atlanta area and prepped at Greater Atlanta Christian, where he played both ways as an offensive tackle and defensive lineman. After recording 70 tackles as a sophomore, he helped GAC to a 12-2 record as a junior, finishing with 39 tackles, 2.0 sacks and one interception. As a senior captain, Hinton recorded 49 tackles, 9.5 tackles for loss and 6.5 sacks, earning U.S. Army All-American honors. He also lettered in basketball and helped lead GAC to the Class 3A state championship as a junior.

A five-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Hinton was the No. 4 defensive tackle in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 31 overall) and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Georgia (No. 2 defensive lineman in the state behind Travon Walker). He received offers from several national powers, including Alabama, Clemson, Ohio State and others. But Hinton's final choice came down to Michigan over Georgia. His younger brother (Myles) is a rising junior offensive lineman at Stanford. His father (Chris) played offensive tackle at Northwestern (1980-83) and was a first-round pick (No. 4 overall) in the 1983 NFL Draft (drafted by Denver and traded on draft day as part of the John Elway trade), playing 13 seasons in the NFL and making seven Pro Bowls. His mother (Mya) and aunt (Anique Whitmore) played basketball at Northwestern. Hinton elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6034	304	32 1/2	10 1/2	79	-	-	-	-	-	4.85	7.90	25 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Wide frame with upper and lower body thickness ... heavy hands to jar blockers on impact and stay square to the line of scrimmage ... strikes with pad level and grows roots to maintain gaps ... his body control through contact keeps him involved in the play ... his length and balance at contact helps his ability to two-gap ... quick to diagnose blocking schemes and feel where the play design is headed ... well-conditioned and doesn't need to be constantly subbed in and out (averaged 42.4 defensive snaps per game) ... has athletic bloodlines with both of his parents playing high-level sports.

WEAKNESSES: Non-explosive athlete, especially at the snap ... average foot quickness and bend ... hasn't shown the necessary ingredients to be a consistent pass rusher ... his pass rush counters lack creativity or control ... needs to play more with his feet and not just his hands ... leaves his chest open and vulnerable to blocker's reach ... double teams will give him trouble ... doesn't have the drive power to consistently bully blockers backward ... needs to calm his feet in the backfield to break down and make stops ... below average production and his college résumé feels incomplete.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Michigan, Hinton lined up primarily over the B gap in former defensive coordinator Mike Macdonald's multiple front. One of two five-star recruits in the Wolverines' 2019 recruiting class (Dax Hill being the other one), he was a steady performer on the defensive line in 2021, although he managed only 4.0 tackles for loss and 2.0 sacks in his college career. Hinton uses his length to extend, lock out and control the point of attack. However, he is heavy-legged and needs to be more forceful with his shed/toss to fire off blocks and create disruption. Overall, Hinton is stout at contact with the base strength to hold his ground, but his lack of range and explosive traits significantly limit his next level impact. He projects as an early-down NFL backup.

GRADE: 7th Round

20. D.J. DAVIDSON | Arizona State 6033 | 327 lbs. | rSR. Mesa, Ariz. (Desert Ridge) 9/19/1997 (age 24.61) #98

BACKGROUND: DeVonta "D.J." Davidson grew up outside of Phoenix and attended Desert Ridge High in Mesa. He became a starter on varsity as a junior and saw playing time on both sides of the ball, finishing the 2014 season with 57 tackles, 4.0 sacks and two forced fumbles. As a senior, Davidson anchored a defense that led Desert Ridge to the 2015 state championship game. He finished his final season with 67 tackles, 19.5 tackles for loss, 5.5 sacks, four forced fumbles and a 33-yard fumble recovery touchdown to earn First Team All-State honors. Davidson also lettered in basketball and wrestling.

A three-star defensive tackle recruit out of high school, Davidson was considered one of the best defensive recruits in the state of Arizona in the 2016 class, but several schools backed off because of academics. He committed to UCF over Memphis on signing day, but never enrolled because he was a late qualifier (his grades from his freshman and sophomore years held him back). Once he was cleared academically, Davidson reopened his recruitment and committed to Arizona State in December 2016 and enrolled in January 2017. He married his wife (Alexis) in June 2018. Davidson graduated with his degree in criminal justice (May 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Has the desired frame and length for NFL work ... shows the functional strength in his upper half to control once engaged ... flashes the ability to overwhelm zone blocks ... able to bend and strike from low position ... decent quickness off the ball with lateral movements to operate down the line of scrimmage ... has the backfield vision to track vs. the run ... powerful arms and will occasionally create a pass rush vs. single blockers ... scheme versatile and described as "coachable" by those in the Arizona State program ... played his best football as a senior with career-bests in tackles and tackles for loss.

WEAKNESSES: Carries excessive weight in his middle and needs to work on his body composition ... mediocre stack-and-shed skills and doesn't offer expansive knowledge with his hand use ... limited as a pass rusher ... his pad level will rise once locked up, leaving him unable to re-leverage the point ... inconsistent body control in space and misses too many tackles playing hot ... not a fierce player and could benefit from more competitive edge, especially vs. nasty blockers ... suffered a broken ankle (October 2018), requiring season-ending surgery ... will be a 25-year-old NFL rookie.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Arizona State, Davidson played over both interior gaps in former defensive coordinator Antonio Pierce's front. Although his first three years after high school didn't go as planned, he showed steady improvements over the next three seasons, including a standout senior season where he was one of the better run-defending linemen on the West Coast. When he stays low off the ball, Davidson has the base strength and lateral quickness to out-leverage blockers and accurately respond vs. run. Despite his age, he offers upside as he continues to develop his hand use and counters. Overall, Davidson will never be known for his pass rush prowess, but he has a stout anchor and nose for the ball as a steady-flowing run defender. He will appeal to multiple schemes as a rotational nose.

SUMMARY: Curtis Brooks was a standout basketball and football player at George Washington High in Danville, posting 82 tackles, 15.5 tackles for loss and 9.0 sacks as a senior. A two-star recruit, he received mostly FCS attention until Cincinnati got involved. He was a rotational player over his first five years for the Bearcats, but he returned for a sixth season and emerged as an NFL prospect, leading one of the nation's top defenses in tackles for loss and sacks. Lining up as both the nose and three-technique in Luke Fickell's hybrid front, Brooks has first-step burst and physical hands for quick penetration, although he must become more efficient with his counters. He can be moved by run blockers when his pads rise, especially by double teams, but his lateral quickness allows him to leverage gaps. Overall, Brooks has only one season of full-time starting production and needs to develop his consistency in the run game, but his active rush skills have the attention of NFL teams.

SUMMARY: Jordan "JJ" Jackson grew up in Jacksonville and attended The Bolles School, where he was a four-year letterman on the defensive line. He led Bolles to a 12-1 record as a senior and earned Honorable Mention All-State honors. A two-star recruit, he committed to Air Force, following in the footsteps of his mother, who served almost two decades in the Army. Aside from missing the 2020 season because of corrective shoulder surgery, he was productive for the Falcons, averaging double-digit tackles for loss each season. Jackson is a smooth, active athlete with a relentless motor that directly leads to backfield production, but he doesn't play explosive as a pass rusher. As a run defender, his hand placement, base strength and instincts are inconsistent and he needs to show more grit at contact. Overall, Jackson lacks direction once engaged, but he has a projectable frame with functional length and initial quickness to compete for a rotational three-technique role.

SUMMARY: Dion Novil (no-VILL), who is one of six boys, grew up in West Palm Beach, Fla. before moving to Abilene prior to his sophomore year. He enrolled at Wylie High, where he earned All-District honors as a junior and senior defensive lineman, finishing his senior year with 41 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss and 4.0 sacks. He was also the District MVP in basketball. A two-star recruit, he signed with North Texas and started every game at nose guard the last three seasons (only the fourth player in UNT history to reach 37.0 tackles for loss). Novil can be moved when he is late out of his stance, but he is built like an ox with his broad, strong frame, forcing holds when he gets rumbling downhill. He played a lot of snaps for a nose (averaged 52 snaps per game over the last three years) and always gave steady effort on tape. Overall, Novil won't create many pass rush opportunities, but he is active with above-average gap power when he plays on time, projecting as a potential backup.

SUMMARY: Tayland Humphrey prepped at Klein Oak High in Spring, Texas before a two-year stint at Hutchinson Community College. A four-star JUCO recruit, he bypassed offers from Alabama, Georgia and others to sign with FIU to play with his brother (John Bolding) in 2018. He left after one year (NFL scout: "He had a lot of growing up to do.") and transferred to Louisiana, where he earned All-Sun Belt honors each of the last two seasons. Nicknamed "Big Saucy," Humphrey fires out of his stance to out-leverage blockers and squeeze gaps, using his long arms to corral or rag doll ball carriers. He struggles to redirect in short spaces and won't offer much of a pass rush, but when the motor is revving, he can be more than just a space-eater. His physicality is currently more advanced than his run instincts. Overall, Humphrey must continue to keep his candle lit both on and off the field, but he can be disruptive on early downs with his frame, length and athletic lower body.

SUMMARY: Jonathan "Jon" Ford grew up in south Florida and attended Dillard High, where he made varsity as a freshman. He had a breakout junior season with 98 tackles and 12.0 sacks to earn All-County honors. A three-star recruit, he had almost 30 offers, including Ohio State and USC, but he always dreamed of becoming a Hurricane. He started each of the last three seasons at Miami with inconsistent results, managing only 8.0 tackles for loss over 50 career games. Ford has controlled footwork at contact with the size to engage, anchor and maintain his gap integrity. He has the physical hands to get into blocks, but doesn't have the countering quickness or instincts to track down ball carriers. As a pass rusher, he is sluggish transitioning his first step into a disruptive rush sequence. Overall, Ford looks the part and flashes point-of-attack strength and handwork to two-gap, but his lackluster impact on tape is unlikely to improve vs. NFL-level blocking.

SUMMARY: Matt Henningsen earned First Team All-State honors on both the offensive and defensive lines at Menomonee Falls High. A two-star recruit, he received offers from several MAC and FCS programs, but his dream was to attend Wisconsin (like his parents and three older brothers) and he accepted a walk-on spot. He earned a scholarship a few weeks into the 2018 season and was a valuable part of the defensive line the last four years, playing end in the Badgers' 3-4 base scheme. Henningsen, who was a member of Bruce Feldman's Freak List, moves well laterally and uses his length to pry open gaps, but he is unpolished as a pass rusher and needs to play with better control once engaged. Scouts and coaches praise his intelligence (NFL scout: "This kid is like Matt Damon in Good Will Hunting."). Overall, Henningsen's on-field impact leaves you wanting more, but his blend of size, athleticism and acumen is an easy sell in the later rounds or as a priority free agent.

SUMMARY: Sam Roberts attended Waynesville High and was an All-State and All-Conference defensive lineman as a junior and senior. He was recruited by Division II Northwest Missouri State to play offensive line, but they ran out of scholarship spots and signed him as a defensive lineman instead. After earning all-conference honors three consecutive years and sitting out the 2020 season, he had an All-American senior year and won the 2021 Cliff Harris Award, which is awarded to the top non-Division I defender. Roberts has a hulking build with massive shoulders and a pass rush predicated on power with his heavy hands, forceful rip moves and bully tactics. He has a strong upper half in the run game, but needs to refine his technique to leverage gaps. He blocked five kicks in college (three FGs, two PATs). Overall, Roberts' core stiffness will be easier to spot vs. NFL blockers, but he fires out of his stance with urgent power to fit in a rotation as a penetrating three-technique.

1. DEVIN LLOYD | Utah 6026 | 237 lbs. | rSR. Chula Vista, Calif. (Otay Ranch) 9/30/1998 (age 23.58) #0

BACKGROUND: Devin Lloyd was born in Kansas City and grew up in a military family (his father, Joe, was in the Navy for 26 years, and his mother, Ronyta Johnson, also served). He was raised in Kansas City by his mother before moving to Dallas and then to southern California to live with his father. Lloyd focused on basketball growing up before starting to play football in middle school. He attended Otay Ranch High and played three seasons of varsity football, primarily on offense (wide receiver and running back) and special teams (punter). As a junior, Lloyd posted 23 catches for 384 yards and two touchdowns. As a senior captain, he added safety duties to his résumé and earned Second Team All-State honors on defense with 52 tackles, eight interceptions (four in one game) and three defensive touchdowns (two interceptions, one fumble return). Lloyd also had 29 catches for 493 yards and six touchdowns on offense and averaged 37.1 yards per punt. He lettered two seasons on the basketball team.

A three-star safety recruit out of high school, Lloyd was ranked No. 122 at his position in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 160 recruit in the state of California. A late-bloomer recruit, the 200-pound safety started to pick up Mountain West scholarship offers as a senior and verbally committed to UNLV. However, he backed off that pledge with the hopes of landing a larger school. Lloyd didn't have many options until Utah saw him during basketball season and extended an offer shortly before signing day. He was recruited as a safety but moved to linebacker in his first year in the Utah program. Lloyd graduated with his degree in communications. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but decided to pull out prior to the event.

PRO DAY	6031	237	33	9 1/8	81 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Instantly accelerates and closes the gap with his long strides ... doesn't lose foot races to the sideline ... quick to key-and-diagnose and make plays in the backfield (totalled 43.0 tackles for loss in 33 games the last three years and ranked No. 2 in the FBS with 22.0 tackles for loss in 2021) ... face-up tackler who pounces on his prey ... allows his long-levered, angular frame work for him ... skilled block-slipper due to his short-area quickness and body control ... scrapes from gap-to-gap and fills with violence ... able to leverage gaps because he arrives before the blocker ... active blitzer with excellent timing and knifing quickness ... very aware in coverage and covers a lot of ground when he drops (moves like a former safety) ... has the fluid lower body to quickly react with the eyes of the quarterback ... high school wide receiver and notched five career interceptions (four as a senior), with three returned for touchdowns ... two-time team captain and described as a "student of the game" by his coaches (Utah head coach Kyle Whittingham: "He watches as much film during the course of a week as anybody we've ever had here.") ... played both the "Rover" and "Mac" linebacker positions in the Utah defense ... saw time on each special teams coverage (523 career snaps) ... durable and productive.

WEAKNESSES: Has done a nice job adding weight to his lanky frame, but lacks ideal bulk for the position ... needs to consistently bring his lower body as a tackler instead of relying on his wrap strength ... his eagerness to make plays will occasionally lead to fly-by missed tackles ... skillfully avoids climbing linemen, but doesn't have the power to easily shed them once locked up ... his eyes can get caught spending too much time in the backfield ... has room to improve his recognition skills in man coverage.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Utah, Lloyd played the "Mac" linebacker position in defensive coordinator Morgan Scalley's 4-2-5 base scheme where he was asked to do a little bit of everything, including cover and blitz (inside and outside). A high school safety, he morphed into a playmaking linebacker and established himself as one of the best defensive players in the country, leading the team in tackles three consecutive years and becoming just the 10th consensus All-American in school history as a senior. Lloyd plays with speed and suddenness in his movements to weave through traffic in pursuit or change directions and make plays in coverage. He has room to improve his play strength and posture as a take-on player, but he does a great job scraping and sifting with his slippery athleticism and length to make plays at the line of scrimmage. Overall, Lloyd doesn't have to come off the field with his impressive blend of instincts, chase speed and explosiveness to blitz, play the run and cover. He projects as a scheme-proof NFL starter and a better version of Los Angeles Chargers' Kenneth Murray.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 9 overall)

2. NAKOBE DEAN | Georgia 5112 | 229 lbs. | JR. Horn Lake, Miss. (Horn Lake) 12/13/2000 (age 21.38) #17

BACKGROUND: Nakobe (nu-KO-bee) Dean, who is one of three children, was born and raised in Horn Lake (about 20 miles south of Memphis) by his mother (Neketta). He started playing organized sports at age 3 and starred in baseball, basketball and football throughout his childhood, playing mostly offensive and defensive line in middle school. Dean attended Horn Lake High, where he was a four-year letterman on varsity, starting every game as a freshman linebacker at the 6A level (highest classification in Mississippi). After 147 tackles as a junior, he led Horn Lake to a 15-0 record and Class 6A state title as a senior (the first state championship in school history). Dean finished his senior season with 175 total tackles, 26.0 tackles for loss, 7.0 sacks, three interceptions and two forced fumbles to earn the 2018 Butkus Award as the nation's top high school linebacker. He also had nine touchdowns on offense as a running back and was named 2018 Mr. Football and Gatorade Player of the Year in Mississippi. Dean finished his prep career with 438 total tackles, 61.5 tackles for loss, 18.0 sacks, six interceptions and 12 total touchdowns. He also lettered in baseball, basketball, and track at Horn Lake.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Dean was the No. 2 inside linebacker (behind Brandon Smith) in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 19 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Mississippi. He received offers from the entire SEC and national programs like Michigan and Stanford. Dean had a final five of Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, LSU and Texas A&M before he picked the Bulldogs. His older brother (Nikolas) was a tight end at Ole Miss (2018). Dean elected to skip his final season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5113	231	31 7/8	9 1/8	76 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only – pec, knee)

STRENGTHS: Athletic pursuit player and his closing speed jumps off the screen ... explosive trigger to beat blockers to the point and get on the ball carrier before they can make a move ... quickly corrects false steps with fluid redirect skills to get back on track ... highly skilled as a blitzer because of his downhill speed and ability to knife through gaps to avoid blockers ... moves like a missile in the run game thanks to his above-average instincts ... sees routes develop in coverage ... has both the finishing strength and hand technique to be a dependable tackler from different angles ... his Georgia teammates call him the unquestioned leader of the 2021 national title team, and his past coaches use words like "selfless", "intense", and "culture-changer" to describe his character ... smart on and off the field and prioritizes academics, graduating high school with a 4.3 GPA and carrying a 3.55 GPA in mechanical engineering at Georgia ... durable and started all 25 games the last two seasons, including his All-American junior year.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have an ideal frame or length for the position and looks maxed out physically ... can get engulfed and hung up on blocks near the line of scrimmage ... needs to rely more on his natural leverage to unglue from blockers ... flies around with purpose, but his hard outside pursuit sets up cutback opportunities for the ball carrier ... can introduce more control to his break down and tackling skills ... can be overmatched physically by tight ends in coverage ... some hip tightness shows when mirroring routes ... limited at the combine and pro day because of pectoral and knee injuries.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, Dean played the "Mac" linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme. After winning the 2018 Butkus Award in high school as the nation's top linebacker, he did the same three years later at Georgia as the 2021 Butkus Award winner in college football. An athletic pursuit player, Dean has perimeter speed to chase down plays, and his instincts also show in coverage and as a blitzer. Although his frame looks maxed out physically, he is a strong open-field tackler, and his intelligence and intangibles will win over a coaching staff. Overall, Dean's size is working against him, but he has the key/read/flow skills and play range vs. both the run and the pass to impact the game in different ways. He projects as an NFL starter in the Jonathan Vilma mold.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 29 overall)

3. QUAY WALKER | Georgia 6036 | 241 lbs. | SR. Cordele, Ga. (Crisp County) 5/8/2000 (age 21.97) #7

BACKGROUND: JaQuavian "Quay" Walker grew up in the small town of Cordele in southwest Georgia (two hours south of Atlanta) and started playing football at the pee-wee level as a quarterback (also played baseball and basketball). As he outgrew his peers, his coaches moved him to the defensive side of the ball and he started to lean toward basketball as his go-to sport. Walker enrolled at Crisp County High, and it quickly became clear that if he focused on football, he could go far. A two-way player as a wide receiver on offense and outside linebacker/defensive end on defense, he led Crisp County to a 13-1 record in 2016 and finished his junior season with 109 tackles, 19.0 tackles for loss, 8.0 sacks, and five pass breakups, adding 11 receptions for 157 yards and two touchdowns on offense. As a senior, Walker earned First Team All-State and Under Armour All-American status with 76 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and five pass break-ups with 13 catches for 201 yards and five touchdowns at receiver. He also lettered in basketball as a power forward and led the team to a region title in 2017.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Walker was the No. 2 outside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 31 overall) and the No. 6 recruit in the state of Georgia (Trevor Lawrence was No. 1, and Justin Fields was No. 2). He started to receive scholarship offers after his sophomore season and later committed to Alabama the summer before his senior year. However, he backed off that pledge, and many thought Tennessee was his new top team because newly hired head coach Jeremy Pruitt was his main recruiter at Alabama. On signing day, Walker initially put on a Volunteers hat before tossing it away and revealing his Georgia garb (he regrets the theatrics and later called it "immature"). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Large, long-limbed frame and comfortably wears his weight ... rangy and moves well laterally with the open-field athleticism to mirror and scrape ... excellent pursuit speed, and hits an extra gear to close ... improved mental process to identify his keys and stay on schedule ... leverages the hole with his hands to unwind from blocks and make stops ... stacks at the point of attack and out-physicals tight ends ... strong, athletic tackler to break down and finish even when off-balance ... outstanding length and grip power to lasso ball carriers out of his reach ... doesn't look out-matched athletically when asked to play man coverage vs. backs or tight ends ... possessed on the field, but quiet and level-headed off the field (named a captain for three games in 2021) ... was a regular on special teams coverages in college (542 career snaps) ... occasionally lined up in the slot in coverage or on the line as a blitzer ... durable and played in 52 games the past four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Average instincts and anticipation ... wasted steps are a result of him guessing before reading ... has shown a much better understanding of run game leverage, but will occasionally overrun his gap ... struggles to find the football in coverage (only three career pass breakups) ... doesn't have a great feel for route development, allowing tight ends to separate out of the break ... only one season as a full-time starter and averaged only 40.7 defensive snaps per game in 2021 ... ordinary production, averaging only 4.5 tackles per game in his lone season as a starter.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Georgia, Walker played the "Money" linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme. After playing outside linebacker and defensive end in high school, he moved inside when he arrived in Athens and struggled initially, but he showed improvement each season and was a key member of Georgia's 2021 championship-winning defense. With his lateral twitch and movement skills, Walker has outstanding mirroring skills vs. the run and uses his long arms to punch himself off blocks or lasso ball carriers out of his reach. Although he doesn't have the statistical résumé of a playmaker, he has a high batting average as a tackler, and his traits and trajectory suggest his best football is ahead of him. Overall, Walker is still developing his instincts, especially in coverage, but he aces the eye test with his exceptional combination of size, length and athleticism to dominate vs. the run. He has the potential to be a four-down impact linebacker in the NFL.

4. CHAD MUMA | Wyoming 6026 | 239 lbs. | SR. Lone Tree, Colo. (Legend) 8/18/1999 (age 22.69) #48

BACKGROUND: Chad Muma (MOO-muh), who is one of four children, grew up in suburban Denver and gravitated toward football at a young age. He attended Legend High in Parker, Colo., where he was a starting safety. Muma moved to linebacker as a senior but missed the first three games in 2017 after knee surgery to repair a 70% tear in his patellar tendon. He returned and finished with 77 tackles and 8.0 tackles for loss to earn Second Team All-State honors in the largest classification in Colorado. Muma also lettered in basketball and track at Legend, setting personal-bests in the 100-meters (11.73), 200-meters (23.65), 400-meters (52.87) and long jump (19'4.5).

A three-star safety recruit out of high school, Muma was ranked No. 149 at his position in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 10 recruit in the state of Colorado. He received four FBS-level offers and considered nearby Colorado State, but he had attended Wyoming games growing up, and his family connections led him to Laramie. His father (Ty), who is now the principal at Black Forest Hills Elementary (Aurora, Colo.), lettered two seasons at safety at Wyoming (1990-91). His maternal grandfather (Rick Desmarais) was a running back at Wyoming (1961-63). His younger sister (Payton) is a freshman basketball player at Gonzaga. Muma was diagnosed with Type-1 diabetes at age 13. Muma accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Runs really well in the open field ... tackling machine who chases everything, regardless of the distance ... understands contain angles to take away run lanes ... reads well pre-snap to anticipate and get a head start ... mashes the accelerator downhill and bursts into contact ... has a feel for slithering around blockers in the run game ... strong hands as a tackler ... has a nose for quick routes, undercutting passing lanes and getting his hands on the football (three INTs in 2021, including two returned for TDs) ... the only thing more impressive than his football IQ might be his competitiveness ... impressed on special teams coverages his first two seasons ... hates to come off the field, averaging 69.2 defensive snaps per game in 2021 ... two-time team captain and described as a "program guy" by head coach Craig Bohl ... his teammates say he carried himself like a professional the moment he showed up as a freshman ... his 142 tackles in 2021 ranked No. 2 in the FBS and were the most by a Wyoming player since 1987.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't always play as big as his size ... non-descript take-on skills and can be late shedding ... must do a better job with his hands to compensate for his lack of length ... average redirect skills and shows straight-line tendencies ... his lateral range is only adequate, and he can be knocked around and out-flanked ... late to recover after overrunning a gap ... will bite on fakes and get sucked in ... his missed tackles are uncommon, but they are usually a result of him hitting instead of wrapping when on the move ... can be a better backfield finisher as a blitzter ... of his 21 career starts, none came against a power-five opponent.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Wyoming, Muma played the middle linebacker position in defensive coordinator Jay Sawvel's 4-2-5 pro-style scheme. After backing up Logan Wilson (third-round pick of the Cincinnati Bengals in the 2020 NFL Draft) for two years, he led the team in tackles the past two seasons, averaging 11.3 tackles per game. Muma's college film is catnip for NFL teams: He can run, fills up the stat sheet and boasts top intangibles — at worst he will have an important role on special teams at the next level. He doesn't have any major deficiencies as a prospect, but his average lateral range and take-on skills will be tougher to mask vs. NFL competition. Overall, Muma might not be drafted as high as Wilson, but he is a high-energy tackling machine with excellent play speed, compete skills and the awareness to always be around the football.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 44 overall)

5. CHRISTIAN HARRIS | Alabama 6004 | 226 lbs. | JR. Baton Rouge, La. (University Lab) 1/16/2001 (age 21.28) #8

BACKGROUND: Christian Harris, who has an older brother, was born and raised in Baton Rouge and was childhood friends with future teammate Dylan Moses. He played mostly wide receiver and defensive back through middle school and high school, enrolling at University Laboratory School on the LSU campus. Harris was a four-year letterman and led the program to back-to-back state titles his final two years, finishing 14-0 in 2017 and 13-0 in 2018. As a junior, he earned Honorable Mention All-State honors at cornerback. Harris had another standout season as a senior on both sides of the ball and was named All-State as a kick returner with 503 return yards and three touchdowns, while also earning U.S. Army All-American honors.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Harris was the No. 6 inside linebacker in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 5 recruit in the state of Louisiana. Despite playing wide receiver and cornerback throughout high school, college programs primarily recruited him as a linebacker, although LSU (his hometown team and dream school growing up) saw him as an H-back. Harris received more than 30 scholarship offers and narrowed his list to Alabama, Auburn, LSU and Texas A&M. He initially committed to Jimbo Fisher and the Aggies the summer prior to his senior year before flipping to Alabama around Thanksgiving. His father (Jefferson) played football at Louisiana Tech. His older brother (Tylor) played football and track at Wake Forest (2012-16) and spent the 2016 season on the Seattle Seahawks practice squad. Harris elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6006	235	31 3/4	9 1/2	78 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(position drills only – choice)

STRENGTHS: Well-constructed linebacker with packed-on muscle and decent length ... above-average play speed in any direction once he triggers ... has a closing burst to arrive before blockers or the ball carrier can react ... able to sidestep and elude blocks without taking himself out of the play ... flashes violence in his hands to attack blockers as a take-on player ... moves with smooth hips and weight distribution for clean reps in coverage ... has the speed to stick with backs, tight ends and some slot receivers ... has the adjustment and ball skills of a former wide receiver ... impact blitzter because of his explosiveness downhill ... a high school defensive back who started as a true freshman linebacker for Nick Saban, which speaks to his football IQ and coachable attitude ... plays through bumps and bruises and played in every game the past three seasons, including 40 starts.

WEAKNESSES: Too much guessing or tardy reads ... needs to mature his key-and-diagnose skills ... inconsistent gap/fit integrity and will surrender inside leverage ... needs to be more consistent with his stack-and-shed technique to stay detached ... the missed tackles piled up on his tape ... too many fly-by attempts, and must control his break down mechanics as a finisher ... unimpressive on-ball production considering his coverage snaps and athleticism ... still learning how to mix up his pass-rush moves to win as a blitzer ... never led the Tide in tackles.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Alabama, Harris played the weakside linebacker role in head coach Nick Saban's multiple front seven. A high school receiver and defensive back, he made the transition to linebacker and started 40 of 41 games in his three seasons in Tuscaloosa, posting moderate production. Harris is a do-everything breed of linebacker with the multidimensional skill set to drop in coverage, get downhill vs. the run or make plays in the backfield as a blitzer. He has a good feel for play direction but needs to pull the trigger a half-second quicker and better leverage his gaps as a take-on player. Overall, Harris must become more consistent diagnosing the action, but he is a versatile athlete with the play speed and intangibles to grow into a dependable NFL starter. Although still developing in several areas, he has the ceiling of a scheme-diverse, three-down player.

6. LEO CHENAL | Wisconsin 6025 | 250 lbs. | JR. Grantsburg, Wis. (Grantsburg) 10/26/2000 (age 21.51) #5

BACKGROUND: Leo Chenal (sha-NELL), who is the 12th oldest of 16 children, was born and raised in north Wisconsin. He grew up in Frederic before moving to Grantsburg (five miles from the Wisconsin-Minnesota border) for high school. Chenal was a three-sport letterman at Grantsburg High and a four-year starter and two-way player on the football team, starting at both running back and linebacker. After 72 tackles and 419 rushing yards as a sophomore, he became a captain as a junior and earned First Team All-State honors on defense. As a senior, Chenal was named the Wisconsin Gatorade Player of the Year and a 2018 First Team All-American (at running back and linebacker) with 2,038 rushing yards (10.5 yards per carry) and 45 touchdowns on offense, adding 120 tackles and 7.0 tackles for loss on defense. He was named Wisconsin's small school Offensive and Defensive Player of the Year in 2018. Chenal finished his career with 385 tackles, 55.0 tackles for loss, 7.0 sacks and three interceptions on defense and 3,705 rushing yards, 68 rushing touchdowns, 1,300 receiving yards and 17 receiving touchdowns on offense. He also earned All-Conference honors in basketball and track, setting personal-bests in the 100 meters (11.68), long jump (21'7.5) and shot put (46'3).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Chenal was the No. 35 athlete in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Wisconsin. He started to hear from FCS and Division II programs as a sophomore before nearby Big Ten schools Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin got involved. A month into his junior year, Chenal received a scholarship offer from his home state Badgers and he accepted the next day, becoming the first verbal commit in Wisconsin's 2019 recruiting class. At the same time, his older brother (John), who was originally committed to FCS-level North Dakota, received a walk-on offer from Wisconsin and played fullback for four seasons (2018-21) for the Badgers and is also in the 2022 NFL Draft class. Chenal has 15 total siblings (seven half-siblings and eight full siblings), ranging in age from 12 to 39 years old. Chenal decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6026	249	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	4.24	6.98	34 (stood on Combine runs, jumps)

STRENGTHS: Fast eyes to read his keys and play ahead of climbing blocks ... blocking schemes set off alarm bells in his head ... comes to balance as a tackler and springs towards the ball carrier like a rattlesnake ... his discipline and thump at contact make missed tackles infrequent ... lived in the backfield with his downhill play speed (led Big Ten in tackles for loss in 2021) ... motor is always cranked to chase down plays anywhere on the field ... keeps himself centered mid-pursuit to smoothly change directions and close with a burst ... physically strapped together with a powerful build ... doesn't stay blocked for long or run out of energy ... above-average contact balance to fight through bodies and squeeze gaps at the line of scrimmage ... has a knack for sifting and dipping under blocks ... benches 420 pounds and cleans 385 pounds (earned a spot on Bruce Feldman's Freaks List) ... competes with a gritty, blue-collar attitude and doesn't have a passive bone in his body ... was a regular on punt coverage the last two seasons ... highly productive junior season and was one of only two FBS players with at least 115 tackles and 18.0 tackles for loss.

WEAKNESSES: Unproven covering seam speed ... doesn't have the recovery athleticism to make up after a hesitation or false step in coverage ... late to anticipate and drive on routes in front of him ... needs to improve his feel for passing lanes (only two career pass break-ups, including none in 2021) ... at times his aggressive nature will lead to wrong lane choice or early arrival, surrendering his leverage ... his hands are physical as a pass rusher, but his set-up and rush attack can be more fundamentally sound.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Wisconsin, Chenal was an inside linebacker in defensive coordinator Jim Leonard's 3-4 base scheme. He embraced the Badgers' "Death Row" moniker at linebacker and had an All-American junior season, finishing No. 7 in the FBS in tackles per game (10.4) and No. 2 in tackles for loss per game (1.6). Chenal has outstanding eyes, aggressive flow and feel for run-blocking development, which allows him to play ahead of climbing blocks and pile up tackles at or behind the line of scrimmage. Though he has the range to hold up in coverage, his questionable fluidity and ball skills are a cause for concern. Overall, Chenal has room to grow as both a cover man and blitzer, but he has exceptional run instincts with above average key-and-diagnose skills and contact balance downhill. He compares favorably to Jordyn Brooks as a prospect.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 58 overall)

7. TROY ANDERSEN | Montana State 6034 | 243 lbs. | SR. Dillon, Mont. (Beaverhead) 4/23/1999 (age 23.01) #15

BACKGROUND: Troy Andersen, who has an older sister, was born and raised in Dillon (southwestern Montana, 50 miles north of the Idaho border) on his family’s cattle ranch. He was a three-sport letterman at Beaverhead County High and initially played wide receiver and safety before moving to quarterback as a junior. During his final two seasons, Andersen earned All-State honors and led the team to back-to-back appearances in the Class A state championship game, winning the 2016 title as a senior. He finished his senior year with 1,403 passing yards, 877 rushing yards and 30 total touchdowns, earning state offensive MVP honors. Andersen also earned Defensive Player of the Year honors in 2016 with 71 tackles and three interceptions. He was First Team All-Conference in basketball and helped lead the team to the 2015-16 state championship as a junior. In track, Andersen won the state championships in the 100 meters and 200 meters both as a junior and senior. He set personal bests in the 100 meters (10.88) and 200 meters (22.11) and helped Beaverhead to its first Class A state championship in 2016.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Andersen wasn’t ranked among the recruiting services and didn’t attend many recruiting camps, but he was well-known by in-state programs. He committed to Montana State over Montana and stayed loyal to that pledge despite a few FBS-level schools showing interest. His father (Scott) played college basketball at Eastern Oregon. His older sister (Holly) ran track at Montana State before she was sidelined with an ankle injury. Andersen graduated with his degree in agricultural business (May 2021) and a GPA of 3.91. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Large-framed, long-limbed athlete ... moves with bounce and burst in his lateral movements ... has the sideline-to-sideline range to shadow the ball all over the field ... former 100-meter state champion in high school, and that speed shows in pursuit ... fires downhill and fills gaps with power ... has the athletic ability to recover lost steps in his overpursuit ... not the most refined tackler, but creates physical collisions ... improved discipline to stay with his assignments instead of biting on misdirection ... untapped ability as a blitzer ... when he has a beat on the play, he has the timing to arrive with the ball in coverage ... has won more awards for his academics than sports, including valedictorian in high school (4.0 GPA) and a finalist for the William V. Campbell Trophy in college, also known as the Academic Heisman ... loves the grind and routinely plays through injury (head coach Brent Vigen: “Troy is every bit determined as he is gifted.”) ... two-time team captain with the team-first attitude that led him to playing both offense and defense in college (his preference was to only play linebacker) ... productive in whatever role he played in college, finishing his career 10th in school history in rushing yards (2,263) and second in rushing touchdowns (33).

WEAKNESSES: Unrefined take-on skills, and still learning how to punch-and-separate ... inconsistent leveraging blocks and working off contact ... finds too much contact when scraping laterally ... the missed tackles piled up on tape ... must do a better job settling his feet, dropping his hips and wrapping to finish ... his counters stall out once blockers get on top of him ... high-cut and struggles to stay low through redirect blocks ... needs to do a better job feeling routes around him and tracking the eyes of the quarterback in coverage ... aggressive play demeanor leads to body blows and durability questions ... injured his right knee during the 2019 playoffs and then had a setback during winter break and required surgery (May 2020) — he planned to redshirt the 2020 season before it was cancelled because of COVID ... also has a history of shoulder issues.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Montana State, Andersen lined up at middle linebacker in defensive coordinator Freddie Banks’ 4-2-5 base scheme. After winning state titles in three different sports in high school (plus earning valedictorian), he became one of the few players in college football history to lead his team in passing, rushing and total tackles in three different seasons (of his 40 career starts, 25 came at linebacker, 11 at quarterback and four at running back). In his 25-game stretch as a full-time linebacker (2019 and 2021), he posted 201 tackles, 25.5 tackles for loss, 8.5 sacks, 15 passes defended and three interceptions. Although he won’t be teaching a clinic on the mechanics of wrap tackling, Andersen has incredible chase down speed with the aggressive nature to get his man on the ground. His lateral range helps make up for the wasted steps, but he spends too much time attached to blocks, and his instincts are still developing. Overall, Andersen has sloppy tackling/take-on habits and shows a marginal feel in coverage, but he is a toolsy size/speed athlete with the competitive toughness and versatility that give him legitimate NFL upside (on offense, defense, and special teams).

CHANNING TINDALL | Georgia

6017 | 230 lbs. | SR.

Columbia, S.C. (Spring Valley)

#41

BACKGROUND: Channing Tindall, who has two younger siblings, was born and raised in Columbia and started playing football at age 6. He started out on the offensive line before moving to defensive end and continuing to play through Pop Warner and middle school. Tindall attended Spring Valley High, where he was a four-year letterman in football, lining up as a defensive end and middle linebacker. As a senior, he led Spring Valley to an 11-2 record and posted 190 tackles, 14.0 tackles for loss and 9.0 sacks. He earned First Team All-State and U.S. Army All-American honors and was a finalist for USA Today’s National Defensive Player of the Year and South Carolina’s Mr. Football Award. Tindall also lettered in track (shot and discus).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Tindall was the No. 5 inside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of South Carolina. Growing up less than 20 miles from the Gamecocks’ football facility, he had connections to South Carolina (plus his mother and stepmother are both South Carolina alums). But Tindall wanted to leave the state for his college experience and grew up a Georgia fan (his stepfather is from Augusta), choosing the Bulldogs over Auburn. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Explosive athlete and covers a ton of ground with his chase speed ... unwinds and gets on top of ball carriers before they can react ... consistently in the vicinity due to his “see ball, get ball” style ... violent striker and body tackler ... does a nice job settling his feet to make open-field stops and finish the mission ... has a filled-out frame with length ... has the downhill closing skills to be an effective chase-down blitz (fourth on the team in sacks in 2021) ... appreciates hard coaching and trusts what he is taught ... described as a “program guy” with a “worker bee” mentality by members of the football staff ... was a regular on kickoff and punt coverages on special teams all four seasons ... finished top-three on the team in tackles as a senior despite zero starts.

WEAKNESSES: Straight-line tendencies and will struggle vs. shifty cutback runners ... rigid redirection skills will make him a target in coverage ... mediocre instincts and anticipation ... late to read the backfield at times, getting a late start in pursuit ... hyper-aggressive play style and needs to be more cerebral ... too easily taken out of position by play-action ... average-at-best contact balance when fighting through climbing blocks ... saw plenty of coverage reps, especially as a senior, but finished his career with zero pass break-ups or interceptions ... didn't register a start in his four seasons and averaged only 31.6 defensive snaps per game as a senior.

SUMMARY: A role player at Georgia, Tindall played the “Money” linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's 3-4 base scheme, also lining up as an edge rusher at times. After seeing few snaps on defense over his first three seasons in Athens, he was an integral part of the linebacker rotation for the 2021 national champion Bulldogs, finishing third on the team in tackles despite registering zero starts. Tindall flies across the field with impressive closing burst to run and hit, continuing his acceleration through the ball carrier. He finds runners between the tackles with his aggressive run fits, but his anticipation can be better downhill and when dropping in space (zero career pass break-ups). Overall, Tindall has coverage limitations, but his explosive speed, tackling skills and enforcing nature should all translate well to the NFL game. He projects best as a rotational linebacker as a rookie with the talent level to grow into a starting role.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 74 overall)

9. BRIAN ASAMOAH | Oklahoma 6002 | 226 lbs. | rJR. Columbus, Ohio (St. Francis DeSales) 3/29/2000 (age 22.08) #24

BACKGROUND: Brian Asamoah II (ah-suh-MO-uh), who is one of five children, grew up in the Columbus area, just 15 minutes from the Ohio State campus (his family is originally from Accra, Ghana). He attended St. Francis DeSales High, a private catholic school in Columbus, where he lettered in basketball, football and track. Asamoah played primarily on junior varsity for two seasons before moving up to varsity as a junior, where he played running back on offense and linebacker on defense. After rushing for 651 yards as a junior in 2016, he finished with 151 carries for 957 rushing yards (6.3 average) and nine touchdowns as a senior, adding 36 tackles, 8.0 tackles for loss and 1.5 sacks in 2017. Asamoah was a member of DeSales 4x100 and 4x200 relay teams and set personal bests in the shot put (41'2.75) and long jump (18'3).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Asamoah was the No. 33 outside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 22 recruit in the state of Ohio. He grew up a Buckeyes fan, but an offer from Urban Meyer and Ohio State never arrived. His first offer was from Eastern Kentucky during his junior year, which was soon followed by a host of FBS programs, including Michigan, Notre Dame and Penn State. Two days before Oklahoma defeated Ohio State in Columbus (September 2017), Asamoah committed to the Sooners. His cousin (Jude Adje-Barimah) was an undrafted cornerback out of Bowling Green and played three seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2015-17). Asamoah graduated with his degree in human relations. He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. Asamoah also skipped Oklahoma's bowl game but accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Fast flower who cuts off run lanes before they can materialize ... opens his hips and shows off his short-area burst and chase range ... flashes the ability to be a second-level ninja, eluding blockers while keeping his eyes locked on the football ... comes to balance as an open-field tackler ... strong hands to finish the tackles that he starts ... quick through gaps and can dip under blocks ... varies his speeds as a blitz ... longer arms than expected for his height and can jolt blockers in the hole when he commits and times up his strike ... balanced zone dropper ... was a regular on punt coverage (three special teams tackles in 2021) ... plays fearless and tough and played in every game the last three seasons before opting out of the bowl game ... led the team in tackles in 2020 and 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized and can be overwhelmed by blockers ... average play strength to stack, shed, and control the point of attack ... can get lost in traffic and struggles to out-leverage blocking angles ... takes himself out of plays when attempting to run around blockers ... late to locate road blocks mid-pursuit and must expand his vision ... takes overaggressive angles and doesn't protect vs. cutbacks ... plays with an inconsistent feel for route development in coverage ... below-average on-ball production in 2021 with zero break-ups or interceptions.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oklahoma, Asamoah lined up at weakside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Alex Grinch's 3-3-5 base scheme. An offer from Ohio State never arrived for the Columbus native, but he thrived with the Sooners, leading the team in tackles and earning All-Big 12 honors each of the past two seasons. Asamoah plays with the foot speed to make plays downhill, outside the numbers, and when dropping and covering in space. He can be engulfed at times, but he has decent length and should continue to get better taking on contact. Overall, Asamoah is undersized and underpowered, but he has sideline-to-sideline speed with dependable tackling skills and upside in coverage. He projects as a run-and-chase linebacker with NFL starting potential.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 86 overall)

10. JOJO DOMANN | Nebraska 6012 | 228 lbs. | rSR. Colorado Springs, Colo. (Pine Creek) 7/28/1997 (age 24.75) #13

BACKGROUND: Johansen “JoJo” Domann, who is the middle child of three kids, was born in Chicago before his family moved to Utah in 2002 where his mother (Teddi) was involved with marketing for the Winter Olympics. The family relocated again a few years later, settling in Colorado where Domann spent the rest of his upbringing. He enrolled at Pine Creek High in Colorado Springs and was the varsity starting punter as a freshman. Domann was a do-everything performer on both sides of the ball the next three seasons, posting 44 tackles as a sophomore and helping the team to the 2013 Class 4A state championship. The next season, he helped lead Pine Creek to a 14-0 record and its second consecutive Class 4A state title. Domann finished his junior season with 49 catches for 797 yards and 10 touchdowns on offense, 61 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss and seven interceptions on defense. He also had a near perfect record as the team’s kicker (59-of-60 extra point attempts, 7-of-8 on field goals). As a senior, Domann was named the 2015 Gatorade Colorado Player of the Year as Pine Creek went 12-1, falling in the playoff semifinals (Domann was injured on the fourth play of the game and required surgery). He finished his final season with 34 tackles and two interceptions on defense, 674 receiving yards, 404 rushing yards and 20 total touchdowns on offense and again handled the kicking duties (34-of-37 on extra points). Domann also played three years of varsity basketball at Pine Creek.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Domann was the No. 35 athlete in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Colorado. He received offers from Arizona State, Colorado, North Carolina and others, but committed to Mike Riley and Nebraska as a safety. His father (Craig) is a longtime certified agent (currently works for 360 Sports) and has represented several former (Mike Minter, Marion Barber III) and current (Andrew Wylie, Dan Sorenson) NFL players. His mother also works for 360 Sports. His younger brother (Brock) played quarterback at Pine Creek followed by stops at FCS-level Campbell and several junior college programs before he transferred to Louisville for the 2021 season. Domann earned his degree in advertising and public relations in May 2020. He took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for a sixth season in 2021. Domann accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Well-built, balanced athlete with field speed and closing burst ... comfortable playing in space with the hips to smoothly transition and maintain his momentum on coverage turns ... reads the eyes of the quarterback and jumps passing lanes ... plays with an active mind but stays disciplined vs. eye candy ... physical hands to set a hard edge or fight through blocks in the run game ... sees through blockers to access either shoulder ... stays behind his pads as a tackler to create stopping power at contact ... responsible for nine forced fumbles in his career ... plays through pain (played through two games with a broken finger as a senior) ... has routinely battled through adversity, and there are zero concerns about his competitive toughness or love for the game ... grew up around professional athletes as the son of an NFL agent ... versatile experience as a safety, linebacker and on special teams coverages.

WEAKNESSES: Solid muscle tone but lacks ideal height and length ... flies around the field in pursuit but will prematurely lower his eyes and lose control, leading to missed tackles ... his take-on skills and processing skills are much better in space as opposed to inside the hashes ... will arrive too early on slants ... slot receivers in the NFL will bring new challenges that he didn’t face consistently in college ... missed time because of several injuries in college: suffered a torn ACL in his left knee during 2017 spring practices and required surgery (April 2017); he tore the same ACL in his left knee seven months later while playing pickup basketball and required another surgery (November 2017); suffered a ruptured tendon in a finger on his left hand (October 2021) and required surgery, missing the final two games of his senior year; suffered a torn labrum in his final high school game and required surgery ... he will turn 25 years old before his first NFL game.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Nebraska, Domann played a hybrid nickel linebacker role in defensive coordinator Erik Chinander’s 4-2-5 base scheme. A former safety, he was asked to cover a lot of space in the slot and gave up his share of receptions, but he allowed only 5.4 yards per catch and zero touchdowns as an All-American in 2021. Domann has terrific field speed and his play range is expanded by his awareness, hip movements, and closing skills. He will have a tougher time holding up vs. slot receivers in the NFL compared to college, but he is an instinctive zone-dropper with the reactive quickness to challenge plays. Overall, Domann lacks length and needs to play with better control as a finisher, but his athleticism and anticipation fuel his versatility in space, which should earn him a subpackage and special teams role in the NFL, stylistically similar to LB Jabril Cox.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

11. DARRIAN BEAVERS | Cincinnati 6036 | 237 lbs. | rSR. Cincinnati, Ohio (Colerain) 7/5/1999 (age 22.81) #0

BACKGROUND: Darrian Beavers grew up in Cincinnati and was a three-sport letterman at Colerain High School. A three-year varsity starter for the football team, he played both ways as a wide receiver on offense and a safety on defense. As a senior, Beavers led Colerain to an 11-1 record and the team’s third consecutive conference championship before falling in overtime of the second round of the 2016 state playoffs. He earned First Team All-GMC honors as a junior and senior. Beavers also lettered in basketball and track and graduated with a 4.0 GPA.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Beavers was the No. 157 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 78 recruit in the state of Ohio. He picked up offers from Army, Ball State, Bowling Green, Georgia State, Miami (Ohio) and several FCS-level programs. Following his senior season, he received an offer from UConn and signed with the Huskies. After two seasons at UConn as a linebacker and defensive end, Beavers elected to transfer and was recruited by Power 5 programs like Minnesota and UCLA. However, he was admittedly “homesick” and transferred to his hometown Cincinnati where he was granted a waiver to play immediately. He took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for his fifth season in 2021. Beavers graduated with his degree in criminal justice. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Smooth, supersized athlete for the position and carries his mass well ... above-average reactive quickness to avoid blockers vs. the run or stay within arm's length in coverage ... patient with his backfield reads and puts himself in position to leverage plays ... high football IQ and plays fundamentally-sound defense ... will shoot gaps and find vulnerable cracks in the blocking scheme to make tackles in the backfield ... physical at contact and stands up blockers ... added nearly 100 pounds between his junior year of high school (160 pounds) and his senior year at Cincinnati (255 pounds), crediting the Cincinnati strength staff for his physical development ... played in 62 career games with experience at safety, linebacker, and edge rusher ... his production improved each season at Cincinnati.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary range and play speed ... labors in his transitions vs. sudden offensive skill players ... some stiffness shows in man coverage ... average instincts and anticipation and can be caught guessing ... follows the eyes of the quarterback or the flow of the action, leaving him late to diagnose misdirection ... overruns pursuit angles with inconsistent breakdown balance as a tackler in space ... plays physical at contact, but he requires time to deconstruct blocks ... will need to improve his rush plan to be a consistent blitzer in the NFL ... played through a shoulder injury in 2019.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Cincinnati, Beavers played weakside linebacker in defensive coordinator Mike Tressell's 3-3-5 base scheme. Not many athletes spend time at safety, linebacker, and defensive end over their college careers, but that functional experience helped morph him into a do-everything backer who is coming off a career-year in 2021. Beavers is a big, physical defender with NFL-ready discipline and diagnose skills that will endear him to coaches. Although he has versatile experience, the term "Jack of all trades, master of none" comes to mind while watching his hybrid skill set. Overall, Beavers doesn't have elite anticipation to mask his average body twitch and range, but he moves well for his size with the instincts and tackling skills suited for in-the-box work. He projects best as an inside linebacker in a 3-4 scheme with some value outside as an edge rusher as well.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

12. TERREL BERNARD | Baylor 6007 | 224 lbs. | rSR. La Porte, Texas (La Porte) 5/7/1999 (age 22.98) #2

BACKGROUND: Terrel (tuh-RELL) Bernard, who is one of six children, was raised in La Porte (a bay town southeast of Houston) by his mother (Laura). He started playing sports at age 6 but chose to focus on football when he attended La Porte High and made varsity as a freshman. Playing both inside and outside linebacker, Bernard earned First Team All-District honors as a sophomore with 114 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss and two interceptions. As a junior, he again earned All-District honors with 148 tackles, 9.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks and two interceptions (one returned for a touchdown). Bernard led La Porte to a 9-3 record as a senior and had his best season with 201 tackles, 12.0 tackles for loss and 5.0 sacks. He was named Second Team All-State and District MVP in 2016 and saw time on offense as a running back all four seasons, finishing his prep career with 10 rushing touchdowns.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Bernard was the No. 66 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 141 recruit in the state of Texas. He started receiving scholarship offers as a sophomore and finished with offers from Power 5 programs like Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Northwestern and Texas Tech. Bernard committed to Houston the summer before his senior year, but when Matt Rhule was hired as Baylor's head coach in December 2016, Rhule was able to flip him to Baylor shortly before signing day. Bernard graduated with his degree in health, kinesiology and leisure studies (August 2020) and recently received his master's degree in sports management (December 2021). Bernard accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Plays with plus speed and range ... moves well laterally to track the football up-and-down the line of scrimmage ... trusts his eyes and diagnoses quickly vs. the run to fill (Rhule: "He's just a great football mind.") ... resets his vision well to adjust his movement patterns on the fly ... has the foot quickness to give blockers the slip ... alert and active in zone coverage with smooth coverage transitions ... flow-fast blitzer who finished his career No. 3 in school history in sacks (16.5) ... adequate length and tackling strength with room to add bulk ... wants to be a strength coach after his playing days and invests in his conditioning ... disciplined by nature and was a senior captain (head coach Dave Aranda: "When I think of the heart, soul, and character of our team, I think of him.") ... productive with a pair of 100-tackle seasons on his résumé.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal size by NFL standards ... adequate vision, but his anticipation is lacking ... tends to see the ball through a straw and must do a better job locating impending blockers ... doesn't have explosive hands when attacking blocks ... overaggressive downhill and can get sucked up too far or out-leveraged on the edge ... reactive in coverage and can be caught flat-footed in man-to-man ... battled through several injuries in college: suffered a season-ending fractured shoulder and torn labrum that required surgery (November 2020); broke his right hand that required surgery (November 2019), but didn't miss any time; missed one game as a senior because of a knee scope (September 2021); redshirted in 2017 after breaking his foot ... didn't play on kickoff coverage in college.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Baylor, Bernard was the weakside linebacker in head coach Dave Aranda's 3-3-5 base scheme and played mostly to the field side. He consistently filled up the stat sheet with 8.4 tackles per game over the past three seasons, and both of his head coaches in Waco (Rhule and Aranda) were eager to praise his leadership and integrity. Bernard is always involved in plays because of his play speed and inside-out range, showing the ability to unlock and accelerate in any direction. He tends to be too reactive at times and doesn't have the play strength or heavy hands to quickly dispose of blockers at the point of attack. Overall, Bernard is undersized and doesn't have the anticipation of a playmaker, but he has disciplined eyes and athletic range to cover space, projecting as a fourth linebacker and potential down-the-road NFL starter.

13. MALCOLM RODRIGUEZ | Oklahoma State 5110 | 232 lbs. | rSR. Wagoner, Okla. (Wagoner) 3/29/1999 (age 23.08) #20

BACKGROUND: Malcolm Rodriguez, who is the middle child of three boys, was born in Tahlequah, Okla., and grew up in Wagoner where he was a tournament-winning wrestler at age 4 and picked up football a few years later. He attended Wagoner High and earned the starting quarterback job as a sophomore. He led the team to three consecutive state championships in his three years as the starter (won his final 37 games in high school). As a senior, Rodriguez posted 3,667 total yards and 43 touchdowns (22 passing, 21 rushing), adding 79 tackles as a linebacker/safety to earn All-State honors and the Oklahoma Defensive Player of the Year. He finished his prep career with 6,144 passing yards, 2,449 rushing yards, and 115 touchdowns. Rodriguez, who was also the class vice president, lettered in baseball, track (sprints and relays) and wrestling. He was a two-time state champion wrestler his junior and senior years, finishing with a 30-3 record.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Rodriguez was the No. 33 dual-threat quarterback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 23 recruit in the state of Oklahoma. Despite his on-field accolades, he went widely underrecruited, with only Wyoming offering him until Oklahoma State reached out the day before the 2016 state championship game. Rodriguez signed with the Cowboys as a safety before transitioning to linebacker prior to the 2019 season. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility due to COVID and returned to Stillwater for his fifth season in 2021. His older brother (Roman) played linebacker at Division II Northeastern State. Rodriguez graduated with his degree (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Instinctive and quick to sort through his run-pass keys ... shows a natural feel for play/block development ... plays on time to mirror plays at the line of scrimmage ... balanced scrapes and skillfully works through traffic ... two-time state champion wrestler in high school who plays with a natural understanding of leverage as a tackler and take-on player ... balanced and strong as a striker ... accounted for 10 forced turnovers in his career (eight forced fumbles, two interceptions) ... didn't allow a touchdown in coverage in 2021 ... two-time team captain and was a model of consistency as a leader and performer ... no questions about his durability and toughness, playing in 60 consecutive games ... 538 career snaps on special teams ... ranks top-five in school history in career tackles (409) and games started (48).

WEAKNESSES: Lacks desired measurements for the position ... his short arms showed up during weigh-ins just like they did on tape ... his lack of inches lowers his margin for error as a tackler, leading to close misses in space ... gets caught up in a blocker's tractor beam and struggles to escape ... can make a play on the ball when thrown at, but doesn't have the anticipation or burst to make plays in coverage ... shows shades of tightness when attempting to flip his hips ... had a defensive holding penalty on the Notre Dame tape.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Oklahoma State, Rodriguez played weakside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Jim Knowles' 4-2-5 base scheme. A high school quarterback, he played safety for two seasons in Stillwater before moving to linebacker because of injuries in 2019. He then led the team in tackles three consecutive seasons, becoming just the fourth player in school history to reach 400 career tackles. Rodriguez is quick to read his keys and make plays, both behind the line of scrimmage and in space (recorded at least six tackles in 40 of his final 50 games played). More concerning than the lack of height is his lack of arm length to punch himself off blocks or make up for imperfect tackling angles. Overall, Rodriguez won't be for everyone with his poor size and linear tendencies, but he understands football geometry with the diagnose skills and competitive toughness to see the field in the NFL. He will need the right fit, similar in ways to Seattle Seahawks LB Ben Burrt-Kirven.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

14. MIKE ROSE | Iowa State 6037 | 245 lbs. | SR. Brecksville, Ohio (Brecksville-Broadview) 5/25/2000 (age 21.93) #23

BACKGROUND: Michael "Mike" Rose Jr., who has four brothers, grew up in Brecksville (15 miles south of Cleveland) and played any sport he could growing up, including baseball, basketball, football, lacrosse and soccer. He attended Brecksville-Broadview High, where he was a three-year varsity letterman and became a starting strong safety as a sophomore. Rose earned Second Team All-Conference honors as a junior with 82 tackles, 10.0 tackles for loss and two interceptions in 2016. He played defensive end and linebacker as a senior and earned First Team All-Conference and All-District honors with 53 tackles and 10.0 tackles for loss in seven games. Rose also scored a pair of touchdowns on offense as a fullback in 2017. He was a three-year letterman on the Brecksville-Broadview basketball team, earning All-Conference honors as a junior and senior (averaged 16.6 points per game in the 2017-18 season).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Rose was the No. 57 outside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 38 recruit in the state of Ohio. He received interest from FCS-level programs like Princeton and Colgate and originally committed to Ball State over Air Force. Midway through his senior year, Iowa State entered the picture, and Rose flipped to the Cyclones, which was his third FBS offer and only Power 5 offer. His older brother (Jack) played baseball at Dayton (2013-15). His older brother (Jay) played linebacker at Division II Hillsdale (2014-17). His younger brother (Matt) was a three-star linebacker recruit and signed with Stanford in the 2022 recruiting class. His maternal grandfather (Chuck Lima) was a two-way fullback and linebacker at Notre Dame (1954-58). Rose accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to play because of an injury sustained in the bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Prototypical measurements with the desired size and length ... agile-footed athlete and moves well laterally ... looks comfortable in space with enough functional range to match, drop, or drive ... highly intelligent with the read-react quickness to stay ahead of blocks ... comes to balance to put himself in position to make form tackles ... physical hands to punch his way off blocks ... Iowa State coaches tell NFL scouts that he is one of the most driven players in the program and gives the same high effort regardless if it's Tuesday practice, Wednesday lift or Saturday's game ... consistent production across the board ... started 49 games (tied for the school record), including 45 in a row to start his college career.

WEAKNESSES: Average play strength and speed ... must be perfect with his pursuit angles because he doesn't have the explosive traits to easily recover ... doesn't strike through his target, giving ball carriers a chance to wriggle free (high missed tackle rate in 2021) ... runs into too many blocks and late to disengage from contact ... lacks a firm base and can be moved by climbing blockers ... too reactive in coverage and late to anticipate routes or passing concepts ... lacks burst in his footwork transitions, allowing separation to pass catchers ... aside from field goal blocks, he wasn't a regular on special teams coverages during his career ... missed two games in 2021 and parts of others because of a rotator cuff injury (November 2021)

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Iowa State, Rose lined up as the strongside linebacker in defensive coordinator Jon Heacock's 3-3-5 base scheme, previously playing the middle linebacker position. Although not highly recruited, he started from day one when he arrived in Ames and filled up the stat sheet, becoming one of only two players in Cyclones history to surpass 40.0 career tackles for loss. Rose looks the part with his size and energy, and his football character, specifically his smarts and competitive motor, is outstanding. Though his diagnose skills help expand his impact range, he lacks explosive traits as a tackler and in coverage, surrendering separation. Overall, Rose's average speed and strength will be tougher to mask vs. NFL talent, but he is a smooth mover with the instincts and toughness that NFL teams covet. He projects as a versatile backup (middle or strongside) at the next level who should find a home on special teams.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

15. MICAH MCFADDEN | Indiana 6011 | 240 lbs. | SR. Tampa, Fla. (Plant) 1/3/2000 (age 22.32) #47

BACKGROUND: Micah McFadden, who is one of four children, grew up in Tampa and played football in youth leagues. He attended Plant High and played primarily on the junior varsity team as a freshman and sophomore. Because of an injury to a teammate, McFadden started at the important "Panther" linebacker position on varsity as a junior and had a breakout season, leading Plant to the 2016 7A state championship game. He finished the 2016 season with 116 tackles, 45.0 tackles for loss, 14.0 sacks, four forced fumbles and one interception to earn First Team All-County and All-State honors. As a senior, McFadden set school records for single-season tackles (211) and single-game tackles (23), adding 39.0 tackles for loss, 7.0 sacks, two interceptions and four rushing touchdowns on offense. He was named the 2017 Florida Athletic Coaches Association Player of the Year.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McFadden was the No. 139 linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 316 recruit in the state of Florida. Because he didn't become a starter until his junior year, so he went under the radar as a recruit. Indiana had a unique perspective because head coach Thomas Allen attended several of Plant's games in 2016 as a father to watch his son (Thomas), who was a year older than McFadden and played next to him at linebacker. McFadden finished with four FBS-level scholarship offers, but Indiana was the easy choice. He was the lowest-ranked recruit in the Hoosiers' 2018 class, one spot below kicker Charles Campbell. His mother (Deborah) played collegiate soccer at Arkansas (1986-88). His older brother (Luke) was a wide receiver at Division III Johns Hopkins (2015-18), finishing his career with 154 receptions for 2,718 receiving yards and 25 touchdowns. His older sister (Rebekah) played collegiate soccer at UNC Greensboro. McFadden accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl but was unable to participate because of an injury.

STRENGTHS: Excellent run filler ... his pursuit his persistent and unapologetic ... quick, strong hands to defeat blocks and separate from contact on his way to the ball carrier ... outstanding blitzing skills due to his timing and downhill speed ... steamrolls through running back blocks ... plays with physicality (wears No. 47 because of John Lynch) ... widescreen field vision and is the defender directing his teammates based on his pre-snap reads ... voted a team captain as a junior and senior, and his coaches call him the "rock" of the defense ... consistently filled up the stat sheet and finished his career No. 6 in school history in tackles for loss (37.0).

WEAKNESSES: Too easily out-leveraged in space by shifty ball carriers ... his core stiffness shows when attempting to quickly change directions in the open field ... his anticipation tends to come and go, leaving him late to read the developing hole ... had very few answers for Ohio State’s outside zone and block combinations ... packs a wallop at contact, but his strike zone as a tackler is wild, leading to more misses than ideal ... limited range in coverage, both laterally and vertically ... doesn’t have the open-field burst to close on throws ... pulled out of the Shrine Bowl because of an injury.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Indiana, McFadden played the middle linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Charlton Warren’s 4-2-5 base scheme. The lowest-ranked non-kicker in the Hoosiers’ 2018 recruiting class, he led the team in tackles for loss three consecutive seasons and was one of the few bright spots on a bad Indiana defense in 2021 (led the team in tackles, tackles for loss, sacks, and forced fumbles as a senior). McFadden is a physical, tough-minded player with outstanding blitzing skills. However, he struggles to play ahead of blocks, and his lack of overall range limits his NFL upside. Overall, McFadden is well-strapped together and one of the better downhill linebackers in this draft class, but his athletic and coverage limitations take excitement away from his pro evaluation. His ability on special teams can help him lock down a backup job.

16. JEREMIAH GEMMEL | North Carolina 6006 | 226 lbs. | rSR. Newnan, Ga. (East Coweta) 11/5/1998 (age 23.48) #44

BACKGROUND: Jeremiah Gemmel (GIM-uhl), who is the middle child of three boys, was born and raised in Newnan, a southwestern suburb of Atlanta. He started playing football at age 7 and was coached by his grandfather throughout his childhood up until high school. Gemmel attended East Coweta High, where he was a four-year letterman, seeing varsity snaps as a freshman. He became a starting linebacker as a sophomore and led the team in tackles (95) as a junior to earn Honorable Mention All-State honors. Gemmel earned First Team All-State and All-County honors as a senior with 101 tackles, 13.0 tackles for loss, and 4.0 sacks, adding six blocked kicks on special teams and six touchdowns (four rushing, two receiving) on offense as a slotback.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Gemmel was the No. 56 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 82 recruit in the state of Georgia. Despite going overlooked by his home state Georgia Bulldogs, he compiled an impressive offer list that included Florida, Mississippi State, Nebraska, Ole Miss, Tennessee and others. Gemmel committed to North Carolina the summer prior to his senior season. His grandfather (Rick) was an All-Conference defensive back at Southern Miss in the early 1970s. Gemmel graduated with his degree (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but was unable to play due to his shoulder injury.

STRENGTHS: High-energy hunter with sideline-to-sideline range ... trusts his vision to string out plays and close the gap on the perimeter ... flows fast with the downhill burst to close ... smaller frame, but well-strapped together and flashes violence in his hands ... strong form tackler when he squares his target ... smooth change-of-direction skills to turn, run and hold up in man coverage ... plays football smart, and his eyes are well-schooled (UNC head coach Mack Brown: “He makes very few to no mental mistakes.”) ... two-time team captain and often directing traffic pre-snap ... despite missing part of the pre-draft process, he started every game the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Not undersized, but his height, build and length are only average by NFL standards ... too easily engulfed and washed in the run game ... mediocre play strength, and the battle is usually over once blockers latch on to him ... needs to do a better job seeing through blocks to elude climbing contact and stay in position to make plays ... miscalculates his timing in coverage, arriving too early or too late ... needs to better use his hands as a blitzer ... wasn’t a regular on special teams coverages ... missed most of his 2018 season because of a sports hernia (November 2018), which required surgery; missed most of the pre-draft process due to left shoulder surgery (January 2022).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at North Carolina, Gemmel was an inside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Jay Bateman’s 3-4 base scheme. He finished second on the team in tackles as a sophomore, junior and senior and was the heart of the defense (teammate Tomon Fox: “He is a natural leader, that is why we call him ‘The General’...”.) Whether in the box or playing as an overhang defender, Gemmel has excellent play recognition vs. the run to stay ahead of blocks and let loose. He gets himself in trouble when blockers establish leverage and needs to become more of a playmaker in coverage. Overall, Gemmel doesn’t have any elite qualities, but he is an instinctive, high-intangibles defender with the play range and toughness required for NFL work. He projects best as a weakside or nickel linebacker.

17. AARON HANSFORD | Texas A&M 6022 | 239 lbs. | rSR. Washington, D.C. (St. John’s) 2/23/1998 (age 24.18) #1

BACKGROUND: Aaron Hansford, who is one of three children, grew up in the Washington, D.C., area and played pee-wee football but focused on baseball and track (both his parents were track athletes) throughout his childhood. He participated in the USA Junior Olympics as a finalist in the 100 meters. Hansford attended St. John’s College High, where he picked up football again and developed into an impact player in all three phases. He was a standout linebacker and safety on defense and grew into the team’s leading receiver as a senior with 26 receptions for 397 yards and two touchdowns. He also finished second on the team in tackles as a senior and earned Under Armour All-American and All-Conference honors in 2015. Hansford lettered in track and set personal-bests in the 55-meters (6.44), 100-meters (11.23), 200-meters (23.15), 300-meters (37.14), and 400-meters (52.30).

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hansford was the No. 12 outside linebacker in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit from the Washington area (behind only his teammate Terrell Lewis). He attracted offers from several national powers like Georgia, Notre Dame and Ohio State. He formed a bond with Noel Mazzone at UCLA and seemed to be a Bruins lean until the staff was fired following the 2015 season. Mazzone joined Kevin Sumlin's staff at Texas A&M, and Hansford picked the Aggies on signing day. He was a wide receiver and tight end for his first three seasons in College Station before switching to linebacker prior to the 2019 season. Hansford decided to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility in the wake of the pandemic and return for his sixth season in 2021. His father (Adam) was a track All-American at the University of the District of Columbia and a member of the 4x100 meter relay team that advanced to the finals of the 1989 Division II National Championship finals. His mother (Maudeva) held the Louisiana high school state record in the 400 meters (54.11). Hansford graduated with his degree in communications (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with an offensive background ... transfers his weight smoothly to change directions and run ... scrapes well laterally to make plays inside and outside ... his range creates an illusion that there are multiple No. 1's out there ... not afraid to get physical when the occasion calls for it ... uses his arm length to make balanced wrap tackles in the hole ... flashes burst when allowed to blitz ... his cover awareness made a large jump in his final season ... has experience lining up weakside and in the middle ... led the team in tackles in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Average vision and feel as the play is unfolding ... his recognition skills need continued maturation ... occasionally late to reach his leverage and maintain outside contain ... inconsistent tackling skills and finishing strength in the open field ... doesn't create a ton of knockback to stun and separate from blockers ... has made key improvements in coverage but still needs better anticipation for developing passing lanes ... endured through two season-ending injuries: suffered a shoulder injury and redshirted in 2016; suffered a knee injury in 2018 that required surgery and created doubt about his football future ... will be a 24 years old when drafted.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Texas A&M, Hansford played weakside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Mike Elko's scheme. After three years as a wide receiver in College Station, he moved to linebacker in 2019, became a starter in 2020 when Anthony Hines opted out and led the Aggies in tackles as a super senior in 2021. Hansford has the athletic traits to drop and cover large areas of space due to his agile feet and smooth redirect skills. He is still working through the mental aspects of the position to stay ahead of the play, however his improvements as a blitzer and cover man are encouraging. Overall, Hansford needs to hone his play recognition and finishing skills, but he is a rangy run-and-hit athlete who showed steady development on defense. He projects as a backup outside linebacker with starting upside and the traits for special teams.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

18. BRANDON SMITH | Penn State

6034 | 250 lbs. | JR.

Louisa, Va. (Louisa County)

#12

BACKGROUND: Brandon Smith, who is the oldest of two boys, was born in Henrico, Va., and grew up in Louisa, a small town (population of 1,744) northwest of Richmond. He started playing football at age 6 and continued playing throughout middle school. Smith played wide receiver at Fork Union Military Academy as a freshman before transferring to Louisa County High, where he moved to linebacker as a sophomore, posting 75 tackles, 17.0 tackles for loss and 10.0 sacks in 2016. A two-time team captain, he led Louisa County to the Virginia Class 4A state championship game and finished his junior season with 165 tackles, 30.0 tackles for loss, 11.0 sacks, five forced fumbles, and six blocked kicks. As a senior, Smith received First Team All-USA and Class 4 Defensive Player of the Year honors and was named the 2018 Gatorade Player of the Year in the state of Virginia (joined Chris Long as the only central Virginia players to win the award). He finished his final season with 135 tackles, 15.0 tackles for loss, 6.0 sacks and nine forced fumbles. Smith also lettered in basketball as a sophomore and junior.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Smith was the No. 1 inside linebacker in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 18 recruit overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Virginia. He collected almost 30 scholarship offers with high-profile programs like Alabama, Georgia, Ohio State and USC traveling to Louisa to court him. After his junior season, Smith committed to Penn State and graduated early to enroll in January 2019. His father (Rico) played football at Fork Union Military Academy and attended Ferrum College. Smith elected to skip his senior season and the 2021 bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6035	244	34 1/8	10	82 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.08	6.94	19 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Supersized athlete with broad-shoulders and long arms ... explosive, rangy athlete ... runs really well and covers a lot of grass ... moves with the joint flexibility to dip/unwind from blocks ... still discovering how good of a pass rusher he can be ... uses his long strides laterally to gap-jump when scraping ... has the athleticism to comfortably float in coverage (would occasionally play over the slot when needed) ... transitions well in his zone drops to pedal and drive on throws ...

built with the size and length to work off climbing blockers when his timing is right ... flashes the power to stand up pulling blockers in the hole ... saw time on each special teams coverage unit (305 career snaps) ... durable and started 21 consecutive games before skipping the 2021 bowl game.

WEAKNESSES: Needs to see things quicker ... consistently out-leveraged in the run game ... poor fundamentals in his take-on and tackling ... his hands are late and unconvincing when attempting to disengage pullers or climbing blocks ... still figuring out when to attack blocks and when to try and avoid them ... bad habit of stopping his feet in the hole and waiting for contact instead of initiating it ... caught up in the trash when moving laterally ... flashes explosive pass rush potential, but his hands and moves aren't well-timed ... showed improvements in coverage, but too reactive and doesn't anticipate right now ... has the size and athleticism for man coverage, but not the feel or awareness.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Penn State, Smith lined up at outside linebacker (strongside and weakside) in former defensive coordinator Brent Pry's 4-3 base scheme. A former five-star recruit, he arrived as a raw player and showed steady improvement with each game, finishing the 2021 season second on the team in tackles. Smith is physically impressive with his size and explosive movements, but the mental side and details of the position are still a work in progress for him. He must learn better anticipation to stay ahead of plays and develop his handwork to leverage gaps, stack-and-shed blockers, and get home as a blitz. Overall, Smith is a long-framed, toolsy athlete with NFL starting potential, but the tape shows an uneven, unrefined player who must improve his processing and finishing skills before he earns a significant role at the next level. His best long-term position might be as an edge rusher.

GRADE: 5th-6th Round

19. D'MARCO JACKSON | Appalachian State 6006 | 233 lbs. | rSR. Spartanburg, S.C. (Broome) 7/20/1998 (age 23.77) #52

BACKGROUND: D'Marco Jackson, who is one of five children, grew up on his family's farm in Spartanburg. He enrolled at Gettys D. Broome High, where he saw varsity action as a freshman and was four-year letterman as a running back and linebacker/safety. As a sophomore, Jackson rushed for 792 yards and six touchdowns while adding 103 tackles and an interception on defense. He had his best offensive season as a junior with 1,134 rushing yards and eight touchdowns with 96 tackles, 3.0 sacks and an interception on defense to earn Broome MVP honors. As a senior, Jackson was named the area's Defensive Player of the Year and the Palmetto Back of the Year despite missing the second half of the 2016 season with a torn ACL. In six games as a senior, he averaged 155.8 rushing yards per game and 13.0 tackles per game. He also lettered in basketball and track, winning the state championship in the discus (156-01) as a junior.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Jackson was the No. 249 running back in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 61 recruit in the state of South Carolina. He received his first offer (Furman) as a sophomore and collected mostly FCS-level offers before Appalachian State entered the picture. Jackson verbally committed to Appalachian State (as a linebacker), and the school stuck with him after his season-ending ACL injury as a senior. His cousin (Maurice Morris) was a running back at Oregon and played 10 seasons in the NFL for the Seattle Seahawks and Detroit Lions. Jackson graduated with his undergraduate degree and is pursuing his master's degree in business administration. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Above-average straight-line speed and doesn't hold it back ... explosive spurts are littered all over his tape from his range to his tackling ... physical striker with quality run fits ... can navigate through the weeds and meet the ball carrier from various angles ... does a nice job jamming running backs in the screen game to throw off the rhythm of the play ... has the athleticism, ball skills and feel for spacing to make plays in zone coverage ... voted a senior captain and universally liked in the program (described as an "incredible leader" by defensive coordinator Dale Jones) ... was a regular on various special teams coverages ... outstanding production as a starter.

WEAKNESSES: Narrowly-built and can get hung up on fast-flowing blocks ... quick ball reaction but will play too fast at times, playing into the hands of the blocking scheme ... misdirection is his enemy ... more bark than bite when it comes to block deconstruction ... his overeager play style leads to missed tackles or undisciplined errors (two offsides and a roughing the passer penalty on the 2021 tapes studied) ... shifty runners will give him trouble on the edges ... his man coverage skills need development to match up vs. NFL skill talent ... didn't miss a game in college, but suffered a torn ACL as a senior in high school (September 2016).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Appalachian State, Jackson was the middle linebacker in defensive coordinator Dale Jones' 3-4 base scheme. He filled up the stat sheet as a starter as the only FBS player with at least 200 tackles and 25 tackles for loss over the last two seasons, taking home the Sun Belt Defensive Player of the Year Award in 2021. Jackson is quick to read run-pass and unleashes his explosive speed to pinch gaps or cover ground, making tackles all over the field. Although his instant reactor is a positive trait, he could use a more disciplined play style to deftly stay detached and create plays in space. Overall, Jackson is a mediocre take-on player and shows hints of tightness in his movements, but his downhill speed and alpha attitude are proven ingredients to be a core special teamer and backup in the NFL.

20. KYRON JOHNSON | Kansas 6003 | 231 lbs. | rSR. Arlington, Texas (Lamar) 7/24/1998 (age 23.76) #15

BACKGROUND: Kyron Johnson, who has a younger brother, grew up in Arlington and started running track at age 3 and later picked up football. He attended Lamar High, where he started out playing running back and safety as an underclassman. He transitioned to linebacker as a junior and started on varsity, posting 50 tackles, 6.0 tackles for loss and 2.0 sacks. As a senior, Johnson earned First Team All-District honors with a team-high 125 tackles and 11.0 sacks. He also lettered in track and set personal bests in the 100 meters (11.03), 200 meters (22.33) and long jump (19'9.5).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Johnson was the No. 95 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 197 recruit in the state of Texas. He received interest from Minnesota, Tulane and a few other schools, but Kansas offered him early, and Johnson committed prior to his senior season. Johnson decided to take advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID and returned to Lawrence for his fifth season in 2021. His younger brother (Kayron) ran track at NAIA Ottawa University (2018-21). Johnson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Exceptional speed with a track background ... his acceleration is instant and sustains in his pursuit ... cat-like quickness as a rusher to counter inside and avoid the reach of blockers ... explodes into blockers and uses forward lean to get them moving in reverse ... forceful tackler with a knack for jarring the ball free (eight career forced fumbles, including two strip sacks on the 2021 Texas tape) ... excellent short-area fluidity to spy the quarterback or drop and mirror underneath patterns ... revved-up motor in the run game and will make chase down tackles ... experienced on special teams coverages (604 career snaps in college) ... accustomed to aligning at different positions in the front-seven.

WEAKNESSES: Tweener skill set with positional fit questions ... looks more like a safety than front-seven defender ... average functional strength as an edge-setter and will struggle to disengage from NFL blocks once locked up ... plays in overdrive, opening back doors for ball carriers because of his wasted steps and lost leverage ... his instincts vs. the run tend to be inconsistent ... can be engulfed as a pass rusher ... was an upfield player on the 2021 tape, and you have to go back to his underclassman years to find coverage snaps ... inconsistent route anticipation and feel down the seam ... will be 24 years old before training camp.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Kansas, Johnson was a defensive end as a super senior in defensive coordinator Brian Borland's four-man front. Over his five seasons in Lawrence, he played a myriad of positions, including inside linebacker, outside linebacker, nickel linebacker, strongside rusher and hand-on-the-ground defensive end, leading the Jayhawks in tackles for loss, sacks and forced fumbles in 2021. Whether he's rushing the passer or playing in space, Johnson is explosive in his movements with a quick first step and the acceleration to close in a blink. Though he isn't shy playing physical, he doesn't have ideal size, length or power for steady trench work and can be inconsistent as an off-ball player. Overall, Johnson is undersized with concerns about his best position in the NFL, but you can't coach his high-level speed and competitive fire. His impact on special teams can keep him on an active roster while his coaches figure out his best defensive fit.

GRADE: 6th Round

21. BAYLON SPECTOR | Clemson 6011 | 233 lbs. | rSR. Calhoun, Ga. (Calhoun) 10/20/1998 (age 23.52) #10

BACKGROUND: William "Baylon" (BAY-lehn) Spector, who is the middle child of three (also has five step-siblings), grew up in the northwest corner of Georgia. He attended Calhoun High, where he was a four-year letterman and two-way player at quarterback, wide receiver and safety. As a sophomore, Spector helped lead Calhoun to a 15-0 record and the 2014 Class AAA state championship (threw the winning touchdown pass), finishing the 2014 season with 71 tackles and an interception. After posting 63 tackles as a junior, he led the team with 73 tackles as a senior, adding 788 passing yards, 483 rushing yards and 16 total touchdowns as part of a two-quarterback rotation. Spector earned First Team All-State honors in 2016 and led Calhoun to an 11-3 record and postseason appearance.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Spector was the No. 45 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 61 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received offers from Duke and Wake Forest, but he grew up attending Clemson games and committed to Dabo Swinney on the spot. Spector was the lowest-ranked recruit in the Tigers' 2017 recruiting class. His father (Robbie) was a wide receiver at Clemson (1988-90) and was an assistant coach at Calhoun High. Baylon's younger brother (Brannon) is a rising redshirt junior wide receiver at Clemson. His older sister (Blair) was a Clemson cheerleader and graduated in 2019. The three siblings were on the same field for the 2019 spring game. His cousin (Kris Durham) was a wide receiver at Georgia (2006-10) and was drafted fourth round (No. 107 overall) in the 2011 NFL Draft, playing five seasons in the NFL. Spector graduated with his degree in marketing (August 2020) and earned his master's degree in athletic leadership (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Athletic in space and looks comfortable in reverse to carry tight ends down the seam ... former safety and doesn't look uncomfortable away from the line of scrimmage ... dialed in with his play recognition ... does a nice job seeing through blocks and won't take himself out of plays ... has the lateral agility to work himself from gap to gap ... flashes a burst to close when he sees red ... stays on the balls of his feet and squares the ball carrier in the run game ... senior captain ... dependable playing temperament, and competes with intensity once he laces up his cleats ... had a 19-tackle performance vs. NC State as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average size and arm length, and likely near maxed out ... spends too much time attached to blocks ... can get pinballed between the tackles ... quick reaction skills but will attack too quickly and get out-leveraged ... doesn't strike with much thump ... lacks great finish in his upper body and will slide off his target ... missed one game as a senior because of knee inflammation (October 2021); missed the bowl game with a broken right hand (December 2021), which required surgery (played in the East-West Shrine Bowl with a large cast).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Clemson, Spector played weakside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Brent Venables' scheme. Spector was an afterthought as a safety in the Tigers' 2017 recruiting class before moving to linebacker and steadily working his way up the depth chart, averaging 6.8 tackles per game over the past two seasons. Spector is a balanced athlete who is comfortable in space and breaks down well on the move to square up ball carriers. Though tough and decisive, he needs to be more patient with his key-and-react and will struggle to consistently shed blocks near the line of scrimmage. Overall, Spector has some safety-linebacker tweener traits, which hurts his potential NFL ceiling, but he is instinctive and athletic, which can keep him earning an NFL paycheck as a backup and special teamer.

22. ZAKOBY MCCLAIN | Auburn 5113 | 228 lbs. | SR. Valdosta, Ga. (Valdosta) 3/7/2000 (age 22.14) #9

BACKGROUND: Zakoby (zak-COE-bee) McClain, who is one of four children, grew up in Valdosta in southern Georgia (just 20 miles from Florida-Georgia line) and started playing football at age 6. He also played baseball and basketball, but football was his top sport, and he flourished as a middle linebacker and fullback at J.L. Newbern Middle School. McClain enrolled at Valdosta High, where he was a three-year starting linebacker. His best season came as a junior when he helped lead Valdosta to a 14-2 season and the 2016 state championship (the school's first since 1998), finishing the season with 123 tackles and 20.0 tackles for loss. McClain received an invitation to the U.S. Army All-American Bowl.

A four-star recruit out of high school, McClain was the No. 13 linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 24 recruit in the state of Georgia. His recruitment took off during his junior season, compiling an offer list that included LSU, Oklahoma, Ole Miss and Oregon. Growing up 90 minutes from Tallahassee, McClain was a fan of Florida State, but the offer from Jimbo Fisher never arrived. After a visit to The Plains for the 2017 Iron Bowl, he committed to Auburn. McClain graduated with his degree in interdisciplinary studies (August 2021). He skipped Auburn's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Plays fast and physical, working off contact to find the ball carrier ... uses balance and angles to pinball his way through traffic and stay in position to make stops ... shows the backfield vision and lateral range to mirror at the line of scrimmage ... active hands/feet keep him free and tackle-ready ... enough straight-line speed to chase plays near the sideline ... can spot drop and handle coverage zones ... competes with the old-school mentality that coaches will embrace (former Auburn LB coach Travis Williams: "He'll fight a chainsaw.") ... extensive special teams résumé (480 snaps) ... combined for 209 tackles over the past two seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized and lacks ideal length or build by NFL standards ... it will be tougher for him to escape NFL blockers near the line of scrimmage ... will prematurely attack run lanes, leaving him late to retrace when he picks the wrong gap ... needs to cut down on the wasted motion mid-route by improving his pursuit angles ... improved footwork when breaking down should help the missed tackles ... needs to do a better job anticipating screen routes ... doesn't appear comfortable turning his back and covering down the seam.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Auburn, McClain played the weakside linebacker position in former defensive coordinator Derek Mason's hybrid front seven. He became a starter prior to the 2020 season and led the team in tackles as a junior and senior, averaging 9.1 tackles per game over the past two seasons. McClain moves with bounce in his feet to scrape laterally and hunt the football in the box. He finds ways to unwind from blocks but too often he overcommits himself working downhill and working off NFL blockers will be a new challenge for him. Overall, McClain's lack of size, discipline, and coverage range might be tough to overcome in the NFL, but he competes with the play speed and competitive grit that give him a fighting chance, especially on special teams.

23. JACK SANBORN | Wisconsin 6015 | 234 lbs. | SR. Deer Park, Ill. (Lake Zurich) 7/29/2000 (age 21.75) #57

BACKGROUND: Jack Sanborn, who is the middle child of three boys, grew up in the village of Lake Zurich, a northwest suburb of Chicago. He attended Lake Zurich High, where he was called up to varsity for the playoffs as a freshman. Sanborn became a starter as a sophomore and logged 88 tackles and 7.0 sacks, earning All-Conference honors. As a junior captain, he earned First Team All-State honors with 80 tackles and 3.0 sacks. Sanborn led Lake Zurich to a 13-1 record as a senior, with the team’s only loss coming in the 2017 Class 7A state championship game. He finished his final season with 120 tackles and 3.0 sacks to again earn First Team All-State honors. Sanborn finished his prep career with 296 tackles and 13.0 sacks and saw playing time at running back. He also lettered in basketball and track at Lake Zurich, posting personal bests in the shot put (42’0) and discus (78’11) as a senior.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Sanborn was the No. 17 inside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Illinois. He collected several Big Ten and MAC offers, committing to Wisconsin over Indiana, Iowa, Michigan State and Northwestern. His father (Paul), who passed away March 22, 2005 (when Jack was 4 years old), was an offensive lineman at Oregon (1980-82). His younger brother (Bryan) redshirted as a freshman linebacker in 2021. Sanborn accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Aggressive run filler and competes with an attacking mindset ... strikes low and hard as a tackler, creating immediate stopping power ... instinctive working between the tackles, using his hands to combat or slip blocks ... diagnoses play speed well and trusts his vision ... moves with functional quickness to work laterally or drop in zone coverage ... tracks the eyes of the quarterback to constrict passing lanes ... excellent timing as a blitz, and Wisconsin would line him up on the edge ... well-respected team captain, and NFL coaches will love his energetic motor ... was a regular on punt coverage ... durable and started all 34 games the past three seasons, twice leading the team in tackles.

WEAKNESSES: Barrel-chested body type with lean lower body and shorter arms ... average athletically, and will lose run fits at times because of wasted steps ... not a rangy player, and his speed is pedestrian ... will arrive too hot and create bad angles for himself (had multiple missed tackles on 2021 Michigan and Notre Dame tapes) ... needs to load more ammo into his hands to be more efficient disengaging blocks ... can be late to read the mesh at times ... lacks twitch in his change of direction with hints of stiffness that limit him in man coverage ... struggled to find the football in coverage on his senior tape (zero pass breakups).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Wisconsin, Sanborn was an inside linebacker in defensive coordinator Jim Leonhard’s 3-4 base scheme. He handled both middle and weakside responsibilities during his time in Madison and filled up the stat sheet the past three seasons, combining for 223 tackles and 29.0 tackles for loss. Sanborn is a physical run-filler and effective blitz with the downhill instincts and square pads to make plays between the tackles. Though he sets the tempo with his contact-driven mentality, he needs to improve his stack-and-shed efficiency to stay on the field in the pros. Overall, Sanborn is a crafty downhill force player, but he lacks explosive range and might be relegated to early downs because of his average athleticism in coverage. He has the diagnose skills and competitive toughness to carve out a backup role in the NFL.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

24. DAMONE CLARK | LSU 6024 | 239 lbs. | SR. Baton Rouge, La. (Southern Lab) 6/28/2000 (age 21.83) #18

BACKGROUND: Damone Clark, who is one of three children, was born and raised in New Orleans before his family was displaced due to Hurricane Katrina when he was 5 years old. They moved to Baton Rouge where they again endured tragedy, losing most of their belongings in 2016 to the disastrous Baton Rouge floods. Clark started playing youth football (same team as Derrius Guice) when his family arrived in Baton Rouge. He attended Southern University Lab, where he was a three-year varsity starter for head coach Marcus Randall, the former LSU quarterback. As a sophomore and junior, Clark helped lead Southern Lab to back-to-back Division IV state championships, lining up at linebacker and safety on defense and wide receiver and tight end on offense. His senior year was filled with controversy after Randall was fired and the program received extensive penalties amid recruiting violations. Filling the shoes of departed Christopher Allen, who signed with Alabama, Clark was one of the team’s leaders in 2017 and finished with 81 tackles and 8.0 sacks. He also lettered in track and participated in the javelin (personal-best of 136’3) and 4x100 relay.

A four-star linebacker recruit out of high school, Clark was the No. 20 inside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 13 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He received more than a dozen prominent offers from programs like Florida, Michigan and Stanford, but he committed to nearby LSU days after Ed Orgeron extended the offer. Texas made a strong late push, but Clark signed with the Tigers. His daughter (Dakota) was born in January 2020, a week after LSU won the national championship. Clark graduated with his degree in sports administration (December 2021). He skipped the team’s 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (no workout – neck)

STRENGTHS: Quick to trigger and go ... excellent lateral range and sideline speed to shut down outside run lanes ... chases with a rocket ship attached to his back ... has an NFL frame with long arms ... flashes violence in his hands to jolt and disengage when he times his strike ... strong wrap tackler, and ball carriers rarely escape his clutches ... stays on top of screens, and his open-field tackling has improved ... always has the dirtiest jersey on the defense ... awarded the No. 18 LSU jersey the past two seasons for his leadership (NFL scout: “The LSU staff says he’s the most driven guy on the roster. Lived in the facility.”) ... started as a sheep and grew into a lion when it comes to confidence (mentored by close friend and former teammate Devin White) ... led the team in tackles in back-to-back seasons and his 11.3 tackles per game in 2021 ranked No. 2 in the FBS.

WEAKNESSES: Stays locked on the football, but late to locate/react to blockers due to his narrow vision ... can be sucked up at the line of scrimmage and loses sight lines ... his take-on skills run hot/cold ... throws a half-hearted shoulder instead of using his hands to engage climbing blocks ... races downhill to make stops, but needs to throttle his speed and find his balance to make on-the-move tackles ... late to decipher passing concepts, allowing backs to leak into space or tight ends to cross his face ... only one season as a full-time starter (more defensive snaps in 2021 than the previous three seasons combined) ... underwent spinal fusion surgery (March 2022) after an MRI at the Combine revealed a herniated disc.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at LSU, Clark lined up at middle linebacker in defensive coordinator Daronte Jones’ 4-3 base scheme. After serving as a backup as a freshman (behind White) and sophomore (behind Patrick Queen), he struggled as a junior in Bo Pelini’s defense and lost his starting job but looked like a new player as a senior, leading the SEC in tackles. Clark, who was awarded the No. 18 LSU jersey for his personal and football character, is quick to key-and-diagnose and plays with above average chase speed and finishing skills as a tackler. He flashes the ability to stack-and-shed blockers, but he isn’t an explosive take-on player and needs to better navigate road blocks. Overall, Clark is a good-sized athlete and consistently stays ahead of schedule due to his play speed and ball-hunting skills, but he needs to expand his tunnel vision vs. the run and pass to be a complete NFL player. A projected day two draft pick based on talent, he is expected to miss his rookie season in the NFL due to recent spinal surgery, which will be an anchor on his draft projection.

25. NEPHI SEWELL | Utah 5114 | 226 lbs. | rSR. St. George, Utah (Desert Hills) 12/19/1998 (age 23.36) #1

BACKGROUND: Nephi (KNEE-fy) Sewell (soo-ul), who is one of five children, was born in American Samoa before moving with his family to the United States in 2012 when he was in the eighth grade. He attended Desert Hills High, where he was a four-year letterman as a running back and defensive back and helped lead the team to a state title as a freshman. As a sophomore, he posted 48 tackles and five interceptions with eight touchdowns four different ways. In the 2015 season opener, Sewell suffered a broken neck that required next-day surgery and sidelined him for the remainder of his junior season. He returned as a senior in 2016 and helped lead Desert Hills to the 3AA state championship, earning state 3AA MVP honors. Sewell finished his final season with 114 carries for 1,262 yards and 14 touchdowns, adding 17 tackles, one forced fumble, and an interception returned for a touchdown.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Sewell was the No. 318 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 57 recruit in the state of Utah. He was undersized at 5-10 and 180 pounds, and his neck injury as a junior hurt his recruitment. Sewell received several FCS-level offers (Weber State, Southern Utah), but received only one FBS offer (Nevada). He became the first commitment to Jay Norvell at Nevada, joining his older brother. After starting for two seasons with the Wolfpack, Sewell looked to transfer closer to home. After initially committing to BYU, he flipped to Utah and joined the program for the 2019 season, becoming eligible in November. Sewell switched from safety to linebacker prior to the 2020 season. He grew up in a football family: his younger brother (Penei) played offensive tackle at Oregon and was the No. 7 pick to the Detroit Lions in the 2021 NFL Draft. His younger brother (Noah) is a rising junior linebacker at Oregon (and former five-star recruit). His older brother (Gabe Jr.) played linebacker at Nevada (2015-19). His uncle (Isaac Sopoaga) was a nose tackle at Hawaii and drafted in the fourth round of the 2004 NFL Draft (No. 104 overall) and played 11 seasons in the NFL. His uncle (Richard Brown) played 10 seasons in the NFL at linebacker. Sewell accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Short but not small, with a toned, filled-out frame ... quick to key vs. the run, and attacks his gap with a head of steam ... always under control downhill because of his balanced athleticism, allowing him sink and pounce as a tackler ... excellent run blitzer thanks to his timing and fast angles ... textbook tackler in open space, leading with his shoulder and bringing his feet ... instinctive in his zone drops with the ability to sort through route combinations and drive on throws (didn’t allow a touchdown in coverage in 2021) ... physical hands as a blitzer to jolt and create movement at contact ... impressive football bloodlines ... productive as a senior and tied Devin Lloyd with three double-digit tackle performances in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average arm length will be a non-starter for several teams ... will stick to blocks unless he uses perfect timing and strike skills to mitigate his short arms ... functional play speed, but will struggle to make up a lost step ... inconsistent spacing in coverage, hurting his ability to challenge throws ... will face a learning curve in man coverage vs. NFL speed ... disappointing on-ball production in the passing game ... his medical report will be important: suffered a broken neck (damaged his C5 and C6 vertebrae) as a junior in high school and required immediate surgery to fuse the discs (August 2015); he spent six months in a neck brace and was unsure if he would be cleared to play football again.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Utah, Sewell played the “Rover” linebacker position in defensive coordinator Morgan Scalley’s scheme. After two seasons as a safety at Nevada, he transferred to the Utes and moved to linebacker in 2020, finishing second on the team in tackles as a junior and senior (behind Devin Lloyd). With his high football IQ and situational awareness, Sewell is quick to trigger downhill and leverage gaps, finishing at the ball carrier with his explosive tackling skills. However, he can get bounced or engulfed near the line of scrimmage, and his lack of inches shows in coverage. Overall, Sewell’s tweener traits and short arms will remove him from consideration for NFL teams with firm length thresholds, but his play anticipation, quickness and intangibles are NFL-quality and can earn him a role in subpackages.

26. DARIEN BUTLER | Arizona State 5101 | 221 lbs. | SR. Compton, Calif. (Narbonne) 3/1/2000 (age 22.16) #20

BACKGROUND: Darien Butler grew up in the Los Angeles area and attended Narbonne High, where he was teammates and close friends with Jermar Jefferson (seventh-round running back in the 2021 NFL Draft out of Oregon State). A four-year varsity letterman, he helped Narbonne to a pair of Division 1A state championships as a sophomore in 2015 and then as a senior in 2017. Butler earned Defensive Player of the Year honors in his final season with 150 tackles, 33.0 tackles for loss, 5.0 sacks, six forced fumbles and one interception in 2017. Over his high school career, he combined for 321 tackles, 47.0 tackles for loss and eight forced fumbles.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Butler was the No. 88 outside linebacker in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 126 recruit in the state of California. Because of his lack of height, he went widely underrecruited and wasn't even the highest-ranked linebacker from his high school team (Raymond Scott was a four-star recruit and signed with USC). Butler had only a handful of mid-level offers (Hawaii, New Mexico, New Mexico State and San Jose State) until Arizona State entered the picture shortly before signing day. After the 2017 season, Antonio Pierce left his post as head of coach at Long Beach Poly High School to join the Arizona State coaching staff and pushed to offer Butler, whom Pierce knew well from facing Narbonne. Butler accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Broad shoulders and thick calves and quads ... plays with an instant reactor and enforcer mentality downhill (registered 18 tackles for loss or no gain in only 10 games in 2021) ... decisive and trusts his vision ... violent at the point-of-attack to attack and play off blockers, but also has the body control to avoid them ... force tackler with anger behind his pads ... showed much improved confidence with his drop range in coverage as a senior ... hits his landmarks and hunts passing lanes (tied for the team lead in interceptions as a senior) ... three-time team captain with a survivor mentality, and NFL scouts say he holds teammates accountable during practice ... started all four seasons and played on special teams coverages.

WEAKNESSES: Can be engulfed because of his lack of ideal height and arm length ... underwhelming space athlete who will struggle to break down in the open-field vs. NFL skill players ... labors some in his transitions because of tightness in his hips and lower body ... attacks first movement, leaving him out of position on play fakes ... known as a physical run defender, but the missed tackles were out of control on several of his 2021 tapes (USC, Washington) ... average recovery skills and don't often see him close the gap chasing ... durability isn't a major concern, but he did miss several games as a senior with concussion symptoms (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Arizona State, Butler played weakside linebacker in former defensive coordinator Antonio Pierce's scheme. Despite only one Power 5 offer out of high school, he immediately earned a starting job for the Sun Devils and posted steady production as a three-time team captain (first true sophomore to be named a captain in school history). With a permanent chip on his shoulder, Butler competes with the diagnose skills and determination that leads him to the football. He likes to thump downhill, but his sawed off, undersized frame will make it tougher for him to fend off blockers and make plays in coverage at the next level. Overall, Butler is quick to process and react to what he sees, but his level of athleticism might not be enough to overcome his shortcomings vs. NFL competition. He is a potential reserve with the makeup for special teams.

27. JEREMIAH MOON | Florida 6046 | 249 lbs. | rSR. Hoover, Ala. (Hoover) 8/18/1998 (age 23.69) #7

BACKGROUND: Jeremiah Moon, who wore leg braces as a toddler because he was born bowlegged, grew up in central Alabama and overcame his medical obstacles to play t-ball, pee-wee football and several other youth sports. He was a three-year letterman at Hoover High and quickly established himself as one of the top high school talents in the state at linebacker. As a senior, Moon led Hoover to a 10-3 record and finished with 80 tackles, 13.0 tackles for loss, 3.0 sacks and one interception to earn Class 7A First Team All-State honors in 2015.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Moon was the No. 20 outside linebacker in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of Alabama. He started to receive recruiting attention from SEC teams after his freshman year and was long considered an Auburn lean. However, Moon committed to Florida (partly because of his relationship with former defensive coordinator Geoff Collins) over Minnesota, Mississippi State and South Carolina on signing day. Partly because of his 2020 injury, he took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility and returned for his sixth season in Gainesville in 2021. Moon graduated with his degree in telecommunications (December 2020). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall, rangy athlete with outstanding length ... long strider who can close the gap chasing when he has a traffic-free pursuit lane ... springy lateral movements to track and mirror the backfield action ... transitions his weight well to work around blocks and pounce as a tackler ... comes to balance on the move and widens on contact to secure tackles ... has the arm length to reach blockers before they can get their hands on him ... experienced as an edge rusher and standing up in an off-ball role ... his coaches has praised his willingness and readiness to be position flexible based on the defense's needs.

WEAKNESSES: Lean-limbed with thin features ... needs to continue developing his play strength ... inconsistent base power and balance when attempting to set a hard edge ... will go for a ride if he lets blockers reach his body in space ... his coverage instincts are undeveloped ... wasn't asked to consistently drop and read routes ... his pass rush lacks punctuality or creativity ... NFL scouts are worried he might not have a natural position in the NFL ... older prospect and will turn 24 years old prior to his NFL rookie season ... his injury history is extensive, including three season-ending injuries: hurt his thumb (September 2016) and required surgery; suffered a left foot injury (November 2019), which required surgery; suffered a stress fracture to his left foot (November 2020), which required surgery.

SUMMARY: An off-and-on starter, Moon was primarily the "Buck" pass rusher before transitioning to inside linebacker as a senior in former defensive coordinator Todd Grantham's scheme. He cross-trained at multiple positions in the front seven to give the defense flexibility, although he struggled to play a full season as he battled numerous injuries during his time in Gainesville. Moon is a long-framed athlete with the range and lower body burst that allows him to play fast and decisive. However, he is more of a front-seven athlete than true linebacker or edge rusher, lacking a defined path at the next level. Overall, Moon is a toolsy prospect with outstanding length and experience at multiple positions, but he doesn't have the instincts of a playmaker, and his injury history will scare off some teams. He has moldable talent to be a project for an NFL defensive line coach.

28. NATE LANDMAN | Colorado 6024 | 238 lbs. | rSR. Danville, Calif. (Monte Vista) 11/19/1998 (age 23.44) #53

BACKGROUND: Nathan "Nate" Landman, who is the youngest of four children, was born in Zimbabwe, where his father was a professional rugby player. At age 4, he moved with his family to the United States and started playing football at 7. Landman attended Monte Vista High in Danville, Calif., where he starred on both sides of the ball as a linebacker and wide receiver. After earning Honorable Mention All-Conference honors as a sophomore, he earned First Team All-Conference as a junior with 9.0 tackles for loss, 6.0 sacks, and four forced fumbles. Landman led Monte Vista to a 12-1 record as a senior, winning a conference title and the 2017 state championship (defeated Antioch, which was led by RB Najee Harris). He finished his senior season with 38 receptions for 577 yards and seven touchdowns, adding two touchdown passes and 32.0 tackles for loss to earn conference MVP honors. Landman also lettered in baseball and played rugby throughout high school.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Landman was the No. 42 outside linebacker in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 64 recruit in the state of California. He considered offers from Boise State, Oregon State, Pittsburgh, Washington State and others before committing to Colorado the summer prior to his senior year. His father (Shaun) played international rugby for the University of Cape Town and Zimbabwe (1993-98). Nate's older brother (Brendan) was a tight end at Monte Vista and was part of Arizona State's 2014 recruiting class. His older sister (Ocean Trail) was a swimmer at Oregon State (2009-13). After an injury, Landman decided to take advantage of the fifth year of eligibility created by the COVID pandemic. He graduated with his degree in business management and marketing (December 2021). Landman accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Plays with outstanding instincts and never doubts his reads ... nicknamed "The Hammer" within the program for his physical appetite downhill ... strong, reliable tackler in closed quarters or the open-field ... puts his hat into the gut of the ball carrier and explodes through his target (ranks No. 2 in school history with 285 solo tackles) ... quick with his hands to fight off blockers ... moves with the lateral range to make plays outside the numbers ... humble and low-key off the field, but passionate and competes with the heart of a warrior on the field (head coach Karl Dorrell: "You wish you had 120 Nate Landmans on your team with that mentality.") ... three-year team captain ... weight room monster with a team-best 355-pound power clean (10 pounds shy of the school record) ... led the team in tackles three times and finished his career No. 1 in third-down stops (53) and No. 5 in tackles (409) in Colorado history.

WEAKNESSES: Shorter arms ... average open-field athleticism with tight hips and lethargic redirection skills ... doesn't have the range to consistently make plays in coverage as a zone dropper ... can find passing lanes, but his ball skills are marginal ... will occasionally miss tackles when he prematurely leaves his feet ... needs to expand his rush moves to be a productive blitzing at the next level ... struggled to stay healthy the past two seasons: ruptured his right Achilles tendon (December 2020) and required surgery, forcing him to return to school for the 2021 season; missed the final five games of his senior season because of a shoulder injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Colorado, Landman played the middle linebacker position in defensive coordinator Chris Wilson's 4-3 base scheme. He leaves Boulder as one of the best defensive players in school history, averaging 10.9 tackles per game over the past four seasons and becoming just the sixth Colorado player to surpass 400 career tackles. With his rugby background and old-school mentality, Landman is a physical presence and instinctive hunter, and it is no coincidence that he is constantly around the football. Though he has the vision and feel to drop and track the eyes of the quarterback, he tends to lose route runners and doesn't have the recovery athleticism to quickly course-correct in coverage. Overall, Landman is coming off back-to-back season-ending injuries and is limited in coverage, but he is a rugged, fearless player with outstanding play recognition and tackling skills. He projects as an early-down NFL defender and a player who will be tough to cut.

SUMMARY: Jake Hummel was an all-state performer in football and track at Dowling Catholic and won three state championships in three years in varsity football. A three-star recruit, he signed with Iowa State and followed in the footsteps of his father (Perry), who was an All-American wrestler with the Cyclones (1979-82) and the runner-up national champion in 1980. Jake was a reserve (886 career special teams snaps) during his first three years and combined for 157 tackles as an All-Big 12 starter the past two seasons. Hummel floats well in space with terrific diagnose skills and a feel for angles to find the quickest route to the play. He battles his tail off at contact, but he can be overwhelmed by blockers and has room to tidy up his tackling. His active feet and alert eyes will lead him to the football in coverage. Overall, Hummel doesn't always play up to his testing numbers, but he processes well with NFL worthy athleticism and toughness to be a core special teamer.

SUMMARY: Jack Cochrane was a four-sport letterman at Mount Vernon High and finished his prep career with 3,615 total yards (2,505 rushing, 1,110 receiving) and 66 touchdowns (school's all-time leading scorer). He also posted 218 career tackles and seven interceptions on defense. He signed with South Dakota, where he was highly accomplished off the field (4.0 GPA student, three-time captain) and on the field (only FCS player with 100-plus tackles and four-plus interceptions in 2021). Cochrane is a smart, technically-sound player vs. the run and the pass (see 2021 Kansas tape). He does a nice job staying square and mirroring at the line, but his lack of length will make lateral scrapes tougher to execute in the NFL. He shows some hip tightness in space, which might restrict his coverage range in the NFL. Overall, Cochrane was a longshot to be drafted at this time last year, but his improvements and production on his senior tape have put him in the late round mix.

SUMMARY: Chance Campbell was an all-conference football and lacrosse player at Calver Hall in Baltimore. A three-star recruit, he stayed in his home state and signed with Maryland. He became a full-time starter as junior and averaged over 10 tackles per game to earn All-Big Ten honors. He graduated and entered the transfer portal, committing to Ole Miss. He arrived in Oxford in June and won the starting "Mike" linebacker job, finishing top-five in the SEC in total tackles in 2021. Campbell has a prototypical body type for the position except for his shorter arms, which leave him connected to blocks when he is sucked up in the run game. He trusts his vision and keeps his eyes on the prize, but he can be out-athleted in space, leading to missed tackles vs. the run and completions allowed in coverage. Overall, Campbell is an instinctive ball hunter who plays with pace and physicality, but that might not be enough to hide his deficiencies vs. NFL-level players.

SUMMARY: Devin Harper was born in Atlanta and attended Karns High in Knoxville, where he was a standout running back and linebacker. He rushed for 1,403 yards and posted 40 tackles as a senior to earn all-conference honors. A three-star athlete recruit, he signed with Oklahoma State, where he was primarily a subpackage defender his first five seasons. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility from the pandemic and excelled as a super senior, finishing second on the team in tackles. Harper is a rangy run defender and weakside blitzing with the quickness to squeeze gaps and the closing burst to chase down perimeter plays. His tackling technique and strike zone are inconsistent and need to mature for the pro game. His situational awareness and coverage anticipation also must improve for the NFL. Overall, Harper's coverage lapses on tape are bothersome, but he shows the downhill speed and demeanor to be a nickel defender and special teams standout.

SUMMARY: Jacob "Jake" Hansen was a three-sport athlete at East Lake High, posting 103 tackles as a senior. He was introduced to football by his father (Shad), who played linebacker at BYU (1989-92) and holds the Cougars' single-season tackle record (193). A three-star recruit, Hansen flipped from Iowa State to Illinois and had a productive career for the Illini, leading the team in tackles twice (his 12 forced fumbles are second in school history behind Simeon Rice's 13). However, his career also included three season-ending injuries, including a torn ACL to each knee. Hansen is quick to key and get a head start, and his quick recognition skills expand his range as a defender (averaged 7.9 tackles per game the last four years). He needs to be more fierce as a block-shedder, and his man-cover awareness is suspect. Overall, Hansen is a tone-setter with above average read-react and tackling skills, but he can be eaten up by blockers, and his injury history is an obvious concern.

SUMMARY: Isaiah Graham-Mobley was born in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and grew up in Philadelphia before attending Upper Merion High, where he was a three-sport star. He was a receiver and defensive back and was the team MVP with six interceptions. A three-star recruit, he stayed close to home and signed with Temple (his only FBS offer), where he wasn't a full-time starter and had season-ending injuries in 2019 and 2020. He transferred to Boston College for his final season, where he was the starting middle backer. Graham-Mobley has struggled to stay healthy (missed 14 games the past three seasons) and was an inconsistent performer, especially on his 2021 tape. When he diagnoses properly, he has above-average speed for the position to unlock, flow and beat blockers to the contact point. Overall, Graham-Mobley is a good-looking athlete with some untapped ability, but his inconsistent play recognition vs. both the run and the pass will stand out vs. NFL offenses.

SUMMARY: Diego Fagot (fuh-GO) was home-schooled by his mother (Annmarie) and played sports at Calvary Christian Academy. At linebacker, he earned All-State honors three times and was named the county's top athlete in both football and track as a senior (won back-to-back state titles in the shot put). A three-star recruit, he considered Pitt and UCF before connecting with Navy. He settled in as the middle linebacker and led the team in tackles each of the past three seasons. Fagot is a physical, downhill defender who triggers without wasting steps, hitting gaps with purpose and balance. He plays with relentless pursuit traits and the thumping skills to work off blocks and be a sound tackler. He can be outpaced to the outside and lacks the fluid twitch to be a reliable man-coverage player. Overall, Fagot doesn't have explosive traits or length to get scouts excited, but his instinctive field vision and reliable character will appeal to coaches as a potential early-down player.

SUMMARY: Ellis Brooks was a four-sport letterman at Benedictine College Prep. He played linebacker and running back and led the program to three consecutive state championship game appearances (won in 2014 and 2015, lost in 2016). A four-star recruit, he was a top-10 player in Virginia and committed to Penn State, his "dream school" after growing up idolizing Michael Robinson. He became a starter as a junior and had his best season as a senior, leading the team with 100 tackles. Brooks trusts his keys with excellent backfield radar to see through blocks and lay the wood as a striker. However, he can be driven off his spot by climbing blockers and appears tight when trying to quickly redirect or recover. His impatient feet will take him out of plays, both in coverage and vs. the run. Overall, Brooks is smart, competitive and he made a strong push to be drafted based on his 2021 tape, but his average size, speed and strength will be tough to overcome in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Joshua "Josh" Ross grew up north of Detroit and attended St. Mary's Prep in Orchard Lake. He led the program to three consecutive Division III state titles in his final three years, totaling 473 tackles over his prep career. A four-star recruit, he signed with Michigan and followed in the footsteps of his older brother (James), who was a Wolverines linebacker (2012-15). After his 2019 season was cut short and a 2020 COVID year, Ross had his best season in 2021, finishing sixth in the Big Ten with 106 tackles. A two-time team captain, the coaches rave about his leadership and competitive play style, using his smaller frame to give blockers the slip and stand up ball carriers in the hole. He struggles to sink-and-redirect in the open field, which leads to missed tackles and lapses in coverage. Overall, Ross has the initial quickness and play anticipation to stay ahead of blocks, but his coverage limitations and below-average size and length will be tough to overcome.

SUMMARY: James Skalski (SKAL-skee) started playing football at age 5, learning from his father (John), who played at Oklahoma and passed away in 2016. He started three years in football and soccer at Northgate High (Atlanta area), earning Region Defensive MVP as a senior with 170 tackles. A three-star recruit, he picked Clemson because of coach Brent Venables and became a three-year starter, two-time team captain and the "heart and soul" of the defense, according to head coach Dabo Swinney. Skalski, who set an FBS record with 69 games played, is intense in pursuit and was a standout on special teams during his career (22 career tackles). Although he tested well, his lack of twitch is noticeable in his change-of-direction movements, and he finds himself out of control as he attempts to unwind and finish. Overall, Skalski will be limited at the next level, but he is a physical take-on player with an excess of gritty intangibles that could be his ticket to sticking in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Khalan (KAY-lahn) Tolson was a running back and linebacker at Admiral Farragut Academy, a boarding school in St. Petersburg. He finished with 15.0 tackles for loss and 11.0 sacks in 2015. A three-star recruit, he spurned offers from Michigan, Mississippi State and others to sign with Illinois. He became a starter as a sophomore when Jake Hansen went down with an injury and started 14 games in his final two seasons, playing multiple linebacker spots. Tolson has impressive tackling skills with his ability to leverage gaps, collect his feet on the move and finish ball carriers to the ground with his strong hands. He has bunched muscles and lacks explosive direction change, hindering his ability to match up in space or coverage. He can be late to read run/pass and is caught guessing. Overall, Tolson is too easily controlled by blockers and doesn't play with burst, but he is an above-average tackler with straight-line speed, which might fit on special teams in the NFL.

1. AHMAD GARDNER | Cincinnati 6026 | 190 lbs. | JR. Detroit, Mich. (Martin Luther King) 8/31/2000 (age 21.66) #1

BACKGROUND: Ahmad "Sauce" Gardner, who is the youngest of three children, was born and raised in Detroit by his mother (Alisa). He started playing football at age 6 for the East Side Bengals (at running back) and quickly developed a love for the game. Gardner attended Martin Luther King Jr. Senior High in downtown Detroit and didn't see much varsity action as an undersized wide receiver (5-8, 140 pounds) as a freshman and sophomore. He moved up to varsity full time as a junior receiver but became a starting cornerback midseason after a teammate broke his jaw (October 2017). As a two-way player as a senior, Gardner led King to a 12-2 record and the 2018 Division 3 state championship at Ford Field (caught two touchdown passes in the title game). He earned First Team All-State honors as a senior cornerback. Gardner also lettered in track (sprints and relays) and set a personal best of 11.50 in the 100 meters.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Gardner was the No. 163 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 41 recruit in the state of Michigan. With minimal varsity tape at cornerback and his slender 160-pound frame, he wasn't highly recruited, even by in-state programs like Michigan and Michigan State. Gardner received his first offer from Toledo and finished with more than a dozen offers, including a few Power 5 programs such as Indiana, Iowa State and Kentucky. But he forged a connection with Cincinnati coaches Luke Fickell and Marcus Freeman and signed with the Bearcats. His older brother (Allante) was a wide receiver and running back at Division II Saginaw Valley State (2012-16) and Division III Lakeland (2017). Gardner elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6023	193	33 3/4	9 5/8	80	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no runs, jumps, shuttles, bench – choice)

STRENGTHS: Tall, stretched-out athlete ... light-footed pedal and turn and his hip flip is unforced ... long gait helps him stay in-phase and stay stride for stride with receivers ... accelerates in a blink to recover in coverage or drive underneath ... poised in press and extends his long arms into receivers ... above-average on-ball production (nine career interceptions with two pick-sixes) ... makes catch-point adjustments like a former wide receiver ... uses the sideline wisely to cut off routes ... competitive play personality shows in run support and against physical pass catchers ... exudes confidence and doesn't apologize for being flashy (celebrates his "Sauce" nickname, which was given to him at age 6 by his youth football coach) ... his coaches say he raises the temperature in the room with his exuberant personality but also holds teammates accountable ... missed only one game the last three seasons (37 games played) ... influenced offensive game plans as quarterbacks looked elsewhere (saw only 2.9 targets per game in 2021 and didn't give up a 20-plus yard reception).

WEAKNESSES: Sleek, lean-limbed body type and play strength is below average ... occasionally finds himself upright in his movements, leaving him late to react to shifty route runners ... has moments of panic downfield that lead to excessive contact when he doesn't trust his ball skills ... penalized nine times the last two seasons (seven pass-interference or defensive holding calls) ... can do a better job with his tackling foundation to be a more reliable finisher in the run game ... durability isn't a concern, but missed the 2020 bowl game with a back injury (December 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Cincinnati, Gardner was the boundary cornerback in defensive coordinator Mike Tressel's man-heavy scheme. Despite marginal experience as a full-time cornerback in high school, he put his name on the NFL radar as a freshman and earned All-America status each of his three college seasons, becoming the first non-specialist to earn Consensus All-America honors in school history. Gardner is a long-bodied, athletic cover man who does a great job staying on top of routes to force quarterbacks to look elsewhere (saw only 11.0 percent of the defensive targets in 2021). He shows better poise at the line of scrimmage than downfield, but he plays fearlessly and has the disruptive skills to make plays on the ball when challenged (zero touchdown passes allowed in 1,103 career coverage snaps in college). Overall, Gardner needs to continue developing his play strength, but he is a sticky bump-and-run corner with the athletic instincts to stay in phase and smother receivers. Cincinnati hasn't produced an NFL first-round pick since 1971, but that will soon change with Gardner.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 5 overall)

2. TRENT MCDUFFIE | Washington 5106 | 193 lbs. | JR. Westminster, Calif. (St. John Bosco) 9/13/2000 (age 21.63) #22

BACKGROUND: Trent McDuffie, who is the second-youngest of five children, was born and raised in Orange County, Calif. He started playing flag football at age 6 before starting tackle football the next year, playing mostly running back through Pop Warner and youth leagues. McDuffie started his prep career at Mater Dei High as a freshman before transferring to Servite High, a private Catholic school, for his sophomore and junior seasons. He moved to cornerback (a position he had never played before) in high school and registered 50 tackles, 12 passes defended, two interceptions and two forced fumbles as a junior, adding four touchdown catches as a receiver and running back and one punt return touchdown on special teams. McDuffie transferred to his third school in four years when he moved to St. John Bosco High, another private Catholic school, for his senior season. He led the program to a 13-1 record and 2018 conference title with their only loss coming to Mater Dei in the championship game. McDuffie earned Second Team All-State honors with 37 tackles and three interceptions as a senior. He also lettered in track, setting personal bests of 10.82 in the 100 meters and 23'8 in the long jump and competed in the 4x100 relay team at state in 2018.

A four-star recruit out of high school, he was the No. 12 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 19 recruit in the state of California. He received scholarships from most of the top programs around the country, including Alabama, LSU, Michigan, Notre Dame and Oregon. But McDuffie picked Washington over Stanford and USC because of the program's track record of producing defensive backs. He wears No. 22 because that was the jersey number of his older brother (Tyler), who died when Trent was in eighth grade. His mother (Michelle) was a sprinter at UC Irvine. McDuffie decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Above-average athleticism and anticipation ... explosive in his click and close because of his balanced pedal and footwork at the top of routes ... quick and patient with his transitions and doesn't panic, which allows him to stay attached to receivers ... covers with the confidence and mental process of an NFL veteran ... has a quick processor to handle double-play calls and make appropriate checks based on formation and situation ... fundamentally focused, and the Huskies scheme has him well-prepared for NFL life ... creates leverage in the run game with his pursuit angles and ability to shake blockers ... low, controlled tackler with plus competitive toughness ... energetic motor and makes tackles from the opposite side of where he started ... averaged 8.2 yards per punt return (9/74/0) ... highly coachable and mature with a process-oriented mindset.

WEAKNESSES: Doesn't have elite size or length and is near maxed out physically ... receivers can shield him from the catch point ... his lack of inches will show on comebacks or jump balls ... unimpressive ball production, including only two interceptions (none in 2021) ... gives up inside position too easily to route runners and needs to develop his jam technique (played a lot of press-bail) ... missed one game as a senior because of an injured left ankle (September 2021).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Washington, McDuffie was an outside cornerback in former head coach Jimmy Lake's defensive scheme. After earning a starting job as a true freshman, he quickly established himself as one of the top cover corners in the country, even though that wasn't reflected in the stat sheet because offenses would often throw away from him. McDuffie is fluid in both man and zone coverages and rarely appears stressed athletically because of his feel for timing and spacing. While he is a top athlete, his mental skills might be even more impressive with eyes that are dialed in and the processing to sort through everything and communicate like an extra coach on the field. Overall, McDuffie might not hit ideal size thresholds for some, but he is an easy sell in draft rooms because he has outstanding athleticism, intelligence and is well-schooled in various techniques. He has a high ceiling and a high floor and should start as an NFL rookie.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 12 overall)

3. DEREK STINGLEY JR. | LSU 6002 | 190 lbs. | JR. Baton Rouge, La. (Dunham) 6/20/2001 (age 20.86) #7

BACKGROUND: Derek Stingley Jr., who is one of four children, was born and raised in Baton Rouge and started doing cornerback drills with his father at age 3. He played flag football at 5 and youth football throughout middle school. At 13, Stingley enrolled at The Dunham School, a private school in Baton Rouge, and saw varsity action in eighth grade at wide receiver and cornerback (recorded two interceptions). As a junior, he gave up only one reception for 11 yards and finished with 64 tackles and 11 interceptions to earn Class 2A All-State honors. As a senior, Stingley didn't allow a reception and posted four interceptions (one returned for a touchdown), adding 24 receptions for 678 yards and 12 total touchdowns as a running back and wide receiver. He became the first player in school history to win Louisiana Mr. Football Award and was named a U.S. Army All-American and the 2018 Louisiana Gatorade Player of the Year. Stingley finished his prep career with 27 interceptions and zero touchdown catches while returning 14 punts for touchdowns on special teams. The Dunham School retired his No. 24 jersey. Stingley also lettered in track with personal bests of 10.89 in the 100 meters and 45'10 in the shot put.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Stingley was the No. 1 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit nationally (behind only Nolan Smith and Kayvon Thibodeaux). He received a scholarship offer from Les Miles when Stingley was only a freshman and he committed to the Tigers before his sophomore year. He decommitted and reopened his recruitment after LSU made a coaching change and strongly considered Florida and Texas. Before his senior year, Stingley committed to Ed Orgeron and LSU, graduating high school early and enrolling in January 2019. His father (Derek Sr.) was a defensive back at Purdue (1989), Kishwaukee Community College (1990) and Triton College (1991-92) before he was selected by the Philadelphia Phillies in the 26th round of the 1993 MLB Draft (No. 720 overall). Derek Sr. spent three years in the minor leagues before returning to football and spent the next 24 seasons in semi-pro and arena football leagues, 10 seasons as a player (1995-2004) and 14 seasons (2005-18) as a coach (currently an assistant coach at The Dunham School). His grandfather (Darryl) played wide receiver at Purdue and was a first-round pick (No. 19) in the 1973 NFL Draft by the New England Patriots. In August 1978, Darryl became a quadriplegic when he broke two vertebrae and damaged his spinal cord after a head-on collision with Raiders safety Jack Tatum in a preseason NFL game. Derek Stingley Jr. elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with length to jam or work off contact ... sticky coverage thanks to his silky hip-flip and route transitions ... balanced feet allow for sudden stops and quick response time ... showed better cover technique as a freshman than some players currently in the NFL ... recovery athleticism and redirect skills are outstanding ... has the long speed to close the gap after receivers gain a step ... clean footwork in his drive skills to arrive with the ball in front of him ... impressive ball instincts with the body control and focus to disrupt without going through receivers (four pass-interference penalties in 25 starts) ... patient in press and comfortable in different coverages (played for three defensive coordinators in his three collegiate seasons) ... has NFL bloodlines (grandfather) and grew up around professional football with his father spending 24 seasons in semi-pro and arena leagues ... was LSU's main punt returner in 2019 and 2020, averaging 11.3 yards per return (17/163/0) ... earned the No. 7 jersey as a junior, which is reserved for the LSU player who shows the best talent and leadership ... introverted by nature but has carried himself with a professional work ethic and attitude dating to high school ... had one of the best freshman seasons in SEC history and finished his career with 26 career passes defended in 25 starts.

WEAKNESSES: Better in man-coverage than zone ... more smooth than explosive in his sink and drive ... tends to lose his balance when attempting to ride route runners ... occasionally late turning his head to find the football ... questionable toughness vs. the run ... will slide off tackle attempts and needs to be a more forceful finisher ... can do a better job rerouting receivers from press-man ... fumbled twice as a punt returner ... durability will be questioned after missing time the last two seasons due to injuries, including the final two games as a sophomore with a leg injury (December 2020) and the final nine games as a junior after surgery (the first surgery of his life) to repair a torn Lisfranc ligament in his left foot (October 2021) ... scouts say he doesn't have an "alpha" personality.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at LSU, Stingley played both left and right cornerback for defensive coordinator Daronte Jones, his third coordinator in three seasons. Despite injuries hindering him during the last two seasons, he led the SEC in passes defended and interceptions in LSU's national championship 2019 season, earning Consensus All-America honors as the first true freshman to start on the Tigers' defense in 34 years. Stingley, who played primarily outside with some slot snaps worked in, is patient in press with the effortless hip fluidity to turn and run vertically or mirror underneath. Although NFL scouts have questioned his toughness in press coverage and as a tackler, he has outstanding on-ball production thanks to his timing and awareness in coverage (allowed only 41.1% completions during his three seasons at LSU). Overall, Stingley needs to stay on the field (missed more games the last two years than he played because of injuries), but he is a top-tier athlete with the man-coverage skills and ball instincts to stay attached on an island. He projects as a Pro Bowl-level NFL starter if he stays healthy.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 14 overall)

4. ANDREW BOOTH JR. | Clemson 6002 | 194 lbs. | JR. Dacula, Ga. (Archer) 9/28/2000 (age 21.58) #23

BACKGROUND: Andrew Booth Jr., who is the fourth of seven children and has a twin sister, grew up in Dacula (about 35 miles northeast of Atlanta). He started playing football at the youth level, initially at quarterback. At Archer High in Gwinnett County, Booth was undersized as a freshman before hitting a six-inch growth spurt and making varsity as a sophomore. A three-year starter at wide receiver and cornerback, he finished his prep career with 162 tackles, 44 passes defended, 13 interceptions and four forced fumbles, adding four receiving touchdowns, three punt return touchdowns and a blocked field goal. As a junior, Booth led Archer to a 12-1 record and 2017 regional title, earning All-State, All-Region and All-County honors. As a senior captain, he was named the top defensive back in the county and top specialist in the region, earning 2018 Under Armour All-America honors.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Booth was the No. 2 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class (behind only Derek Stingley) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Georgia. He considered high-profile programs like Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, LSU, Ohio State and others, but Booth felt “at home” when he visited Clemson, signing with the Tigers. His older sister (Andria) played college softball at Georgia Highlands and Gardner Webb (2018-19). Another older sister (Alia) played college softball at Gardner Webb (2017), Georgia Highlands (2018) and Georgia Southern (2019-21). He was born two minutes before his twin sister (Alicia). Booth elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	5117	196	31 1/8	9 1/8	78 1/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – strained quad)

STRENGTHS: Fluid athlete with quick feet, long gait and controlled hip movements ... shows a natural feel for pattern matching in press or off-man ... anticipates route breaks and combinations to stay in the wide receiver’s shadow ... quick to recover because of his body control and was penalized only once on defense the last three years (pass interference vs. Notre Dame in 2020) ... excellent tracking and disrupt skills when the ball is in the air ... has the length to take away passing lanes ... looks like a former wide receiver at the catch point, including multiple one-handed interceptions on his tape ... quick to read, drive and close to blow things up at the line of scrimmage ... calms his feet and keeps a wide base to make open-field tackles ... doesn’t allow receivers to push him around, quickly shedding blocks with his physical hands ... energetic, expressive personality on the field and off – wears his competitive emotions on his sleeve ... led the team in interceptions in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Will bite hard on pumps and route fakes, creating wasted steps and slowing his transitions ... will surrender throws in front of him and not as comfortable in zone ... needs to clean up his jam techniques and timing ... lined up predominantly outside and doesn’t have experience in the slot ... his overaggressive nature in the run game can backfire, leading to missed tackles ... ejected for throwing a punch against Louisville (October 2019) as a freshman (head coach Dabo Swinney made him ride the equipment bus back to campus instead of flying with the team) ... missed one game as a junior because of a hamstring injury (October 2021) and another because of a stinger (November 2021); required surgery after his freshman year to repair a tear in his patella tendon in his right knee (January 2020); also battled some knee tendinitis in high school; missed most of the pre-draft process because of a Grade 2 quad strain and double hernia surgery (April 2022).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Clemson, Booth was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Brent Venables’ man and zone schemes, including bail and side-saddle techniques. A former five-star recruit, he blossomed over the last three years for the Tigers and had a strong junior season, including impressive tapes against the two SEC teams on the 2021 schedule (Georgia and South Carolina). Booth stays in phase because of his lower-body quickness and hip-flip skills to mirror routes, staying coordinated in his transitions and in position to make plays on the ball. There is nothing finesse about his play style and he takes his contain responsibilities seriously in the run game, but his downhill aggressiveness makes his tackling an adventure. Overall, Booth’s tape has some volatility and he must mature his feel for spacing, but he has fluid athleticism, finds the football and disrupts the catch point, three important ingredients to playing the position at a high level. He has NFL starting traits (if he stays healthy) and projects best in a man-heavy scheme.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 26 overall)

5. KAIIR ELAM | Florida 6014 | 191 lbs. | JR. Riviera Beach, Fla. (Benjamin) 5/5/2001 (age 20.98) #5

BACKGROUND: Kaiir (Kai-ear) Elam (Ee-lam) grew up in Riviera Beach in southeast Florida (80 miles north of Miami). He grew up playing baseball, basketball, swimming, track and other sports, but his NFL father (Abe Elam) held him out of football until seventh grade. Elam enrolled at The Benjamin School, a private school in North Palm Beach known for academics, where he developed into a multi-sport star. After struggling in football as a freshman, he established himself as one of the top high school players in South Florida, playing on both sides of the ball as a receiver and cornerback. As a senior, Elam led Benjamin to a 9-2 record (lost to American Heritage in the playoffs) and he finished with 27 receptions for 544 yards and five touchdowns. On defense, opposing offenses stayed away from his side of the field, but he still earned Palm Beach 5A Defensive Player of the Year honors with 19 tackles and three interceptions. Elam finished his prep career with 1,650 offensive yards, nine interceptions and 21 total touchdowns (15 receiving, three kickoff return, one rushing, one interception return, one punt return). He also lettered in basketball (averaged 10.9 points per game as a junior) and track, setting persona bests of 10.83 in the 100 meters and 22.81 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Elam was the No. 6 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 48 overall) and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Florida. He received more than 40 scholarship offers from every corner of the country, including Clemson, LSU, Michigan, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Oregon and Stanford. With family ties to Florida, Elam ultimately signed with the Gators over Georgia and Miami (Fla.). His father (Abe) was an undrafted safety out of Kent State in 2005 but played eight seasons in the NFL (2005-12). His uncle (Matt) played safety at Florida and was a first-round pick (No. 32) in the 2013 NFL Draft by the Baltimore Ravens, playing four seasons in the NFL (2013-16). His younger half-sister (Abriya) set several track records at Cardinal Newman High and is currently a freshman sprinter on the Florida Atlantic track team. Elam elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Big athlete with an ideal build for the position ... smooth strider and controlled in his turn and run to carry speed vertically ... keeps his upper and lower bodies synchronized ... has the play strength to reroute receivers at the line of scrimmage ... above-average ball skills and aggressively plays through the hands of receivers ... much more comfortable when he keeps things in front of him as opposed to playing with his back to the ball ... eager run defender and flies downhill to make open-field stops on screens ... selected by the coaches to represent Florida at the SEC Leadership Council in 2021 (former head coach Dan Mullen: “He’s been a high-character, hard-working guy from the day he got here.”) ... grew up with an NFL player for a father and will be prepared for professional life.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks quick twitch in his transitions ... adequate speed to stay on top of routes but doesn’t always play as fast as he timed ... needs to be more controlled with his jam to connect and not surrender inside position ... doesn’t always trust play indicators and his processing must improve ... his catch-point timing must improve ... committed seven penalties in 10 games in 2021, including four defensive holding calls and two pass-interference penalties ... throws his shoulder around in the run game, but needs to be a better wrap-up tackler to consistently finish guys to the ground ... missed three games as a junior with a sprained right knee (September 2021) ... his interception numbers decreased each season.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Florida, Elam lined up at left cornerback in former defensive coordinator Todd Grantham’s zone and man scheme, occasionally seeing snaps inside against the slot. One of the highest-ranked recruits out of high school, he put his name on the NFL radar with an impressive freshman year, although he struggled to match that hype during his next two seasons in Gainesville. Elam checks boxes for size, strength, physicality and athleticism, mixing it up with receivers and crowding the catch point downfield. He will surrender spacing on stop and comeback routes, which can be masked by coaching and scheme, but slight stiffness in his mirror and transitions will always be there. Overall, Elam needs to tidy up his timing and processing issues, but he is a good-sized athlete with natural cover talent and NFL-ready intangibles. With his physicality for press-man, he compares favorably to Tampa Bay’s Carlton Davis when he was coming out of Auburn.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 45 overall)

6. KYLER GORDON | Washington 5114 | 194 lbs. | rJR. Mukilteo, Wash. (Archbishop Murphy) 12/17/1999 (age 22.36) #2

BACKGROUND: Kyler Gordon grew up in the Seattle area where his first loves were martial arts and dance, competing in national events throughout elementary school. At age 8, he was named “Mr. Spotlight” at a national dance competition and at 9, he joined the hip-hop dance team for the Seattle Storm (WNBA). Gordon also started playing football at age 9 and continued through middle school. He attended Archbishop Murphy High, a private Catholic school, where he was a do-everything athlete as a defensive back and wide receiver. After seeing varsity reps as a freshman, Gordon helped the team to 12 wins as a sophomore and earned First Team All-Conference honors with seven interceptions. As a junior, he led Archbishop Murphy to a 14-0 record and the 2016 2A state championship, earning First Team All-Area honors on offense (802 receiving yards) and defense (31 tackles, four interceptions). As a senior, Murphy earned All-State honors on both sides of the ball and finished the 2017 season with 841 receiving yards, 517 rushing yards and an 88-yard touchdown pass (Conference Offensive MVP), adding 44 tackles and five interceptions on defense. He also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 11.22 in the 100 meters and 6’0 in the high jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Gordon was the No. 19 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Washington. He received offers from Oregon, Stanford, USC and others before narrowing his decision to Notre Dame or Washington, signing with the Huskies. Gordon decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: High-level athletic traits with a prototypical build for the position ... accelerates to his top speed in a flash and bursts to close ... pliable movements to suddenly redirect his movements (childhood background in dancing and kung-fu) ... controlled footwork and body control to stick with any type of receiver ... wasn’t responsible for any penalties the last two seasons ... shows growing confidence and trust in his eyes, which allows him to play at full speed and find the quickest route from A to B ... fires downhill in run support and not shy playing physical ... very experienced on special teams coverage (434 snaps) and was named the Huskies’ “most outstanding special teams player” in 2019 and 2020 ... durable and didn’t miss a game to injury the last three seasons ... led team in passes defended and interceptions in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: His instincts are still being developed ... will overthink concepts and must improve his mental process ... prone to route fakes that can draw him out of phase ... can play a tad upright in reverse, hurting his sink-and-react skills ... needs to continue bolstering his fundamentals to limit separation out of breaks ... spotty jam technique ... needs to create more interception opportunities for himself (recorded an interception in only one of his 33 career games played) ... physical striker, but will launch his shoulder instead of consistently wrapping up ... only one season as a full-time starter.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Washington, Gordon was primarily an outside cornerback in former head coach Jimmy Lake's defensive scheme, also lining up inside against the slot. After losing his starting job to Trent McDuffie in 2019, he worked his way back up the depth chart and earned First Team All-Pac 12 honors in 2021, leading the team in passes defended and interceptions. Gordon has freakish athletic abilities with the impressive acceleration to plant and drive or close the gap after a lost step. Although he played more decisive with his read-react in 2021, he is still figuring out how to dissect his keys and how to prepare for different types of route runners. Overall, Gordon needs to continue maturing his technique and cover awareness, but his fluidity and toughness are ideal for the next level. As he continues to develop the mental side of the position, he has the skills to become a full-time NFL starter.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 51 overall)

7. ROGER MCCREARY | Auburn 5113 | 190 lbs. | SR. Mobile, Ala. (Williamson) 2/10/2000 (age 22.22) #23

BACKGROUND: Roger McCreary, who has a younger sister, was born and raised in Mobile and started playing sports (baseball, basketball, football, soccer) at age 4. He attended L.B. Williamson High (same as his mother, Felicia James) where he was a three-sport letterman. On the football field, McCreary was a quarterback, running back and wide receiver on offense, safety and cornerback on defense, and he also handled the punting duties. As a senior, he posted 62 catches for 702 yards and seven touchdowns, adding 802 rushing yards, 609 passing yards, eight rushing touchdowns and six passing touchdowns. On defense, McCreary finished with 104 tackles and eight interceptions to earn First Team Class 5A All-State honors. He also lettered in basketball and track.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McCreary was the No. 87 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 34 recruit in the state of Alabama. He originally committed to nearby South Alabama as a junior, but his play as a senior raised his profile. Former Auburn linebacker Antonio Coleman (undrafted in the 2010 NFL Draft before bouncing around the NFL for two seasons) was the defensive coordinator at Williamson and helped put McCreary on Auburn's radar. McCreary decommitted from South Alabama and signed with the Tigers, becoming the third-lowest ranked recruit in Auburn's class. His uncle Angelo James was a defensive back at Sacramento State and played the 1987 season with the Philadelphia Eagles. McCreary returned for his senior season to become the first in his family to graduate college. He graduated with his degree in interdisciplinary studies, focusing on business, sports coaching and psychology (August 2021). He elected to skip the team's 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Quick-twitch athlete to mirror receivers off the snap ... stays balanced in his change of direction ... patient in press and trusts his technique to carry receivers vertically ... not shy jamming and disrupting route cadence at the line ... stays in a ready position with the anticipation to bait/jump routes ... toggles his eyes between receiver and quarterback to arrive with the ball ... skillfully plays through the hands of receivers, turning receptions into late breakups ... solid ball skills and led Auburn in interceptions as a junior and senior (including one pick-six) ... stays busy in run support ... described as the "alpha" of the secondary by former defensive coordinator Derek Mason ... consistent on-ball production and finished sixth in the FBS with 16 passes defended as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Lean-bodied corner ... his sub-30-inch arms fall beneath the threshold for several NFL schemes ... quick to declare his hips and savvy receivers will take advantage ... only average recovery skills when caught out of phase ... can be overly physical downfield ... drew only two pass-interference penalties in 2021 after committing five in 2020, but still an area that needs to be cleaned up ... tardy drive skills in off-coverage and run support ... inconsistent angles and questionable play strength lead to missed tackles ... has some experience in the slot but was primarily an outside corner on his college tape.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Auburn, McCreary was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Derek Mason's man and zone scheme (played primarily press-man under Kevin Steele the year before). The third-lowest recruit in the Tigers' 2018 class, he accounted for 37 passes defended in 35 games the last three seasons, finishing No. 1 in the SEC with 16 passes defended in 2021. McCreary plays sticky in coverage because of his fluidity to shadow and awareness to recognize route concepts. He plays with a chip on his shoulder and looks to mix things up, but his physical nature will backfire in coverage and lead to wild habits as a run defender. Overall, McCreary lacks ideal length, but he is a quick-reaction athlete with the ball skills and competitive mentality to face off against NFL receivers. He offers inside/outside versatility and should compete for a starting role as an NFL rookie.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 55 overall)

8. CAM TAYLOR-BRITT | Nebraska 5105 | 196 lbs. | SR. Montgomery, Ala. (Park Crossing) 10/15/1999 (age 22.54) #5

BACKGROUND: Cameron "Cam" Taylor-Britt, who is the oldest of three children, grew up in Montgomery, where he played running back and defensive back in youth football. He attended Prattville High and saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman. Taylor-Britt played wide receiver and safety as a sophomore but missed most of the year with a knee injury. He transitioned to quarterback as a junior, but his 2016 season was cut short because of another knee injury. Taylor-Britt transferred to Park Crossing High during the second semester of his junior year to play his final season of high school football. Replacing Malik Cunningham (who signed with Louisville) at quarterback, Taylor-Britt led Park Crossing to a 10-2 record and the second round of the Class 6A playoffs. He earned 2017 First Team Class 6A All-State honors with 2,496 total yards (1,466 passing, 1,030 rushing) and 30 total touchdowns (16 passing, 14 rushing).

A three-star recruit out of high school, Taylor-Britt was the No. 60 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 25 recruit in the state of Alabama. His first offer was from Michigan followed by several other FBS programs, who were split on his best position between wide receiver and defensive back. Taylor-Britt originally committed to Missouri the summer before his senior year before decommitting three months later. He had a relationship with coach Scott Frost and became a part of his first recruiting class at Nebraska (as a defensive back). He legally added "Britt" to his last name in the summer of 2019 to reflect his stepfather (Darrell Britt) who was also his defensive backs coach in middle and high school. His younger brother (Jaden) is a defensive back at West Alabama. Taylor-Britt graduated with a degree in criminology and criminal justice (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Impressive size/speed/strength athlete ... keeps his feet underneath him to match different types of receivers from press or off-coverage ... tracks the ball well downfield to disrupt the catch point ... receiver background and averaged 25.5 yards per interception return with one pick-six (6/150/1) ... the word “physical” showed up more than any other word in my film study notes on him ... uses his length and aggressive mentality to challenge receivers and quickly disengage from blocks ... casts a wide net as a run defender ... energetic by nature and the coaches say the temperature of the room rises when he enters ... first-in, last-out type of guy and was voted a senior captain ... experienced at both cornerback and safety ... started 29 of Nebraska’s last 30 games.

WEAKNESSES: Upright pattern movements ... quick-twitch receivers will expose lagging redirect skills ... often turns his hips at the snap and finds his body positioned incorrectly downfield ... can be run off the top of routes and late to sink/react at the stem ... his route anticipation remains a work in progress ... grabby tendencies (eight total penalties the last two seasons) ... inexperienced jam technique in press ... guilty of biting on play-action and backfield fakes ... eager run defender, but he had multiple missed tackles on several tapes ... has some punt return experience but was a below-average decision-maker in this role ... avoided injury in college, but missed most of his sophomore and junior years in high school: he suffered a torn meniscus in his right knee (September 2015) as a sophomore and required surgery; he suffered a torn ACL, two meniscal tears and a fractured patella in his right knee (September 2016) and required surgery.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Nebraska, Taylor-Britt lined up at left cornerback in defensive coordinator Erik Chinander’s 4-2-5 base scheme. An All-State quarterback in high school, he transitioned to the secondary full-time in Lincoln and was productive on (24 passes defended and six interceptions during the last three seasons) and off (energetic and locker room leader) the field. Along with his plus size and length, Taylor-Britt has the springy athleticism and body control to disrupt passes and the toughness to be a force in run support, which will translate to cornerback or safety. He played a lot of bail and side-saddle technique in college and his patchy transition skills often left him out of position in coverage and contributed to missed tackles. Overall, Taylor-Britt must improve his route recognition at all levels, but his physical traits (size, length, athleticism), competitive nature, and ball skills give him NFL starting potential in press-man or zone-heavy schemes.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 57 overall)

9. MARCUS JONES | Houston 5080 | 174 lbs. | rSR. Enterprise, Ala. (Enterprise) 10/22/1998 (age 23.52) #8

BACKGROUND: Marcus Jones, who has one brother, was born in Baton Rouge and moved around throughout his childhood while his father (Marc) served in the Army. At age 4, he started playing football while living in Dayton, Ohio. His family moved to Enterprise when he was 14 and he was a three-sport letterman at Enterprise High. Jones was a three-way player in football, making an impact as a receiver, returner and cornerback. As a junior, he finished with 50 tackles, 11 passes defended, three interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) and a forced fumble. Jones earned First Team All-State honors as a senior and led Enterprise to an 11-2 record. He finished the 2016 season with 27 tackles and five interceptions on defense and a team-best 31 catches for 536 yards and 10 touchdowns on offense. Jones added three punt returns for touchdowns and one kickoff return for a touchdown. He was also an All-District basketball player before focusing solely on football after his junior season. In track, he set a school record of 22.35 in the 200-meters and personal bests of 11.01 in the 100 meters, 22’4.35 in the long jump and 144’11 in the javelin.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Jones was the No. 204 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 66 recruit in the state of Alabama. He originally committed to Purdue, his lone offer from a Power 5 program, but decommitted midway through his senior year. Because of proximity, Jones committed to Troy over Purdue and Tulane. After two seasons at Troy, he entered the transfer portal and transferred to Houston, sitting out the 2019 season. Jones is also an aspiring rapper/composer (goes by the name “Elliott J”) and released his first studio album “Complications” in September 2021. He hopes to continue his music career while in the NFL. Jones skipped Houston’s 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to play because of his shoulder injuries.

PRO DAY	5081	177	29	8 1/2	69 3/4	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – both shoulders)

STRENGTHS: Plays with play speed and muscle twitch ... seamlessly flips his hips to attach himself to receivers without sacrificing speed ... flashes a burst when undercutting routes ... has a wide receiver background with outstanding on-ball production, including 10 career interceptions ... always ball searching and skillfully plays through the hands of receivers ... leverages his side of the field as a run defender, not allowing runners to attack the perimeter ... physical play style and competes like a much bigger player ... ball carriers go backward when he strikes ... elite return skills with nine career special teams touchdowns (six kickoff returns, three punt returns), which is tied for the NCAA record ... averaged 28.8 yards per kickoff return (72/2,075/6) and 13.5 yards per punt return (65/875/3) during his career ... had a 100-yard kickoff return touchdown with 17 seconds left to give Houston a win against SMU (October 2021), which was just the second go-ahead return touchdown in the final 30 seconds of an FBS game in the last 15 years ... named the 2021 Paul Hornung Award winner as the most versatile player in college football.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized with below-average height, length and build ... his lack of size shows downfield vs. springy, tall receivers who make plays over him ... only average deep speed and can be outpaced vertically ... needs to improve his timing when getting his head turned to locate the ball ... will get grabby while trying to recover (called for three pass-interference penalties in 2021) ... has outstanding return experience but didn't play much on coverage teams ... might be restricted to slot duties in the NFL ... will turn 24 as an NFL rookie ... durability could be a factor because of his size ... played through labrum/shoulder injuries over the last three seasons and required surgery on his right shoulder (December 2021) and left shoulder (February 2022), which sidelined him for the NFL Draft process.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Houston, Jones was an inside and outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Doug Belk's man-zone scheme. After two seasons at Troy, he transferred to Houston where he was among the FBS leaders in interceptions, punt return touchdowns and kick return touchdowns in 2021, becoming the first consensus All-American in Houston history since Ed Oliver (2018) and second since Andre Ware (1989). One of the most versatile players in college football, Jones scored a touchdown four ways in college (reception, interception, kick return, punt return) and tied the NCAA record with nine career kickoff/punt return touchdowns. He has the lower-body twitch to mirror, match and make easy transitions in coverage, finishing with noticeable closing burst. Overall, Jones is small on paper but big on tape with sticky cover athleticism, physical compete skills, and excellent on-ball production. He is a tailor-made slot cornerback in the NFL with playmaking ability as a return man.

GRADE: 2nd-3rd Round (No. 70 overall)

10. TARIQ WOOLEN | UTSA 6041 | 205 lbs. | rSR. Fort Worth, Texas (Arlington Heights) 5/2/1999 (age 22.99) #3

BACKGROUND: Tariq Woolen, who is one of three children, grew up in Fort Worth and started playing football at the peeewee level, mostly at wide receiver. He attended Arlington Heights High, where he was a three-year letterman at wide receiver. As a junior, he helped the team to an 11-1 season with 11 catches for 201 yards and five touchdowns in 2015. As a senior, Woolen led the team in receiving with 31 catches for 536 yards (17.3 average) and 10 touchdowns, earning First Team All-District honors. He also lettered in basketball (Newcomer of the Year as a junior) and track (springs and relays), setting personal bests of 10.93 in the 100 meters and 21.46 in the 200.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Woolen was the No. 142 wide receiver in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 138 recruit in the state of Texas. His recruitment picked up after his junior season with initial offers from North Texas, Houston and UTSA. After his senior season, Woolen committed to UTSA, but a few days later, Matt Rhule and Baylor offered him his only Power 5 scholarship. Nonetheless, he stuck with his UTSA pledge and signed with the Roadrunners as a wide receiver. Toward the end of the 2019 season, Woolen reluctantly switched to cornerback at the request of the coaching staff. He graduated with his degree in multidisciplinary studies (May 2021). Woolen opted out of the UTSA bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6036	210	34	9	79 1/8	-	-	-	-	10'11"	4.30	7.10	12 (stood on Combine runs and vertical)

STRENGTHS: Elite combination of height, length and speed (ran 22.45 mph at Senior Bowl, fastest ever recorded at event) ... light-footed and accelerates to his top gear quickly ... not shy jamming in press, but also shows improved patience and control to mirror ... shows the hip fluidity to stay on the same plane vertically ... doesn't allow his long arms go to waste, restricting windows or raking at the catch point to erase catches ... former wide receiver appears comfortable when the ball is in the air ... only two pass-interference penalties in his two seasons since moving to cornerback ... has the toughness required for the defensive side of the ball ... the UTSA coaches say the "light came on" for Woolen as a junior as he became a better practice player and shed immature tendencies on and off the field.

WEAKNESSES: Undisciplined eyes when reading route keys ... his mental process is a work in progress ... questionable technique mid-transition, turning his hips too early or too late ... gives up too much underneath and must recalibrate his proximity awareness ... marginal play strength and will be late shedding wide receiver blocks ... currently untrustworthy in run support ... too many fly-by tackle attempts because of below-average technique and finishing skills ... only average ball production during his two collegiate seasons at cornerback ... suffered a hairline fracture in his right arm (September 2020) and played the rest of the season with a heavy cast ... missed four games as a senior due to an arm injury (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at UTSA, Woolen was an outside cornerback in co-defensive coordinator Jess Loepp's scheme, playing both man and zone. A wide receiver most of his life, he showed steady progress in his transition to defense the past two seasons and is still far from his ceiling at cornerback. Nicknamed "Riq the Freak," Woolen is still learning the details of the position, but he wows physically and athletically, and his receiver background works to his advantage. Although he is trending in the right direction, he currently has an undeveloped feel in coverage and his tackling is a liability. Overall, Woolen will require time to develop his technique and recognition both in coverage and run support, but he has a rare package of traits worth betting on with his height, length and speed. He is an appealing draft-and-develop prospect.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 81 overall)

11. COBY BRYANT | Cincinnati 6013 | 193 lbs. | rSR. Cleveland, Ohio (Glenville) 3/29/1999 (age 23.08) #7

BACKGROUND: Coby Bryant, who was named after legendary NBA star Kobe Bryant, was born and raised in the Cleveland area and grew up around the Glenville program watching Troy Smith, Ted Ginn Jr. and Donte Whitner. He started playing football at the peeewee level and later enrolled at Glenville High, where he played for Ted Ginn Sr. Bryant started on varsity as a junior, seeing action at cornerback and safety and finishing with 50 tackles, five pass breakups and one interception. As a senior, he earned All-League and Honorable Mention All-District honors as a cornerback while also seeing time on offense. Bryant also lettered in baseball.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Bryant was the No. 170 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 66 recruit in the state of Ohio. He appeared headed for the MAC with offers from Buffalo, Kent State and Western Michigan, but when Luke Fickell was hired at Cincinnati in December 2016, he reached out with an offer shortly before signing day. Fickell coached Bryant's older brother and several other former Glenville players at Ohio State, so that relationship led Bryant to commit to Cincinnati. His older brother (Christian) was a defensive back at Glenville and Ohio State and was chosen in the seventh round of the 2014 NFL Draft by the St. Louis Rams, playing four seasons in the NFL. Bryant took advantage of the NCAA's extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned for a fifth season in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl. Bryant was voted the top cornerback on the National team during the week of Senior Bowl practice.

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with controlled feet to redirect with route runners ... looks to disrupt route cadence and doesn't allow receivers to feel comfortable ... returns his eyes to the line of scrimmage to find the football ... plays with excellent reaction time and ball skills downfield ... responsible for 15 forced turnovers in his career (10 interceptions, five forced fumbles) ... penalized only once in 2021 (pass interference vs. South Florida) ... dependable run defender ... battles through injuries (fractured his hand early in the 2019 season and played the rest of the season with a cast) ... two-year team captain ... strives to compete with the "Mamba Mentality" like the legend he was named after (also honored Kobe Bryant by wearing the No. 8 jersey in the College Football Playoff semifinals vs. Alabama) ... has played a lot of football with 50 starts in the last four seasons ... excellent on-ball production with 45 passes defended in those 50 starts.

WEAKNESSES: Moves with average twitch and lacks the suddenness to easily recover ... has average drive explosion ... shows inconsistent tendencies, turning his hips too early or reacting before reading the route ... his aggressive nature will leave him out-leveraged at times, especially on double-moves ... his long speed will be an issue against the wheels of some NFL receivers ... leaves some production on the field against the pass and the run ... minimal experience in the slot or as a blitzer ... only two career special teams tackles, both in 2017.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Cincinnati, Bryant was the field cornerback in defensive coordinator Mike Tressel's man-heavy scheme. With offenses staying away from Ahmad Gardner in 2021, Bryant saw double the number of targets as his cornerback teammate and he responded in a big way, winning the Jim Thorpe Award (just the second player in school history to win a major national award). With his natural feel for mirroring routes, Bryant plays physical to pin or achieve body position and shows outstanding reaction time to make plays on the ball (finished No. 2 in school history with 45 passes defended). He doesn't have much experience working inside and might lack the twitch to match up against NFL slot receivers. Overall, Bryant doesn't have the length or suddenness that some teams prefer at the position, but he plays with quick feet and feisty hands to stay connected in man coverage and his ball production speaks for itself. He projects best in a man-to-man scheme where he has NFL starting potential.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 87 overall)

12. JOSHUA WILLIAMS | Fayetteville State 6027 | 195 lbs. | rSR. Fayetteville, N.C. (Jack Britt) 10/17/1999 (age 22.53) #2

BACKGROUND: Joshua Williams, who has a sister, was raised in basketball-crazed Fayetteville, N.C., but his focus growing up was football and track. His father (George) has a track background and coached him throughout his childhood. Williams attended Jack Britt High, where he played wide receiver the first three years of high school. Williams transitioned to cornerback as a senior (first time he played the position) and posted 31 tackles in 2016, adding a pair of touchdown catches on offense. He also lettered in track at Jack Britt and set the school record of 10.65 in the 100 meters. He also has impressive personal bests of 22.54 in the 200, 14.96 in the 110-meter hurdles, 45.04 in the 300-meter hurdles and 1:19.54 in the 400-meters. He was named the 2017 Conference Athlete of the Year as a senior.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Williams attended Palmetto Preparatory Academy in Columbia, S.C., for the 2017 season (played free safety) to improve his grades and recruiting profile. After one year at the prep level, he received near double-digit offers from Division II programs like Fayetteville State, Fort Valley State, Henderson State and Shorter University. He committed to his hometown Fayetteville State, which is also the alma mater of his mother (Angela), who died in 2000 when Joshua was 6 months old. Williams accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6025	193	33	10	78 1/4	4.51	2.67	1.57	37	10'3"	4.47	6.95	11

STRENGTHS: Tall, long athlete with the arm length to connect early in press ... stays patient in his stance with the agile footwork and burst to shadow different types of route runners ... fluid lower body makes for controlled transitions ... his long-striding acceleration helps him regain position in coverage ... squeezes and spies routes underneath ... high school wide receiver with focused tracking and judgment skills when the ball is in the air ... has a knack for outleaping wideouts and attacking at the highest point ... won't back down against the run and strikes through his target as a tackler ... rangy in run support and uses his length to work off blocks ... brings a coachable attitude with him to the NFL.

WEAKNESSES: Lanky and lacks ideal muscle ... tends to rely on athleticism over textbook technique ... had a few whiffs when jamming on tape ... needs to better use the sideline as his friend ... his route recognition steadily improved on tape, but he can become better-schooled with his eye discipline ... can be late finding the football after his back is turned to the quarterback ... inconsistent run defender because of his overpursuit and spotty open-field tackling ... faces a significant uptick in competition compared with the Division II talent he faced in college ... lack of ideal size leads to durability concerns.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Fayetteville State, Williams was an outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Dominic Anderson's scheme, playing both man and zone coverages. With only one season of cornerback experience in high school and two years starting at the Division II level, physical and savvy NFL receivers will be a substantial step up from what he has faced. Williams has the fluidity and length to be disruptive in press and downfield at the catch point. As a former wide receiver, he has ball skills and an instinctive feel for route development, but he is late to find the football once his back is turned and NFL play callers will feed his risk-taking appetite. Overall, Williams might require a redshirt year as he continues to hone his technique, but his size, sudden footwork and recovery speed are the foundation traits of a future NFL starter. He is an intriguing short-term project for an NFL staff.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 93 overall)

13. DAMARRI MATHIS | Pittsburgh 5110 | 196 lbs. | rSR. Lakeland, Fla. (Lakeland) 4/12/1999 (age 23.04) #21

BACKGROUND: Damarri Mathis, who has two brothers, grew up in central Florida and started playing football at the youth level where he was a standout on offense. He enrolled at Lakeland High and reluctantly moved to defensive back where he made the varsity team as a sophomore starting cornerback. As a junior, Mathis led the team with eight passes defended and one interception. He earned All-District and All-County honors as a senior and led Lakeland to an 8-3 record and spot in the Class 7A playoffs. Mathis finished his prep career with 73 tackles, 32 passes defended and five interceptions.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Mathis was the No. 64 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 88 recruit in the state of Florida. He started receiving scholarship offers after his junior season and originally committed to South Carolina. However, he decommitted from the Gamecocks after his senior season and flipped to Pittsburgh. Florida entered the picture shortly before signing day, but Mathis felt comfortable with his commitment and signed with the Panthers. He graduated with a degree in communications and is pursuing a second degree in administration of justice. Mathis hyperextended his knee and decided to skip the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Quick-footed athlete able to turn and run with receivers from press ... eagerly reroutes receivers at the line ... has the long speed to match deep routes and stay in phase ... deftly balances his eyes between the backfield and his cover responsibilities ... maintains a spatial relationship between combinations in zone ... highly aggressive demeanor at the catch point ... functional length to play through the hands of receivers (21 passes defended in 26 games the last two seasons) ... takes it personally when a pass is completed on his watch ... physical striker and receivers feel it when he connects ... widens his stance as a tackler to corral the ball carrier ... his teammates say he was a "key part" of Pitt's defensive backs room.

WEAKNESSES: Very average body type with tiny hands ... too easily manipulated by double-moves and multi-break patterns ... his cover awareness breaks down with his back to the ball ... needs to be more calculating with his risk-taking (more touchdowns allowed than interceptions in 2021) ... quick to crowd the catch point but often arrives too early ... was a flag magnet in college with nine penalties as a senior, including six pass-interference penalties ... perimeter corner with only 5 percent of his coverage snaps coming against the slot ... his durability needs to check out: missed the 2020 season with a non-football injury to his left shoulder (August 2020) that required surgery; sat out the 2021 bowl game after hyperextending his knee in the ACC championship game (December 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Pittsburgh, Mathis was an outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Randy Bates' balanced scheme. Although he fell off the radar for some after missing the 2020 season with an injury, he played with more confidence as a senior and steadily improved his standing throughout the 2021 season and draft process. Mathis has the athletic profile needed for the NFL and shows play recognition and reactive twitch, both mentally and athletically. While physicality is an endearing part of his game, he isn't shy going through receivers and must control his urgent play style. Overall, Mathis' aggressive demeanor can be a double-edged sword and work against him, but he is smart, speedy and competitive, which is an easy sell in draft meetings. He can play man or zone and will push for early NFL playing time if he develops better discipline in coverage.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 96 overall)

14. ZYON MCCOLLUM | Sam Houston State 6021 | 199 lbs. | rSR. Galveston, Texas (Ball) 5/3/1999 (age 22.99) #22

BACKGROUND: Zion McCollum, who has an identical twin (Tristin), was raised in Galveston and played numerous sports (baseball, basketball, tennis, track, swimming) before falling in love with football. He attended Ball High, where he was two-year varsity starter at cornerback, playing alongside his twin brother at safety. As a junior, McCollum posted 41 tackles, eight passes defended, three interceptions and two forced fumbles to earn Second Team All-District honors. A team captain as a senior, he was the team MVP and a unanimous All-County selection in 2016. McCollum played basketball as a freshman before giving up the sport. He lettered in track (jumps and relays) and set personal bests of 22'7 in the long jump and 43'1 in the triple jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McCollum was the No. 215 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 289 recruit in the state of Texas. The twins decided early on that they wanted to go through the recruiting process together and attend a school that wanted both of them. They committed to Utah the summer before their senior year but decommitted a few months later. FCS Sam Houston State was their first offer and where they felt most comfortable, committing to the Bearkats over Tulane and other FCS programs. Tristin was a four-year starting safety at Sam Houston State and is also part of the 2022 NFL Draft class. Their father (Cory Carr) was an All-America guard/forward at Texas Tech (1994-98) and was selected in the second round (No. 49) of the 1998 NBA Draft. He played one season (1999) with the Chicago Bulls before playing 18 seasons overseas and now coaches in Israel. McCollum took advantage of the extra year of eligibility due to the pandemic and returned for his fifth season in 2021. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6020	199	31	9 1/8	74	-	-	-	38 1/2	-	-	-	15 (stood on Combine runs, shuttles, broad)

STRENGTHS: Impressive size-speed athlete with “wow” testing numbers ... moves with the footwork and body twitch to pattern match refined route runners ... relies on a secondary burst to undercut routes or regain his phase ... shows little strain carrying vertical speed on go routes ... applies his coaching and reacts without hesitation because he trusts his reads and process ... owns a playmaking résumé with 54 passes defended and 13 interceptions (second most in school history) in his career ... physical downhill tackler and plays to his help, spilling runs back inside ... experienced on punt coverage and should be a ready-made NFL gunner ... two-time team captain, who is always smiling and very comfortable in his own skin ... logged snaps at corner (inside and outside) and safety (box and deep) in college.

WEAKNESSES: Too easy for him to lose his balance mid-pedal ... will need to tighten up his technique timing against NFL speed ... still learning how to fine-tune his keys from off-coverage ... aggressive tendencies in coverage, leaving him susceptible to pumps and route fakes ... not shy getting handsy downfield (had a pair of pass-interference penalties on 2021 tapes studied) ... lean lowers and can add more weight to his frame ... will leave his feet prematurely and shows reckless tendencies as a tackler ... didn't face top-tier talent in college with only one FBS opponent (New Mexico) on Sam Houston State's schedule the last five seasons ... missed time as a junior after suffering a TLC tear in his right wrist (October 2019).

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Sam Houston State, McCollum played primarily outside in defensive coordinator Clayton Carlin's man-heavy scheme, seeing snaps at cornerback and safety. He helped the Bearkats win the 2020 FCS national championship and will go down as one of the most prolific defenders in school history, finishing No. 9 all time in the FCS with 54 career passes defended. McCollum has a rare résumé with his testing athleticism and ball-hawking production (led the team in interceptions four of his five years in college), albeit at the FCS level. Although he will lose phase at times, he is a confident man-to-man corner with the recovery skills to get back into position and disrupt the catch point. Overall, McCollum faces a learning curve as he adapts his timing and technique to NFL speed, but his athletic traits and mental processing ability make him an attractive developmental prospect. He is an NFL-ready gunner with versatile starting upside on defense.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

15. JALYN ARMOUR-DAVIS | Alabama 6005 | 197 lbs. | rJR. Mobile, Ala. (St. Paul's) 9/3/1999 (age 22.65) #5

BACKGROUND: Jalyn (JAY-lin) Armour-Davis, who has two younger sisters, grew up in Mobile playing basketball and football. He attended St. Paul's Episcopal School where he expected to focus on basketball (his first love), but football quickly emerged as his best chance for a scholarship. Armour-Davis played on varsity as a freshman wide receiver before moving to defensive back midway through the following season, helping the team to a 16-0 record. As a junior cornerback, he earned First Team All-State honors with 31 tackles and three interceptions, adding four touchdowns on offense (three receiving, one rushing) and returning kicks on special teams. As a senior, Armour-Davis missed several games because of a knee injury but helped St. Paul's to a 14-1 record in 2017 and the program's third Class 5A state championship in his four years on varsity. He was named a U.S. Army All-American. Armour-Davis also lettered in track and placed first in the Class 5A championships in the 100 meters (10.87) and triple jump (44'5.5). He set personal bests of 10.72 in the 100 and 22.77 in the 200 while at St. Paul's.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Armour-Davis was the No. 13 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 2 recruit in the state of Alabama (behind WR Justyn Ross at No. 1). He considered offers from Auburn, Florida State, Georgia, USC and others before committing to Nick Saban and Alabama. Armour-Davis was expected to see the field as a true freshman but was forced to redshirt because of a knee injury that required surgery. He is married his wife (Ahlea) in March 2019, and their daughter was born a year later. Armour-Davis graduated with his bachelor's degree (December 2021). He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Checks the height, weight, speed boxes ... strong reactive athleticism to break with targets at the top of route and suffocate catch windows ... stays square and controlled in press-man to mirror different types of receivers ... uses his length well to knock the ball out on slants and quick hitters ... does a great job playing through the receiver's hands and raking the ball out ... tracks the deep ball well (allowed only one catch of 25-plus yards in 2021) ... flashes burst to close on crossers, making stops before the sticks ... sound high-to-low tackler and collects himself well to finish in the open field ... played on every special teams coverage in 2021 ... productive final season with three interceptions and zero touchdowns allowed.

WEAKNESSES: Caught on his heels in off-coverage ... plays with quickness but could use more twitch in his hips and lower body ... despite his timed 4.3 speed, he struggled to recover on tape after a misstep ... needs to be more detailed with his hands and jam technique ... there is room for him to tighten his angles and timing to avoid arriving early (two pass-interference penalties on the games studied) ... only one full season of regular work in college ... durability is a bright red flag: missed several weeks as a senior in high school because of a right knee scope (September 2017); was forced to redshirt in his first season because of knee surgery (September 2018); missed four games as a junior, including a hip injury (November 2021) that sidelined him for the Iron Bowl, SEC championship game, and national championship game.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Alabama, Armour-Davis was the right cornerback in head coach Nick Saban's scheme, playing both man and zone. After very little playing time his first three years on campus, he took over the starting job from Patrick Surtain II and earned All-SEC honors with a team-best three interceptions (zero touchdowns allowed), despite missing four games because of injury. Armour-Davis does a nice job staying in phase in man coverage because of his reactive athleticism and cover awareness, also showing the grit needed for run support. However, when talking about him to NFL teams, his medicals are the first thing they bring up, which is something that could affect his draft grade. Overall, Armour-Davis is still developing in areas and must prove he can stay on the field, but he has the speed, length and overall feel in coverage to play on an island in the NFL. He has the traits of an eventual NFL starter if injuries aren't a factor.

16. AKAYLEB EVANS | Missouri 6020 | 197 lbs. | rSR. McKinney, Texas (McKinney) 6/22/1999 (age 22.85) #26

BACKGROUND: Akayleb (a-KAY-leb) Evans, who is the youngest of three children, was born in Wyandanch, N.Y., and moved to McKinney (30 miles north of Dallas) in second grade. He embraced the football-crazed community in North Texas and started playing football at age 9, primarily as a running back. Evans attended McKinney High, where he played wide receiver as a freshman and sophomore. He moved to cornerback as a junior and became a starter on varsity, finishing the 2015 season with 80 tackles to earn Second Team All-District honors. As a senior, Evans recorded 48 tackles and five pass breakups in eight games. He also lettered in track at McKinney.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Evans was the No. 223 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 309 recruit in the state of Texas. His move to cornerback as a junior put his name on the recruiting radar and he initially committed to Kansas the summer before his senior year. However, Evans decommitted a few weeks later and flipped to Tulsa. After four years at Tulsa, he entered the transfer portal after the 2020 season and received dozens of scholarship offers from notable Power 5 programs. Evans narrowed his choice to Jackson State, Missouri, Notre Dame, Texas and Texas Tech, choosing the Tigers. He graduated from Tulsa with his degree in organizational studies (May 2021). Evans skipped the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6020	201	32	8 3/4	74 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.09	7.07	17 (stood on Combine runs, jumps)

STRENGTHS: Passes the eye test with his height and length ... has the blend of speed and footwork to square his shoulders, mirror in press and carry receivers vertically ... efficient pedal mechanics to transition or plant and drive ... plays to his size in man coverage, jamming and peppering wideouts ... able to pattern match from zone and sniff out routes ... has recovery skills at the catch point and looks to play through the ball ... not shy getting his hands dirty in run support and consistently gets his man on the ground ... community and civic service are important to him and he started the Akayleb Evans Foundation in 2017 to help the less fortunate ... played well after moving to the SEC in 2021 where he was coached by Steve Wilks, a former NFL head coach and now the secondary coach with the Carolina Panthers.

WEAKNESSES: Unimpressive ball production with only one career interception ... focuses his attention on his man and needs to do a better job balancing his eyes between the route and quarterback ... suspect hands and leaves interceptions on the field ... needs to keep his weight off his heels and play with better control at the top of routes ... highly penalized, drawing 10 flags over the last two seasons ... needs to be more calculating with his risk-taking ... sound tackler but can be late shedding receiver blocks ... missed a total of 13 games during the last four seasons because of minor injuries, including a soft-tissue injury as a senior (November 2021).

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Missouri, Evans was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Steve Wilks' man-zone scheme, seeing occasional snaps in the slot. After four years at Tulsa, he transferred to the Tigers for the 2021 season and showed zero decline in performance against SEC competition and his ball production only increased, including his first career interception. A physical, long-armed athlete, Evans has plus speed and transition movement skills to press or play from depth. His eye discipline needs to be better to help mask his lack of short-area twitch and control when attempting to constrict passing windows. Overall, Evans doesn't have the résumé or reaction quickness of a playmaking corner, but he has an enticing combination of size, length and speed to hold up in man or zone coverage. He projects as a rotational corner in the NFL with starting upside.

17. TARIQ CASTRO-FIELDS | Penn State 6005 | 197 lbs. | rSR. Upper Marlboro, Md. (Riverdale) 1/14/1999 (age 23.29) #5

BACKGROUND: Tariq (TUH-reek) Castro-Fields was born in Alexandria, Va., grew up in Upper Marlboro and started playing flag football at age 7. He attended Riverdale Baptist School (teammates with Philadelphia Eagles CB Zech McPhearson) and played on both sides of the ball, primarily as a wide receiver and free safety. Castro-Fields moved to cornerback as a senior and earned First Team All-Metro and USA Today All-State honors in 2016. He was a three-year letterman in track and posted the fastest 4x400 relay time (3:36.04) in the state of Maryland during the 2016 indoor season.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Castro-Fields was the No. 34 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of Maryland. He began to get noticed by Power 5 programs during his junior season, starting with Rutgers and eventually an offer from Alabama. Castro-Fields' final decision came down to Maryland and Penn State, committing to the Nittany Lions on signing day. He participated in Senior Day in 2020 and received an invitation to the 2021 Senior Bowl but took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season in 2021. Castro-Fields graduated with his degree in sociology. He opted out of the bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall corner with adequate arm length ... springy athlete with plus linear speed ... moves with the body control and foot quickness to pedal, collect and go ... shows the make-up speed to regain phase ... aggressive and instinctive in press-man to disrupt the timing of routes ... his recognition of play design improved each season ... aggressive when targeted and fights through contact to crowd the catch point ... plays through the wide receiver's hands ... willing and physical to drive downhill in run support ... gave up only three touchdown passes in coverage during his 52 games at Penn State.

WEAKNESSES: Peg limbs and needs to add more meat on his bones ... his hips are high and tight in his transitions ... struggles to keep his feet controlled vs. savvy route runners ... his off-balance movements in coverage lead to grabbing and excessive contact ... doesn't consistently trust his eyes or react on time ... streaky ball skills and struggles to find the football downfield ... only three interceptions in his career and none since 2019 ... flies around the field with violent intentions, but highly unreliable as an open-field tackler because of spotty breakdown and finish skills ... tends to hug high and go for a ride on tackle attempts ... hard to find blitzing reps on his film ... had minimal snaps in the slot in college ... battled through injuries and durability has been questioned by scouts.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Penn State, Castro-Fields played right cornerback in former defensive coordinator Brent Pry's zone-heavy scheme. He created buzz among NFL scouts after his breakout 2019 season, but his play appeared to plateau the last two seasons as he struggled to turn the flashes into consistency. Castro-Fields has an intriguing blend of size and speed, and his tape shows an aggressive player with the necessary toughness for the next level. However, he gives up separation because of his marginal feel in coverage and tight transitions and will attract flags with his unbalanced foundation. Overall, Castro-Fields is a competitive press corner with projectable speed and athleticism, but he struggles to play under control against the pass and the run. He projects as a toolsy backup with the volatile talent to push for a starting job or fall off the depth chart if his consistency doesn't improve.

18. JOSH JOBE | Alabama 5114 | 182 lbs. | SR. Miami, Fla. (Cheshire) 4/9/1998 (age 24.05) #28

BACKGROUND: Joshua "Josh" Jobe was born in Miami, Fla., and grew up in the Coconut Grove neighborhood with his father (Reggie Donaldson) and aunt. He attended Christopher Columbus High, a private all-boys Catholic school, on scholarship where he developed into a standout cornerback. After 22 tackles and two interceptions (both returned for touchdowns) as a sophomore, Jobe earned All-Area honors as a junior with 31 tackles on defense and 212 rushing yards and two rushing touchdowns. Because of his older age, he was ineligible to play his senior season in Florida and transferred to Cheshire Academy, a boarding school in central Connecticut. Jobe played primarily at safety as a senior and led Cheshire to an 8-1 record in 2017. He also lettered in track at Christopher Columbus and set personal bests of 10.90 in the 100 meters, 21.56 in the 200, 20'4.5 in the long jump and 43'4 in the triple jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Jobe was the No. 14 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Connecticut. A Miami native, he committed to the Hurricanes as a sophomore. But he visited Alabama during his senior year and flipped to the Crimson Tide. Three of the Tide's top six recruits in the 2018 class were cornerbacks: Patrick Surtain II, Jalyn Armour-Davis, and Jobe. He graduated with his degree (December 2021). Jobe battled a turf toe injury throughout the 2021 season and could have returned to Tuscaloosa for a fifth season, but he elected to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Long, physical and strong for the position ... plays with the attitude for rugged bump-and-run ... stays composed with his lower-body movements to react with routes or quickly recover ... decent play recognition to sense screens from press or off ... bodies up receivers to be competitive at the catch point and get his hands on the football ... aggressively plays through the hands and reach of the passing target (didn't allow a reception of 20-plus yards in 2020) ... always looking for work, and receivers know they're in for a battle ... drives downhill in the run game to work off blockers and lay licks ... above-average tackler for the position ... willing to tough out injuries ... was a regular on several special teams coverage teams (488 career snaps).

WEAKNESSES: Disappointing 2021 season ... gets wild with his jabs and punch from press ... his pedal lacks suddenness or tact ... his hip flip labors and delays his direction change ... inconsistent eye balance leads to timing issues, which is especially noticeable in zone ... not shy mugging receivers and will draw penalties because of early contact (18 total penalties during the last two seasons) ... needs to better find the ball once his back is turned ... aggressive against the run, although his field leverage needs to improve ... battled a turf toe injury throughout his senior season and ultimately required surgery on his right foot (December 2021), sidelining him for the two College Football Playoff games and most of the draft process.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Alabama, Jobe was the left cornerback in head coach Nick Saban's scheme, playing both man and zone. He played hurt throughout his senior season and struggled to live up to expectations on his 2021 tape, but he looked like a potential top-100 draft pick based on his 2020 film, creating question marks for his draft projection. Jobe is a strong, aggressive cover man who trusts his technique and stays balanced in his movements. His instincts are solid, but his eye discipline and timing must improve for him to cut down on penalties. Overall, Jobe is inconsistent in zone and lacks ideal suddenness, but he is at his best in man-to-man coverage because of his athletic, competitive play style to be disruptive up and down the field. He has starting potential as a cover-and-clobber NFL corner.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

19. JAYLEN WATSON | Washington State 6020 | 197 lbs. | rSR. Augusta, Ga. (Lucy C. Laney) 9/17/1998 (age 23.61) #0

BACKGROUND: Jaylen Watson grew up in Augusta, Ga., and started playing football at age 4. He originally attended Curtis Baptist School, a private Christian high school in Augusta. Watson lettered as a freshman and sophomore, splitting his time between quarterback, wide receiver and defensive back (four interceptions, four forced fumbles). He transferred to Lucy C. Laney High for his final two prep seasons and again played on both sides of the ball. As a senior, Watson earned 2016 All-Region 4AA Offensive Player of the Year as a wide receiver while also making plays at cornerback and on special teams. He also lettered in basketball and track.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Watson didn't receive much attention from college programs and received only NAIA offers. He had a connection at Ventura Community College (2,500 miles from Augusta) and joined the football team as a cornerback. With eight interceptions during his two years, Watson earned junior college All-America honors and his recruitment went crazy. A three-star recruit, he was the No. 13 JUCO cornerback in the 2019 class and received a few dozen scholarship offers. Watson signed with Southern California on signing day in 2019, but he fell behind with his academics at Ventura and didn't qualify to play football in 2019. He returned home to Augusta and worked with his mom at Wendy's while he improved his grades. Despite the academic hurdles, several programs stayed in touch with Watson, including Washington State. After receiving six A's and achieving his associate degree in the summer of 2020, he left his job at Wendy's and traveled the 2,700 miles to Pullman, joining the Cougars' football team. Watson opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding height and length with room to add more bulk ... solid play strength for the position ... uses his physicality and reach to smother in press, disrupting the timing of routes at their infancy ... has the long-striding speed to open, run and stay on top of vertical-based patterns ... when he finds the football, he looks like a wide receiver with his timing and high-pointing to attack ... aggressive mentality when the ball is in his zip code, but doesn't go through receivers (only one pass-interference penalty in 2021) ... willing in run support to slam himself into blocks or ball carriers ... described as a "big personality" and someone teammates gravitate toward, according to assistant head coach John Richardson.

WEAKNESSES: Tight through his hips ... tall center of gravity and lacks the lower-body agility to match the movements of crafty route runners ... finds himself trailing too often from press because of lagged footwork ... doesn't have the acceleration to make up lost steps ... his cover technique and play indicators are still in the development phase ... needs to do a better job seeing through receivers to the quarterback ... struggles to locate once he turns his back to the ball ... can be a liability as a tackler too often because of wild technique ... only 15 career games at the FBS level.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Washington State, Watson was the left cornerback in former defensive coordinator (and now head coach) Jake Dickert's scheme. His story is one of resiliency and perseverance to overcome obstacles and scratch and crawl to put himself on the NFL's doorstep. He is a good-sized athlete with the speed, strength and swagger that NFL teams covet at the position. However, he struggles to play with the sink or agility to attach himself to quick-footed route runners, leaving him playing catch up if he gets impatient or doesn't connect with his jam. Overall, Watson has only played 15 games at the FBS level and it shows at times with his missteps, but his raw traits and instincts are enticing starter traits. He will be appealing to NFL teams that value big press corners.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

20. KALON BARNES | Baylor 5114 | 183 lbs. | SR. Silsbee, Texas (Silsbee) 12/16/1998 (age 23.37) #12

BACKGROUND: Kalon Barnes grew up in Silsbee (100 miles east of Houston, near the Louisiana border) and started playing flag football at age 6. He played quarterback and running back before moving to wide receiver in middle school. Barnes enrolled at Silsbee High, where he was a three-sport star and played both ways at cornerback and wide receiver in football. As a sophomore, he posted 19 catches for 315 yards and five touchdowns. Barnes earned All-District honors as a junior with 34 catches for 583 yards and eight touchdowns in 2016. As a senior, he finished with 45 receptions for 805 yards and eight touchdowns, adding four interceptions on defense and four return touchdowns on special teams. Barnes lettered in basketball and was a power forward for a Silsbee program that won two Class 4A state championships. However, his best sport in high school was track as he set numerous school and state records. After winning state titles in the 100 and 200 meters as a junior, Barnes repeated as a senior, posting times of 10.04 in the 100 and 20.55 in the 200.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Barnes was the No. 66 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 56 recruit in the state of Texas. He received scholarship offers from several top programs, including Georgia, Texas and Texas A&M, but he was a Baylor fan growing up and committed to the Bears. Barnes signed as a wide receiver but moved to defense as a freshman. He was also a member of the Baylor track team, running a 10.29 100 meters at the 2019 Baylor Invitational. His father (Chris) also attended Silsbee High and won the state title in the 100 and 200 before playing football and track at Blinn College and East Texas State. Barnes accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Remarkable track speed that translates to the field ... can press and run with anyone down the field, including a secondary burst to quickly make up a lost step ... drives on throws with his lower-body explosion ... outstanding blitzing and drive speed ... range to play multiple coverages and techniques ... reroutes early and uses the sideline to his advantage ... has the feet and balance for abrupt stops mid-route ... high school receiver and quickly finds/tracks to snatch interceptions ... better arm length than expected for his frame ... his tackling went from abysmal to respectable between junior and senior seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Average height/frame, and receivers will make plays over him ... undeveloped route recognition ... too much of a believer in his speed and freelances with his steps and technique, allowing savvy route runners to attack his leverage ... gives up inside position too easily ... struggles to read with his back to the football ... panics downfield and had four coverage penalties in 10 games in 2021 (one pass interference and three holding calls) ... durability will be a concern because of his size and he missed seven games during the last two seasons because of several injuries, including a finger (September 2020), sporting a cast on his left hand ... wasn't used as a return man and doesn't have extensive experience on special teams coverage ... mostly outside cornerback in college and unproven as a slot corner.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Baylor, Barnes lined up at outside cornerback in head coach Dave Aranda's 3-3-5 base defense, playing both quarters and man coverages. He won back-to-back state titles in high school, including a wind-aided 10.04 100 meters, and that speed translates to the field. His quick-footed mirroring skills and the wheels to quickly accelerate to top speed make it tough for him to lose foot races on the outside. However, he tries to out-athlete receivers and his freelancing style won't cut it against NFL-level route runners who can exploit his missteps and attack his leverage. Overall, Barnes is speed-reliant and needs to improve his technique and feel down the field, but his special athletic traits give him a fighting chance at an NFL career, especially if he learns to play inside corner.

GRADE: 4th-5th Round

21. MARTIN EMERSON | Mississippi State 6015 | 201 lbs. | JR. Pensacola, Fla. (Pine Forest) 9/27/2000 (age 21.59) #1

BACKGROUND: Martin "MJ" Emerson Jr., who has an older brother, grew up in Pensacola and started playing football in first grade for the Brent Raiders. He attended Pine Forest High, where he saw immediate varsity action and was a four-year letterman. Midway through his sophomore season, Emerson switched to defensive back from his lifelong position of wide receiver. As a cornerback and safety, he led Pine Forest to back-to-back district titles in his final two seasons, including 58 tackles and five passes defended as a junior in 2017. As a senior, Emerson recorded 91 tackles, five passes defended, one interception and one forced fumble to earn All-Area honors for the second consecutive season.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Emerson was the No. 67 safety in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 112 recruit in the state of Florida. He received an offer from Mississippi State as a sophomore and later verbally committed to the Bulldogs despite a coaching change. He took late visits to Miami (Fla.) and Oregon late in the process but stuck to his original commitment and signed with Mississippi State. His older brother played defensive back at Pine Forest and NAIA Waldorf (2016). Emerson elected to skip his senior season and Mississippi State's bowl game to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Tall and long with a projectable frame ... uses his arm length to jam and reroute at the line ... accelerates smoothly in his turn and run ... operates well from zone, patiently keeping his vision through the receiver to the backfield ... has a quick trigger to anticipate quick throws and drive downhill ... when in position, his length comes in handy to disrupt the catch point ... not shy getting physical down the field to disrupt route cadence ... competes with the requisite mental and physical toughness and the self-control to deal with frustration ... was a regular on punt coverage during his career ... durable and played in 36 consecutive games until he opted out of the 2021 bowl game.

WEAKNESSES: Thin-muscled frame and lacks ideal bulk ... leggy athlete at the top of routes, allowing quick receivers to separate out of the break ... needs to focus more on his footwork to stay connected mid-route ... inconsistent feel for finding the football with his back turned ... defaults to grabbing when he finds himself off-balance (one defensive holding and six pass-interference penalties in his last two seasons) ... inconsistent results in run support and struggles to quickly shed blocks ... needs to clean up his tackling technique – will throw his body but is going to get himself hurt without better fundamentals and balance ... was an outside-only corner in college ... produced only one interception in 36 games.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Mississippi State, Emerson was the left cornerback in defensive coordinator Zach Arnett’s man-and-zone scheme. Despite a mediocre college résumé (never earned All-SEC honors and logged only one interception), he was consistently one of the top coverage players in the SEC during the last two seasons. Emerson is a good-sized athlete with the length, toughness and coverage awareness that will translate well to the next level. While he can jam and be disruptive from press, he lacks ideal pedal fluidity and change of direction in man coverage, struggling to make up the lost steps when overaggressive. Overall, Emerson lacks quick-twitch athleticism and functional play strength, but he shows a natural feel for spacing and disruption in zone coverage. He has NFL starting potential, ideally suited in a Cover-2 or Cover-3 scheme.

GRADE: 5th Round

22. COBIE DURANT | South Carolina State5095 | 180 lbs. | rSR.Lamar, S.C. (Lamar)2/9/1998 (age 24.22)#14

BACKGROUND: Decobie “Cobie” Durant grew up in the small town of Lamar, S.C., (an hour east of Columbia) and was a multi-sport athlete at Lamar High. A three-year varsity letterman, he played several positions, including quarterback, running back, wide receiver, safety and cornerback. As a senior, Durant led Lamar to an 11-3 record and the 2015 Class A Division II state championship. Playing primarily quarterback and safety, he finished his senior year with 621 passing yards, 603 rushing yards and 19 total touchdowns (12 rushing, seven passing), adding 50 tackles and four interceptions on defense to earn all-state and all-region honors. Durant also lettered in baseball, basketball and track.

A no-star athlete out of high school, Durant wasn’t ranked by recruiting services and didn’t have any offers (didn’t qualify academically). He signed with Palmetto Prep Academy for the 2016 season but didn’t stay long. After sitting out the 2017 season, Durant received a preferred walk-on spot at South Carolina State in 2018 and was put on scholarship in spring 2019. His three cousins, whom he considers brothers, all played college football: Michael Hamlin was a safety at Clemson and fifth-round pick in the 2009 NFL Draft by the Dallas Cowboys, playing three seasons in the NFL; Markee and Marquis Hamlin were defensive backs at South Carolina State. Durant graduated with his degree in physical activity management. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Above-average athlete with the footwork and fluidity to make sudden stops in man coverage ... can run with anyone downfield and his timed speed matches his field speed ... stays composed in his bump-and-run movements ... low pedal and hips to quickly plant and drive ... more times than not, his eyes are in the right place ... offensive background with outstanding ball skills to find the football ... corralled 12 career interceptions (two vs. Clemson in 2021) ... stings in run support and doesn’t back down as a tackler ... carries himself with the confidence to play on an island ... highly productive college résumé.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized with below-average height, build and length ... quick to react, but his route anticipation needs to improve ... NFL scouts are worried how he will match up vs. NFL size and strength at receiver ... will make early contact, especially when he loses body position downfield ... physical player, but it comes at a cost (had a pass-interference or defensive holding penalty on four of the 2021 tapes studied) ... needs to be more aggressive with his block shedding ... was primarily an outside corner on tape and doesn’t have ideal experience in the slot ... older prospect and recently turned 24 ... most of his experience is against FCS competition.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at South Carolina State, Durant was the boundary cornerback in defensive coordinator Jonathan Saxon’s scheme. A former walk-on, he followed in the footsteps of former Bulldogs such as Javon Hargrave and Darius Leonard and was named MEAC Defensive Player of the Year, finishing his career with 44 passes defended and 12 interceptions in 37 career games. Durant is a scrappy player with the springy athleticism and speed to pattern match in man or drive on throws in zone. He faces a steep learning curve vs. NFL talent and gave up a touchdown on the 2021 Clemson tape, but he also recorded four passes defended and two interceptions in that game. Overall, Durant needs to improve his anticipation and can be outmuscled by size at the catch point, but he has the mirroring athleticism and innate ball skills that are NFL-worthy. He creates flashbacks of Buster Skrine as a prospect and owns the talent to carve out a similar NFL career.

23. DAMARION WILLIAMS | Houston5102 | 182 lbs. | rSR.Miami, Fla. (Community Christian)7/15/1998 (age 23.79)#6

BACKGROUND: Damarion (Duh-marion) Williams grew up in Miami and had several stops in high school in Georgia. As a junior at Lovejoy High (20 miles south of Atlanta), he played wide receiver on offense and cornerback on defense. Williams transferred to Community Christian School in Stockbridge, Ga., for his senior year in 2016 and was responsible for 13 touchdowns, playing on both sides of the ball. He also lettered in track and basketball.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Williams wasn't ranked by online recruiting services and went the junior college route, enrolling at Highland Community College. After coming off the bench as a freshman, he led the country with 17 pass breakups and seven interceptions as a sophomore in 2018. A three-star juco recruit, Williams was the No. 13 cornerback recruit in the 2019 class. He received more than a dozen offers and initially committed to SMU before a late flip to Houston. Williams took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Houston for his fifth season of eligibility. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Versatile experience, and can play across the secondary ... patient, controlled feet to cleanly redirect his momentum in his transitions ... crowds routes without making excessive contact with receivers ... plays with a competitive makeup and makes sure he is part of the action ... uses a physical jam in press to disrupt the infancy of the route ... won't back down vs. size, but won't sacrifice his balance either ... takes quick angles to the catch point to poke the ball loose (at least seven passes defended each of his three years at Houston) ... above-average run defender thanks to his reactive athleticism and balance as an open-field tackler ... two-year team captain and an "absolute warrior," according to Houston head coach Dana Holgorsen.

WEAKNESSES: Below-average height and length with a lean-muscular build ... scrappy player, but his subpar play strength will be more evident vs. NFL talent ... adequate long speed and consistent depth will be important for him to stay on top of vertical patterns ... quarterbacks know his hunger to make plays leaves him susceptible to double moves and ball fakes ... must mature his eye balance between route and the ball without sacrificing phase (five touchdown catches allowed in 2021) ... doesn't have the makeup burst to easily recover a false step ... only three interceptions in 34 games at Houston.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Houston, Williams was used across the secondary in defensive coordinator Doug Belk's man-zone scheme. Though primarily an outside cornerback with the Cougars, he also saw significant snaps at inside corner, deep safety and in the box as a senior, finishing top five in the AAC in passes defended in 2021. According to his teammates and coaches, Williams is the most competitive player on the team, and the tape evidence backs that up, closing out early release separation and playing through the hands of receivers downfield. He needs to improve his eye discipline because it will be tougher to make up lost steps vs. NFL talent. Overall, Williams doesn't have high-level size or speed, but his feisty play personality, lower body twitch and nose for the ball are translatable traits. He projects best as a nickel cornerback in the NFL.

24. CORDALE FLOTT | LSU 6004 | 175 lbs. | JR. Saraland, Ala. (Saraland) 8/24/2001 (age 20.68) #25

BACKGROUND: CorDale Flott, who is one of three children, attended Saraland High where he was a three-year varsity starter as a two-way wide receiver and cornerback. His breakout season came as a junior in 2017 when he finished with 54 tackles, 22 passes defended and two interceptions. As a senior, Flott helped lead Saraland to a 13-2 record and a spot in the 2018 Class 6A state championship game. He finished his final prep season with 31 tackles, seven passes defended, three forced fumbles and one interception, adding 28 receptions for 502 yards and three total touchdowns on offense.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Flott was the No. 60 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 21 recruit in the state of Alabama. His recruitment took off after his junior season when Alabama offered him a scholarship. Flott initially committed to Auburn in April 2018 before flipping to LSU two months later. He took a late visit to Florida and also considered Ole Miss but ultimately decided to sign with LSU. His older brother (WyDale) was a cornerback at Southern Mississippi (2017-20). His cousin (Bobby) played cornerback at South Alabama (2016-18). His cousin (Velus Jones Jr.) played wide receiver at USC (2016-18) and Tennessee (19-21) and is also a prospect in the 2022 NFL Draft class. Flott elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft, opting out of LSU's 2021 bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Adequate height with room to add meat on his bones ... speedy pedal-and-match skills off the line ... takes accurate angles in coverage when he properly anticipates the route ... flashes a closing burst to surprise receivers when driving on throws in front of him ... makes fluid adjustments to answer different styles of route runners ... consistently plays through the hands of the receiver, all the way to the ground ... explosive plays allowed and coverage penalties were scarce on his tape ... one of the youngest players in the draft class ... versatile experience at outside corner, slot corner and safety.

WEAKNESSES: Rail thin with skinny wrists (6 3/4 inches) and no shoulders ... marginal twitch and gear down at the top of routes, allowing receivers to separate out of their breaks ... needs to rely on his route reads and fundamentals more consistently ... recovery speed wasn't a strength on tape ... below-average on-ball production ... tiny hands and registered only one career interception ... has a tough time turning his head to locate once his back is to the ball ... needs to better calm his feet when attacking downhill to break down in space ... plays physical, but his play strength must improve to be a more reliable tackler against NFL ball carriers ... will have a tough time punching himself off receiver blocks.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at LSU, Flott was the starting nickel cornerback in defensive coordinator Daronte Jones' 4-2-5 base scheme. He played across the secondary in college, including outside corner, in the box and as a split-safety, but he spent most of his time in the slot, where produced several quality tapes as a junior. Flott is a lean-framed corner with the foot speed, movement and mentality of a classic man-to-man corner. Despite limited busted coverage reps on film, he lacks ideal burst and acceleration out of his transitions and he would benefit from more plays on the football (never had more than four pass breakups in a season in college). Overall, Flott has slick hips to turn and run on command with inside-outside versatility, but he trusts his athleticism more than his technique with below-average size and questionable playmaking instincts.

25. CHASE LUCAS | Arizona State 5112 | 180 lbs. | rSR. Chandler, Ariz. (Chandler) 3/4/1997 (age 25.15) #24

BACKGROUND: Chase Lucas grew up in Chandler (25 miles southeast of Phoenix) where he was childhood friends with N'Keal Harry. He primarily running back at Chandler High (where he was teammates with Harry), while also seeing snaps at wide receiver and defensive back. He moved up to varsity as a sophomore, posting 883 rushing yards, 436 receiving yards and 11 touchdowns in 2013. As a junior, Lucas helped lead Chandler to the 2014 Division I state championship, finishing with 1,126 yards on 155 carries (7.3 average) and 13 touchdowns. Despite missing a chunk of his senior season with a Grade 2 sprained MCL (August 2016), he recorded 218 receiving yards, 210 rushing yards and a pair of touchdowns, earning U.S. Army All-America honors. Lucas also lettered in track and set personal bests of 22.78 in the 200 meters, 49.77 in the 400 and 20'8 in the long jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Lucas was the No. 12 athlete in the 2016 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Arizona (his close friends Harry and Byron Murphy were No. 1 and 2, respectively). Lucas considered offers from Arizona, Nebraska, Notre Dame, Oregon State and Washington but ultimately decided to join Harry and commit to Arizona State (Harry and Lucas were the top-two rated recruits in the Sun Devils' 2016 recruiting class). Despite little cornerback experience before college, he moved to defense after he enrolled at ASU. Lucas took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of COVID-19 and returned to Tempe for his sixth season in 2021. He graduated with his degree in communications (April 2021). Lucas opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Composed athlete with short-area burst out of his pedal ... stays under control and in phase to leverage the catch point ... reads his keys and collects himself quickly to plant, gather and go on plays in front of him ... has the veteran route awareness expected of a five-year starter in college ... has an offensive background and does receiver-like things when the ball is near him ... highly competitive in coverage and run support ... physical vs. the run and finds ways to get his man on the ground ... voted a senior captain and known as a vocal leader who keeps the defense accountable ... played both inside and outside on the 2021 tape ... his 49 career starts are second-most in school history.

WEAKNESSES: Narrowly built athlete with below-average play strength ... experienced quarterbacks will have no problem manipulating him with their eyes ... guilty of false steps because of his risk-taking ... defaults to grabbing after a misstep (six penalties in 10 games in 2021, including two pass-interference and two defensive holding penalties) ... cut down on the missed tackles as a super senior, but tackling is not a strength to his game with too many ankle-biting or fly-by attempts ... mediocre ball production for a player with 1,700 coverage snaps (his last interception came in October 2019) ... older prospect and will be 25 on draft weekend.

SUMMARY: A five-year starter at Arizona State, Lucas was an inside and outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Antonio Pierce's scheme. His career trajectory didn't go quite as planned after he was a Freshman All-American in 2017, but he was a solid starter for the Sun Devils and didn't allow a touchdown as a senior captain in 2021. Lucas stays square and balanced in his movements to seamlessly transition or drive with different types of route runners. However, he makes too many questionable decisions, biting on route fakes and taking himself out of position. Overall, Lucas has his share of discipline lapses on tape, but he is a twitchy athlete with the body control in coverage to leverage passing windows and make plays on the ball. His inside-outside versatility will help him make an NFL roster.

26. BRYCE WATTS | Massachusetts 5115 | 187 lbs. | rSR. Toms River, N.J. (North) 5/26/1998 (age 23.92) #2

BACKGROUND: Bryce Watts, who is one of six children, grew up near the Jersey shore and attended Toms River North High, where he was a three-year letterman. He played both ways as a running back, wide receiver and cornerback and helped the team to a state championship as a junior in 2015. As a senior, Watts led the program to the 2016 conference title and an 11-1 record with the only loss coming in the sectional finals. He earned Second Team All-State honors as a senior with 188 rushing yards (7.0 average), 765 receiving yards (25.5 average) and 10 total touchdowns, adding 43 tackles, 13 passes defended and a pair of interceptions. He also ran track with personal bests of 11.00 in the 100 meters, 21.52 in the 200 and 20'7.5 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Watts was the No. 96 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 22 recruit in the state of New Jersey. With family ties to Rutgers, he committed during his junior year, but he reopened his recruitment after his senior season and considered Pittsburgh, Syracuse and others before committing to Virginia Tech. After two seasons in Blacksburg, Watts transferred to North Carolina but did not suit up in a game because of transfer rules and the pandemic. He transferred to Massachusetts and enrolled in February 2021. His mother ran track at Rutgers. Watts accepted his invitation to the 2022 East West Shrine Bowl, but tweaked his back in the first practice.

STRENGTHS: Fluid athlete with sudden footwork ... quick to flip his hips and accelerate to top speed ... able to stay in phase down the sideline ... drives downhill to attack screens and quick throws before they can get going ... stays in position to recover and closes out break separation in a blink ... alert in coverage and shows minimal lag in his diagnose and response to routes ... looks comfortable crowding receivers to achieve body position and defend windows ... scrappy tackler and toughness won't be questioned ... NFL scouts call him "coachable" and a player who has yet to play his best football ... was a standout on punt coverage on the 2021 tape.

WEAKNESSES: Lacks ideal perimeter size with his slender build with thin hips ... only two career takeaways ... showed grabby tendencies on the 2021 Toledo tape ... doesn't play with a natural feel with his back to the football ... savvy receivers know he will jump at first movement ... inconsistent press technique and play strength ... leaves his feet prematurely as a tackler and will throw his body around instead of a controlled wrap up process ... doesn't lack for toughness but will take himself off track to avoid blocks ... suffered a fractured left arm (November 2018) and had plates and screws inserted, missing only one game ... spent time at three schools the last four seasons and missed two seasons of development in 2019 and 2020.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Massachusetts, Watts was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Tommy Restivo's scheme. After starting opposite Caleb Farley at Virginia Tech in 2018, he spent two seasons on the sideline at North Carolina before transferring to UMass in 2021, where he attracted attention from NFL scouts. Watts has outstanding play speed with the lower-body twitch and pattern-reading skills to play tight coverage or drive on plays at the line of scrimmage. However, he needs to play with more control in his transitions, which should lead to improved ball production. Overall, Watts needs to improve his coverage discipline and play strength for the next level, but he has the athletic traits and reaction skills to develop into reliable contributor in an NFL secondary. His testing numbers and experience on special teams will only help his chances.

27. MARIO GOODRICH | Clemson 6002 | 176 lbs. | SR. Kansas City, Mo. (Lee's Summit West) 1/12/2000 (age 22.29) #31

BACKGROUND: Mario Goodrich III grew up in the Kansas City area and started playing football at age 5. He attended Lee's Summit West High and planned to focus solely on basketball until the coaches talked him into coming out for the football team. Goodrich started three years on varsity and made an impact as a receiver, cornerback and return man. As a sophomore, he posted 45 tackles, eight passes defended and three interceptions (all three returned for touchdowns), adding 112 receiving yards and two touchdowns on offense and a kickoff return for a touchdown. As a junior, Goodrich recorded 46 tackles and seven interceptions (two returned for touchdowns) with 282 receiving yards and six receiving touchdowns. As a senior, he finished with 49 tackles and one interception as offenses stayed away from his side of the field. Goodrich finished his prep career with 11 interceptions and 22 total touchdowns (scored five ways: rushing, receiving, interception return, punt return, kickoff return). He also lettered four years in basketball.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Goodrich was the No. 4 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Missouri. He was productive enough in basketball to earn multiple scholarship offers from schools like Denver, DePaul, Miami (Ohio) and Tulsa. However, Goodrich was focused on football and was considered the top high school player in Kansas City. He originally committed to Nebraska as a junior before decommitting as a senior when there was a coaching change in Lincoln. He reopened his recruitment and narrowed the field to Clemson, Georgia and LSU, signing with Dabo Swinney and the Tigers. Goodrich was the first player from Missouri to sign with Clemson. He graduated with a degree in sports communication (December 2021). Goodrich accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Adequate height for the position with room on his frame to fill out ... controlled footwork for quick pedal and retreat ... plays chippy with accurate strike quickness to disrupt route timing ... his confidence and consistency improved leaps and bounds as a senior ... limited big plays on his 2021 tape (zero touchdowns and only two catches of 20-plus yards allowed) ... well-timed when he goes after the ball in the air ... stays balanced with his breakdown skills to be a dependable hit-and-drag tackler ... voted a senior captain and matured “a ton” during his college career, according to his coaches (NFL scout: “He didn’t take things seriously before this year, but the light bulb came on for him.”) ... led the team in passes defended as a senior ... has gunner experience on punt coverage.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary long speed and can be stacked by vertical-based receivers ... his lack of recovery ability is unfortunate ... moves well, but missing an explosive gear, which forces his transitions to stall ... can labor when he open his hips ... must continue developing his play strength and bulk (added 15 pounds between the Combine and his pro day) ... showed maturity as a senior but spent time in the coach’s doghouse multiple times during his first three seasons (NFL scout: “He didn’t apply himself off the field. You hope he’s past that.”) ... history of minor injuries, including an ankle procedure (April 2020), broken hand (January 2021), groin injury (October 2021) and rib injury at the Senior Bowl (January 2022), which limited his pre-draft workouts.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Clemson, Goodrich was an outside-only cornerback in former defensive coordinator Brent Venables’ scheme. A late bloomer on the NFL radar, he spent three years maturing before his breakout season as a senior, posting more passes defended (team-best 11) than his previous three seasons combined (9). Goodrich has a physical appetite in coverage to make receivers uncomfortable and rake at the football when targeted. He enjoys mixing it up with receivers, but his pedestrian play strength might look a tad different against NFL receivers. Overall, Goodrich has only average speed, twitch and recovery skills, but he is an aggressive player with plus tackling skills, making him a natural fit for a Cover-2 or zone-based coverage.

28. VINCENT GRAY | Michigan 6022 | 192 lbs. | rJR. Rochester, Mich. (Adams) 12/28/1999 (age 22.33) #4

BACKGROUND: Vincent Gray grew up just north of Detroit, playing basketball and football. He attended Rochester Adams High, where he was a four-year letterman at cornerback and wide receiver, seeing varsity reps as a freshman. As a junior, Gray finished with 19 tackles, one tackle for loss and one interception on defense, adding 16 receptions for 184 yards on offense. As a senior, he led Rochester to the 2017 conference championship and earned First Team All-State honors. Gray also lettered in basketball (before giving it up after his sophomore year to focus on football) and ran track as a freshman.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Gray was the No. 63 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 18 recruit in the state of Michigan. He initially committed to Missouri in July 2017 before reopening his recruiting before his senior season. His offer list grew to almost 30 scholarships, including Oregon, UCLA and Virginia. Michigan was one of the final schools to offer and he committed to his home-state school. Gray elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6020	195	32 1/2	9 1/8	78 3/8	4.64	2.69	1.60	34	10’2”	-	-	-

STRENGTHS: Above-average height and length for the position ... challenges receivers from press with physical, accurate hands ... plays to his leverage in coverage and will use the sideline to his advantage ... played wide receiver in high school and shows a general understanding of what route runners are trying to do ... strayed away from early contact downfield to avoid penalties ... improved confidence from his junior tape ... reads his keys from depth with the closing burst downhill to make plays ... shows no hesitation into his tackles to create collisions and pull down ball carriers with stubborn hands ... played his best football as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Tall, but thin and doesn’t have an ideal build ... pedestrian deep speed ... average sink and suddenness when he opens ... often finds himself trailing and doesn’t have the make-up burst to easily regain phase ... can get destroyed by double-moves ... his technique is improved, but it isn’t a strength to his game just yet ... late to get his head turned to find the football or play through the hands of receivers ... the goose egg under career interceptions is a bright red flag ... below-average play strength, which will be tougher to mask against physicality in the NFL ... spends too much time connected to blockers.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Michigan, Gray played boundary cornerback in former defensive coordinator Mike Macdonald’s man-zone scheme. His performance and production (passes defended and tackles) steadily improved each season, although his zero career interceptions (and 5-0 touchdowns allowed-to-interception ratio in 2021) is not ideal. With his height and length, Gray looks the part to match up on the outside and also flashes the burst to close when working downhill. He doesn’t have ideal speed for the position and will lose a half-step in his transition, forcing him to play catch-up. Overall, Gray is physical and patient in press and has zone instincts to sort through everything in front of him, but he plays a step behind too often and doesn’t create ball production opportunities for himself. He can fill a backup role as he continues to develop or possibly move to safety.

29. ISAAC TAYLOR-STUART | USC 6014 | 201 lbs. | rJR. San Diego, Calif. (Helix) 10/25/1999 (age 22.51) #6

BACKGROUND: Isaac Taylor-Stuart grew up in the San Diego area and started taking martial arts classes at age 3, competing for 10 years before football became his focus. He originally attended St. Augustine High, where he was a three-year starter and played both ways. After posting 37 tackles and three interceptions as a freshman, he finished his sophomore season with 56 tackles, 16 passes defended, three interceptions and a blocked field goal. As a junior, he earned First Team All-State honors with 645 rushing yards (9.3 average), 109 receiving yards and nine total touchdowns, adding 41 tackles and an interception on defense. Taylor-Stuart transferred to Helix High in La Mesa for his senior season and led the team to a 13-2 record, earning numerous All-America and All-State honors. He finished his final season with 77 tackles, 18 passes defended and six interceptions on defense and 10 touchdowns on offense as a running back and wide receiver. Taylor-Stuart also ran track at St. Augustine, setting personal bests of 11.38 in the 100 meters, 22.40 in the 200, 49.53 in the 400, 23’4.5 in the long jump and 45’7 in the triple jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Taylor-Stuart was the No. 4 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 32 overall) and the No. 4 recruit in the state of California. He was ranked behind only Patrick Surtain II, Tyson Campbell and Olaiah Griffin in the class. Taylor-Stuart received more than 50 scholarship offers and looked to be an SEC lean with his interest in Alabama, Tennessee and Texas A&M. But in the end, he decided to stay close to home and sign with USC. His father (Master Taylor), who is a taekwondo master and seventh-degree black belt, qualified for the 1984 Olympics. Taylor-Stuart elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Remarkable combination of length and speed ... able to press, turn and stay on top of go routes ... moves with natural twitch in his lower half to explode from his stance, which helps him recover or regain phase ... sufficient transition footwork to plant and drive on underneath throws ... uses his long arms to wall off catches ... looks smooth making plays on the ball when he is in proper position ... not a punishing tackler, but he gets his man on the ground and limits misses ... stays composed with his back to the ball and limits panicked contact ... played all four seasons on punt return coverage and has the makeup to compete for a gunner role.

WEAKNESSES: His technique is all over the place ... he must calm his feet and hands from press or off-man ... bites on route fakes and head bobs, getting himself turned around ... his immature route recognition leaves him guessing and out of position downfield ... his career ball production looks more like a single-season statline ... he didn't finish his USC career on a high note, surrendering six catches of 30-plus yards in the final five games of 2021 ... he is competitive, but his bark is worse than his bite ... multiple injuries held him back: missed most of his first season with an ankle injury (October 2018) and redshirted; missed one game as a redshirt freshman because of a concussion (September 2019); suffered torn ligaments in his right knee in the bowl game (December 2019) and required surgery a month later.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at USC, Taylor-Stuart was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Todd Orlando's balanced scheme. After becoming a starter as a redshirt freshman, he came off the bench in 2020 before regaining his starting spot in 2021, although his play was very up-and-down (gave up 16.9 yards per catch in 2021, which was the highest average in the Pac-12). Growing up in martial arts, Taylor-Stuart is a second-degree black belt and shows outstanding speed to turn, run and stay on the same play vertically or outrace receivers to the break point. However, too often he is late to recognize that break point or find the football, leaving him out of position and an easy mark for quarterbacks. Overall, Taylor-Stuart is a toolsy prospect with his blend of length and speed, but wild technique and very little semblance of playmaking instincts leave him disconnected from receivers in coverage. He is a low-risk, average-reward project.

GRADE: 6th Round

30. GREGORY JUNIOR | Ouachita Baptist 5117 | 203 lbs. | rSR. Crossett, Ark. (Crossett) 6/21/1999 (age 22.85) #27

BACKGROUND: Gregory Junior III grew up in Crossett, a small town in southern Arkansas close to the Louisiana border. He was a multi-sport standout at Crossett High and played football all four years, seeing time on both sides of the football. After posting 12 passes defended and two interceptions his junior season, Junior was an all-area performer as a senior, finishing with 42 tackles, 15 passes defended, four interceptions and two forced fumbles. On offense, he averaged 11.5 yards per rush and scored three total touchdowns (two rushing, one kick return) in 2016. He also lettered in baseball and basketball at Crossett.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Junior wasn't ranked by online recruiting services and went overlooked by FBS programs. He heard from several FCS teams, but the offers that came in during his senior season were from Division II programs. Junior received offers from Arkansas Monticello, Henderson State and Southern Arkansas, but he signed with Ouachita Baptist (two hours north of Crossett), which was his first offer. He accepted his invitation to the NFLPA Collegiate Bowl and was also invited to the 2022 Senior Bowl, becoming the first player in school history to play in Mobile.

STRENGTHS: Above-average athleticism with solid size and length ... outstanding balance in his transitions to stay connected to routes ... makes smooth adjustments when routes cross his face and doesn't play panicked ... patient in press with the lateral quickness to widen and mirror receivers ... physical hands to jam releases ... has a natural feel for ball searching after the catch ... tracks the eyes of the receiver and locates his hands for late strips ... comes to balance really well in space as a run defender, settling his feet and staying centered on tackle attempts ... his college coaches speak highly of him on and off the record.

WEAKNESSES: Reacts well with routes, but his anticipation is lacking ... overly conservative in coverage and would benefit by a little more risk to his diet ... doesn't have the ball production of a playmaker with only one career interception ... shows a slight hitch in his plant and drive ... despite his speed, he can be stacked and stuck in a trail position ... more comfortable playing the receiver rather than turning to locate and play the ball ... doesn't have experience against top-tier wide receiver talent coming from Division II.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Ouachita Baptist, Junior was the right outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Roy Thompson Jr.'s scheme. Despite never leading his team in passes defended or interceptions, he was a consistent performer and played his best as a senior (after no season in 2020), which created buzz among NFL scouts. Junior has terrific mirror-and-match skills from press with the size and athleticism to stay connected to route runners, although he could improve his ownership of the catch point downfield. He didn't face top competition in college, but he didn't look out of place at Senior Bowl practices and the helmet decal was the only reason you knew he was from Division II. Overall, Junior needs to improve his anticipation and locating skills to make more plays on the football, but he has outstanding balance in his transitions with the toughness to play inside or outside while also playing on special teams.

31. DALLIS FLOWERS | Pittsburg 6010 | 196 lbs. | rSR. Chicago, Ill. (Oak Park-River Forest) 6/4/1997 (age 24.90) #21

BACKGROUND: Dallis Flowers grew up on the west side of Chicago and started playing basketball at age 3, then picked up football in the fifth grade. He attended Oak Park and River Forest High, where he was a two-sport standout. As a senior, Flowers helped the team to a 7-3 record in 2014 and played primarily defensive back and return man. He finished his final season with 23 tackles, 15 passes defended and two interceptions. Flowers had 537 all-purpose yards with five total touchdowns, including a pair of return touchdowns (92-yard kickoff return and 70-yard punt return). He led the basketball team in scoring as a senior with 15.9 rebounds and 3.5 rebounds per game.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Flowers received recruiting interest for basketball and football and wanted to play both. Robert Morris (Ill.) gave him that opportunity and he signed with the NAIA program in February 2015. Flowers spent three seasons there and became the first player in school history to win a conference title in two sports. He transferred after the 2017 season and spent a semester at Tiffin before transferring to NAIA Grand View (Iowa) in the fall of 2018. After sitting out the 2018 season, he started two seasons at Grand View and played in the same secondary as his younger brother (Brendan). With an extra year of eligibility because of COVID-19 and his college degree, Flowers transferred to Division II Pittsburg (Kan.) for the 2021 season. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall, long and fast ... has adequate fluidity through his hips and lower body ... stays under control to bend and weave with routes ... quick feet to match from press ... excellent ball skills and doesn't allow interception opportunities go to waste with his length and tracking skills ... has the leaping skills to take away passing lanes and outjump receivers ... very few mental meltdowns on tape ... impact kick returner with two touchdowns in 2021 (98-yarder, 95-yarder) ... he averaged 33.7 yards per return, which broke John Brown's single-season record at Pittsburg.

WEAKNESSES: Room to continue filling out on his frame ... quick-footed and tends to get a little jumpy at the snap, leading to wasted movements ... guilty of losing the receiver in his blind spot at times ... needs to be quicker finding the football after turning his back to the line of scrimmage ... play strength is average, which shows in press and the run game ... will drop his helmet as a tackler and needs to clean up some areas in run support ... played at the NAIA and Division II levels in college and will face a jump in competition in the NFL ... will turn 25 shortly after the 2022 NFL Draft.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Pittsburg, Flowers was an outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Tom Anthony's man-heavy scheme. A well-traveled prospect, he was a two-sport standout in high school and college and was considered an NFL prospect at this time last year, but a productive season in Division II in 2021 only helped his pro projection. Flowers competes with fast footwork and quick acceleration to match and chase out of his transitions. However, there is room for him to improve his anticipation and pattern recognition. Overall, Flowers needs to play more controlled, especially against the jump in competition waiting for him in the NFL, but he has an outstanding mix of height, length and speed and he has been productive at every level of football thus far. He is an older man-to-man corner prospect with kick return value.

32. CHRIS STEELE | USC 6003 | 187 lbs. | JR. Bellflower, Calif. (St. John Bosco) 9/27/2000 (age 21.59) #8

BACKGROUND: Chris Steele, who grew up in the Los Angeles area, is fluent in Spanish. His first go-to sport was baseball before he shifted his focus to football in middle school. He attended St. John Bosco High, an all-boys Catholic school in Bellflower, and moved to defensive back for the first time as a freshman. Steele moved to cornerback as a sophomore and finished with 93 tackles and one interception, leading St. John Bosco to a 13-2 record and the 2016 state title over Mater Dei High. He earned Second Team All-State honors as a junior and finished with 73 tackles, nine passes defended and a pair of interceptions. As a senior, Steele led St. John Bosco to a 13-1 record (the No. 1-ranked team in the country for most of the season) with their lone loss coming in the playoffs to Mater Dei. He finished the 2018 season with 32 tackles, 12 passes defended, two blocked field goals and an interception, earning First Team All-America, All-State and All-League honors.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Steele was the No. 5 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 42 overall) and the No. 6 recruit in the state of California. He initially committed to UCLA as a sophomore before backing off that pledge as his recruitment heated up. Steele then committed to USC before his senior year before decommitting a few months later. He received more than 50 offers and announced a final five of Florida, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina and USC. He committed to the Gators and was the highest-ranked recruit in Florida's 2019 recruiting class, one spot ahead of Kaiir Elam. Steele enrolled early and went through 2019 spring practices in Gainesville, but he decided to enter the transfer portal in May. He felt uncomfortable rooming with teammate Jalon Jones, who was accused of multiple sexual assaults, and he wanted out of a "bad situation." After less than a week in the portal, he committed to Oregon but switched to USC and close to home after his mother (Maria) was laid off from her job. His NCAA waiver for immediate eligibility was granted shortly before the 2019 season. His father (Norman) played defensive end at New Mexico State (1991-93). Steele opted out of the final game of the 2021 season and skipped his senior year to enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Looks the part with respectable height and length ... has the foot quickness and smooth hips to play multiple coverages ... works hard to stay in position and balance his vision between the receiver and the quarterback ... responds quickly when he ties his eyes and feet together from off-coverage, reacting appropriately to play-action and screens ... not shy getting physical mid-route and will give as good as he gets ... the aggressive attributes are there for him to develop into more of a disruptive presence in press-man ... looks to mix things up in run support and will willingly throw his body around ... has the leaping skills to high point the football ... has yet to play his best football.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistent urgency and body control in his route mirroring ... has decent speed, but can be stacked vertically and doesn't consistently play like a 4.4 athlete ... needs to develop his anticipation to make more calculated risks in coverage ... disappointing ball production, never surpassing five passes defended in any of his three seasons in college ... tends to get too handsy at the top of routes and will be an easy target for officials ... too many avoidable errors on his tape with eight penalties in 2021, including the trifecta of mental mistakes (unsportsmanlike penalty, unnecessary roughness and personal foul) ... missed one game as a freshman because of a sprained knee (October 2019).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at USC, Steele was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Todd Orlando's balanced scheme. After a quick exit from Florida, he became a Trojan before his freshman season and made immediate contributions, but he didn't quite match the hype, especially last season (three pass-interference penalties, four touchdowns allowed in coverage in 2021). Steele is a good-sized athlete with functional footwork and field vision, along with the competitive juices needed to crowd NFL receivers. However, there is a slight delay in his reaction quickness against crafty, non-linear route runners and he isn't yet the sum of his parts. Overall, Steele has enticing ingredients with his size, speed and awareness, but too often there is a breakdown in the spatial relationships in coverage, leading to uneven tape. He is a traits-based prospect with untapped ability.

33. JA'QUAN MCMILLIAN | East Carolina 5096 | 181 lbs. | JR. Winston-Salem, N.C. (West Forsyth) 6/4/2000 (age 21.90) #21

BACKGROUND: Ja'Quan (juh-KWAN) McMillian grew up in the Winston-Salem area and started playing football at age 5, quickly making a name for himself at the Pop Warner level. He attended West Forsyth High and became an immediate varsity starter as freshman cornerback, posting 63 tackles and seven interceptions to earn First Team All-Conference honors. After collecting six interceptions as a sophomore, McMillian finished his junior season with 44 tackles, 15 pass breakups and three interceptions to earn West Forsyth Male Athlete of the Year honors. As a senior, he was asked to be a quarterback, receiver and return man in addition to his cornerback duties. McMillian finished 2018 with six interceptions and earned All-Conference honors for the fourth consecutive year. He finished his prep career with 22 interceptions, returning two for touchdowns. McMillian lettered in basketball as a sophomore and track (indoor and outdoor) as a junior. He set personal bests of 6.54 in the 55 meters indoor, 11.44 in the 100 outdoors and 21'5.5 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McMillian was the No. 117 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 48 recruit in the state of North Carolina. Several Power 5 programs offered him a scholarship, including North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee. But McMillian committed to East Carolina because of relationships the coaches forged with his family. His older brother (Jayshawn) was the starting quarterback at West Forsyth when Ja'Quan was a freshman in 2015. McMillian elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding ball skills and on-ball production (40 passes defended in 33 career games) ... highly instinctual with a feel for spacing and route concepts ... strong hands to snatch interceptions and take advantage of poor passes (led AAC in interceptions in 2020 and 2021) ... impressive ball reflexes to play through the hands of receivers ... reacts cleanly from press coverage ... flashes a closing burst when he triggers downhill ... competes like a dog (no surprise his favorite athlete is Jalen Ramsey) ... passes off or forces his way through wide receiver blocks ... feisty tackler and looks to mix things up in the run game ... finished No. 2 on the team in tackles in 2021, including two 10-tackle games ... averaged 10.4 yards per interception return with one pick-six (12/125/1) ... named a team captain as a junior ... highly productive with a combined 34 interceptions over the last seven years (four years of high school, three years at ECU).

WEAKNESSES: Undersized and lacks ideal height, length and build (wasn't hard to spot on film due to his size) ... bigger receivers can win the catch point because of his lack of inches ... guilty of lower-body technique lapses, leading to balance issues ... his hip fluidity and explosiveness are only average ... too easily surrenders inside position ... gets his hips turned too early downfield ... ball carriers can shake him in space due to his aggressive pursuit ... can be overwhelmed by blockers when he doesn't attack the right leverage points ... didn't play on kickoff or punt coverage teams.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at East Carolina, McMillian was a boundary cornerback in defensive coordinator Blake Harrell's scheme, playing both press-man and zone coverage. He made an immediate impact in Greenville and led the team in passes defended and interceptions each of the last three seasons, including an FBS-best 21 passes defended in 2021. McMillian uses quick, controlled steps to stay in phase and finishes with the innate ability to ball-search and disrupt the catch point. Highly aggressive against the pass and the run, he tends to freelance at times and abandons his technique in his pursuit of making plays, which will be exposed by high-end route runners in the NFL. Overall, McMillian is undersized and has only average speed, but he is an aggressive competitor with terrific instincts, eye use and ball skills. He projects best in the nickel.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

34. JACK JONES | Arizona State 5106 | 177 lbs. | rSR. Long Beach, Calif. (Long Beach Poly) 12/20/1997 (age 24.36) #0

BACKGROUND: Jack Jones grew up in Long Beach and fell in love with football at age 7 when he convinced his mother (Kisha) he wasn't too small for the sport. He attended Long Beach Poly High where he was coached by former NFL LB Antonio Pierce and was teammates with several top recruits, including WR JuJu Smith-Schuster and CB Iman Marshall. Jones was a versatile player during his prep career, playing double-digit positions, including quarterback and punter. As a junior, he earned First Team All-State honors as a wide receiver with 64 receptions for 719 yards and five touchdowns, adding 40 tackles and an interception as a cornerback and a punt return for a touchdown. As a senior, Jones was named to numerous All-America teams and finished with 23 tackles and an interception on defense, 42 catches for 837 yards and 11 touchdowns on offense and a punt return for a touchdown on special teams.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Jones was the No. 2 cornerback in the 2016 recruiting class (No. 19 overall) and the No. 4 recruit in the state of California (one spot behind OL Jonah Williams). He had no shortage of scholarship offers and ultimately got his final choice down to Alabama, Arizona State, Texas A&M, UCLA and USC. Despite the turmoil surrounding the program, Jones couldn't deny his USC connections and signed with the Trojans (same signing class as WR Michael Pittman Jr.). After two seasons, he missed the 2018 spring practices because of academics and was ruled academically ineligible for the 2018 season. Because of academic issues and rule violations, there was a mutual parting of the ways and Jones attended Moorpark College in 2018 to improve his grades (achieved 30 credit hours in two semesters) but didn't play football. A three-star JUCO recruit, Jones reconnected with Pierce, who was then an assistant coach and recruiting coordinator at Arizona State. At only 159 pounds and having not played football in a year, Jones signed with Sun Devils' 2019 recruiting class and played three seasons in Tempe. He graduated with his degree in liberal studies (December 2020). His daughter (Camari) was born in the fall of 2019. Jones opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Twiched-up athlete with an agile lower body ... shows fluid hip flip and sudden transitions needed for man-to-man coverage ... stays patient in his press technique, relying on his body control for extended mirroring of release ... works hard to stay on top of routes, getting his hands into receivers without drawing fouls ... plus ball instincts with the quickness to read breaks and body language ... above average on-ball production ... plays bigger than he looks and competes with the belief that every ball is his once it is in the air ... scrappy tackler and won't back down in run support (three forced fumbles in 2021) ... owns the grit needed for regular special teams work ... has overcome his share of adversities to arrive at this moment.

WEAKNESSES: Skinny, narrowed-framed corner with average features ... his smallish size will be exposed against bigger NFL receivers ... average 40 time matches his average long speed on film ... prefers freelancing over sound technique ... NFL quarterbacks will learn quickly that they can expose his risk-taking tendencies ... has some punt return experience but also muffed a punt on the 2020 tape ... punishing ball carriers can take him for a ride ... older prospect and will be a 25-year old NFL rookie ... his off-field requires extensive vetting after his unique college journey: he left USC because of academics in 2018; he was arrested for allegedly breaking into a Panda Express in June 2018. The felony charges were later dropped and he pleaded guilty to a second-degree misdemeanor charge of commercial burglary in October 2018, serving 45 days of house arrest. He was suspended by the Arizona State coaching staff for fighting during practice (November 2020) and missed most of the abbreviated four-game season in 2020 ... his lack of size leads to durability concerns; battled ankle injuries throughout the 2019 season and missed one game as a super senior (November 2021) because of injury.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Arizona State, Jones was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Antonio Pierce's scheme. He looked to be on the fast track to the NFL Draft after a promising sophomore season at USC in 2017 before his career was derailed by academic issues, team violations and other off-field issues. He resurfaced at Arizona State where he made some mistakes the past few seasons but also showed development (NFL scout: "I'm just not sure about his compass. He's matured in areas but will still need some babysitting."). Although his guessing will get him in trouble, Jones is proven catch-point disruptor because of his sticky cover skills and ability to innately find the football (38 passes defended in his final 39 games in college). Everyone knows he is undersized except for him, but he will struggle to win body position against NFL size and accuracy. Overall, his lack of size and discipline (on and off the field) create doubt about his next level future, but his short-area agility, ball instincts and compete skills are NFL-worthy traits.

GRADE: 7th Round

35. DARRELL BAKER JR. | Georgia Southern 6007 | 190 lbs. | rSR. Hephzibah, Ga. (Hephzibah) 3/27/1998 (age 24.09) #14

BACKGROUND: Darrell Baker Jr., who is one of seven children, was born in Panama City, Panama, as both of his parents served in the Army (now retired). He attended Hephzibah High (south of Augusta), where he was a four-year letterman in football, playing defensive back and wide receiver. He combined for 48 receptions for 889 yards and seven touchdowns during his prep career. On defense, he combined for 101 tackles, two interceptions and two forced fumbles. Baker also lettered in basketball and had a highly decorated track career in high school, winning the 2016 3A state championship with 23'7.5 in the long jump. He also had top-four finishes with a 10.83 in the 100 meters and 21.93 in the 200 at the state championship.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Baker had opportunities to run track collegiately, but football was his love, even though he wasn't highly recruited. He accepted a preferred walk-on opportunity at Georgia Southern and cut hair as a side job to help pay for his college. Despite early academic struggles, Baker earned his degree in interdisciplinary studies (May 2020) and was put on scholarship before the 2020 football season. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility because of the pandemic and returned to the program for a sixth season in 2021. Baker accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Freaky height-weight-speed athlete with plus arm length ... rangy cover man and makes plays at every level of the field ... shows off his top-level closing burst in his plant and drive or when taking playmaking angles to passing windows ... displays the hip flip and foot quickens to recover from wasted steps and coverage lapses ... showed improved discipline downfield (only one pass-interference penalty in 2021) ... looks like a wide receiver when he attacks the ball, showing outstanding leaping skills, timing and hand strength ... has versatile experience at safety, cornerback and nickel ... was a gunner on punt coverage.

WEAKNESSES: Undeveloped coverage anticipation and doesn't put himself in situations to make plays on the ball ... late to sort through route indicators and feel route breaks ... struggles to accurately balance his eyes between quarterback and route runner, especially in zone ... can be beaten over the top because of inconsistent transitions ... low interception total reflects his tardiness to the catch point ... slender build with below-average play strength ... inconsistent run defender with too many missed tackles on his résumé.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia Southern, Baker was an outside cornerback in former defensive coordinator Scot Sloan's man-zone scheme. A former walk-on, he went from fourth-string to starter, earned a scholarship and earned a spot on Bruce Feldman's 2021 Freaks List, which he backed up with his impressive pro day numbers. Baker checks boxes with his height, length, speed and explosiveness, but his coverage anticipation and consistency in run support are subpar. He has a bad habit of losing his balance when peeking into the backfield and struggled vs. some of the better opponents on the schedule (two touchdowns allowed on the 2021 Arkansas tape). Overall, Baker is experienced in various coverages with top-tier athletic traits, but he lacks poise downfield and the key for him to carve out an NFL career will be his mental development. He projects best as a press-man corner and special teamer.

36. DERION KENDRICK | Georgia 5117 | 194 lbs. | SR. Rock Hill, S.C. (South Pointe) 8/24/2000 (age 21.68) #11

BACKGROUND: Derion "DK" Kendrick, who is one of four children, grew up in Rock Hill and started playing football at age 8. With his athleticism, he played quarterback at the youth level for the Rock Hill Cowboys and at Saluda Trail Middle School. Kendrick enrolled at South Pointe High, which has produced several NFL stars, including Jadeveon Clowney and Stephon Gilmore, and was the starting quarterback on the freshman team before getting the call up to varsity for the playoffs. He played his sophomore year as a wide receiver (his preferred position) while also seeing playing time at safety and linebacker. Kendrick became the starting quarterback for his final two seasons, leading South Pointe to 4A state championships in 2016 and 2017 (four consecutive state titles). As a junior, he completed 63.2 percent of his passes (182-for-288) for 2,625 yards, 29 touchdowns and six interceptions, adding 488 rushing yards and five touchdowns. As a senior, Kendrick was the Gatorade Player of the Year in South Carolina and U.S. Army All-American with 72.2 percent completions (184-for-255) for 2,683 yards, 30 touchdowns and six interceptions, adding 1,194 rushing yards (10.0 average) and 20 touchdowns. He also saw snaps at free safety on defense during his final two years.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Kendrick was the No. 4 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class (No. 26 overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of South Carolina. He started to receive scholarship offers after his freshman season and collected offers from national powers like Alabama, Georgia, Notre Dame and Oklahoma. Kendrick also received an offer from Paul Johnson to play quarterback in Georgia Tech's option offense. But it came down to in-state Clemson and South Carolina, and Kendrick chose the Tigers, unlike several Rock Hill standouts before him. After playing wide receiver as a freshman, he moved to cornerback because of team need and earned a starting job as a sophomore. After several suspensions, he was dismissed from Clemson in February 2021 and entered the transfer portal. He landed at Georgia for his senior season and helped lead the Bulldogs to the national title. He has two young sons (Zion and Dash). Kendrick accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Balanced athlete with a flexible lower body ... fluid hips help him smoothly transition with route runners ... returns his eyes to the quarterback and finds the football ... has a wide receiver background with the ball skills to pick off throws in his direction ... efficient click-and-close quickness when he drives downhill ... physical in run support, especially for a former wide receiver ... strong practice player and showed improved football character at Georgia (head coach Kirby Smart: "There is not a player on our team that prepares harder than he does.") ... productive final season in college, leading the team in interceptions with zero touchdowns allowed in coverage in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: His lower-body technique doesn't match his lower-body athleticism, and savvy route runners will take advantage ... route anticipation is a work in progress ... not shy about getting physical downfield, but too grabby and not subtle about it ... three pass-interference penalties on the 2021 tapes studied and several others that should have been called ... doesn't have a secondary gear to make up lost steps in coverage ... needs to better achieve body position at the catch point ... needs to be a more reliable tackler on simple slants ... his Clemson coaches say he was an inconsistent special teams player ... his background creates question marks after he served multiple suspensions at Clemson, spent time in the coach's doghouse and was ultimately dismissed; he was arrested (March 2021) and charged with unlawful carrying of a handgun and issued a citation for marijuana possession. He completed a pretrial intervention program, which resulted in the charges being expunged.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Georgia, Kendrick was the field cornerback in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's scheme. A five-star receiver-turned-cornerback, he fizzled out at Clemson because of multiple suspensions but made the most of his second chance in Athens, leading the national champion Bulldogs in interceptions (only FBS player with at least four interceptions and zero touchdowns allowed in 2021). Kendrick is a physical, athletic cover man with the background of a wide receiver but the toughness of a defender. While his natural traits are appealing, he is not a technically sound player and his route awareness is not on an NFL level. Overall, Kendrick's suspect discipline (both on and off the field) will be an anchor on his draft grade, but he is a fluid athlete with the speed and ball skills to match up with NFL receivers. He has the ability to outplay his draft position.

37. MYKAEL WRIGHT | Oregon 5104 | 173 lbs. | JR. Antelope Valley, Calif. (Antelope Valley) 6/15/2000 (age 21.87) #2

BACKGROUND: Mykael (Mc-Kale) Wright, who is one of five siblings, grew up north of Los Angeles and started playing football at the youth level. He originally attended Antelope Valley High as a freshman but transferred midseason to Valencia High (about an hour away) to distance himself from negative influences. Wright, who had to sit out his freshman season, left his family and moved in with Lori and Michael Wikler, who became his legal guardians. As a sophomore wide receiver and cornerback, he finished with 31 receptions for 669 yards and eight touchdowns, adding seven interceptions on defense to earn All-Division honors. Wright led Valencia to a 12-2 record as a junior and the 2017 league title, falling to Oaks Christian in the state championship game. He finished the season with 55 catches for 1,317 yards and 18 touchdowns, adding four rushing touchdowns and two interceptions to earn 2017 League Player of the Year honors. Wright briefly enrolled at Narbonne High in Harbor City for his senior season before changing to Antelope Valley High, returning to where his high school career started. However, he was ineligible to play because of transfer rules and sat out the 2018 season. Wright also lettered in basketball in high school.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Wright was the No. 4 cornerback in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 41 overall) and the No. 5 recruit in the state of California (Kayvon Thibodeaux was No. 1). He received offers from several high-profile programs, including Alabama, Michigan, Texas and USC, before committing to Oregon before his senior year. Wright became the highest-ranked defensive back recruit in Oregon history and was the second-highest recruit in the Ducks' 2019 class behind only Thibodeaux. His younger brother (Kevin Green Jr.) was a wide receiver recruit in the 2022 signing class and originally committed to USC before flipping to Arizona. His cousin (Devon Williams) was a wide receiver at USC (2018) before transferring to Oregon (2019-21) and is also a part of the 2022 NFL Draft class. Wright elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft, opting out of the bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Above-average body control to stay under control and in phase early ... his route recognition took a positive jump from his 2020 tape ... quick to peel and drive when his eyes are dialed in ... plays with the confidence in his speed to overlap coverage and undercut routes ... has the athletic traits to make balanced adjustments and crowd the catch point ... aggressive ball skills with a knack for attacking at the highest point ... plays tougher and more physical than he looks as a high-to-low tackler ... productive kick returner in college, averaging 28.1 yards per return with two touchdowns (35/982/2).

WEAKNESSES: Light-bodied with mediocre length ... lacks physicality at the line of scrimmage, and his suspect play strength shows against size at receiver ... average reaction speed and late to respond to crossers ... plays too loose and routinely gives up route leverage ... lacks sudden footwork in his route transitions ... has moments of panic and drew three pass-interference penalties on the 2021 tapes studied ... doesn't have the body power to consistently finish in the open field when his tackling technique isn't on point ... the Buckeyes threw at him early and often (and with success) on the 2021 Ohio State tape ... NFL scouts question his durability.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Oregon, Wright was the field cornerback in former defensive coordinator Tim DeRuyter's man-zone scheme. Highly recruited out of high school, he put himself on the NFL radar with a productive freshman season, but his past two seasons as a starter produced mixed results on tape (allowed seven touchdowns and grabbed only one interception). Wright is a confident cover man with the breakdown and ball skills to be disruptive when in position. However, he is an average-twitch mover and gives up separation in man-to-man coverage and spends too much time guessing from zone. Overall, Wright is a competitive, fluid athlete with traits worth developing, but his marginal play strength and lapses in coverage are discouraging trends on his tape. He projects as an NFL backup with some upside to be more if he finds consistency.

38. JOSH THOMPSON | Texas 5114 | 194 lbs. | rSR. Nacogdoches, Texas (Nacogdoches) 10/20/1998 (age 23.52) #9

BACKGROUND: Josh Thompson grew up in Nacogdoches (east Texas) and started playing football age 7 in the Piney Woods League (where he played with childhood friend Brandon Jones, his future teammate in high school and college). He attended Nacogdoches High, where he was a three-year varsity starter as a wide receiver and defensive back. As a junior, Thompson earned First Team All-District honors with 33 tackles, 10 passes defended and one interception. As a senior, Thompson was one of the few bright spots on a three-win Nacogdoches team, taking home All-America, All-State and All-District honors. He finished the 2017 season with 71 tackles, 10 tackles for loss, seven passes defended, two interceptions and two forced fumbles at safety, adding 15 catches for 210 yards and four touchdowns on offense. Thompson also lettered in baseball.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Thompson was the No. 35 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 46 recruit in the state of Texas. He collected almost 30 offers, including Missouri, Penn State and Ole Miss. Thompson committed to TCU the summer before his senior year, but he grew up a Longhorns fan and flipped to Texas later in the summer. He graduated with his degree in physical culture and sport (December 2020). Thompson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Outstanding straight-line speed and he hits in a blink ... quick-footed to match or recover positioning in coverage ... physical hands and looks to make receivers uncomfortable mid-route and out of breaks ... did a nice job limiting YAC plays post-completion ... chooses violence in run support ... lowers his pads and drives through the ball carriers as a tackler ... voted a senior captain in 2021 ... admirable toughness (ripped his ear in half in the 2020 season opener and didn't notice until the coaches said something) ... well-seasoned on special teams coverage and has the mentality for it in the NFL ... versatile experience at multiple secondary positions.

WEAKNESSES: Marginal body control and gear-change to maintain spacing ... moves with slight tightness in his hips, delaying his route reactions ... has a tendency to panic and make early contact downfield, drawing penalties ... inconsistent feel for turning and finding the football ... poor ball production and doesn't create opportunities for himself ... the missed tackles piled up on film because of his technique and timing issues ... can be bullied by blockers in the run game ... durability is a question mark: missed two games during his career because of diagnosed concussions: one as a freshman (November 2017) and one as a senior (October 2021); suffered a fractured fibula (November 2021) and missed the final three games of his senior year; suffered a broken foot (September 2019) that required surgery and screws and ended his 2019 season; underwent arthroscopic knee surgery after his freshman season (January 2018).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Texas, Thompson was the left cornerback in defensive coordinator Pete Kwiatkowski's scheme. He bounced around the secondary during his time in Austin, seeing time at outside cornerback, slot cornerback and safety, although he was up and down at each of his stops. Thompson moves well for his size with the drive speed to derail downhill or jam and ride receivers vertically. However, his lackluster ball production is a fair representation of his struggles to stay attached to routes and create opportunities for himself. Overall, Thompson is a good-sized athlete with the physical toughness and speed that will immediately click on special teams, but he must iron out his inconsistencies in the secondary to make an NFL squad.

39. MONTARIC BROWN | Arkansas 6003 | 196 lbs. | rSR. Ashdown, Ark. (Ashdown) 8/24/1999 (age 22.68) #21

BACKGROUND: Montaric Brown grew up in southwest Arkansas near the Texas border and played Little League baseball and football. He attended Ashdown High, where he gave up baseball to focus on football, playing both ways at defensive back and wide receiver. Brown led Ashdown to an eight-win season as a junior and recorded 122 tackles and five interceptions (three returned for touchdowns), adding seven touchdowns on offense and special teams. As a senior, Brown finished with 110 tackles and seven interceptions, one returned for a touchdown. On offense, he posted 52 catches for 813 yards and seven touchdowns in 2016, earning U.S. Army All-America honors. Brown also lettered in track.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Brown was the No. 18 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Arkansas. He picked up several high-profile offers, including Alabama, Auburn, LSU and Oklahoma. But the opportunity to stay close to home and play for Arkansas led him to signing with Bret Bielema and the Razorbacks. His cousin (LaDarius Bishop) was Arkansas' other starting cornerback in 2021. Brown accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Has the measurements to match up vs. size ... accurately reads breaks and matches from zone ... stays in a balanced stance and diagnoses opponent's route speed to maintain phase ... gears down and calms his feet with receivers ... shows an instinctive feel for undercutting routes ... makes timely plays on the football with excellent judgment to swat, knock down or go for the pick ... makes quarterbacks pay for their mistakes with an SEC-best five interceptions in 2021, including several diving grabs (zero dropped interceptions in 2021) ... solid wrap tackler and his competitiveness shows in every facet of his game ... was a regular on kickoff coverage and punt returns as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: A misstep might be a death sentence for him vs. NFL speed ... allowed a ton of yards after the catch on tape ... plays balanced, but not explosive or twitchy in his movements (front or reverse) ... missing a top gear to carry deep acceleration ... his hips are smooth but not loose enough to redirect on command from a stagnant position ... his aggressive tendencies lead to early contact (flagged five times for pass interference in 2021) ... not a finesse defender, but can get out-physicalled at the top of routes ... late to get off blocks on the outside.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Arkansas, Brown was the boundary cornerback in defensive coordinator Barry Odom's zone-heavy scheme. He turned himself into a potentially draftable player based on his 2021 film, even though it was a mix of both feast (SEC-best five interceptions, team-best 11 passes defended) and famine (five pass-interference penalties, four touchdowns allowed). Brown does a great job processing and understanding leverage from zone, helping him create on-ball opportunities for himself. However, there weren't many "wow" athletic moments on his college film (his testing backs that up) and he will struggle at times to transition with route runners unless his eyes are dialed in. Overall, Brown's lack of suddenness will be a challenge to mask vs. NFL speed, but he has NFL-ready instincts and just enough size and athleticism. He is ideally suited for a Cover-2 scheme and has makeup to earn an NFL roster spot.

40. JERMAINE WALLER | Virginia Tech 6001 | 180 lbs. | SR. Washington, D.C. (Avalon) 11/3/1999 (age 22.49) #2

BACKGROUND: Jermaine Waller, who has two younger sisters, grew up in southeast Washington D.C. and started playing football at age 5. He started his prep career at Archbishop Carroll, where he played quarterback for two seasons, passing for 2,603 yards, 51.0 percent completions and 29 total touchdowns (24 passing, five rushing). Waller transferred to The Avalon School in Gaithersburg, Md., to increase his recruitment profile and moved to cornerback, his preferred position. He posted six interceptions as a junior and earned All-Area honors.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Waller was the No. 81 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 18 recruit in the state of Maryland. He received double-digit offers and had a final seven of Connecticut, Maryland, NC State, Rutgers, Temple, Virginia and Virginia Tech, committing to the Hokies. Waller opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Long-framed athlete with fluid movements ... does an efficient job scanning while pedaling and covering ground in zone ... dissects routes quickly to sort through bunch sets and attack screens and underneath patterns ... finds workable angles in coverage and leads with his hands to punch the ball out at the catch point ... outstanding ball production in his two healthy seasons ... owns the physical nature that will bother finesse receivers ... displays the feet for extended release mirror ... faces up the ball carrier in run support and doesn't get out-athleted in space ... his coaches have commended his "locked-in" attitude and toughness to play through minor injuries.

WEAKNESSES: High center of gravity creates a hitch in his turn and run vs. verticals or his stop and sink vs. comebacks ... questionable long speed creates recovery problems vs. speedy route runners (gave up seven catches of 20-plus yards in 2021) ... needs continued technique maturation to help mask his shortcomings ... his physicality will make him a target for flags in coverage (penalized six times in 2021, including three pass-interference penalties on the Duke tape) ... his tackling technique must improve against NFL-level ball carriers ... played through a fractured bone in his foot in 2019, which required offseason surgery; missed most of the 2020 season with foot and arm injuries (October 2020).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Virginia Tech, Waller was an outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Justin Hamilton's zone-based scheme. While 2020 was a lost season for him because of injuries, he put positive play on his 2019 and 2021 tapes, including outstanding production (22 passes defended and seven interceptions in 24 games in 2019 and 2021). Waller is a fluid player with an outstanding feel for zone duties, although he will struggle to make up a misstep if he surrenders early separation. His toughness and physical nature show in run support and when he quickly drives on throws in front of him. Overall, Waller displays balanced movements in space with NFL-ready confidence and play recognition but requires additional technique work to counterbalance his aggressive style of play. He projects best in a Cover-2 scheme.

SUMMARY: Nazeeh (NAH-zee) Johnson was an all-conference receiver and defensive back at Millbrook High, rushing for 1,093 yards and posting four interceptions as a senior. He heard from several FCS programs but accepted a preferred walk-on spot at Marshall (put on scholarship in spring 2018). A four-year starter, he rotated between nickel and free safety and recorded consistent production each season. Johnson plays with outstanding balance in coverage with the athletic twitch to mirror and make sudden start-stops (his elite testing numbers match his athleticism on tape). He is a solid wrap tackler, although his lack of ideal length and play strength might be an issue in the NFL. A team captain, the coaches use phrases like "unselfish dude" and "tough as dirt" to describe him. Overall, Johnson lacks ideal size and will be tardy with his reads at times, but his explosiveness and resilient attitude are traits worth the investment as a nickel defender and special teamer.

SUMMARY: Sam Webb started playing football at Excelsior Springs High and played both ways at wide receiver and cornerback. He earned all-state, all-district and all-conference as a senior with 12 touchdowns and four interceptions. A no-star recruit, he committed to Division II Missouri Western, where he was a four-year starter at cornerback. He had his best season as a junior with 15 passes defended and three interceptions and blocked four kicks in his past two seasons. Webb has above-average size and length for the position and competes with toughness and edge. He flashes explosiveness in his lower body and routinely attached himself to the hip of Division II receivers. His speed is adequate, but his make-up acceleration and recovery skills leave plenty to be desired after a mistake. Overall, Webb needs to mature his eye discipline and route recognition to earn his way in the NFL, but his explosive testing numbers and special teams background will help.

SUMMARY: DaMarcus Fields was a three-sport standout in basketball, track and football at Taylor High. He played primarily at receiver before moving to defense as a senior, finishing with 101 tackles and four interceptions to earn all-district honors. A three-star recruit, he committed to Texas Tech the summer before his senior year. After redshirting with shoulder issues in 2016, he became a five-year starter for the Red Raiders and earned All-Big 12 honors four consecutive years, finishing his career with 49 passes defended. Fields has bounce in his feet and the processing ability to work from either press or off. He will have his share of judgment errors and false steps and he turned only four of his 49 passes defended into turnovers (seven touchdowns allowed, zero interceptions since 2020). Overall, Fields is an aggressive and proven disruptor at the catch point, but his balance concerns and lack of explosive twitch might hinder him at the next level.

SUMMARY: DaRon Bland was a three-year letterman at Central Catholic in Modesto and earned league defensive player of the year honors as a senior with 44 tackles and two interceptions, adding 24 catches for 571 yards and three touchdowns on offense. A no-star recruit, he committed to FCS Sacramento State where he played three seasons while also competing for the track team (placed fifth at Big Sky Championships with a 6.86 60 meters). He transferred to Fresno State for his final season in 2021 and started the final nine games. Bland smothers receivers on the outside and plays with the speed and physicality that pop on the screen. His twitch is slightly delayed at the top of routes, although his eye use and route recognition showed encouraging improvements in 2021 as he adjusted to the FBS. Overall, Bland has only average hips and will lose his feel for the route at times, but his length, speed and toughness are desirable traits for NFL teams to develop.

SUMMARY: Samuel Womack III earned first team all-city, all-metro and all-state as a senior at East English Village Prep, eclipsing 1,000 receiving yards on offense and recording 11 interceptions on defense. He also played basketball, and his focus on AAU tournaments instead of recruiting camps contributed to him not receiving any Division I offers out of high school. He walked on at Toledo and led the MAC in passes defended three consecutive seasons, finishing with a school-record 45 passes defended. Even though he received a scholarship in 2018, Womack still competes with that underdog mentality and shows the innate ability to judge the catch point. He is a composed athlete with oily hips and quick acceleration to attach himself to routes. He has the toughness for the run game, but his consistency can improve. Overall, Womack will be overlooked due to his size, but his competitive nature, body control and on-ball production belong in the NFL, ideally suited in the nickel.

SUMMARY: Zion Gilbert was born and raised in Montgomery and was a two-way player at Jefferson Davis High. He finished his prep career with eight interceptions and five total touchdowns, twice earning all-state honors. A three-star recruit, he committed to Florida Atlantic, where he saw immediate snaps at safety before moving full-time to cornerback in 2020. He led FAU in passes defended each of the past three seasons. Gilbert is a tall, slender athlete with light feet to quickly change directions and accelerate to top speed. He got away with it in college thanks to his athleticism, but he plays too much on his heels and can be late to anticipate route breaks, especially in bail coverage. He isn't shy getting physical vs. the run, although he needs to be more subtle with his aggressiveness to avoid flags. Overall, Gilbert isn't a technically refined player, but he mirrors well from his pedal and has the vertical speed to compete for corner snaps on the perimeter.

SUMMARY: Quandre (QUAN-dray) Mosely was born and raised in Brunswick and played basketball and football (wide receiver) at Glynn Academy. He went the junior college route and spent two seasons at Eastern Arizona Community College, playing both receiver and cornerback. A three-star juco recruit, he committed to Kentucky over Oregon and Utah. He primarily came off the bench for the Wildcats the past three seasons but saw his role expanded as a senior (36.7 defensive snaps per game). Mosely is a long-limbed athlete with impressive plant, drive and burst ability to jump passing lanes or arrive with the ball at the receiver. He plays with light feet, but needs to show more trust in his transitional movement skills. He tends to misjudge when to take gambles. Overall, Mosely must continue to develop his play recognition and press technique, but he displays the foot quickness, twitch and length to be a developmental cornerback for a press-man NFL defense.

SUMMARY: Ja'Sir (juh-SEAR) Taylor was a four-year letterman at Brick Township High, leading the team in rushing as a senior with 11 touchdowns. He was also a standout sprinter in track (10.74 100 meters). A three-star recruit, he flipped from Temple to Wake Forest (his only two offers) as a defensive back and went on to play in a school-record 62 games. He became the first player in school history with a kick return touchdown and interception in the same game in 2021. Taylor has NFL-level speed and fluidity in his turn and run with the ball skills to find the football. However, he will lose phase because of balance issues and his route recognition seemed to decline from his 2020 tape. He looks to mix things up with receivers, but his marginal play strength shows once blocked in run support. Overall, Taylor put too many negative plays on his 2021 film (nine penalties, five touchdowns allowed), but his explosive speed and aggressive mindset are functional building blocks.

SUMMARY: Josh Blackwell was a football and track standout at Buford High, placing fourth in the 100 meters (10.96) at sectionals as a senior. He led Buford to a state football championship as a sophomore and earned all-state honors as a junior. A three-star recruit, he committed to Duke over North Carolina and others. He started at cornerback each of the past four seasons, although he missed most of the 2020 season with a torn meniscus in his right knee. Blackwell is a slick athlete with the top-end speed and sudden twitch to mirror and match in press coverage. His instincts are evident on tape, but he bites on route fakes and plays too loose, which leads to too many completions (see 2021 Miami tape). While his lack of size shows in coverage, it is especially evident in the run game, sticking to blocks and missing tackles. Overall, Blackwell is undersized with lackluster ball skills, but his elite speed, footwork and intangibles will earn him more than one bite at the NFL apple.

SUMMARY: Shaun Jolly, who comes from a family of college athletes, combined for 27 passes defended and five interceptions during his final two seasons at Stephenson High. A two-star recruit, he wasn't ranked among the top 300 recruits in the state of Georgia, but he received a handful of FBS offers, committing to App State. He put himself on the NFL map as a sophomore and earned First Team All-Sun Belt each of the past three seasons. Jolly is a fluid athlete with the balanced feet to smoothly transition with route breaks. He trusts his eyes and processing to lead him to passing windows. He can be posted up by size, but you can feel his feisty play demeanor on tape. Despite his skinny bone structure and suspect play strength, he was one of the most dependable tacklers at the college level. Overall, Jolly will have a tougher time overcoming his lack of size in the NFL, but his decisive instincts and fearless play style has NFL teams interested, likely inside at nickel.

1. KYLE HAMILTON | Notre Dame 6041 | 220 lbs. | JR. Atlanta, Ga. (Marist) 3/16/2001 (age 21.12) #14

BACKGROUND: Kyle Hamilton, who is the youngest of two boys, was born on the Greek island of Crete and spent time in Russia as an infant while his father played basketball overseas. His parents divorced when he was 3, and he grew up in the Atlanta area, where he started playing football at age 6. He grew up in a basketball family and starred on the AAU circuit throughout middle school, but was also a talented quarterback on the football field. In seventh grade, Hamilton enrolled at Marist School, a private Catholic school in the Atlanta suburb of Brookhaven (lived with his mother, Jackie, in Johns Creek). He played quarterback in eighth and ninth grade, but a broken right wrist as a freshman pushed him to defense. He was a three-year starting safety on varsity while also playing wide receiver on offense. As a senior, Hamilton led Marist to an 11-3 record and the state playoff semifinals, posting 38 catches for 804 yards and seven touchdowns on offense and 72 tackles and four interceptions on defense (also had two blocked kicks on special teams). He earned First Team All-Region honors and was a U.S. Army All-American. Hamilton also lettered in basketball in high school and was known for his defense.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Hamilton was the No. 5 safety in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 60 recruit overall) and the No. 9 recruit in the state of Georgia. He started receiving scholarship offers as a sophomore and collected three dozen offers. Despite a late push from nearby Georgia, Hamilton committed to Notre Dame, partly because of its academics (scored 30 on his ACT). With his lanky frame, he considered quitting football as a freshman after Tulane offered him a basketball scholarship. His father (Derrek) was a third-round draft pick by the New Jersey Nets in the 1988 NBA Draft out of Southern Miss. Derrek would later train several NBA and NFL players in the Atlanta area. His mother (Jackie) was born in South Korea. Kyle's older brother (Tyler) played basketball collegiately at Penn (2015-19) and William & Mary (2019-20) and now works in marketing for Athletes First agency. Kyle is related to Antonio Lang, who won two NCAA basketball titles at Duke (1990-94) and is now an assistant coach with the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers. Hamilton, along with his three roommates, hosted the "Inside The Garage" podcast, which was picked up by Colin Cowherd's podcast network. Hamilton elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He also opted out of Notre Dame's 2021 bowl game.

STRENGTHS: Lithe, loose athlete with tremendous length ... elite range from depth thanks to his long-striding speed ... displays an explosive trigger to key and chase down plays ... high football IQ and anticipates well ... quickly reads top-down and sorts through route combinations ... excellent balance as a tackler, and his finishing skills improved each season because of his ability to stay centered and controlled ... boasts a larger tackling radius than your average safety ... three-level blitz with tactical attack angles ... ferocious hitter to dislodge the football at contact ... has that "my ball" mentality ... doesn't let interception opportunities go to waste, averaging 10.0 yards per return with one pick-six (8/80/1) ... has the body type to easily carry 230 pounds ... highly versatile and comfortable playing middle-deep, split safety or in robber coverage ... team captain as a junior ... humble by nature and very mature for his age (NFL scout: "Everyone who knows him says he's extremely ambitious but grounded ... the ego doesn't match the talent with this kid.") ... consistent accolades and production on his college résumé, including making plays on punt coverage as a gunner.

WEAKNESSES: Needs to do a better job returning his eyes to the quarterback once he turns his back in coverage ... needs to improve his contact and body positioning in man coverage vs. tight ends and backs ... can be overly conservative at times as he works through all the moving parts in the backfield ... would like to see him take more chances ... doesn't have the power to go through blockers as a blitz and didn't register a sack in college ... can be better setting the edge and more explosive getting off blocks ... tends to get grabby in coverage and needs to clean up the penalties (nine in his career), including four in 2021 (defensive pass interference, roughing the passer, unsportsmanlike conduct and personal foul) ... missed one game as a sophomore with a sprained left ankle (September 2020) and had postseason surgery (February 2021); missed the second half of the 2021 season due to a fat pad impingement in his right knee (October 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Notre Dame, Hamilton played field safety in former defensive coordinator (now head coach) Marcus Freeman's scheme. He earned All-American status each of his three seasons in South Bend, leading the team in interceptions twice, including as a junior despite missing the second half of the season. Hamilton is a long, super-sized safety who has the explosive range, smarts and toughness to be deployed anywhere on the football field. He anticipates well vs. both the pass and the run and shows the ball skills and tackling balance to be a consistent finisher. Overall, Hamilton frustrates quarterbacks with all the ways he impacts the game and will need an NFL defensive scheme that understands how to maximize his versatile talent. A mash-up of Isaiah Simmons and Justin Simmons, he has the potential to be a diverse matchup weapon in the NFL due to his rare combination of physical traits and natural football instincts.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 6 overall)

2. DAX HILL | Michigan6002 | 191 lbs. | JR.Tulsa, Okla. (Booker T. Washington)9/29/2000 (age 21.58)#30

BACKGROUND: Daxton “Dax” Hill, who is the youngest of two boys, was born and raised in Tulsa and focused on basketball before picking up football in the fourth grade, playing running back and linebacker for the Tulsa Bulldogs. He attended Booker T. Washington High (alma mater of both of his parents) where he was a four-year letterman, primarily at safety with some offensive snaps mixed in at wide receiver. Hill notched 67 tackles and two interceptions as a freshman followed by 45 tackles and two interceptions as a sophomore. As a junior, he helped lead Booker T. Washington to a 12-1 record and the 2017 6A Division II state championship, finishing the season with 71 tackles and five interceptions (three returned for touchdowns) and seven touchdown receptions on offense. As a senior, Hill was named a U.S. Army All-American and the 2018-19 Gatorade Player of the Year in Oklahoma with 93 tackles, 9.0 tackles for loss, 11 passes defended, three forced fumbles and two interceptions. He gave up basketball after his freshman year and lettered in track as a sophomore, posting personal bests of 11.01 in the 100 meters and 22.02 in the 200 meters.

A five-star recruit out of high school, Hill was the No. 1 safety in the 2019 recruiting class (No. 14 recruit overall) and the No. 1 recruit in the state of Oklahoma. He considered in-state Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, along with several of the top national programs such as Georgia, LSU, and Ohio State. But in the end, Hill’s choice came down to Alabama and Michigan. He initially committed to the Wolverines in September 2018 before flipping to Alabama after his senior year. However, he flipped back to Michigan on signing day. His older brother (Justice) played running back at Oklahoma State and was a fourth-round pick (No. 113 overall) in the 2019 NFL Draft by the Baltimore Ravens (missed the 2021 season with a torn achilles). Hill elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

STRENGTHS: Twiched-up athlete to play sticky coverage ... clean footwork to pedal or match laterally in man-coverage vs. the slot ... gets in and out of route breaks with little wasted movement thanks to his smooth footwork and hips ... flashes an extra gear when closing on throws ... superb mental processor on combo routes ... gets a beat on throws because of his anticipation and feel for tells from the quarterback and route runners ... has a natural feel for body position and consistently playing to his help in coverage ... tracks the football with a knack for attacking at the highest point ... stings in run support with his toughness and high-to-low tackling skills ... explosive, well-timed blitz to shoot through gaps ... consistently makes plays from the backside thanks to his pursuit range ... not shy mixing things up with a dependable playing temperament ... experienced lining up in the slot and at different safety alignments ... durable and didn't miss a game in college.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary body type, length and bulk for the position ... might struggle to match up with the physicality and size of NFL tight ends ... can be a step late turning to carry vertical speed ... willing striker but doesn't have much burst behind his pads ... will go backwards at times on contact and can do a better job striking through his target ... average play strength when sifting through traffic and needs to develop his take-on skills ... introverted by nature and would be good to see more swagger from him.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Michigan, Hill lined up as the slot nickel in former defensive coordinator Mike Macdonald's man-zone scheme. His role and impact steadily grew each of the past three seasons in Ann Arbor, culminating in a standout 2021 season where he led the team in both passes defended and interceptions. Hill plays with the athletic twitch and transitional quickness to interchangeably play slot-man, deep safety or in the box and can just as easily lay licks in the run game as he can cover the slot fade. He displays the competitive temperament and awareness to smother in zone or man, although he can do a better job exploding through his target as a tackler or blitz. Overall, Hill might not have elite size or length, but his versatile package of skills (athletic range, toughness, football IQ) make him the ideal nickel defender in today's NFL. He should be a rookie starter as either a split safety or slot defender.

GRADE: 1st Round (No. 20 overall)

3. LEWIS CINE | Georgia 6022 | 199 lbs. | JR. Cedar Hill, Texas (Trinity Christian) 10/5/1999 (age 22.56) #16

BACKGROUND: Lewis Cine (SEEN) was born in Haiti and grew up playing soccer. His mother (Beatrice Seide), who now lives in Chile and has never been to the United States, was 16 years old when she gave birth to him, which is why he wears the No. 16 jersey. At age 4, Cine relocated to the United States for better opportunities, moving in with family in Florida. After several years of splitting his time between Haiti and Florida, he moved to Everett, Mass., (five miles north of Boston) to live with his father in middle school. He was introduced to football in the second grade, but he didn't start playing organized football until he arrived in Everett, a small, football-focused city. Cine enrolled at Everett High, where he lettered as a freshman defensive back. As a junior, he led Everett to a 12-0 record and the 2017 state championship. Cine was named the 2017 Massachusetts Defensive Player of the Year with 65 tackles, two interceptions, one blocked field goal and one blocked punt. For his final prep season, he transferred to the Dallas area to live with his uncle and enrolled at Trinity Christian, a private school in Cedar Hill. Cine led Trinity Christian to a 14-0 record and the 2018 state championship, finishing his senior year with 85 tackles, 13.0 tackles for loss, two interceptions and a fumble recovery touchdown. Cine learned from Deion Sanders, who was an assistant coach at Trinity Christian. Cine also lettered in track at Everett, with personal bests of 6.94 in the 55 meters, 11.70 in the 100 meters and 16.35 in the 110-meter hurdles.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Cine was the No. 3 safety in the 2019 recruiting class (behind Daxton Hill and Jordan Battle) and the No. 7 recruit in the state of Texas. He finished with 36 scholarship offers and was recruited hard by several of the top programs in the country. Cine whittled his list to Florida, Georgia, Michigan, Penn State and Texas, committing to Mel Tucker (then the Bulldogs defensive coordinator) in October 2018. His daughter (Bella) is 5 and lives with his grandmother. Cine elected to skip his final season of eligibility and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6022	202	32 1/2	9 3/8	78 1/4	-	-	-	37	-	-	-	(stood on Combine numbers)

STRENGTHS: Rangy with the stride speed to cover a lot of grass ... has the top gear to cover over the top ... smooth-hipped and transfers weight cleanly to change direction mid-pedal ... feels routes coming and shows a natural feel for coverage angles (only one touchdown pass allowed) ... triggers downhill in zone and closes with short-area burst ... highly physical and strokes ball carriers across the middle of the field ... widens his feet at contact and keeps his hands extended as a tackler ... understands timing and committed only one penalty in 2021 (pass interference vs. Florida) ... executes situational football and takes coaching well (head coach Kirby Smart: "When you design a safety, he's got all the qualities ... he's really been a student of the game.") ... production improved each season ... durable and played in all 39 games the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Narrow-framed with lean-muscle bulk ... caught playing on his heels in man coverage and can be late to drive on out-breaking routes ... too lenient with his underneath separation allowed ... leaves interceptions on the field because of suspect hands and finishing focus at the catch point ... needs to track the ball better mid-pursuit ... there is room to clean up his open-field tackling technique, occasionally dropping his eyes or tackling too high ... doesn't have the brute power to compensate when he arrives out of control ... rarely used as a blitzer.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Georgia, Cine played free safety in former defensive coordinator Dan Lanning's scheme, also seeing time at strong safety and the "money" position. He was born in Haiti, grew up in Florida, learned to play football in Boston, became a top recruit in Texas and earned All-American status at Georgia – a diverse journey that concluded with him earning Defensive MVP honors in the 2021 national championship game. With his range, explosiveness and appetite for contact, Cine is a do-everything safety and led a talent-rich Georgia defense in both tackles and passes defended in 2021. Although he has room to tidy up his tackling technique, he is at his best as a physical run defender, running the alley like a freight train and tuning up his target. Overall, Cine lacks ideal size by NFL standards and has marginal ball skills, but he is an enforcer vs. the run with the athleticism in coverage to make plays. He is an ascending talent with NFL starting skills, similar to Xavier McKinney as a prospect.

GRADE: 1st-2nd Round (No. 33 overall)

4. JALEN PITRE | Baylor 5110 | 198 lbs. | rSR. Stafford, Texas (Stafford) 6/3/1999 (age 22.90) #8

BACKGROUND: Jalen Pitre (PEE-tree), who has an older brother, grew up in Stafford (20 miles southwest of Houston) and played multiple sports through middle and high school. He was a four-sport letterman (basketball, football, soccer, track) at Stafford High, starting three seasons on varsity in football. As a sophomore, Pitre posted 78 tackles, 6.0 tackles for loss and six interceptions (one returned for a touchdown) as a free safety, adding 133 rushing yards and three touchdowns on offense. His junior season was cut short by an ACL injury, finishing with 41 tackles in 2015. As a senior linebacker, Pitre returned from his knee injury and earned District MVP honors with 83 tackles, 7.0 tackles for loss, six interceptions and four forced fumbles.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Pitre was the No. 76 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 137 recruit in the state of Texas. He committed to Baylor over SMU the summer before his junior season. After Art Briles was fired in May 2016, most 2017 Baylor commits (such as QB Kellen Mond and LB Baron Browning) flipped to other schools, but Pitre was the lone Briles recruit to stay committed to Baylor, citing academics and religious reasons. After three seasons at linebacker, he switched to a hybrid safety role under head coach Dave Aranda. His older brother (Jerick) played defensive back at Blinn Community College (2016-17) and FCS Incarnate Word (2018-2020). Pitre graduated with his degree in business (August 2020) and recently completed his master's in educational psychology (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Versatile, hyper-competitive athlete ... instinctive edge rusher and one of the better blitzers in the draft class ... slithers around blocks with quickness and bend to make plays ... physical tackler and enjoys getting busy downhill ... innate feel for spacing and football geometry ... composed footwork in man coverage ... closes on underneath routes with short-area burst ... does an excellent job ball-searching at the catch point and playing through the hands of receivers ... makes plays on the ball without interfering (zero penalties in 431 coverage snaps in 2021) ... academics are important to him, earning two degrees and 2021 CoSIDA Academic All-American honors ... senior captain and earned a single-digit jersey number his final two seasons ... his coaches routinely single him out for his film study habits translating to the field ... logged 451 career special teams snaps, seeing action on every coverage unit as a senior ... had an All-American senior year, leading the Big 12 in tackles for loss and forced fumbles.

WEAKNESSES: Adequate cover range, but his limitations will show when he tries to recover after a false step ... susceptible to route fakes, and tends to bite on a receiver's initial movements ... can be late to turn and locate the ball ... inconsistent in his break down and finish on the move ... often finds himself out of control when closing on the ball in the flat ... average functional strength and struggles to easily disengage contact, especially in traffic at the line of scrimmage ... redshirted in 2019 because of a lingering shoulder injury, which required surgery.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Baylor, Pitre was an ideal fit at the hybrid "Star" role in head coach Dave Aranda's 3-3-5 base defense after three years at linebacker for former head coach Matt Rhule. He split his time in the box, on the edge and vs. the slot and earned Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year honors as a senior, showing off his versatility in the stat sheet (only FBS player with at least three fumble recoveries, three forced fumbles and two interceptions in 2021). Pitre has the cover skills to challenge pass-catchers man-to-man and the downhill instincts to make stops at or behind the line of scrimmage (31 tackles for loss in 23 games the past two seasons). He has a natural feel for proximity and angles but needs to clean up his break down skills on the move. Overall, Pitre has only average speed but projects best as a "big nickel" in a role that takes advantage of his athletic versatility, spatial awareness and competitive urgency. He will be an immediate special teamer and has NFL starting potential.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 38 overall)

5. JAQUAN BRISKER | Penn State 6013 | 206 lbs. | rSR. Pittsburgh, Pa. (Gateway) 4/20/1999 (age 23.02) #1

BACKGROUND: Jaquan Brisker, who is one of eight children, was born in Pittsburgh and later moved to Monroeville. He attended Gateway High, where he was a three-year letterman as a safety and wide receiver. As a senior, Brisker earned team MVP and First Team All-Section honors for the second consecutive year. He set a school record with 42 catches for 781 yards and 11 touchdowns in 2016, adding five punt return touchdowns. He was held out of several games in high school, including a playoff loss his senior year, due to declining grades and missed classes. Brisker also lettered two seasons in basketball, earning First Team All-Section honors as a senior.

A three-star cornerback recruit out of high school, Brisker received interest from several Power 5 programs in the 2017 recruiting class, but he admittedly didn't focus enough on academics, and the major offers never arrived. Instead of accepting an offer to grayshirt at Toledo, he decided to enroll at Lackawanna Community College to get his grades back on track. A two-year junior college starter, Brisker led the team with 64 tackles as a sophomore and was named an All-American. A four-star juco recruit, he was the No. 1 juco safety recruit and the No. 12 player overall. Brisker committed to Penn State (his dream program) over offers from Alabama, Pitt and others. His older brother (Tale') was shot and killed in Prairie View, Texas when Brisker was a high school sophomore (February 2015), which was a major reason for Jaquan's focus issues in high school. He participated in "Senior Day" in 2020 and received an invitation to the 2021 Senior Bowl, but took advantage of the NCAA extra year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season in 2021. Brisker graduated with his degree in communications (December 2021). He opted out of Penn State's bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl, but also pulled out of the all-star game.

STRENGTHS: Lean, athletic frame with adequate length ... plays with enough range to cover split-field ... alert in coverage ... does a nice job reading passing concepts to hunt crossers ... rolls up his sleeves to speed downhill and get physical vs. the run ... aggressively fills as a box player, showing the strong hands to work off blocks and fight to the ball carrier ... also has the lateral quicks to avoid blockers ... committed zero penalties over the last two seasons, which speaks to his timing and discipline ... plays through minor injuries ... his teammates call him the "unquestioned" leader of the team (former defensive coordinator Brent Pry: "He has always been one of our best workers, but his consistency off the field, the maturity ... he's holding guys accountable.").

WEAKNESSES: Tight through his hips, which hinders his ability to turn, run, and recover vs. the run or coverage ... his lack of an explosive gear limits his ability to make plays in deep zone ... his eyes will stay locked in the backfield, leaving him susceptible to eye candy ... average play strength and lighter than ideal ... physical in run support, but slides off ball carriers when he doesn't wrap and drive his feet ... strong runners can keep their feet and withstand his arm tackles ... minimal special teams reps over the past two seasons.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Penn State, Brisker was a strong safety in former defensive coordinator Brent Pry's scheme, lining up mostly in the box while also seeing snaps in space (post, slot, etc.). After two seasons at the juco level, he developed into a multidimensional defender for the Nittany Lions and made a significant impact on and off the field. Brisker covers a lot of ground and is most comfortable when he can walk down and attack the line of scrimmage with his physical play demeanor. Though he competes with non-stop urgency vs. the run, he isn't a consistent wrap-up tackler, which leads to misses. Overall, Brisker lacks ideal explosiveness and size on paper, but his innate toughness and timing fuel his playmaking skills. He projects as a starting strong safety in the NFL.

GRADE: 2nd Round (No. 42 overall)

6. BRYAN COOK | Cincinnati 6006 | 206 lbs. | rSR. Cincinnati, Ohio (Mount Healthy) 9/7/1999 (age 22.64) #6

BACKGROUND: Bryan Cook grew up in the Cincinnati area and played quarterback at the youth level. He attended Mount Healthy High (north of downtown Cincinnati), where he was a four-year varsity letterman and played both ways as a wide receiver and cornerback. After helping Mount Healthy to a 12-win season and conference title as a sophomore, Cook earned all-league honors as a junior with 31 tackles and a pick-six interception. As a senior, he was named Honorable Mention All-District and First Team All-Conference with 35 tackles and three interceptions in 2016, adding three receiving touchdowns on offense. Cook also lettered in baseball at Mount Healthy.

A no-star recruit out of high school, Cook (at only 165 pounds) wasn't ranked by online recruiting services and went widely overlooked by college programs. His only scholarship offer came from Howard, where he played two seasons as a cornerback. After the 2018 season, Cook entered the transfer portal and had the opportunity to return home and play at the FBS level, enrolling at Cincinnati in January 2019. He moved to safety with the Bearcats during 2019 spring practices but was forced to sit out during the regular season because of transfer rules (was eligible for the 2019 bowl game). Cook graduated with his degree in digital media collaboration (May 2021) with a 3.6 GPA. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl but was unable to participate because of a shoulder injury.

PRO DAY	6005	208	31 7/8	8 1/2	78 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no workout – left shoulder)

STRENGTHS: Excellent size/speed blend ... above-average spatial awareness as a run defender, reading from depth to mirror and out-leverage the blocking scheme ... his play anticipation keeps himself free to hunt ... physical, but dependable tackling mechanics with his ability to settle his feet and wrap finish ... high batting average as a tackler in one-on-one situations ... former cornerback with the play speed and body control for coverage work ... flashes a short-area burst in his movements to break with receivers ... digests routes quickly to sort through and react ... competes with a touch of extreme intensity with his motor and finish skills ... his coaches use phrases like "incredible attitude" and "works his tail off" to describe his football character ... played his best football as a senior and was one of only four FBS defensive backs to finish with at least 95 tackles and 10 passes defended in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Average fluidity and man coverage skills ... can be manipulated from deep because of his overaggressive play style ... mediocre ball skills and will leave interceptions on the field ... his few missed tackles on tape were usually because he stopped his feet too quickly, giving the ball carrier a chance to make a move ... can do a better job with his hands to stay free of blocks ... wasn't used as a blitzing ... only one full season as a starter at the FBS level ... was not able to participate in the pre-draft process because of a left shoulder injury (January 2022) — expected to be cleared in May 2022.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Cincinnati, Cook was a strong safety in defensive coordinator Mike Tressel's 3-3-5 base scheme. After two seasons as a cornerback at Howard, he transferred to Cincinnati, where he waited his turn behind Darrick Forrest and James Wiggins (both picked in the 2021 NFL Draft) before emerging as a legitimate early-round prospect in 2021. Cook is one of the most reliable tacklers in this draft class with his ability to come to balance on the move, maintain a wide stance and strike low and physical through his target. In coverage, he has the athleticism and awareness to stay on top of routes, although he can be better with his body positioning downfield. Overall, Cook has room to raise his consistency level in coverage, but he is an above-average run defender with the physical traits and overachieving attitude to see the field early and often in the NFL. He should compete for a starting role in year one.

GRADE: 3rd Round (No. 77 overall)

7. NICK CROSS | Maryland 6001 | 212 lbs. | JR. Bowie, Md. (DeMatha Catholic) 9/10/2001 (age 20.63) #3

BACKGROUND: Nicolas "Nick" Cross, who is one of three children, grew up in Maryland just outside of Washington, D.C. He developed a love for football, but his parents didn't allow him to play when he was younger, so Cross focused on baseball, basketball, and other sports. When he enrolled at DeMatha Catholic High, his parents allowed Cross to join the freshman football team as a linebacker. He moved up to varsity as a sophomore and played a reserve safety role with current NFL players like Chase Young and Anthony McFarland. Cross became a full-time starter as a junior and earned 2017 First Team All-Conference honors. As a senior, Cross finished with 94 tackles and four interceptions to take home U.S. Army All-American and All-Metro honors. He also lettered in track and was part of DeMatha's 2018 conference championship. Cross posted career bests of 6.33 in the 55 meters, 6.68 in the 60 meters (6.68) and 22.09 in the 200 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Cross was the No. 4 safety in the 2019 recruiting class (one spot ahead of Kyle Hamilton) and the No. 1 player in the state of Maryland. He received almost 40 scholarship offers and seriously considered Alabama, Auburn, Florida, and Penn State before committing to Florida State (his favorite team growing up). However, his parents were concerned with the instability of the coaching staff in Tallahassee and didn't allow him to sign with the Seminoles. With Mike Locksley taking over the Maryland program, Cross decided to stay close to home as part of Locksley's first recruiting class (was roommates at Maryland with Dino Tomlin, the son of Pittsburgh Steelers head coach Mike Tomlin). It also helped that Locksley hired Cross' DeMatha head coach Elijah Brooks as an assistant. Nick's father (Michael) emigrated from Jamaica and his mother (Anna Awah-Cross) is from Trinidad and Tobago. Cross also joined the indoor track team at Maryland. He elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6004	215	31 5/8	9	75 1/2	-	-	-	-	-	4.21	6.85	21 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Above-average speed for the safety position ... owns the range to play in the post or over the top as a single-high safety ... his route awareness improved each season ... explosive plant-and-drive skills to take sharp angles in coverage ... has ball-tracking ability to go and get it (led the team in interceptions all three seasons) ... runs the alley with speed and conviction ... patient as an open-field tackler but will also drop his pads into the ball carrier to create stopping power... solidly built with adequate length to rack up punchouts in the box ... was a core special teamer at Maryland, and that will continue in the NFL ... has a good head on his shoulders ... didn't start playing football until high school and there is untapped potential there.

WEAKNESSES: Hyper-focused on the backfield action and late to react to routes ... false-stepper and can be manipulated by scheme, design and savvy quarterback play ... aggressive on some plays but then passive and reactive on others (Jahan Dotson put him in a blender on the Penn State tape) ... has slight tightness through his hips, hindering his recovery skills ... hangs on tight ends in man coverage, making him an easy target for flags ... inconsistent disruption skills at the catch point even when he arrives with the football ... settles his feet and loads up as a tackler, but he doesn't always get his man on the ground.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Maryland, Cross was the boundary safety in former defensive coordinator Brian Stewart's scheme. He saw snaps in the post, slot, box and single-high and led the Terrapins in interceptions in each of his three seasons on campus. Cross has above-average speed, range and closing burst along with the play violence to stroke ball carriers in the alley or across the middle of the field. His cover awareness is on the rise, but his decision-making and discipline can be inconsistent, especially in man coverage. Overall, Cross is an inconsistent risk-taker, and teams will have to live with the ups and downs as he grows, but he has explosive speed and downhill toughness that come in an NFL starter kit. He is scheme-versatile with NFL starting potential from various alignments.

8. KERBY JOSEPH | Illinois 6010 | 203 lbs. | SR. Orlando, Fla. (Jones) 11/14/2000 (age 21.46) #25

BACKGROUND: Kerby Joseph, who is one of seven children, was born and raised in Orlando. His parents were born in Haiti and met each other in Florida in the late 1980s. Joseph started playing football at age 8 in the Orlando City Leagues and played throughout middle school, primarily as a wide receiver. He enrolled at Oak Ridge High, where the coaches sold him on a move to safety, and he made varsity as a freshman. After his sophomore year, he transferred to Jones High for his final two prep seasons, playing wide receiver and running back on offense and across the secondary on defense. As a senior, Joseph finished with four interceptions and 7.0 tackles for loss on defense and five touchdown catches on offense. He also lettered in track (sprints and jumps) and volleyball at both Oak Ridge and Jones and was named MVP of the volleyball team as a senior.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Joseph was the No. 121 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 257 recruit in the state of Florida. He didn't have any offers going into his junior season, but that quickly changed with his first offer from South Florida. Joseph all picked up offers from Mississippi State and Syracuse, but he developed a bond with Illinois assistant coach Paul Williams and committed to the Illini after his senior year. After his breakout senior season, Joseph accepted an invitation to the East-West Shrine Bowl before switching to the Senior Bowl when that invite arrived.

PRO DAY	6007	203	33 1/8	10 5/8	80	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	(no runs, jumps, shuttles – left hamstring)

STRENGTHS: Excellent field range and speed to play both sidelines ... tracks the eyes of the quarterback, and his film preparation is evident on game day ... does wide receiver-like things at the catch point ... has the length and hand-eye coordination to make athletic mid-air adjustments on the football ... unlocks his hips and strings out plays, closing gaps on the perimeter ... controls his throttle after racing downhill to settle his feet and square the ball carrier ... solid tackling mechanics, using a wide base and low pads to get his man on the ground ... experienced on special teams coverages (407 snaps and 16 tackles in his career), serving as a gunner on punt coverage the past two seasons (recorded a safety in the 2021 season opener vs. Nebraska) ... had a standout senior season and finished as one of 12 FBS players with at least five interceptions in 2021.

WEAKNESSES: Lean, stringy muscle tone and lacks ideal bulk ... needs to continue and improve his play strength ... takes aggressive angles but needs to be more physical in the run game ... too often goes backwards when he drops his pads into the ball carrier ... can be pinned by the blocking scheme and needs to do a better job with his hands to escape blockers ... wasn't given many man-to-man cover situations in college ... inexperienced as a blitz and in-the-box defender ... only one season as the full-time snaps and production.

SUMMARY: A one-year starter at Illinois, Joseph lined up as the free safety in defensive coordinator Ryan Walters' scheme, playing single-high and covering the deep-middle. After spending the first three years as a part-time player, he became more of a student of the game as a senior and enjoyed a breakout 2021 season with at least one takeaway in seven of Illinois' 12 games. With his play speed, range and above-average ball skills, Joseph is reliable as the last line of defense with his ability to patrol from the hashmarks to outside the numbers. He credits his reaction quickness to his volleyball background and drives on the football in front of him, although he has room to clean up his tackling consistency. Overall, Joseph must improve his play strength, but he reads well from depth and tracks the football with his speed and burst to close. He projects as a special-teamer and developmental NFL starter ideally suited for a cover-3 scheme.

GRADE: 3rd-4th Round

9. TYCEN ANDERSON | Toledo 6017 | 209 lbs. | rSR. Toledo, Ohio (St. John's Jesuit) 6/13/1999 (age 22.88) #1

BACKGROUND: Tycen (TIE-sin) Anderson, who is one of four children, was born and raised in Toledo and started playing various sports at the youth level. He attended Martin Luther King Elementary followed by Rosary Cathedral and then St. John's Jesuit High. He was a three-year starting cornerback and wide receiver, posting 15 tackles and four interceptions as a sophomore. Anderson was named First Team All-Conference as a junior with 30 tackles, five interceptions and five blocked kicks on special teams. As a senior, he earned First Team All-State, First Team All-District and First Team All-Conference with 40 tackles, five interceptions and six blocked kicks. Anderson also lettered in basketball and track (sprints, jumps, and relays) and finished fourth in the state in the long jump (23'5.5) in 2017. He has personal bests of 11.30 in the 100 meters, 22.80 in the 200 meters (22.80) and 45.31 in the 300-meter hurdles.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Anderson was the No. 205 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 79 recruit in the state of Ohio. He received several FCS (Eastern Kentucky) and MAC offers (Bowling Green, Ohio) and even an SEC offer (Kentucky). But Anderson was sold on staying close to family and representing his home city, signing with Toledo as a defensive back. He took advantage of the free year of eligibility and returned for a fifth season in 2021. Anderson graduated with his degree in professional sales from the college of business (December 2020) and is working toward his MBA, carrying a 3.38 GPA. He became the first in his family to earn a college degree. Anderson accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Tall, stretched-out frame ... his strides are long and swift, helping him drive downhill and close ground ... has twitch in his lower body to respond laterally with digs or out routes ... comfortable with man-to-man concepts thanks to his balanced footwork and range ... well-schooled operating in the box while also providing back-end potential ... keeps his eyes before his feet as a tackler, relying on his long arms to expand his tackling radius ... two-time team captain, and coaches say his leadership rallies the defense ... was a high school valedictorian and earned several academic awards at Toledo ... his special teams résumé is longer than a roller coaster line at Cedar Point.

WEAKNESSES: Needs to play with better anticipation, especially from deep alignment ... tends to be cautious with his trigger, leading to inconsistent angles in coverage and pursuit ... needs to do a better job seeing through receivers to the quarterback ... his off hand will get him in trouble at times (one defensive holding and two pass interference penalties in 2021) ... only two career interceptions (and none since September 2018) ... needs to be quicker diagnosing run from the box ... will lose outside leverage and misjudge backfield speed ... played hurt parts of the 2020 season and missed the first three games of his senior year because of a knee injury in 2021 preseason camp ... production should be better with his talent and experience.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Toledo, Anderson played free safety and nickel in defensive coordinator Craig Kuligowski's scheme. A high school cornerback, he moved to safety for the Rockets and played a hybrid role in the box and vs. the slot, receiving All-MAC honors his final two seasons. Anderson is a toolsy prospect with the range and toughness to impact the game from various alignments on the field. Though he has above-average speed, he would benefit from additional urgency and anticipation to be more disruptive. Overall, Anderson has mediocre playmaking instincts vs. the run and the pass, but he is smart, long and athletic with glowing intangibles. He projects as a four-coverage special teamer who can compete for a nickel role on defense.

GRADE: 4th Round

10. ALONTAE TAYLOR | Tennessee 6001 | 199 lbs. | SR. Manchester, Tenn. (Central) 12/3/1998 (age 23.40) #2

BACKGROUND: Alontae (uh-LAWN-tay) Taylor, who has two sisters, was born and raised near the Alabama border in Winchester, Tenn. (same hometown as former Tennessee head coach Phil Fulmer). When he was in the fourth grade, his family moved to Manchester (about 25 miles north of Winchester), where he played baseball, basketball and football. Taylor enrolled at Coffee County Central High, where he was a four-year varsity starter at quarterback in an option offense. He rushed for more than 1,300 yards each of his four prep seasons and finished with 6,000 rushing yards and 74 rushing touchdowns in his career. Taylor also recorded 10 passing touchdowns and 1,746 passing yards and saw time at wide receiver with 33 receptions for 479 yards and two touchdowns. On defense, he finished his junior season with 30 tackles, four forced fumbles and 2.0 sacks. As a senior, Taylor totaled 13 tackles and one interception. He earned 2017 First Team All-State honors and was an Under Armour All-American. He was a football-only athlete after his freshman year.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Taylor was the No. 21 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 4 recruit in the state of Tennessee. He originally verbalized to Vanderbilt as a sophomore before backing off that pledge months later when more teams showed interest. Taylor then committed to in-state Tennessee the summer before his junior year but decommitted during his senior year when Butch Jones was fired in November 2017. He considered offers from Alabama, Georgia, Notre Dame, Ohio State and others before re-committing and signing with the Volunteers. Taylor signed as a wide receiver, but moved to cornerback during 2018 preseason workouts. He graduated with his degree in communication studies (December 2021). He opted out of the 2021 bowl game and accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

PRO DAY	6000	195	31 1/2	9	75 1/8	-	-	-	39	11'1"	4.25	7.08	14 (stood on Combine runs)

STRENGTHS: Good-sized athlete with plus length and sprinting speed ... collects himself to transition, stay balanced and elevate to make plays on the ball ... shades himself to restrict catch windows along the sideline ... recovers well and works his body into position without making early contact (zero penalties in 2021) ... highly physical downhill with the competitive appetite to match ... rams and bounces off blockers, maintaining his pursuit ... quarterbacked an option offense and played wide receiver in high school and is comfortable with the ball in the air ... senior captain and was voted to the SEC leadership council in 2020 (served two terms as vice chair) ... productive on special teams (462 career snaps) and has the skill set to be a four-phase coverage player.

WEAKNESSES: Still developing his decision-making and awareness in coverage ... his cover angles, especially to the inside, must improve ... lacks a natural feel for press, losing his balance and failing to connect ... his technique in reverse comes and goes ... doesn't trust his hip fluidity, and there is a noticeable hitch at the top of his pedal ... refined route runners know how to find his blind spot ... plays with urgency in the run game but sacrifices textbook tackling for undisciplined violence ... his on-ball production is nothing to get excited about ... played primarily outside cornerback in college.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Tennessee, Taylor was an outside cornerback in defensive coordinator Tim Banks' balanced scheme. An offensive-focused athlete in high school, he moved to cornerback full-time in Knoxville, where his development was more sluggish than rapid, and his tape feels like he is still transitioning. Taylor is an impressive size/speed athlete with the aggressive playing demeanor required for NFL work. However, his discipline and recognition skills remain a work-in-progress, and he struggles to cleanly sink or flip his hips with his high-cut body type. Overall, Taylor was primarily an outside corner for the Volunteers, but he has versatility across the secondary, and a move to safety might be his best option because of his range and physical demeanor. He will see a heavy dose of special teams in the NFL and might be a team's best option at gunner.

11. JT WOODS | Baylor 6021 | 195 lbs. | SR. San Antonio, Texas (Steele) 6/10/2000 (age 21.88) #22

BACKGROUND: Jalen Terrell "JT" Woods, who is one of four children, grew up in the San Antonio area and attended Byron P. Steele High in Cibolo. He originally played cornerback and running back growing up before moving to wide receiver and safety in high school. After recording an interception as a sophomore, Woods led Steele to a 14-win season in 2016 and finished with 90 tackles, seven passes defended, two forced fumbles and one interception. As a senior, he finished with 33 tackles and one sack, adding six receptions for 63 yards on offense. Woods was also a sprinter on the track team and set personal bests of 10.64 in the 100 meters and 21.87 in the 200 meters. His time in the 110-meter hurdles (13.89) ranked top-15 in the country.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Woods was the No. 69 safety in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 128 recruit in the state of Texas. He received offers from several Texas programs including Houston and Texas State along with several Ivy League schools (Brown, Columbia, Yale). Baylor was his only Power 5 offer, and Woods committed after his junior season. He also joined the track team at Baylor and won the 110-meter hurdles at the Baylor Invitational in 14.19 and placed third with 10.61 in the 100 meters at the USC Invitational. Woods accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Can absolutely fly ... his track speed matches his football speed ... shifts his gears well mid-pursuit to course-correct his angles ... rangy vs. the run to make stops outside the numbers ... has the height/length to post up with tight ends and size at the receiver position ... shows lower body fluidity to pedal and burst ... excellent hand-eye coordination to pluck the ball mid-air (nine combined interceptions in his final two seasons) ... loves to bait throws and set traps ... does his homework and is an "avid film watcher," according to Baylor head coach Dave Aranda ... dangerous with the ball in his hands, averaging 22.3 yards per interception with one pick-six ... his tape shows both toughness and versatility with how he was used.

WEAKNESSES: Lean and light for the position with questionable growth potential ... occasionally late to see things develop with play action or misdirection ... much better recognition downhill than turning his back and retreating ... diagnose confidence appears to decrease the farther his alignment is from the line ... trusts his foot speed a tad too much, bouncing around and false-stepping ... his feet are fluid, but his hips show tightness ... want to see him be a little quicker punching himself off blocks ... will be indecisive at times as a tackler instead of driving himself through his target ... durability might become a problem because of his skinny frame.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Baylor, Woods was a versatile safety in head coach Dave Aranda's 3-3-5 base defense. In the Baylor program, he earned himself the nickname "The Heartbreak Kid" because of his knack for creating turnovers and breaking the heart of quarterbacks, combining for nine interceptions during the past two seasons (also had an interception in the Senior Bowl game). Woods plays with instinctive range to make plays at every level of the field. He does a nice job weaving through traffic, although he will run himself out of position at times, and his slender frame could lead to durability issues. Overall, Woods needs improve his discipline and tackling skills, but he has appealing traits with his plus speed, long arms and nose for the football in the run game and coverage. He might get some looks at cornerback by press-heavy teams.

12. VERONE MCKINLEY III | Oregon 5100 | 192 lbs. | rJR. Carrollton, Texas (Hebron) 6/29/2000 (age 21.83) #23

BACKGROUND: Verone (Vuh-rone) McKinley III, who has a younger sister, grew up in Hebron and played wide receiver and defensive back in youth football. He attended Prestonwood Christian Academy in Plano, where he was called up to varsity as a freshman and posted 28 tackles and four interceptions, returning one for a touchdown. As a sophomore, McKinley recorded 38 tackles, 14 passes defended and four interceptions playing for his father, who served as the defensive backs coach. Citing the desire to graduate early for college, McKinley transferred to Hebron prior to his junior season and earned First Team All-District honors in 2016. As a senior, he finished with 50 tackles, five interceptions (two for touchdowns) and a forced fumble to again earn First Team All-District honors.

A three-star recruit out of high school, McKinley was the No. 38 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 57 recruit in the state of Texas. He received his first scholarship offer from LSU when he was a freshman and surpassed a dozen offers during his sophomore season. McKinley finished with more than 30 offers from programs like Alabama, Clemson, Georgia and others, but he was drawn to Oregon and enrolled early in January 2018. His father (Verone Jr.) played defensive back at Texas Tech (1992-95) and played a handful of years in the Arena league before he starting coaching and training athletes. McKinley graduated with his degree (June 2020) and is working toward a master's. He hosts and produces his own podcast called "The Check Fade Podcast". McKinley elected to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft. He was a late call-up to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Excellent short-area quickness ... his fluid lower body helps him smoothly change directions and cover ground ... heightened awareness in zone ... quick to sort through routes and follow the quarterback's eyes to the preferred target ... can get turned around at times but does a great job course-correcting and locating the football to make the appropriate adjustment ... shows a sixth sense for timing at the catch point, bursting to close and dislodging the football ... outstanding ball skills with 11 interceptions the past three seasons, including an FBS-best six interceptions in 2021 ... much tougher than he looks and competes with a violent play style, arriving at the ball with bad intentions ... his self-proclaimed nickname is "The General" for his leadership on and off the field.

WEAKNESSES: Undersized by NFL standards, lacking ideal length and growth potential ... not an elite speed player and struggles to match slot receivers in man coverage ... only average range over the top from deep zone ... can get bodied-up by bigger targets downfield ... his eagerness to make plays can backfire with quarterbacks baiting him instead of the other way around ... spotty tackling technique leads to misses ... more likely to drag down his target than wrap, lift and drive ... will brace for contact before tackling and often takes the worst of it vs. running backs in the open field.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oregon, McKinley was a deep field safety in former defensive coordinator Tim DeRuyter's scheme. He was highly productive while in Eugene, twice leading the Pac-12 in interceptions, and is one of only two players in this draft class with multiple seasons of at least four interceptions. McKinley relies on his foot quickness and football IQ to lead him to the football and force incompletions. His physical play earned him the dirty label from several Pac-12 opponents, but he needs to improve his technique as a tackler to survive in the NFL. Overall, McKinley lacks ideal size/speed based on what the NFL looks for, but he is an instinctive cover man with the ball skills and play timing that should translate to the next level. His game reminds me of former Seattle Seahawks' safety Tedric Thompson.

13. PERCY BUTLER | Louisiana 6001 | 194 lbs. | SR. Plaquemine, La. (Plaquemine) 5/29/2000 (age 21.91) #9

BACKGROUND: Percy Butler III was born and raised in Plaquemine, a small city 15 miles south of Baton Rouge. He grew up focused on baseball before switching his focus to football in middle school. He attended Plaquemine High, where he was four-year letterman as a cornerback and wide receiver. Butler moved to safety as a junior and earned Second Team All-State and First Team All-District honors as a senior, leading Plaquemine to an 8-3 record in 2017. He finished his final season with 91 tackles, eight passes defended, 3.0 tackles for loss and three forced fumbles. Butler also lettered in baseball and track, winning a district championship in the long jump (21'8) and regional championship in the triple jump (44'10). He also set personal bests of 11.13 in the 100 meters and 1:00.65 in the 400 meters.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Butler was the No. 357 wide receiver in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 95 recruit in the state of Louisiana. He picked up scholarship offers from Louisiana, Southern Miss and Texas State, committing to the Ragin Cajuns. Butler accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Unlocks his hips and instantly accelerates to attack alleys ... quick to diagnose run-pass and trigger on screens or reverses ... takes sound, fast angles downhill ... covers a lot of ground in pursuit ... able to plant and drive to redirect his momentum and chase down the ball ... keeps his eyes before his feet as a tackler with wide hands to help him finish ... looks to strike pass catchers with momentum knock the ball loose ... communicates well with the underneath coverage and recognizes his leverage from the post ... impact special teamer on kickoff coverage and as a gunner on punt coverage (25 career special teams tackles, including eight in 2021) ... also had a blocked field goal as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Slender body type with average bulk on his frame ... freelances quite a bit, creating wasted steps for himself ... reacts well, but needs to improve his anticipation to get more of a head start ... inconsistent footwork in match coverage ... unbalanced in his transitions and when breaking down as a tackler ... comes in too hot, leading to some wild open-field misses when he doesn't gear down ... has enough play strength to hang with tight ends and backs in man coverage, but his mediocre ball production is disappointing ... several NFL scouts mentioned potential durability concerns because of his skinny build; played through a shoulder injury as a true freshman, requiring surgery (December 2018).

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Louisiana, Butler played free safety in former defensive coordinator Patrick Toney's man and zone scheme. He was a four-year standout on special teams while showing consistently improved play on defense, combining for 105 tackles and three interceptions over his final two seasons. Butler flies and flows all over the field with his open-field speed, flashing the initial burst and closing burst to go from A to B in a hurry. However, he doesn't have the ideal body composition for an NFL safety and needs to improve his breakdown skills as a tackler. Overall, Butler needs to play with more control and create more on-ball opportunities for himself, but his linear speed and ascending instincts are attractive traits for a developmental safety. His special teams value alone should get him drafted.

14. YUSUF CORKER | Kentucky6000 | 203 lbs. | rSR.McDonough, Ga. (Woodland)12/26/1998 (age 23.34)#29

BACKGROUND: Yusuf (YOU-suf) Corker, who has two sisters, was born in Atlanta and attended Woodland High in the suburb of McDonough. He was a four-year starter and played on both sides of the ball. As a senior, Corker led Woodland to a 10-3 record and the state playoffs while earning First Team All-State, All-Metro and All-County honors. He finished the 2016 season with 40 tackles and five interceptions, adding a pair of blocked punts on special teams and 40 catches for 447 yards and four touchdowns on offense. Corker finished his prep career with 105 tackles and 15 interceptions. He also lettered in track and set a personal-best 50.36 in the 400 meters.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Corker was the No. 36 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 30 recruit in the state of Georgia. His offer list included college football heavyweights like Alabama, Georgia, Notre Dame and Ohio State, but Corker narrowed his list to Kentucky, Michigan State, South Carolina and Tennessee, choosing the Wildcats. Corker married his long-time girlfriend (Tarryn Todd-Long) in February 2021. They have a two-year old daughter (Amirah). His uncle (Anthony Mitchell) was a defensive back at Tuskegee and played eight seasons in the NFL (1999-2006). His cousin (Raymond Sanders) played running back at Kentucky (2010-13), leading the Wildcats in rushing in 2012. Corker graduated with his degree in economics (May 2021) and is working toward a second degree in communications. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Urgent downhill trigger and competes with the same play personality each snap ... physical-minded player who seeks out contact ... consistent play speed to run the alley or recover deep ... trusts his vision and football senses ... fights for body position in coverage to disrupt passing windows ... times up his blitzes to cross into enemy territory at the snap ... two-time team captain, and the coaches go out of their way to pump him up to scouts ... married with a family and has a mature lifestyle ... was a regular on special teams coverages (521 career snaps) ... durable and started all 37 games the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Ordinary size, build and length ... tightness through his hips hinder his change of direction skills ... requires a half-second to recover after a false step in coverage ... will struggle vs. NFL slot speed if asked to cover receivers one-on-one ... matches the physicality of tight ends in man-to-man, but his aggressiveness will draw defensive holding calls ... has the ball skills to create turnovers but needs to take more calculated risks ... his senior tape has more missed tackles than ideal...would benefit from repeatable tackling mechanics to improve his timing and finishing skills.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Kentucky, Corker lined up at free safety in defensive coordinator Brad White's scheme. He broke into the starting lineup as a sophomore and posted consistent production, finishing top two on the team in tackles each season and top three on the team in passes defended. Corker is highly instinctive and competitive vs. both the pass and the run, firing downhill as a tackler or tracking the eyes of the quarterback to throws. However, he needs to tighten up his pursuit angles and be more a finisher because he doesn't have the redirect twitch to easily recover. Overall, Corker has some straight-line tendencies and needs to cut down on the missed tackles, but he plays fast, tough and confident and is ready for NFL life. His special teams ability should keep him alive on an NFL roster while he competes for defensive snaps.

15. DANE BELTON | Iowa 6005 | 205 lbs. | JR. Tampa, Fla. (Jesuit) 12/7/2000 (age 21.39) #4

BACKGROUND: Dane Belton, who has an older brother, grew up in the Tampa area. He attended Jesuit High, where he was a four-year letterman on the football field and played defensive back, wide receiver and special teams as a returner and punter. After recording his first interception as a freshman, Belton finished his sophomore year with 49 tackles and three interceptions. As a junior, he earned Second Team All-State honors with 56 tackles, 5.0 tackles for loss and four interceptions. As a senior, Belton led Jesuit to a 12-2 record and posted 67 tackles and four interceptions (one returned for a touchdown), adding a touchdown grab on offense. He also lettered in track and set personal bests of 11.49 in the 100 meters, 23.57 in the 200 meters, 19'7 in the long jump and 37'8.5 in the triple jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Belton was the No. 64 safety in the 2019 recruiting class and the No. 102 recruit in the state of Florida. He received two dozen scholarship offers from programs such as Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri and others before committing to Iowa (the alma mater of his father, Danny). Belton decided to skip his senior season and enter the 2022 NFL Draft.

PRO DAY	6006	205	30 1/4	9 1/8	76 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.06	6.74	18 (stood on Combine runs and jumps)

STRENGTHS: Patient, composed athlete in his drops ... balances his eyes between the quarterback and routes to get a head start on jumping the ball path ... takes calculated risks, coming off his coverage to overlap and make a play in another area ... shows soft hands a natural sense of timing to finish interceptions (second in the Big Ten with five interceptions in 2021) ... trusts his angles to maintain proper spatial relationships in zone ... comfortable turning and matching the physicality of tight ends in man ... avoids penalties (zero in 2021, two in his career) ... his tackling improved as he started to trust his break down and finish techniques.

WEAKNESSES: Average frame/length and needs to continue adding bulk and defining his body ... has adequate speed but doesn't move like a 4.43 athlete, especially in man coverage vs. slot receivers ... movements show hints of tightness, and lacks explosiveness out of his pedal ... his effectiveness drops the farther he travels from the line of scrimmage ... inconsistent timing as a take-on player and struggles to avoid blockers ... he will create off-balanced angles for himself in the run game ... doesn't consistently bring his lower body as a tackler ... below-average experience on special teams coverages ... zero interception yards in 2021.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Iowa, Belton played the "Cash" position in defensive coordinator Phil Parker's scheme, lining up as a hybrid strong safety and outside linebacker. He was a First Team All-Big Ten performer in 2021 and was one of only seven Power 5 defenders with at least five interceptions last season. Belton plays with heady reaction skills, and his eyes lead him to the catch point where he can make plays on the ball naturally. However, he lacks sudden twitch in his movements and lacks consistency down the field. Overall, Belton doesn't play as explosively as his testing numbers might suggest, but he floats naturally with the instincts and ball skills for underneath zones. He projects best as a down nickel safety in the NFL, although he needs to develop his strength and be more consistent vs. the run to see steady playing time.

16. JUANYEH THOMAS | Georgia Tech 6006 | 212 lbs. | SR. Niceville, Fla. (Niceville) 6/24/2000 (age 21.84) #1

BACKGROUND: Juanyeh (wahn-YAY) "Yeh" Thomas, who is the middle child of five siblings, was born at Camp Lejeune, a marine base in Jacksonville, N.C. When he was a toddler, his family moved to the Florida panhandle, originally to Crestview and then DeFuniak Springs, where he started playing football at age 5 (in a youth league for 8-year-olds). Thomas also played baseball, basketball and track growing up. He originally attended Walton High, where he was an immediate starter at both wide receiver and cornerback, playing alongside his older brother. Thomas had a breakout sophomore season with 47 tackles, 17 passes defended and eight interceptions (set a national high school record with a pick-six in five consecutive games), earning All-State and All-Area honors. Looking for a better opportunity, he transferred to Niceville High for his final two seasons. As a senior team captain, Thomas finished with 18 catches for 333 yards and one touchdown on offense, one interception and one forced fumble on defense and two punt returns for touchdowns to earn All-State honors for the third consecutive year. He also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 41'3.75 in the triple jump, 19'2.75 in the long jump and 1:00.12 in the 400 meters.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Thomas was the No. 136 cornerback in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 234 recruit in the state of Florida. He collected almost 20 scholarship offers and had a final three of Auburn, Florida and Georgia Tech, committing to the Yellow Jackets. His older brother (Azende Rey) was a wide receiver at Florida A&M (2016-20) before joining Juanyeh at Georgia Tech in 2021 as a transfer player. His younger brother (Azareye'h) was a top-100 recruit in the 2022 class and signed with Florida State. Juanyeh graduated with his degree in literature, media, and communications (December 2021). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6006	213	32	9 5/8	78 3/8	-	-	-	-	-	4.18	7.33	- (stood on Combine runs, jumps, bench)

STRENGTHS: Looks the part with the frame and length of an NFL safety ... has adequate speed and muscle twitch, transferring his weight smoothly in his redirect ... his transitions are efficient and unlabored ... aggressive in pursuit and finds the quickest route from A to B ... fearless attacking downhill run fits ... squares himself as a tackler, widening his hands/feet and striking with lead in his shoulder pads ... can jar the ball loose at contact ... able to track the football from various alignments and positioning ... recorded the fourth 100-plus-yard interception return in school history ... beloved teammate who won't rock the boat ... extensive special teams background with two kick return touchdowns (both in 2018) and almost 550 career coverage snaps ... set career-bests in several categories as a senior.

WEAKNESSES: Smooth in his change-of-direction, but not explosive ... often finds himself trailing in man coverage and surrenders too many completions out of the slot ... must improve his anticipation and route recognition ... inconsistent eye balance, and can be out-leveraged by receivers as a post-safety ... could stand to get more physical with pass catchers in coverage ... fills quickly, but too easily slowed by blockers, and the take-on strength doesn't always match his intentions ... room to improve his technique and finish as an open-field tackler ... never had more than one interception in any of his four college seasons.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Georgia Tech, Thomas was a versatile safety in head coach Geoff Collins' 4-2-5 scheme. Lining up single-high, in the box or over the slot, he impacted the game in different ways for the Yellow Jackets and was a core special teamer during his four seasons with the program. Thomas is a decisive player with the pursuit angles and aggressive demeanor desired at the position. Though smooth and controlled as an athlete, there is suddenness missing with his reactionary movements. Overall, Thomas is inconsistent in man coverage with too many throws in his direction that result in completions, but he is an instinctive down safety with projectable traits. Although he must improve in areas to be trusted on defense, his special teams should keep him on an NFL active roster.

17. DELARRIN TURNER-YELL | Oklahoma 5102 | 197 lbs. | SR. Hempstead, Texas (Hempstead) 12/16/1999 (age 22.37) #32

BACKGROUND: Delarrin (duh-LAIR-ee-in) Turner-Yell grew up in the small town of Hempstead (population of less than 10,000), which is 50 miles northwest of Houston. He attended Hempstead High, where he was a four-year letterman as a wide receiver and free safety. Turner-Yell put himself on the recruiting radar after his junior season when he finished with 87 tackles, nine passes defended, four forced fumbles and two interceptions, which earned him 2016 District MVP honors. He was crowned Homecoming King as a senior and earned team MVP honors. Turner-Yell also lettered in basketball and track, setting personal bests of 10.74 in the 100 meters, 21.84 in the 200 meters and 20'11 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Turner-Yell was the No. 66 safety in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 124 recruit in the state of Texas. He collected offers from Iowa, Nebraska and Utah and initially committed to Matt Rhule and Baylor as a junior in April 2017. However, Turner-Yell flipped to Oklahoma a few months later after visiting Norman.

PRO DAY	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- (unable to participate due to an illness)

STRENGTHS: Has above average speed for the position, which shows on tape with his chase down tackles ... opens his hips and covers ground, showing the looseness to stay on top of routes ... trusts his keys to trigger and won't play hesitant (his film preparation is evident on tape) ... closes downhill with violent intentions, which allows him to wrangle ball carriers in the open field ... shows savvy when the ball is in the air and won't make contact with receivers before the ball arrives ... his coaches said he was a tone-setter "since the day he showed up" with his on-field motor and team-first attitude ... productive tackler.

WEAKNESSES: Looks more like a cornerback than safety, lacking an ideal build for the position ... doesn't play explosive in coverage ... better as a floater than attaching himself to receivers or tight ends in man coverage ... not immune to false steps in his reads ... below average ball production for a player with 30-plus starts ... fearless tackler, but his lack of upper body power leads to finishing issues when he attempts to wrap ... needs to be more of an impact guy on special teams coverages ... missed at least one game each of his four seasons in Norman, including three games as a senior because of a hamstring injury (October 2021); Suffered a broken left collarbone (December 2019) and missed the College Football Playoff semifinal vs. LSU.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Oklahoma, Turner-Yell was the strong safety in former defensive coordinator Alex Grinch's 3-3-5 base scheme. When on the field, he brought a level of consistency to an otherwise inconsistent Sooners defense, finishing top-four on the team in tackles per game the past three seasons. Turner-Yell trusts his preparation and eye discipline, which allows him to play fast and be in the right position to make plays vs. the run and in coverage as a split safety. His toughness is a strength to his game, but his physical nature works against his durability, which is a potential problem in the NFL. Overall, Turner-Yell is undersized and will have his struggles in man coverage, but he is a decisive downhill alley runner with the range and intangibles that will appeal to NFL defensive coordinators. He will need to get better on special teams to help his long-term roster chances.

18. SMOKE MONDAY | Auburn 6016 | 207 lbs. | SR. Atlanta, Ga. (Carver) 2/19/2000 (age 22.19) #21

BACKGROUND: Quindarius "Smoke" Monday, who is one of five children, grew up in the Atlanta area and started playing football at the pee-wee level. He originally attended Jackson High before transferring to Carver High during his freshman year. He played both ways as a defensive back and wide receiver and posted 78 tackles, 6.0 tackles for loss, 2.0 sacks and four interceptions (one returned for a touchdown), adding 11 catches for 309 yards and three catches. Monday had his best season as a senior, leading Carver to a 12-2 record and 2017 conference title. He finished his final season with 72 tackles and seven interceptions on defense and 46 receptions for 1,016 receiving yards (22.1 average) and 15 touchdowns on offense. Monday also lettered in basketball, baseball and track, setting personal bests of 22.46 in the 200 meters, 49.79 in the 400 meters (49.79) and 5'10 in the high jump.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Monday was the No. 6 athlete in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 21 recruit in the state of Georgia. He collected scholarship offers from Alabama, Florida, Florida State, Georgia, Michigan and others, but he was set on committing to Clemson the summer prior to his senior year. However, Monday was swayed after a visit to Auburn and committed to defensive coordinator Kevin Steele. He legally changed his last name from Hale to Monday (same as his father) while in high school. His granddad (Big Will Monday) called him "Smoke" because of the way he ran around as a toddler, and Monday formally adopted the nickname when he was 12 after his granddad passed away. Smoke's older brother (Quentavius) played wide receiver at Carver and signed with Southern University. Smoke graduated with his degree in interdisciplinary studies (August 2021).

PRO DAY	6016	206	32 7/8	9	79	-	-	-	30	-	4.42	6.87	10	(stood on Combine runs, broad jump)

STRENGTHS: Workable frame and checks height and length boxes ... plays fast and urgent with his downhill key and flow ... sets a hard edge in the run game and doesn't shrivel vs. bigger blockers ... trustworthy contain angles to protect the perimeter ... quick-footed movements with the range to play from different alignments ... has the long body type and physical attitude to cover tight ends in man coverage ... looks comfortable high-pointing and can do something after the interception (averaged 39.2 yards per interception return with three touchdowns) ... his energy is clear on tape, and his coaches say it rubs off on his teammates ... was a core special teamer all four seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Would benefit by adding more mass to his frame, especially with the way he welcomes contact ... drops his pads but doesn't consistently wrap up ... more concerned with the jarring hit than the smart tackle (two targeting fouls in 2021) ... needs to see things develop quicker ... quarterbacks weren't afraid to throw his way in coverage ... his transitions lack fluidity, allowing receivers to gain a step of separation ... often caught guessing and will fall into the traps set by the offense ... found a handful of different ways to get penalized in 2021.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter, Monday was a versatile safety in former defensive coordinator Derek Mason's zone scheme, spending time in the box, over the slot and deep. He combined for 137 tackles the past two seasons (only Zakoby McClain had more for the Tigers) and finished his career with three pick-sixes and 196 return yards on five interceptions. Monday is an urgent player with quality run fits and aggressive angles to make impact plays as a run defender. However, he will get run over by NFL backs unless he improves his striking technique, and his lack of discipline and anticipation in coverage makes it tough to trust him. Overall, Monday is a long, athletic player with the competitive spirit that won't go unnoticed by NFL coaches, but neither will his inconsistencies and the questions about his best defensive position. At worst, he will be in the mix for an NFL roster spot thanks to his core special teams ability.

GRADE: 6th Round

19. MARKQUESE BELL | Florida A&M 6021 | 212 lbs. | rSR. Bridgeton, N.J. (Bridgeton) 1/6/1999 (age 23.31) #5

BACKGROUND: Markquese Bell grew up in Bridgeton in south New Jersey, about an hour south of Philadelphia. He attended Bridgeton High, where he was an immediate standout at wide receiver as a freshman. Bell was worked into the quarterback mix as a sophomore (618 yards passing, four touchdowns), adding four rushing touchdowns and 47 tackles on defense. He was primarily a wideout and defensive back as a junior, finishing with 52 catches for 792 yards and 11 touchdowns on offense and 49 tackles on defense. Bell moved back to quarterback as a senior and accounted for 885 rushing yards, 210 passing yards and nine total touchdowns (seven rushing, two passing). On defense, he posted 76 tackles, 3.0 tackles for loss, two interceptions and one forced fumble, earning First Team All-State honors. Bell was also a three-year starter on the basketball team and accomplished in track. As a junior, he won the Cape-Atlantic League championship in the high jump (7'0) and finished third in the state. Bell also set personal bests of 21'8 in the long jump and 135'3 in the javelin.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Bell was the No. 7 athlete in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 3 recruit in the state of New Jersey. He received almost 20 scholarship offers from heavy hitters like Clemson, Florida, Georgia, Michigan and Penn State. But Bell's final choice came down to Maryland and Ohio State, signing with the Terrapins. He enrolled early in January 2017 but was suspended prior to the season for a violation of team rules and never played a game at Maryland. Bell left the program in November 2017 and spent the 2018 season at Coffeyville Community College, where he posted 55 tackles and two interceptions. A three-star junior college recruit, he transferred and spent the next three seasons at Florida A&M. Bell graduated with his degree. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 NFLPA Collegiate Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Long-limbed athlete with galloping strides to eat up grass quickly ... has sideline-to-sideline range with the speed to make up a hesitant start ... widens his feet as a tackler, drops his pads and keeps his hands extended at contact ... has a knack for putting his hat on the ball mid-tackle to knock it loose (seven forced fumbles in two seasons) ... uses his long arms to punch off blocks and work laterally near the line of scrimmage ... has the physical traits to match up with tight ends in coverage ... comfortable covering from depth and patrolling the deep third ... able to show off his ball skills and catch radius when the pass goes in his direction ... reignited his career at FAMU, and he earns rave reviews from his coaches.

WEAKNESSES: Narrowly-built with lean features ... underpowered and needs to continue developing his functional strength ... inconsistent balance as an on-the-move tackler ... wild angles lower his success rate as a tackler ... doesn't have the force in his limbs to slow down ball carriers with his arm-tackle attempts ... his eyes stay locked on the quarterback and are late to decipher route combinations ... body tightness is evident when attempting to flip his hips ... his on-ball production took a nosedive in 2021 ... inconsistent timing as a blitz, often jumping the gun (multiple offsides penalties on his 2021 film) ... limited special teams tape ... NFL teams will have questions about his issues at Maryland ... has only two seasons of playing experience, and both came at the FCS level.

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Florida A&M, Bell was the free safety under defensive coordinator Brandon Sharp, rotating across the formation in their pattern-match scheme. One of the top recruits in Maryland's 2017 class, he never played a down for the Terps but was able to reinvent himself at Florida A&M, becoming an FCS All-American and the top defender on the Rattlers' defense. Although he lacks ideal fluidity for coverage work, Bell has long-striding acceleration to cover a lot of green grass. He showed off his range and toughness vs. the run on the 2021 South Florida tape (15 tackles) but also his overaggressive tendencies and inconsistent balance as a finisher (four missed tackles). Overall, Bell needs to sharpen his discipline vs. the run and instincts vs. the pass, but he has the physical tools (physicality, length, speed) that will earn him extensive looks in an NFL camp. He has the potential to stick on an NFL roster as a rotational safety and special teamer.

20. LEON O'NEAL | Texas A&M 6004 | 204 lbs. | SR. Cypress, Texas (Cypress Springs) 12/23/1998 (age 23.35) #9

BACKGROUND: Leon O'Neal Jr. grew up in Missouri City, Texas (southwest suburb of Houston) and started playing football at age 6. He found himself going down the wrong path during middle school, including school suspensions for fighting and an arrest for burglarizing a car. O'Neal moved in with his father (Leon O'Neal Sr.) for high school and attended Cypress Springs. A quarterback most of his life, he moved to defense as a freshman on junior varsity and was expected to start on varsity as a sophomore, but he was ineligible for most of the 2015 season because of a residency issue within the school district. O'Neal put himself on the recruiting radar as a junior with 86 tackles and two interceptions to earn Second Team All-District honors. He was named a U.S. Army All-American as a senior with 78 tackles, 4.0 tackles for loss, five forced fumbles and four pass break-ups.

A four-star recruit out of high school, O'Neal was the No. 8 safety in the 2018 recruiting class and the No. 8 recruit in the state of Texas. He received almost 40 scholarship offers between the start of his junior year and senior year because of his dominant play in games and recruiting camps. O'Neal originally committed to Texas A&M the summer before his senior year but decommitted the following December after coach Kevin Sumlin was fired. O'Neal went through a second recruitment in the final month before signing day and strongly considered Clemson and Oklahoma before committing to new coach Jimbo Fisher and the Aggies. O'Neal accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl. He won the practice award as the top safety on the American team.

STRENGTHS: Rangy athlete who looks the part in pads ... attacks with downhill speed to frame up his run fits ... physical, throw-down tackler ... has nickel experience and is comfortable covering from two-deep or working out of the box ... takes advantage of poor decisions by the quarterback (led the Aggies in interceptions over the past two seasons) ... competes with an edge to him — needs to keep his emotions in check, but his competitive fight is more of a strength than weakness ... carries himself with confidence and is described as "passionate" and "driven" by his teammates ... experienced on special teams coverages (451 career snaps).

WEAKNESSES: Too reactive in coverage ... gets caught flat-footed in man-to-man at the top of routes ... shifty route-runners will cross him up and leave him behind ... struggles to regain phase after he loses a step ... not shy hugging in coverage when beat ... flagged eight times over the past two seasons, including a few frustration penalties ... too many ankle-biting tackle attempts, giving ball carriers a chance to step out of his grasp ... needs to better break down on the move and eliminate the fly-by tackles ... character isn't considered a concern, but admittedly hung with the wrong crowd during his early teen-age years and was arrested as a freshman in high school for breaking into a car, receiving 12 months' probation.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Texas A&M, O’Neal played strong safety in former defensive coordinator Mike Elko’s scheme, lining up deep and in the box. He steadily grew into the leader of the Aggies’ back-seven with tackle numbers and on-ball production that increased each season he spent in College Station. O’Neal went to the Jalen Ramsey school of trash talk (while also backing it up), and head coach Jimbo Fisher calls his energy “infectious.” He needs to play with better anticipation and suddenness to all areas of his game, especially in man coverage, where it is too easy for route-runners to cross his face. Overall, O’Neal is a good-sized athlete and plays with NFL confidence, but the missed tackles are bothersome, and he lacks the coverage fluidity to hold up in space vs. receivers. His special teams experience will help him compete for a roster spot.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

21. QUENTIN LAKE | UCLA 6013 | 201 lbs. | rSR. Irvine, Calif. (Mater Dei) 1/29/1999 (age 23.25) #37

BACKGROUND: Quentin Lake, who is the middle child of three, was born in Pittsburgh (where his father was finishing up his pro career) and grew up in southern California. He attended Mater Dei High, where he was a three-year letterman at cornerback and teammates with several future FBS players like QB JT Daniels, WR Amon-Ra St. Brown and others. As a junior, Lake posted 49 tackles, 15 passes defended and seven interceptions. As a senior, he led Mater Dei to a 13-1 record (only loss coming deep in the playoffs) and 2016 conference title, finishing with 28 tackles, 11 passes defended and a pair of interceptions. Lake also lettered in track and set personal bests of 11.92 in the 100 meters, 24.04 in the 200 meters and 53.50 in the 400 meters.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Lake was the No. 56 cornerback in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 57 recruit in the state of California. After his productive junior year, his recruitment kicked into high gear with offers from Oregon State, Pittsburgh and USC, but he was a legacy at UCLA and always dreamed of becoming a Bruin. His father (Carnell) was an All-American linebacker/safety at UCLA (1985-88) and member of the UCLA Athletics Hall of Fame (holds the school record with 45.5 tackles for loss). Carnell was drafted in the second round of the 1989 NFL Draft by the Pittsburgh Steelers and played 12 seasons in the NFL, making five Pro Bowls and four All-Pro teams and earning a spot on the 1990s All-Decade Team. Carnell served as the defensive backs coach for the Steelers (2011-17) and has coached at the high school, college and pro levels. Quentin graduated with his degree in sociology. He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

PRO DAY	6014	199	31 1/8	9 1/4	76 5/8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	13	(bench press only – left hamstring)

STRENGTHS: Adequate height, length and speed for the position ... above-average field intelligence and read-react ability from the post or box ... decent range from split-safety alignment to balance spatial relationships (zero touchdowns allowed in coverage in 2021) ... athletic footwork to float and undercut routes ... his eye discipline helps create opportunities ... attacks the football like a wide receiver when targeted (see his one-handed pick on 2021 USC tape) ... able to sidestep blocks with balance to hunt the ball carrier through traffic ... several at UCLA have mentioned his ability to take coaching and his strong on-field communication skills.

WEAKNESSES: High-cut with sticky hips and a slight delay at the top of his pedal ... missing an explosive gear in his redirect movements ... inconsistent with his transitions and feel in man-to-man ... tends to catch ball carriers as a tackler instead of driving through them ... room to tidy up his strike zone to avoid misses (see 2021 USC tape) ... banged up over the past three seasons, including a broken right wrist (September 2019) that sidelined him for eight games ... wasn’t a regular on special teams outside of his first season.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at UCLA, Lake lined up primarily as the field safety in defensive coordinator Jerry Azzinaro’s scheme. Best known as the son of All-Pro NFL safety Carnell Lake, he started to step out of that shadow the past two seasons, putting ascending play on tape and leading the Bruins in passes defended both years. Aside from his impressive bloodlines, Lake is a high football IQ defender with the field vision and balanced athleticism to make plays vs. the run and in coverage. Though he processes well, his trigger can be delayed from the top of his pedal, and he lacks ideal fluidity and explosiveness for an NFL safety. Overall, Lake is an average-twitch athlete who will struggle in recovery situations, but he limits mental mistakes and displays the play anticipation to sense what is about to happen. His growth on special teams will be important to him making an NFL roster.

GRADE: 6th-7th Round

22. TARIQ CARPENTER | Georgia Tech 6027 | 230 lbs. | rSR. Ludowici, Ga. (Long County) 12/28/1998 (age 23.33) #2

BACKGROUND: Tariq (tuh-REEK) Carpenter, who is one of nine children, grew up moving around while his mother served in the Army. Along with his older sister, he would stay with different family members while his mother was deployed, including his grandmother in Little Rock. Carpenter started playing football at age 5 and continued playing through middle school and high school. His mother medically retired (PTSD) in 2014 and the family settled in Ludowici, where Carpenter attended Long County High. He was a four-year letterman and three-year team captain, playing safety, wide receiver and return man. Carpenter earned First Team All-State, All-Region, and All-District as a senior, leading the team with 19 catches for 183 yards and one touchdown. On defense, he finished with 54 tackles and one interception. Carpenter also lettered in basketball and track (two-year team captain), setting personal bests of 5’8 in the high jump and 19’7 in the long jump.

A three-star recruit out of high school, Carpenter was the No. 125 safety in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 175 recruit in the state of Georgia. He received offers from Memphis, NC State and UCF before committing to Georgia Tech. His mother (Demetria Fiffie), who played college basketball at Central Methodist (1992-96), served five tours of duty in the Army, including three deployments to Iraq, one in Kuwait and one in Afghanistan. His uncle (Thurlos Pearson) played football at Missouri. Carpenter requested the No. 2 jersey because that is the number his mother wore in college. He took advantage of the extra year of eligibility and returned to Georgia Tech for his fifth season. He graduated with his degree in literature, media and communications (December 2021). Carpenter accepted his invitation to the 2022 Hula Bowl and was a late call-up to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Imposing size, length and explosiveness ... above-average range and shows it on sideline-flowing plays ... weaves through traffic and keeps himself off blockers ... his long legs and quick feet allow for efficient slides to scrape/mirror at the line of scrimmage ... flashes a closing burst downhill as a plant-and-go finisher ... tackles with conviction and looks to tune up his target ... instinctive zone drops and feels routes coming ... offers position flexibility at linebacker and safety ... well-versed on special teams coverages with double-digit career tackles.

WEAKNESSES: His tweener skills won't be a fit for every scheme ... lean for a linebacker and heavy for a safety ... not a deep-third player, and lacks the range to play both sidelines from high alignment ... his change-of-direction is OK, but he is at his best in a straight line ... his hands and feet get disjointed in single coverage, allowing backs and tight ends to leak out and separate ... gave up four touchdowns in coverage in 2021 ... his on-ball production declined each of the past four seasons ... high target point as a striker ... arrives too hot as a tackler, and must improve his break down and finish ... very few reps as a blitzer.

SUMMARY: A four-year starter at Georgia Tech, Carpenter played a box safety role in head coach Geoff Collins' 4-2-5 scheme, also seeing snaps deep and vs. the slot. Despite not receiving an invite to the NFL Combine, he put together a solid college career and posted testing numbers at his pro day that have the attention of NFL teams. Although he might be caught between linebacker and safety, Carpenter has the size, speed and explosive traits that can be molded (Carpenter: "Teams see me like a big pile of Play-Doh."). He is at his best in the box with his flow-and-chase skills, but you want to see his read-react to be more sudden and seamless. Overall, Carpenter is a hybrid defender who might struggle to find a permanent home on defense, but his ability to be a four-phase special teamer gives him a fighting chance to make an NFL roster.

23. BUBBA BOLDEN | Miami (Fla.) 6021 | 209 lbs. | rSR. Las Vegas, Nev. (Bishop Gorman) 5/28/1999 (age 22.92) #21

BACKGROUND: Damuzhea "Bubba" Bolden grew up in Las Vegas and played football through youth leagues and middle school. He enrolled at Bishop Gorman High, a private Catholic school and football powerhouse, and played quarterback and safety as a freshman before getting a late-season call up to varsity. Bolden became a varsity starter as a sophomore and posted 30 tackles and an interception. As a junior, he finished with 55 tackles and three interceptions, including one pick-six. As a senior, Bolden was named a First Team Parade All-American with 27 tackles, 5.0 tackles for loss, and seven interceptions (one returned for a touchdown). Bishop Gorman went 45-0 during his three full seasons on varsity, winning three state championships and three USA Today national championships. He played with several future FBS players such as TE Brevin Jordan, DT Haskell Garrett, WR Jalen Nailor, QB Tate Martell and QB Dorian Thompson-Robinson.

A four-star recruit out of high school, Bolden was the No. 7 safety in the 2017 recruiting class (No. 59 overall) and the No. 3 recruit in the state of Nevada. Growing up in the Reggie Bush era, he rooted for USC throughout his childhood and initially committed to the Trojans as a junior. Bolden reopened his recruitment for his senior year and considered Arizona State, Ohio State and others before settling on the Trojans. In February 2018 after his freshman season, he got in trouble with the university because of an underage drinking incident and Bolden, who was facing a 28-month suspension, withdrew from USC. After sitting out the 2018 season, Bolden was reinstated at USC in January 2019, but he elected to transfer instead, rejoining his high school teammate Brevin Jordan at Miami (Fla.). He accepted his invitation to the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Long-striding athlete with the range to play both sidelines from deep alignment ... smooth hip flip to recover and work himself back into position ... loose lower body with clean footwork in his pedal and transition ... instinctive from various depths with functional pattern recognition underneath ... intelligent zone player who quickly breaks down passing concepts ... competitive at the catch point and plays through the hands of receivers ... physical tackler when he properly squares, wraps and drops his target ... plays with swagger and enjoys goading offensive skill players ... experienced on special teams coverages (420 career snaps).

WEAKNESSES: Undisciplined vs. the run and pass ... receivers know they can get him to bite on double moves and win overtop him ... easily drawn to play action ... slender build with marginal play strength ... ball carriers blow right through his arm tackle attempts ... unrefined tackler with a wild strike zone, dropping his head and losing sight of his target ... cautious mid-pursuit, opening the door for runners to make a move ... struggles to shake loose from blocks and can be put on his back by receivers ... left USC after he violated the student code of conduct relating to underage drinking ... not a durable player with a history of injuries: suffered a left shoulder injury (September 2021) and required season-ending surgery; suffered a season-ending right ankle injury (November 2019) after celebrating an interception; also missed part of 2021 spring practices because of a toe injury (April 2021).

SUMMARY: A two-year starter at Miami (Fla.), Bolden was a free safety in former head coach Manny Diaz's defense. After he ran into off-field trouble at USC, he resurrected his career with the Hurricanes with a productive 2020 season, but his college career was marred by several serious injuries. Bolden has smooth movement skills in coverage to read, unlock and go, flashing the confidence and secondary burst to close on passing lanes. It is easy to appreciate his aggressive mentality, but there are too many feast-or-famine plays on his tape (missed tackles, taking himself out of position, etc.). Overall, Bolden is a lithe athlete with range and instincts, but his inconsistency is a major issue, stemming from his undisciplined play style. He has draftable talent on day three, but durability concerns could leave him undrafted.

24. STERLING WEATHERFORD | Miami (Ohio) 6040 | 224 lbs. | rSR. Cicero, Ind. (Hamilton Heights) 1/26/1999 (age 23.26)#21

BACKGROUND: Sterling Weatherford, who is the youngest of four children, was born and raised in central Indiana, just north of Indianapolis. He was a four-year letterman at Hamilton Heights High and saw immediate varsity reps as a freshman on both offense and defense. Weatherford earned All-State honors as a junior with 25 catches for 418 yards and five touchdowns as a wide receiver/tight end and had 85 tackles and 12 passes defended at safety. He again earned All-State honors as a senior captain (and homecoming king) in 2016, finishing with 18 catches for 303 yards and four touchdowns on offense and 87 tackles and two interceptions on defense. Weatherford was also a standout basketball player all four seasons as a shooting guard, averaging 13.3 points and 7.0 rebounds per game as a senior, shooting 40.0% on three-point attempts.

A two-star recruit out of high school, Weatherford was the No. 178 athlete in the 2017 recruiting class and the No. 31 recruit in the state of Indiana. Several of his older siblings played collegiate basketball, but he saw football as his next-level path as FCS programs like North Dakota and Western Illinois showed interest. Prior to his senior year, Weatherford committed to Miami (Ohio) over Ball State. His older brother (Grant), who was an All-State wide receiver at Hamilton Heights, played collegiate basketball at Purdue (2015-16), Midland College (2016-17), IUPUI (2017-20) and Georgia Southern (2020-22). His older sister (Dakota) played college basketball at the University of Evansville (2013-15) before transferring to Louisville (2015-16). Weatherford accepted his invitation to the 2022 Senior Bowl.

STRENGTHS: Clean and coordinated in his pedal, transition and drive mechanics ... his smooth turn-and-accelerate skills stem from his basketball background ... above-average spatial awareness ... quick to diagnose play-action and sort through route combinations ... skillfully adjusts his tackling angles mid-pursuit ... physical striker and unloads on receivers over the middle ... has the grip strength to make off-balanced tackles ... extends his physical hands into blockers and sees beyond them ... wasn't a highly penalized player in college, with only one pass interference penalty in more than 1,000 career pass coverage snaps ... extensive special teams experience (488 snaps) over the past four seasons ... solid production and finished top three on the team in tackles and passes defended each of the past three seasons.

WEAKNESSES: Tweener size and length by NFL standards ... not an overly explosive player, which will lead to some coverage limitations ... missing a fifth gear or burst when attempting to close on a pass ... needs to take more chances to create more interception opportunities ... will drop his eyes and leave his feet prematurely, which creates low (and often missed) tackle attempts ... comes to balance to square his target as a tackler, but his finishing strength needs to improve ... can be better with his punch timing to mitigate his average length when playing near the line of scrimmage ... little-used blitz in college.

SUMMARY: A three-year starter at Miami (Ohio), Weatherford was a versatile safety in defensive coordinator Spence Nowinsky's 4-2-5 base scheme. Lining up single-high, in the box or as a slot defender, he finished top three on the RedHawks in both tackles and passes defended each of the past three seasons. With his coordinated footwork and smooth hips, Weatherford has the frame and athleticism to match up vs. tight ends or break down and make plays vs. the run. Though he is a physical hitter and his tackling improved each season, he will struggle to adjust to open-field moves, and his finishing strength must improve. Overall, Weatherford has average explosiveness with some coverage limitations that must be managed, but he is a smooth athlete with outstanding size and eye discipline. Along with special teams, his best NFL projection might be in a hybrid role as subpackage box safety or weakside linebacker.

SUMMARY: Nolan Turner lettered in basketball and football at Vestavia Hills High (outside of Birmingham), posting 63 tackles and five interceptions as a senior. A two-star recruit, he had only one offer (UAB) until a last-minute offer from Clemson. His father (Kevin), who passed away in March 2016 from ALS, was teammates with Dabo Swinney at Alabama and played eight years at fullback in the NFL. Turner was a two-time team captain for the Tigers and had an All-American 2020 season at free safety. He posted above-average testing numbers pre-draft but doesn't play that fast with inconsistent cover anticipation and tightness when reacting to routes. Though he does a nice job throttling down as a run defender to break down in space, his finishing skills as a tackler were below par on his 2021 tape. Overall, Turner's up-and-down tape tempers NFL expectations, but his athleticism, football character and special teams experience (759 snaps in college) work in his favor.

SUMMARY: D'Anthony Bell was a wide receiver and safety at Alcovy High (45 miles outside of Atlanta) and signed with Division II Albany State in 2015. He spent his next three years at two junior college programs before signing with Division II West Florida over Division I interest in 2019 (had two seasons of eligibility at the Division II level as opposed to one in Division I). He led the team in passes defended and interceptions in 2019 and 2021, earning First Team All-Conference honors. A rangy split safety, Bell looks like a heat-seeking missile with his accelerate and close skills, striking his target with purpose. He has the size and movement patterns to match up with tight ends in the slot and shows the length to disrupt passing windows. He is active in run support but needs to show better control in his pursuit and finish. Overall, Bell faces a learning curve at the NFL level, but he has an appealing blend of size, speed and physicality with the talent to make an NFL roster.

SUMMARY: Kolby Harvell-Peel was born in Houston and attended A&M Consolidated High in College Station, where he was an All-District safety (seven career interceptions) and wide receiver. A three-star recruit, he committed to Oklahoma State as a hybrid safety in the Cowboys' 4-2-5 scheme. He saw immediate starts as a true freshman and had his most productive season as a sophomore before tearing his ACL in the Bedlam game. He finished his career with 34 passes defended and 10 interceptions. Harvell-Peel owns a stout build with strong wrap skills when he squares up the ball carrier, but his miscalculated angles in space lead to missed tackles. Though he trusts his eyes to lead him to the play for interception opportunities, he can be fooled by play action or ball fakes and doesn't have ideal range for coverage. Overall, Harvell-Peel plays with controlled feet and play recognition, but tweener traits and ordinary speed and suddenness lower his impact potential.

SUMMARY: Qwynnterio Cole attended Memphis East High, where he was a late bloomer and enjoyed a breakout season as a senior wide receiver and defensive back. A no-star recruit, he had a few FCS offers and signed with Alcorn State, where he was named an HBCU All-American as a sophomore and junior. After the 2020 season was canceled, he graduated and transferred to the FBS, where he earned the starting strong safety job at Louisville, finishing second on the team in tackles. Cole passes the eye test with his lean-muscular build and is at his best in the box or when working downhill to trigger-and-drive. His production and performance showed no drop-off in his one year in the FBS. His toughness and physicality were evident after five plays on tape, but so were his tight hips and redirection skills. Overall, Cole is a long, explosive athlete with aggressive run-defending ability, but his lack of range and transitions, especially in coverage, will limit his NFL ceiling.

SUMMARY: Craig "Russ" Yeast II transferred from Fremont Ross High (Ohio) to Center Grove (Ind.) as a senior and was the Gatorade Player of the Year with 2,127 yards of total offense. A four-star recruit, he signed with Louisville as a cornerback before moving to safety in 2019. After four seasons, he transferred to Kansas State and put himself on the NFL radar with a career year. His father (Craig Yeast) is the head football coach at Kentucky Wesleyan and set the SEC receiving record at Kentucky before a nine-year career in the NFL (1999-2006). Russ is a competitive yet disciplined player to react quickly in short zone or show his range from the post. He has a knack for timely swats at the catch point (led Big 12 in passes defended in 2021). He is willing in the run game, but can find himself attached to blockers. Overall, Yeast has cornerback-safety tweener traits, but he is an urgent player with the flow skills and cover awareness to compete for a nickel role in the NFL.

SUMMARY: Brenden Schooler spent time at three high schools and three colleges over the past nine years. A three-star recruit, he started at safety as a true freshman at Oregon before moving to receiver. After the 2019 season, he left for Arizona to play with his brother but decided to transfer again in August 2020. He landed at Texas, where he moved back to safety as a super senior, but he was at his best as a special teams ace (774 career snaps on coverages, with 21 tackles). Schooler was a track star in high school (he had a 10.76-second time in the 100 meters) and you see that speed on tape with his range, pursuit angles and the way he accelerates into contact. He is a physical wrap tackler but needs to clean up his pad level, leg drive and technique to be a more consistent finisher. Overall, Schooler bounced between offense and defense over his career, but special teams could be his NFL ticket thanks to his speed, toughness, and experience on coverages.

SUMMARY: Brad Hawkins was a wide receiver and defensive back at Camden High before attending Suffield Academy (Conn.) for a prep year, recording 51 catches for 868 yards and 11 touchdowns in 2016. A three-star recruit, Hawkins was stayed committed to Michigan through his prep year and switched from receiver to safety as a freshman. He played in a school-record 56 games and finished his senior season with a career-best 60 tackles, four passes defended, and two forced fumbles. Hawkins, who was considered one of the team leaders, has terrific foot quickness and range for adequate response as he tracks the football or the eyes of the quarterback. Though he limits mental mistakes, he struggles to anticipate in man or zone, which leaves him out-leveraged in coverage or hung up on blocks. Overall, Hawkins is missing suddenness and playmaking instincts, but he was the definition of steady during his Michigan career and offers special teams value.

SUMMARY: Isaiah Pola-Mao comes from a football family, including his Hall of Fame uncle, Troy Polamalu. Isaiah was an All-American senior receiver and safety at Mountain Pointe High, posting 100 tackles, 10 interceptions and nine touchdowns on offense. A four-star recruit, he committed to USC over Washington. After his first two seasons were wiped out because of shoulder injuries, he put himself on the NFL map in 2019, although his 2020 and 2021 seasons didn't quite live up to the expectations. Lined up as a deep safety, Pola-Mao has terrific range and the situational awareness to understand what the offense wants to do. However, he appeared to battle confidence issues as a senior, overthinking things instead of relying on his instincts, which led to a high completion rate when he was targeted. Overall, Pola-Mao is a tall, athletic safety with NFL speed and twitch, but his negative plays in coverage and vs. the run in 2021 are a concern for NFL scouts.
